Later, it is alleged, Mrs. Verrett took her four children and deserted her husband, and is now occupying apartments in the house where Gambradello's wife and family live. Mrs. Verrett came to Plainfield and swore out a warrant for the arrest of her husband, whom she claims threatened to kill her. In the meantime Gambradello has returned to his home. It is feared that there may be bloodshed before the case is settled, as the Italian blood has been thoroughly aroused.

WESTFIELD TOPICS.

The Press Correspondent Chats of Men and Measures in the Village —What Professor Francis Has Done.

WESTFIELD, Sept. 4.

Postmaster Whitaker leaves today for the World's Fair.

The Westfield public schools will reopen next Monday. The school buildings have been put in perfect condition, thanks to the liberality of the townspeople in the matter of voting appropriations for school purposes. All appropriations asked for by the school trustees have been at once voted them by the people, which action tends to show that Westfielders have confidence in the men placed in charge of the town's educational interests, and also that they properly appreciate the value of well-equipped schools.

Professor Francis enters this fall on his sixth year as principal of the public schools. It is easy to dispense praise that is indiscriminate and fulsome. This I do not wish to be guilty of; and it does not seem to me that I am, in saying that Mr. Francis has been a most efficient principal, and that he is scholarly and tactful, and has done much to elevate the standard of our schools.

Last year an advanced curriculum, including a college-preparatory course, was introduced in the Lincoln school. The work of arranging the numerous details of this course devolved upon the principal. As can readily be understood, this was a task involving considerable work, and requiring experience and good judgment in matters educational. Nevertheless, the result obtained by the professor was most satisfactory; and as a consequence the Westfield schools compare favorably in standards of scholarship with the schools of Plainfield and Elizabeth.

Students in the senior class of the high school have an incentive to hard work in an annual prize of twenty-five dollars, offered by a well-known citizen and called the Patton prize. It goes to the pupil who, all circumstances being considered, does the most conscientious work and makes the most advancement in studies during the senior year.

The last winner of the Patton prize was Lawrence Clark, a Westfield lad. He will pursue a course of study in Lehigh University. [illegible]

Miss Kittie Parker, of New York, is being entertained by Plainfield friends for a short time.

Miss Ella Dunn, of West Fourth street, has returned from two weeks at Atlantic Highlands.

A little daughter of Fred Martin, of Sandford avenue, has sprained her collar-bone by a fall.

Misses Anna and Cora Bell Morris from Cranford are visiting their grandfather, S. R. Hope, 223 Richmond street.

Mrs. A. F. Marsh and two daughters, of Linden avenue, are spending a week with relatives at Stroudsburg, Pa.

Samuel Dolliner and family are at Hotel Netherwood, after a season at Great Barrington, Mass., among the Berkshires.

Mrs. L. S. Bond and family, of 416 Liberty street, returned home Thursday after an enjoyable month in Connecticut.

Charles M. Hummer presides acceptably at the organ in Grace M. E. church, during the vacation of Miss Alice Carroll.

Miss Sunnie Waldron, of Clinton, Hunterdon county, whose nature is like her name, is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Milligan, 419 West Fourth street.

The Misses Doud, of Emily and Duer streets, with Miss Hughes of Jackson avenue, returned Thursday from a week of recreation at Asbury Park.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. G. E. See, of 87 Sandford avenue, have returned home from Asbury Park, where they have been spending the entire summer.

The Rev. Dr. Rice, General Secretary of the American Tract Society, preached in the Westfield Presbyterian church, Sunday morning and evening.

Miss Emma Kitchen, one of the attractive saleswomen in White's store, has returned from a delightful vacation of two weeks spent at Asbury Park.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. W. F. Randolph and daughter, Florence, of West Front street, left at noon today for the great White City. They will be gone about three weeks.

Little Ruth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. E. Day, of 92 Duer street, has a little sister. The newcomer arrived Sunday morning, and mother and babe are doing nicely.

Oscar Bennett Smith was drowned while in a rowboat during the storm of the 29th, at Isle au Haut, Penobscot Bay, Maine. His age was 26, and his home was at 721 Watchung avenue.

Alex. Lusardi, of North avenue, is one of the lucky winners of two building lots given by Il Progresso Italo Americano, the Italian paper, in New York city. The lots are at Vineland, Cumberland county.

A. M. Laing of Washington, spent Friday evening with his aunt and uncle, A. L. Force and wife. For 13 consecutive years Mr. Laing has been in the Government Printing Office, a valued employe.

L. S. Mulford, of the house of Lutkins & Mulford, has shaken off the butcher harness for two weeks. He will spend his vacation in Hunterdon and Middlesex counties. It is his first vacation in twelve years.

Peter A. Emmons and family, of Jackson avenue, have returned from their summer outing, and are again domiciled in their home in the borough. Mr. Emmons is tanned, happy, and freshened up for a large fall business.

The Saturday Night of Toronto, Canada's leading society paper, says: "Mrs. James A. Demarest, wife of the U. S. Consul at Brockville, has arrived in that city, and will no doubt be a favorite in social circles, judging from her amiable disposition."

Al Runyon, whom everyone knows as Little Rabbit of the Pottawotamie Tribe, and who is the courteous and competent bookkeeper at Boice, Runyon & Co's, has been given a vacation of one week, and his friends are stretching their ears to receive big fish stories when he returns.

At the home of the bride on West Second street, Sunday evening at 6, took place the marriage of Miss Louise Mohl to B. Frederick Priemer. The Rev. F. Koechli performed the ceremony. Only the immediate relatives were present. Mr. and Mrs. Priemer will reside in Hoboken.

The Rev. Cornelius Schenck, wife and children, arrived last night from the Catskills. Although granted an extension of his vacation by the Consistory, he feels thoroughly rested and invigorated, and anxious to be in his pulpit again. He will meet his congregation next Sunday morning and evening.

Moses H. French, of 26 Craig place, one of Plainfield's oldest residents, age 84, was stricken with paralysis while in his stable Saturday, and fell near his house. He was found insensible by his wife, and she and Mrs. J. H. Carney carried him to the house. Dr. J. H. Carman attended him, and restored him to consciousness.

As the steamship Spartan for Montreal drew up to the pier at Brockville, Ont., last Wednesday morning, Dr. O. L. Jenkins of this city seized the opportunity to go ashore and shake hands with the U. S. Consul at that port, James A. Demarest. Counselor William M. Stillman from the upper deck took a number of snap shots of the harbor.

First Lieutenant William W. Miller, of Company I, Third New Jersey Volunteers, who visited Comrade Thomas M. MacDonald, yesterday, is now a resident of Philadelphia, at 1719 Spring Garden street. He enlisted at the outbreak of the rebellion as a private in Company C, Third Regiment. His services were of a meritorious character, and he was several times promoted, until the end of his term he was made First Lieutenant of Company I, and brought that company to Plainfield at the close of their term of enlistment and mustered them out of service. He and Comrade MacDonald spent several pleasant hours together. Neither recognized the other at first, after so many years.

Mrs. Edward White is home from Asbury Park.

John Mantz has gone to Boston on a business trip.

Mrs. E. P. Thorn is home from her summer sojourn.

The Rev. J. F. Taylor and family are home from Asbury Park.

The family of E. H. Ladd, Jr., of Franklin place, are home again from Avon Inn, Avon by the Sea.

George Morrison, of Mountain avenue, is home from his stage on the summer girls' hearts at Asbury Park.

A. E. Bushnell and family have taken apartments in the City Hotel, after a pleasant season at the shore.

The wife of Israel Coon of Smalleytown (South Stirling) is very ill, and little hopes are given for her recovery.

Capt. L. H. Hoffman, of Terrill Road, with his wife and daughter, will sail for Europe Saturday, to remain abroad six weeks.

Dr. Hedges and wife have returned to the city after an outing of one month at the Doctor's old home in Chester, Morris county.

Miss Mabel Rowe, of New Providence, has returned home after spending a week with her friend, Miss Nellie McGinnis, of Somerset street.

Mrs. Charles Sandford and daughter Miss Emily, have returned from Watch Hill, R. I., and are enjoying farm life at the home of Amos Vail, Greenbrook, Somerset county.

Miss Thomas, of Whitestone, L. I., and Miss Tracy, of New York, who have been visiting at the home of Z. Pearsons, Second street, are now guests of Miss Muldoon of Third street.

His large circle of friends will feel much distressed to hear that C. H. Rugg, the coal merchant, is at present in an utterly helpless condition, suffering from muscular and inflammatory rheumatism.

Edward L. Finch, of Park avenue, who to the delight of his friends has recently been much improved in health and able to attend to business matters, is again confined to his home by illness. He injured a leg while bathing in a heavy surf, and will have to endure its being encased in a plaster cast till it heals.

SPONTANEOUS COMBUSTION.

Old Rags Start a Blaze that Burns Two Horses and a Dog Alive.

Tuesday at 11:30 the barn and sheds adjoining, belonging to Egbert Scribner, 168 Duer street, were burned. They had been burning for some time before noticed, and then Mr. Scribner and his son had to be aroused from their sleep, as they were entirely ignorant of the fire, which was fast gaining headway and threatening the house near by.

In the meantime someone started for the North Plainfield electric light station to send in an alarm. Considerable time was lost, and when the alarm was given the buildings were enveloped in flames.

Warren Engine Company responded, however, as quickly as possible. The engine was not used. Instead the hose was attached to the hydrants in the vicinity, two lines of hose being laid.

In the barn were two blind horses, wagons, rags, coal and wood, and a dog, and all that was saved was one or two wagons; all the rest (including the animals) was consumed. The loss will be quite large.

Mr. Scribner thinks the place was set afire; but can give no reason why it should have been. Marshal Pangborn says the cause was undoubtedly spontaneous combustion, and this is doubtless correct. It was sometime after 12 before the fire was extinguished.

Walter Leon, Boy Orator.

Since the opening of the season at the Eden Musee, New York, this popular resort has been crowded by the thousands of patrons who find pleasure, recreation and education within its halls. The greatest attraction of the stage performance at present is little Walter Leon, a lad of eight years, who is a born orator, and the manner in which he discusses "Woman and Marriage" is as amusing as it is unique. The Girards, two famous Parisian artists, have been specially engaged, and their entertainment is also original and novel in its way. Delprade, the illusionist, continues to mystify the audiences with startling illusions, while his "speaking hat" trick has been declared to be the cleverest trick ever put upon the stage. There are also other prominent artists too numerous to mention, for the stage performance lasts three hours. New wax groups are being constantly added to those now on exhibition, and every important event of the day is pictured in this educational institution. One of the greatest novelties now on exhibition in the Central Hall is a new patent race-track device where the horses gallop around the track as real as life. There is no telling which horse will win. The spectators go wild with enthusiasm. Dasko Gabor and his celebrated Hungarian Gipsy Band are very popular with the patrons of the Musee, because their programmes combine both classic and popular selections, and are arranged to please everyone. Afternoon and evening concerts and stage performances are given every day at the Eden Musee.

Plainfield Will Remember Him.

In return for courtesies shown in advance to the "Spider and Fly" company, passes for the performance of last night were issued by joint authority of Manager Demarest of Music Hall and of the advance agent for M. B. Leavitt, owner of the show. The list was exactly as customary, and as agreed on, but last night Mr. Leavitt declined to honor the passes. Those who favored Mr. Leavitt's show with the use of their windows, and those who accorded him other privileges, naturally resent his breach of contract, and will take care to avoid having any future dealings with him. Had an authorized representative of Manager Demarest of Music Hall been present at the performance, those holding passes would not have been permitted to suffer indignity at the hands of a conscienceless mountebank.

The Press is pleased to note that in the New York Labor parades of yesterday good order reigned and the American spirit predominated. Flags were everywhere, and they all bore Uncle Sam's Stars and Stripes. It is reassuring when the great mass of Labor shows that it has no use for the red banner of anarchy, and The Press honors it for thus unmistakably displaying its good sense and patriotism. The mass of American workmen can be trusted to do the right thing on such an occasion as yesterday.

SIMMONDS WINS THE CLUB CUP.

FOREGONE CONCLUSION OF THE TENNIS TOURNEY.

Two Interesting Surprises Were the Features of the Labor Day Play —Pleasant Doings at the Courts, and Enjoyment of the Hillside Tea.

(From The Press, of September 5.)

The second annual tennis tournament for the championship of the Hillside Tennis Club took place on the club courts yesterday. Ten matches were played in all, taking from 9 in the morning until 6:30 in the afternoon. The entry list was swelled in numbers just before it closed, making it necessary to play a preliminary round.

All day the sides of the courts were lined with spectators, the new terrace on one side making it very much easier to see for those who had their chairs on its neatly boarded surface.

There were some surprises in the way the various players comported themselves, but taken as a whole the play was not brilliant. Once in a while there would be a few minutes of admirable tennis, which never failed to bring forth the deserved applause, but the quality of the game would sink soon again to the ordinary uninteresting level.

The surprises did not turn the tide of victory, but consisted mainly in the good fights that some of the players who were ranked as inferiors gave to the local cracks. The first was when J. F. Murray, who is very much out of practice, held the score of 3-1 against Simmonds in his first set and crawled ahead of him in a similar manner in the second. This did not affect the match, however, as Simmonds won, 6-4, 6-3. The second was the victory of F. K. Fish, Jr., over Henry West, in an interesting match of three sets, West taking the first, 6-1, and Fish the next two, 6-3, 6-2. Fish also made a very good fight in the first set of the finals, holding Simmonds 5-1 and then again 5-3, only to lose finally, 5-7.

It was a pity that A. B. Wadsworth was not able to be present, as he plays a rattling though erratic game, and would undoubtedly have made an interesting dark horse, and would have given any contestant all he wanted to do to handle him.

Simmonds's victory was expected, but his chances looked rather precarious at one or two places during the tournament.

The play by rounds was as follows:

Preliminary round—F. K. Fish, Jr., beat J. H. P. Wharton, 6-1, 5-7, 6-1; H. D. West beat G. P. Mellick, 6-1, 6-0.

First round—A. P. Simmonds beat J. F. Murray, 6-4, 6-3; Archie Cox beat Sherwood West, 4-6, 6-3, 6-3; H. D. West beat E. H. Osborne, 6-3, 6-0; F. K. Fish beat A. B. Wadsworth by default.

Semi-finals—A. P. Simmonds beat Archie Cox, 7-5, 6-4; F. K. Fish, Jr., beat H. D. West, 1-6, 6-3, 6-2.

Finals—A. P. Simmonds beat F. K. Fish, Jr., 7-5, 6-1, 6-3.

The trophy is the club cup, which Simmonds will hold one year, and defend at the next annual club tournament.

SEPTEMBER TEA.

Folks Come Back to Town to Enjoy Hillside Tennis Hospitality.

The regular semi-monthly teas of the Hillside Tennis Club were resumed Saturday after a short interval during which no teas were given on account of the number of people out of town.

Mrs. Denise M. VanVliet, of North Plainfield, received, assisted by Mrs. Louis G. Timpson, Mrs. John G. Foster, Miss Murphy, Miss Waiz and Miss Guion.

Some interesting tennis was played during the afternoon, and many of the guests took advantage of the chairs arranged along the courts to watch the play.

The courts have recently been widened by carrying out the terrace about nine feet farther than originally, thus giving more room for side-line play, and making the two tournament courts as nearly perfect as possible. As the ground of the new terrace was soft, it was completely covered with boards, on which the chairs were placed.

Iced coffee and lemonade were served under the trees.

Considering the season the attendance was good. Among those present were Major and Mrs. Robert L. Burnett, Miss Lawrence, Mr. and Mrs. George P. Mellick, Miss Mellick, Mr. and Mrs. Dewitt Clinton Ivins, Mrs. Fox, Miss Depew, Miss Annie Opdyke, Miss Erskine, Miss Minnie Miller, Miss Carrie Miller, Mrs. Virginia B. Hart, Miss Lena Hart, Miss Florence Waring, Miss Helen White, Miss Talmadge, Miss Corlies, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel T. Ginna, Miss Elizabeth Stewart, Miss Ellis, Miss Annie Ellis, Mrs. Martin, Miss Bushnell, Miss Winnie Sprague, Mr. and Mrs. James L. Anthony, Miss Edith Allen, Sherwood West, Harry West, A. P. Simmonds, Lee Simmonds, Henry Lowe, Henry Bushnell, Louis Waiz, Dexter O. Tiffany, James P. Murray, Percy Stewart, Walter Stewart, J. B. Anthony, Harry Hart and F. K. Fish, Jr.

"The Country Squire", Sept. 11.

Archie Boyd, who for the past four seasons has been playing and making popular the character of Joshua Whitcomb in "The Old Homestead", will produce his very worthy successor, "The Country Squire", in Music Hall Sept. 11, and no one can tell the great amount of imagination Mr. Boyd has, until seated in front of him at a performance. That calm, easy, dignified manner, assumed to represent the New England Squire, gives him the power to carry the audience with him. His strong and agreeable personality is in a measure the secret of his success, and one cannot but recognize in him something even greater than talent—real genius.

Undaunted in Defeat.

In the base-ball game of the Prudentials of Plainfield against the Prudentials of New Brunswick, at Feplan (Boynton Beach), Saturday, Superintendent Pepper's Plainfield team was completely outclassed, but he will play a return game for an oyster supper, and says he will "down" the New Brunswick boys. The score on Saturday was 37 to 13 in favor of New Brunswick.

New Organist at Holy Cross.

A large congregation greeted the return of the choir in Holy Cross church yesterday, and a very large number of communicants participated in the Communion. The organ was ably presided over by Mr. Cheeseweight of New York, and an effort will be made to retain him, vice W. N. [illegible], resigned.

Jersey's Champion Amateurs Downed —After a [illegible] Hardly Contested—But the [illegible] Cubans Wouldn't Submit to a Second Plainfield Defeat—Plainfield Defeats [illegible] Lost to the Fast Men.

From The Press of September 5.

The base-ball game Saturday afternoon between the Plainfield Crescents and the New Jersey Athletic Club, on the North Plainfield grounds, was one of the most interesting ever seen in this city. The umpiring of Vanvalkenburg was a feature, from the fact that he doesn't know how to umpire, and is only capable of managing a team, for which he is noted. But even bad umpiring couldn't spoil that game, which the Crescents won.

Yesterday morning the Cuban Giants met the home team and for eight innings shut Plainfield out. In the meantime the Cubans had secured four runs. In the ninth inning, with two men out and three men on bases, Freddie Jones went to the plate and the first ball pitched he hit for three bases, scoring three runs. Keenan was retired as the next batter, and the game ended.

The many friends of "Wash" Berriman, who umpired, gave him a warm reception.

Yesterday afternoon the Crescents went to Elizabeth, where they played the Elizabeth Athletic Club, to a large crowd. It was an interesting contest, and the audience hugely enjoyed it. The Elizabeth boys could get only three hits off Keenan, and this probably accounts for their defeat. It is their first whitewash this season, and they were hard losers.

An Ideal American.

[From The Westfield Standard.]

Warren Ackerman, an American of wealth, of simple habits, of quiet yet generous charities, steadfast in his friendships, of wide business interests yet preeminently a fireside companion, beloved in his home, honored by his fellow citizens, a leader in business circles, trusted and trustworthy in every relation of life, —the good and great Warren Ackerman is dead. He was an ideal American! What more need be said!

Bitten by a Vicious Beast.

A five-year-old daughter of Frank Hill, who lives in the flat over Eggerding's cigar shop, was badly bitten on the lip by Eggerding's dog. Dr. Simpson cauterized the wound.

—The Grocers' Picnic was the usual glorious success. The crowd was even bigger than ever.

Nervous Dyspepsia.

Senator James F. Pierce, of New York, writes:

"For the past two years I have suffered very much from an aggravated form of nervous dyspepsia. I have resorted to various remedial agents, deriving but little benefit. A few months since a friend of mine suggested the trial of Allcock's Porous Plasters. Following the suggestion, I have been using the same with the happiest effects. To those similarly afflicted let me suggest the manner of their use. I place one over my stomach, one over the hepatic region and two on my back. The effect is excellent. From the day I commenced their use I have been slowly but surely improving, and am quite confident that by continuing I shall [illegible]

MR. BULLOCK'S TROUBLES.

ANOTHER CHAPTER IN HIS DOMESTIC HISTORY.

The Much-Married Man Has His Third Wife Arrested for Bigamy and She in Turn Has Him Arrested for Threatening Her Life.

The domestic difficulties of Thomas O. Bullock, a wealthy rice importer of New York, who resides in a handsome summer villa, known as Arbor Vitæ Lodge, at Succasunna Plains, Morris county, have ended in the arrest of that gentleman. During his lifetime he has been married thrice. His first matrimonial venture was in Utah. After a brief term of married life he obtained a divorce from his first wife. Subsequently the divorced wife procured a divorce from Bullock on the grounds that he had procured an illegal divorce in Utah. As soon as all the legal proceedings had been settled Bullock married Lydia Sutton, a young woman living in Plainfield. All went well until a third woman made her appearance on the scene, and is now one of the leading characters in the domestic drama which the Morris County Court has been called on to settle. This woman was the cause of another divorce for Bullock.

Bullock's infatuation for her proved so great that about one year ago he installed her in Arbor Vitæ Lodge as Mrs. Bullock number three. During the brief time that she has been Mrs. Bullock she has prospered wonderfully, and all would have been serene had not Bullock learned from some source that previous to his marriage to her she bore the name of Sutherland and that her husband was a resident of Brooklyn. The couple for the past few months have quarrelled frequently, and their disputes have resulted in landing the wife in the Morris County Jail at Morristown on a charge of bigamy, and the arrest of Bullock, who is charged by his wife with threatening to shoot her.

Several months ago, and before Bullock learned of the facts which he avers classes his wife among bigamists, he transferred to her the property situated at Succasunna Plains. The deed is registered in County Clerk Mott's office at the Court House in Morristown, and shows that Bullock sold the property to A. K. Travers for $1 and that the latter transferred it to Mrs. Bullock for the same amount. Last Friday Mrs. Bullock, learning that her husband has caused Justice of the Peace Fancher, of Succasunna Plains, to issue a warrant for her arrest on a charge of bigamy, came to Morristown and, visiting Justice of the Peace Axtell, caused a warrant to be issued for Bullock's arrest, charging him with threatening her life. The warrant was given to Constable Pierson, who drove to Succasunna Plains Friday night. When he reached Bullock's residence he was confronted by four stalwart hired men, who refused him admission to the house, and said that their employer was not at home. The constable, however, declined to be bluffed, and replied that he would remain until Bullock returned.

As waiting proved to be monotonous, Constable Pierson decided to search the house, he being of the opinion that Bullock was home and had concealed himself. The four men on guard at first refused to unlock the door. Finally, upon being informed by the constable that if his request was not complied with he would force an entrance and then arrest the men, they unlocked the front door and allowed the officer to enter the house. To his surprise Constable Pierson found Bullock entertaining Justice of the Peace Fancher. When Bullock was placed under arrest he demanded to be arraigned before Squire Fancher. That official accepted Bullock's personal recognizance on a bail bond to keep the peace, and all that remained for Pierson to do was to return to Morristown.

While the above was being transacted Constable Bay, armed with a warrant issued by Justice of the Peace Fancher, was riding around the country searching for Mrs. Bullock. He finally succeeded in arresting her and brought her to the Morris County Jail, where she was handed over to the care of Under Sheriff Munson. The latter locked his fair prisoner up in one of the rooms used as a hospital ward. Mrs. Bullock Saturday retained the legal services of ex-Postmaster Quayle. As Judge Cutler was out of town counsel for the prisoner could not secure her release on bail, but made the necessary application Monday morning.

It was said in Morristown Saturday night that Mrs. Bullock on Friday was seeking purchasers for the property at Succasunna Plains transferred to her by Bullock. The latter, hearing of the attempts being made to sell the property, instructed his legal representative to file papers with County Clerk Mott, restraining Mrs. Bullock from disposing of the property until the case can be settled in the courts.

It is understood that Mr. Bullock chartered some cars and has removed some of his farming machinery.

LABOR DAY SPORT.

Gustave Rupert King of the Shoots, and Mrs. Wedemeyer Queen.

The Independent Gun had their second annual shoot at 11 Monday on the club grounds, in Hyde's field. The first prize of $10 for shooting down the flag went to Mr. Rubenstein; the second, $8, to Christopher Stoeckle; the third, $5, to Gustave Rupert; the fourth, $3, to Mr. Rubenstein. Gustave Rupert was decided king, and received the prize, a gold badge. The best shot among the ladies proved to be Mrs. Henry Wedemeyer, and she as queen received a gold badge for her skill. At 12 a table was spread in the field and twenty couples sat down to a sumptuous repast. A speech in behalf of the king and queen was made by Miss N. E. Jaeger, aged 11, who was then presented with a gold ring by the president of the club, Joseph Blatz. The party dispersed in a merry mood, conscious of having spent a most enjoyable time.

Bogus! Bogus white lead would have no sale did it not afford makers a larger profit than Strictly Pure White Lead.

THE MAN ON THE CARS.

WHAT HE THINKS OF THE "HELP" QUESTION.

He Wrestles With the Mighty Question, and Presents a New Phase for Consideration.

"I wonder"—said The Man on the Cars the other night, as the train passed on the Long Bridge while a casual schooner lounged through the draw-way—"I wonder if half the men of means in Plainfield who employ servants and trust them in certain matters, have any notion of the extent to which they are constantly and systematically swindled by these same servants."

Everyone wanted to hear the rest of the story, and as someone played a few words into the orator's hand and he went on:

"A prominent Plainfield dealer in household commodities told me a while ago that hardly a day elapses that he is not approached by the servant of some prosperous citizen, who importunes thus: 'My employer requires so-and-so much of this and thus-and-thus of that; what is your bid?' The dealer names his lowest figure, and the menial continues: 'My master wants me to procure this material, and will buy it of whom I please; what commission do I get for giving you the order?' Of course, this leaves it entirely a question of the conscience of the dealer; and generally, as a simple business proposition, the scheming servant gets a percentage and the deal is closed, for the shopman well knows that if his terms are not made acceptable the order goes somewhere else. Stablemen, cooks, housekeepers, gardeners, chambermaids, valets, ladies' maids and nurses, all come in for their share of the spoils, and, while everyone is not doing this orchid and parasite act, the majority are culpable to a greater or less degree. The dealers cannot be expected to lose anything in the trade, and, in order to make, and pay commissions, they must square up by short weights, under-counts, and substitution of inferior goods. These items are religiously overlooked by the servants, who, if queried, misrepresent and prevaricate. The extent to which the thing is carried is absolutely beyond belief, and the implicit faith which people place in the ability of servants to conduct their finances and business for them is to me absurd. There is a fragment somewhere in the good book about an 'unjust steward', the probable meaning of which I have never satisfactorily grasped, but maybe it was intended to apply to this particular phase of the 'help' question. And half the time, the shopkeepers tell me, employers cut their own throats right along by refusing to believe the faithlessness and irresponsibility of their hirelings. Funny how a man will keep two or three or more persons with no pretension to education or refinement about his own home and trust their words as he would a time-table, while the same man, in his New York office, employs ten or a dozen clerks, men of culture and modest claims to honor, and watches their every movement and effort with a jealous suspicion that is enough to drive anyone to crime. Oh, this is a queer world, I can tell you, and these respected employers are about the most inconsistent figures in it to me. I don't altogether blame the servants that they take all they can get; perhaps their wages are not overwhelming; they have to live; and after all they are only human.

"Well, good-night"—he ended, rising and moving along toward the car door.—"I may be wrong in my general impressions, but I think not. There is only one antidote: pay your servants all they earn, and——watch them."

Won by Henry Angerbauer.

In the five-mile bicycle race of the Park Club, Saturday, Henry Angerbauer, with a handicap of four minutes, came in first. He was No. 3 at the start. Westerfield, No. 8, two minutes handicap, came in second. Murphy, No. 1, four minutes handicap, was third. Glenck, No. 12, won best-time prize. He covered the five miles in 15½ minutes.

VOLNEY GREEN WON ALL.

YET HE WAS SCRATCH MAN IN EVERY RACE.

Successful Field Day of the Pastime Athletic Club—All the Town Boys Interested in the Events, and the Best of Them Took Part—Many Prizes Distributed.

The Pastime Athletic Club held its first annual field day for boys under 17 years of age, Thursday. It was in every way a great success. About three hundred people were at the corner of Berckman street and South avenue, to see the sports. The bicycle races were ridden on South avenue, the running races were contested on Berckman street, and the jumping and shot-putting were done in a field near by.

The bicycle races were all won by Volney Green, a lad of 14, who started from scratch in every race. He also won the high jump and the prize for the greatest number of points.

Fred Shroder, a boy of 15, won all the foot races easily, and won the third prize for points. He ran in elegant form.

George Smith easily won the shot-putting contest, and the three standing broad jumps. He also won the second prize for points.

Tom Smith won the running broad jump, and the running hop step and jump.

There were 24 entries, as follows:

1. C. Thorn.
2. W. Thorn.
3. F. Shroder.
4. A. Crane.
5. G. Smith.
6. V. Green.
7. N. Probasco.
8. H. Martin.
9. W. West.
10. L. Smith.
11. E. Ovington.
12. H. Smith.
13. W. Cornwall.
14. B. Honeyman.
15. J. Keefe.
16. W. Sebring.
17. W. Probasco.
18. A. Betser.
19. T. Smith.
20. S. Titsworth.
21. H. Cumming.
22. J. LaBoyteaux.
23. B. Runyon.
24. W. Kitchen.

Of these, numbers 1, 2, 8, 9, 10 and 18 took no part.

A few minutes past 2, the first event was started, and the others followed without much intermission. The results:

I. 100-yards dash—First, F. Shroder. Second, B. Honeyman. Third, N. Probasco. Time—12 seconds.

There were four starters.

II. Half-mile bicycle—First, V. Green. Second, G. Smith. Third, W. Kitchen. Time—1.31¾.

W. Kitchen fell from his wheel at the turn, but for which he would probably have been a winner. There were six starters.

III. Putting the shot—First, G. Smith, 26 feet. Second, N. Probasco, 22 feet, 10 inches. Third, B. Honeyman, 19 feet, 8 inches.

Smith won without an effort.

IV. Five-mile bicycle race, handicap.

1. V. Green, scratch. Time—15.21.
2. J. Keefe, 2¼ min. Time—16.26.
3. E. Ovington, 1½ min. Time—17.25.
4. B. Runyon, 2 min. Time—18.20.
5. S. Titsworth, 30 sec. Time—18.33.
6. T. Smith, 30 sec. Time—18.54.
7. W. Probasco, 30 sec. Time—16.55.
8. A. Crane, scratch. Time—18.22.
9. W. Cornwall, 1 min. Time—17.37.
10. H. Smith, 1¾ min.
11. G. Smith, scratch.
12. W. Kitchen, scratch.
13. B. Honeyman, 2 min.

This was by far the best event of the day. Green outclassed every other starter, winning both the first and time prizes. B. Honeyman will receive a leather medal for being the last to finish.

V. Three standing broad jumps—First, G. Smith, 24 feet 11 inches. Second, N. Probasco, 23 feet 6 inches. Third, J. LaBoyteaux, 22 feet 11 inches.

VI. One mile bicycle—First, V. Green, scratch. Time—2.58. Second, A. Crane, scratch. Time—3.01. Third, W. Cornwall, 75 yards. Time—3.04.

The mile was measured again and found to be seventy-three yards short.

VII. Running hop, step and jump—First, T. Smith, 37 feet 7½ inches. Second, J. LaBoyteaux. Third, B. Honeyman.

VIII. 440 yards run—First, F. Shroder, 5 yards, 61½ seconds. Second, J. LaBoyteaux. Third, B. Honeyman.

IX. Running high jump—First, V. Green, 4 feet 7 inches. Second, G. Smith, 4 feet 4 inches. Third, J. LaBoyteaux, 4 feet 3 inches.

X. Two mile bicycle—First, V. Green, scratch. Time—6.08. Second, T. Smith, 30 seconds. Time—7.24.

No others finished. Green's right position was scratch with A. Crane, but the judges decided that he was much too fast company for him, and so Green was put back ten seconds, but was soon ahead of the whole field.

XI. Running broad jump—First, T. Smith, 15 feet 1¾ inches. Second, J. LaBoyteaux, 14 feet 11½ inches. Third, G. Smith, 14 feet 7¾ inches.

XII. Half mile run — First, F. Shroder, scratch. Time—2.30.

No other finishers.

The prizes were given out at 7 p. m., at A. B. Crane's house as follows:

V. GREEN.

Lantern, from Rogers, first five mile bicycle; spoon, from VanEmburgh & Son, time five mile bicycle; cane from Doane, first two mile bicycle; luggage carrier, from Mague & Co., first half-mile bicycle; suspenders, from Crane's, first high jump; napkinring, from Club, first one mile bicycle; sweater, from Club, for the most points.

SHRODER.

Catchers mit, from Harper's, first 440 yards run; one dozen ice-cream sodas, from Randolph's, first half-mile run; one dozen tooth powder, from Allen's, third prize for points; napkinring, from Club, first one hundred yards dash.

G. SMITH.

Reading glass, Reif's, second time prize; souvenir spoon, club, first three standing broad jumps; silver spoon, club, first putting shot.

T. SMITH.

Vase, Gavett's, first running broad jump; silk handkerchief, Sebring, first running hop, step and jump.

KEEFE.

Knife from Handelott, second five-mile bicycle race.

White donated 7 doz. safety pins to pin on the numbers. Wm. Waters did all engraving on the prizes free. Doane gave the use of his store window. According to points the boys were in this order:

1. V. Green, 28.
2. G. Smith, 12.
3. F. Shroder, 9.
4. T. Smith, 8.
   J. LaBoyteaux, 8.
5. N. Probasco, 5.
6. B. Honeyman, 4.
7. A. Crane, 2.
   J. Keefe, 2.
8. E. Ovington, 1.
   W. Cornwall, 1.
   W. Kitchen, 1.

It will be seen that Green easily outclassed everyone else. He says that he surprised even himself. One of the riders remarked that if "Zimmie" had been there he would have met his Waterloo. The officers of the day were:

Starter—S. Titsworth.
Scorers—H. Drake, W. West, E. Serrell.
Judges—T. Cumming, S. C. Crane, C. Morse.
Timers—D. Stevens, D. C. Adams.

The Committee of Arrangements, A. Wagner and A. Crane, did most of the work, and in spite of the fact that they received little encouragement until a few days before the field day, they pushed faithfully on to happy culmination of their hopes.

The United States Senate, viewing with esteem the service that James A. Demarest of Plainfield is doing the Government at Brockville, Ont., yesterday confirmed the President's appointment of him as Consul of that port.

Enterprising Children Work for a Bell.

The new St. Peter's German church on Grove street will probably own a bell before the church is completed, judging from the way the children are collecting money from the people of the borough.

HER ABDUCTOR ARRESTED.

MARSHAL PANGBORN'S LONG CHASE AFTER BOROUGH ELOPERS.

The Man Was Aged 40, and the Girl Only 14—He Was Employed by His Victim's Father.

Arthur Randolph, aged 40, of South Plainfield, has been working for Jacob Kliner, of Washington Valley, on his farm, until five weeks ago. During that time he became infatuated with Mr. Kliner's daughter, who will be 14 years old next February.

Last Monday night Randolph went to Kliner's place, and some time between the hours of 11 and 5 the next morning abducted the girl. He was assisted by Adam Stutts, who also lives at South Plainfield. Stutts provided the horse and wagon.

The girl's parents sought Marshal Pangborn, and implored him to take the matter in hand. He told them it was out of the jurisdiction of the borough, but that as they lived in the township he thought they deserved assistance.

Thursday morning at 3:45 the Marshal went to South Plainfield, where he found Stutts, and demanded information in regard to the twain. Stutts said he would take him where they were, and the two started for Newark, where much time was spent in different saloons, which Stutts claimed they were likely to frequent.

All this time the marshal thought he was misguiding him, and finally brought Stutts to this city. They went over in North Plainfield, and the marshal locked him up. Thereupon a complete disclosure of the missing pair was obtained by the official, who immediately started to hunt them up. He learned that Monday night Randolph and the young girl slept in the churchyard at White House. From there they went to Glen Gardner, then to West Portal, a station on the Lehigh Valley Railroad, then to Bloomsbury, and lastly to Phillipsburg, where they were found in Hughes's Hotel, on Main street.

Marshal Pangborn brought them to this city, arriving here about 8 this morning. Randolph was locked up in the borough, and the girl was sent home.

It is pleasant to note that the weekly reviews of trade published today take a more hopeful view of the business situation. Since the bill repealing the silver purchase clause of the Sherman act passed the House of Representatives, a light has broken in the gloom that enveloped the mercantile world.

The philosophic editor of the Bound Brook Chronicle now sees in his disastrous fire of two years ago a blessing in disguise. He says that while the loss and inconvenience caused were great, the result has been to establish the business more firmly than ever before, in handsome and commodious quarters on Mountain avenue. And so he's happy.

EVERY MAN HIS OWN COURT-MASTER

That Thomas O. Bullock, one of whose wives was Miss Lydia Sutton of this city, is a gentleman of acuteness and a keen sense of humor, is proved by his expert handling of the latest legal complication in his case. It seems that Mr. Bullock was in fear of arrest at the instigation of a member of his harem, and was also doubtful about being able to secure a bondsman. So he enlisted the sympathy and service of a justice of the peace who is a crony of his, and the two locked themselves in Mr. Bullock's big lonely house, with four burly farmhands on guard, and waited.

When a constable clothed in the majesty of the law gained admission and was about to clutch his prisoner triumphantly, Mr. Bullock calmly produced his justice, and as the law permits a prisoner to insist on being taken before the nearest 'squire the constable had no alternative but to submit to his dictation. Straightway Mr. Bullock was freed from arrest on his own recognizance, and could afford to laugh at the discomfited officer.

This example teaches us the convenience and comfort of having one's own justice of the peace on tap, when legal trouble threatens.

CONVINCED HIS OPPONENT.

The speech of Congressman Dunn on the silver question has attracted wide attention for its eloquence and logic, and is being thoughtfully considered in the pages of The Congressional Record. It is especially noteworthy because it is the only speech of the whole two weeks debate in which the unconstitutionality of the Sherman law was presented. This was the text of Mr. Dunn's able and convincing address. He predicted that if the law could be taken into the United States Supreme Court, that body would declare it unconstitutional, first, because there is no grant of power in the Constitution to warrant the passage of such an act, and second, because it is antagonistic to the genius and intent of the Constitution, which is rigidly against the grant of special privileges or special immunities to individuals or corporations. Mr. Dunn's argument in elaborating these two points was very conclusive, indicating considerable research into the question, while the results of his inquiries were presented in vigorous language. He was particularly severe in his denunciation of the "silver kings", and had no sympathy with the gold bug cries or the assaults upon the banks which seemed to be the stock in trade of the silver men.

Mr. Dunn quoted with great effect a large number of statistics to uphold his argument, and was especially applauded when he said that as the purchase of silver affords only an unstable basis for the issuance of United States notes, this feature of the Sherman act ought to be instantly repealed. He referred, also, to the threats of the silver Democrats to leave the party and then added:

> I want to say to these men here and now that I am a Democrat by nature, training, and instinct; that I believe the Democratic party will live while the Constitution of our country lives; that when the Democratic party dies, as an effective protector of the principles of our government the government will die with it; that the principles of our party are as indestructible as the eternal hills of God, and I would rather see it buried out of sight and sound of men forever by the forces of nature or revolution rather than that the party should abandon a single one of its principles under the threat of a private interest which seeks to dominate this House and overthrow all principles of right and justice to serve its own aims.

Mr. Dunn received numerous congratulations at the conclusion of his speech, which were as sincerely tendered as they were deserved by the recipient. Gen. Tracy, who is one of the anti-silver leaders on the floor, told Mr. Dunn that the argument which he had made was unanswerable.

HUMAN LIFE SACRIFICED TO ECONOMY.

The argument of The Press against the summer suspension of the Life-saving Service on the coast of the United States has been adopted by all progressive journals. These columns have already quoted the comments of other papers favoring the proposition, and editorials daily appear urging that the service be maintained with full equipment all the year round. The Press has already pointed out that much of the loss of life that occurs in the months of May, June, July and August, when the life-saving stations are closed and the life-savers engaged in other occupations, could be prevented if the service was continuous all the year round, and that is a good and sufficient reason why the service should never be suspended.

Following the line of thought suggested by these columns, the New York World of Thursday published a cartoon emphasizing the great need. The artist portrayed a life-saving station along the shore with a great bar and lock on it "closed until September for economy sake", while in front, in the angry billows, people from a wrecked vessel were endeavoring to make the shore on spars and pieces of wreckage. This is a realistic picture of the actual condition of the Life-saving Service, showing one of the most important branches of Government employ to be closed to save expenses while lives are lost in the raging, heartless sea. The High Bridge Monitor rightly says that this picture should be painted in colors, and hung before Congress, until, dazed by the awful spectacle, they pass a law providing for the maintenance of our Life-saving Service the year around.

The Newark Advertiser suggests a proper method of procedure, and its advice should be heeded promptly. The Advertiser says:

> The propriety of a measure to accomplish this object being proposed by a member of Congress from New Jersey is too obvious to call for much demonstration. On the coast of this State probably more vessels meet with disaster than on any other in the United States, and, consequently a Congressman from New Jersey could find and advance more arguments in support of such a bill and with greater facility than a Congressman from a section that is not so deeply interested in the matter. The Congress is yet young, and a bill presented now would stand far more chance of becoming a law than one withheld until later on.
> As the Life-saving Service is in the nature of a special benefit, being of advantage mainly to those who follow the sea, it might be well to consider the advisability of laying a small tax on all vessels of American registry in order to create the additional fund that would be required if the stations were kept open during the four months in which they are now closed. Ship-owners ought not to object to a reasonable assessment for this cause.

Perpetuate the Life-saving Service, and without delay!

TABLE DECORATIONS.

Novel Ideas Carried Out at Home and Abroad.

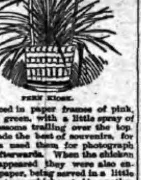
A Luncheon Where All the Decorative Effect Was Produced by Filmy Paper—Table Ornamentations for a Dinner.

Have you ever thought of giving a luncheon where the decorations were solely of filmy paper? It's an excellent idea if carried out successfully.

Not many days ago six New York girls were guests at a country house up the Hudson. Just before coming back to town, the hostess gave in their honor what she called a paper-luncheon. Fortunately, it was more substantial than its name implied.

In the center of the polished mahogany table was a large, square mat of pale pink crinkled paper, with a border shading from white to green. Upon this rested the jardiniere, a deep green bowl of crepe paper, filled with ferns and sprigs of apple blossoms. The doily at each plate matched the one in the center. Single candlesticks were placed at the corners of the table, and the light shed a rosy glow around the pink shades, where apple blossoms seemed to be growing.

At each plate was a large paper spoon. The deep bowl was of pink rope paper. This was filled with bonbons. Twisted about the handle were miniature apple blossoms, and caught in among the leaves was the name card, printed in silver. The menus were placed in paper frames of pink, white or green, with a little spray of apple blossoms trailing over the top. They made the best of souvenirs, for the girls used them for photograph frames afterwards. When the chicken patties appeared they were also encased in paper, being served in a little parchment cup which rested in another cup of pink paper almost smothered in apple blossoms.

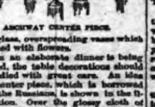


FERN KIOSK.

As for the ices, they could not have looked better. They came on the table in deep heart-shaped baskets made of pink and green rope paper, with tiny apple blossoms twisted about the handle; but of course they were put in glass before the paper baskets received them.

Another evidence of the paper decoration was a deep frieze which surrounded the dining-room wall, with long vines of apple blossoms trailing over it. They were made of paper, the petals being hand-painted.

For a rather more formal luncheon the archway center piece is novel and effective. The arches are of green colored glass, overspreading vases which are filled with flowers.



ARCHWAY CENTER PIECE.

When an elaborate dinner is being planned, the table decorations should be studied with great care. An idea for a center piece, which is borrowed from the Russians, is shown in the illustration. Over the glossy cloth of damask is laid a mirror mat. Then a number of Dresden china figures are placed here and there, and each one holds in its china hands a bowl or vase filled with ferns. Tiny, low jardinieres, overflowing with ferns, fill in all the open spaces till the whole mirror is converted into a fernery. Rising from the center of this mass of green is a Dresden china lamp, with a shade of some soft tint of silk.

For the everyday home dinner ferns may be used effectively as a center piece. If possible, have them growing. Plant a few fine ferns in a good-sized flower-pot, and then place it within a miniature kiosk, made of celluloid or gilded willow. This makes as well a pretty decoration to stand on the table in your piazza corner.—N. Y. World.

The Latest in Stationery.

Among the novelties in stationery are thin satin-finished cards, illustrated according to the character of the entertainment to which a guest is invited. The edges of these cards are gold beveled. The illustrations are often hand-done by the hostess, or according to her order, in colors. A table set with a service of china typifies a dinner or luncheon. Dancing nymphs and cupids mean a prospective ball. A Japanese damsel in her quaint robe serving the amber decoction denotes an afternoon tea. Diminutive kings, clubs, diamonds or jacks are emblematical of a card party. The insignia of a wedding is a ring in one corner over which a cupid hovers. Other designs are used, and the hostess may show considerable artistic skill and taste in original ideas by making her invitations cleverly significant or amusing.

An Incongruous Mixture.

Among the newest gowns is seen the queer combination of Holland linen and black satin, a plain coat of Holland having deep revers and a lining [illegible] of the satin.

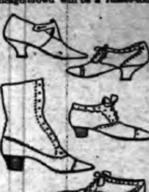
SUMMER FOOTWEAR.

Russet Leather in the Van of Light-Colored Shoes.

The Most Comfortable Walking Boot for Women—The New [illegible] Tip Seems to Make Its Exit—The Latest in Buckles.

This year, our Columbian year, has given fresh impetus, if any were needed, to tan or russet leather for footwear. It was a happy thought which brought this serviceable color into use, and it needed no raison d'etre better than its great practicability and perfect adaptability for both country and town. It was introduced, however, like many another most excellent and sensible thing has been, as a fad, and one that it was almost expected would pass away with the heat and dust of a summer or two. But it seems destined to a place all the year round as a comfortable walking boot suitable for seaside and mountain wear, and none the less appropriate for young ladies who enjoy a brisk walk through the park and over the country roads when the brown leaves rustle and the air is keen with frost.

Just now, I am told, every girl who orders a pair of "Bluchers" wants them made a little easy so that they shall be perfectly comfortable for the Chicago fair, for who goes to the fair must do a good deal of walking and standing under any circumstances. From observation it is foretold that a Chicago crowd will be a russet-footed crowd, and the few who are improvident enough to forget the task of keeping black leather in any appearance of neatness will learn a thing or two.



NEW STYLES IN BOOTS.

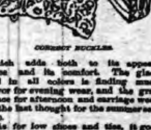
While in the making of russet boots every point of nicety is considered that obtains in dress boots there is one point of difference that must not be overlooked—your russet boots must lace up the front, and may not button at the side, as do your patent leathers or your French calf walking boots. Russia leather is the correct article, and it is so soft and pliable, taking the finish and keeping it so well, even improving in color as it is worn, that it takes immediate precedence over other leathers for russet boots and shoes.

The "Blucher" is a recent and comfortable cut for a boot and calls for rather a low heel with sole adapted to the needs of a pedestrian of more or less ambition. A little more dressy, perhaps, is the regular walking boot cut with a straight foxing. With neat tips and Piccadilly toes they are about as natty as anything in shoe leather could be.

Here is a tip, by the way, on shoe tips. Women are just the least bit weary of choosing between a pointed tip and straight tip on their boots and shoes, and the next thing we know there will be no tips at all. We shall probably see evidence of this as the summer grows old.

White shoes for country and seaside are more in favor than ever this season, and with the pretty, thin stuffs composing many of the summer gowns they certainly are a dainty innovation, bringing with them a necessity for snowy white hosiery. White canvas, such a favorite material for these shoes last year, is still much in use and makes a very neat and pretty shoe; white suede is the newest thing, and is pointed off in white patent leather, the white suede itself, or the favorite tan. Red morocco for house and piazza wear has lost none of its former prestige, and in its destined places will be more worn than ever with white dresses.

A very pretty slipper, quite the newest out I have, is called the "Czarina." It is made in Russia leather and a gray glace kid for summer use, and is specially pretty for carriage dress. It has a double strap over the instep, which adds both to its appearance and its comfort. The glace kid in all colors is finding much favor for evening wear, and the gray glace for afternoon and carriage wear is the last thought for the summer season.



CORRECT BUCKLES.

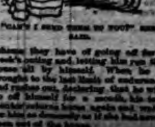
As for low shoes and ties, it goes almost without saying that the russet are the things for general summer wear, and they may no longer be considered as an after thought or mere accessories to one's stock of shoes. They belong to the important necessities, both for style and comfort, and to mark the fact that they have come to stay one can now buy brown rubbers to match one's brown shoes or boots. They are just out.—N. Y. Herald.

But he only wrung my hand, told me that his was a hidden sorrow, but the world was wide, and then proceeded as before to go out into the night and perform his idiot feat of circling round the neighborhood and getting over fences and climbing in at his own window in the morning.

He never succeeded in getting beyond the reach of the velvet paw. But his intention was good.

My other friend—to distinguish him I will call him a white mouse—suffers from continual abandonment by his wife. She has a subtle instinct, which tells her that he has specially loving spells. She watches these spells coming on and then makes a sudden visit to her mother. My white mouse on these occasions comes home loaded with extra delicacies and finds the house deserted. He storms, knocks over the umbrella stand, musses up the toilet stand, throws the tidies on the floor, kicks the dog and swears he will go and find the boys and have a good time.

He never does; he goes obediently in search of his tyrant to her mother's, and there he is worried for hours by the two women who treat him with extra politeness and tell him what a scheme they have of going off for a week's outing and letting him run the house all by himself. When he is brought to the last limit of endurance and rushes out, declaring that he will go off himself for a month, his tormentor returns home again and waits for him as demurely as if she had never been out of the house.



"CAN'T I SEND THEM TO YOU?" SHE SAID.

The [illegible] of this kind of [illegible] to a woman's [illegible]. If the [illegible]

Both of my other friends have evolved a theory that man should never give up his natural ruffianism if he wants to have his own way with a woman.

They always say Shakespeare knew how to get along with women. Ah! what a head he had, my boy; he created Petruchio. Women respect ruffians, men who wreck things, who have spasms that it is not possible to bring on, in which they knock down their wives and kick the furniture to pieces. I call this the mouse theory.

It doesn't work.

In the first place, any exhibition of that kind convinces the cat that you have a coarse organization and cannot suffer keenly. The moment she discovers that fact she loses interest in you. She thinks that her ideal has perished, and if you are not careful she will set up another one with finer susceptibilities.

In the second place, she is apt to remark somewhere in your career with an angel voice that it must be fun to have to buy the furniture three times over.

I know of one of these creatures who conceived the purely feminine iniquity of instigating her spouse to strike her, just for the exquisite delight of going about afterward with a black eye and sticking the knife of remorse into him in her sweetest manner.

That will explain to you why the wives who appear in the police court against the wife beaters always beg the judge to let them off.

Good heavens! You don't suppose they would willingly give up the exquisite delight of making the man suffer for it, to the judge, do you?

No, no, my boy; women are not inquisitors who use thumbscrews and try to convert people. They are delicious little Neros, who want to sit on an ivory throne and enjoy suffering for the fun of it. Men who deceive and abandon women are wild beasts. Women who coax men to fall in love with them, so that they can torture them are esthetes, and they must be pardoned because they are not thinking of the suffering they inflict, only of the satisfaction they receive.

QUEER PARTNERS.

A Man and a Cat, Both Deaf, Who Work for Uncle Sam.

The existence of a singular bond of sympathy between a human being and a dumb animal, both similarly affected, is conspicuous in the New York general post office. It is between a man and a cat, both stone deaf. Gustav Fersenheim is the man's name. He is sixty years old and has been in the service nearly a quarter of a century. The cat's name is Dummy. The department where the afflicted friends are in daily communion is the third division.

Dummy is one of the thirty felines that Uncle Sam maintains in the big granite pile to keep out rats and mice.

How Fersenheim's attention was first attracted to her is not evident, for Dummy is an undersized black cat, lame in the right hind leg and stub-tailed. About six months ago, however, Fersenheim began to buy her delicacies at the risk of incurring Uncle Sam's displeasure by injuring her usefulness as a mouser.

Every day at noon Fersenheim feeds Dummy, after eating his own luncheon. She manifests her gratitude by a faint purring and an arching of her back. Her twenty-eight furry companions crowd enviously around, and in the dimly-lighted corner of the basement their green eyes sufficiently attest their jealousy. The other cats try all their persuasive powers on Fersenheim, but he is true to his pet.

The little black cat is so bright-eyed and sprightly in her movements that it is hard to convince strangers that she is really deaf. Fersenheim's abnormally quick eye detects the look of incredulity that flits over the onlooker's face, and he points first to the cat's ears, then his own and gives a reassuring look and a convincing nod.

If a doubt still remain, some obliging clerk will leap high in the air and alight on the floor with a noisy stamp a few inches to the rear of Dummy's tail as the cat sits on the floor. She will not move a muscle. If after this the ghost of a doubt haunts the visitor's mind, other obliging clerks will seize a great truck and run it thundering past the cat, all but over her funny tail. She does not stir. Then they will run the truck close in front of her and she will jump aside to avoid all possible danger.

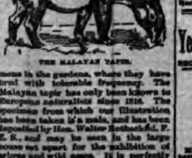
DUMMY, THE DEAF CAT.

A few weeks ago Dummy gave birth to three kittens. Fersenheim adopted them at once, and when they get old enough they will undoubtedly share the tidbits dispensed at luncheon time.

THE MALAYAN TAPIR.

One of the Queer Creatures Now on Exhibition in London.

An addition of special interest has just been made to the collection of animals in the Zoological society's garden, Regent's park, London, England, in the form of a nearly adult specimen of the Malayan or Asiatic tapir. It is only at very long intervals that specimens of this interesting animal have been obtained—the first being in 1840, the second in 1860, one in 1883 and the present example which arrived last week. The home of the tapir is in Central and South America—where there are three well-known species, viz., Baird's tapir, the hairy-eared tapir and the common or Brazilian tapir. Of the latter there are always living specimens in the gardens, where they have bred with tolerable frequency. The Malayan tapir has only been known to European naturalists since 1816. The specimen from which our illustration has been taken is a male, and has been deposited by Hon. Walter Rothschild, F. Z. S., and may be seen in the large house set apart for the exhibition of zebras and wild asses. It is perfectly tame and docile.



THE MALAYAN TAPIR.

Salt Baths at Home.

There are new fashions in baths constantly cropping up. One hears of flower baths, crushed fruit baths, wine baths, powdered-root baths, and the mud or earth bath; but not at all on the line with these fads is the salt bath, or rather salt rub—for those at least who cannot get to the ocean once a year. It is made a part of the proceedings at some Turkish baths, but you can do it yourself with remarkable results in the way of a feeling of renewed vigor, freshness and elation. It also increases the satiny texture of the skin and the brilliancy of the complexion. Put some coarse salt in a large earthen jar, and make a "slush" of it with a small quantity of water, not using enough to dissolve the salt. After the wash with hot water and soap, take this by the handfuls and rub it in briskly, following it with a [illegible]

FASHION AT THE PIER.

An Ominous Rumor of Panniers and Overskirts Impending.

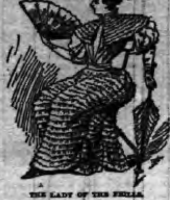
Secrets of Autumn—A Skirt with Fifty-Two Ruffles—Casino Gowns—The Role of Tall Women Unconstitutional in a Republic.

[COPYRIGHT, 1893.]

For mortal man to know the future isn't altogether an advantage? Mortal woman, lookin ahead in fear and trembling, shudders with apprehension.

For in the near future, plainly discernable from the present she sees the overskirt, the panier and the ruffle. For that matter, the overskirt is here, the panier is already being "built" in the shops for actual sale in the fall. And as for ruffles—

I have just received a letter from one of the leading man milliners, not of Europe but of our own land, and therein he says that he has recently finished a dress with fifty-two narrow ruffles falling over each other's heels all the way from the belt to the hem, lapping over each other like the tiny shingles on some of those curious Swiss chalets in the Valais. Think of that, oh ye women with sewing machines whose honest pride it is to make your own dresses! Fifty-two ruffles! To have eighteen is common enough, ten is scant, six not to be thought of. Taste seemed at one time to have the dressmakers conquered, but the irrepressible conflict has broken out afresh, and taste has fled until the storm blows over—and its feelings are no longer ruffles.

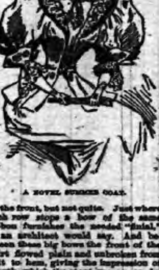


THE LADY OF THE FRILLS.

Really tasteful and artistic modes can be followed by the amateur fashioner of gowns because their keynote is simplicity. That is why the heart of the dressmaker yearns for the fifty-two ruffles and all that they represent.

But, gentle ladies all, a truce to melancholy! No style, not even the worst and most debased, can long survive the constant movement for change. And is not the air fresh and balmy, and the sun bright, and the sky blue, and do not great banks of wild roses bloom all the way from the queer eagle-decorated water tower to Watch Hill? And does not the smiling sea beat itself to foam against the finest of curving beaches, and just there where the breakers chase each other up the sloping sand are not the belles from the cottages and the "transients" from the hotels disporting themselves in the surf? And are not there baby wagons trundled by white-capped bonnes? And isn't the ocean itself a sea-green robe trimmed with ruffles along the edges?

The beach is one great fact at Narragansett. The other is the Casino, and the chief use of the Casino, with its brown rock underpinning and quaint turreted roof and broad piazzas, is, of course, the display of the Casino gown. The Casino gown is in the shades considered most trying. It is in ruffles and in ribands and in bretelles and shoulder puffs. The ribbon, thrown about the skirt by way of excusing the lack of ruffles, is a pretty compromise for those who are holding out against the ruffle as best they can. A lady whom I saw a few days ago, a lady who is rather plump, but has no idea of letting her gown confess it, had a cleverly designed gown. Four rows of wide satin ribbon the skirt bore, the rows running about the back of the skirt and across the side nearly to the front, but not quite. Just where each row stops a bow of the same ribbon furnishes the needed "finial," as an architect would say. And between these big bows the front of the skirt flowed plain and unbroken from belt to hem, giving the impression of length, which the stout woman so desires. The material blue serge and perfectly plain, except for the ribbon trimming; the bodice with wide lapels and two small ruffles just at the waist, with knife plaiting down the front, the sleeves of moderate fullness, the collar high and uncomfortable. But no woman minds discomfort when her gown fits. The idea!



A NOVEL SUMMER COAT.

Serge is the universal material by the sounding sea, but gayer fabrics and gayer patterns are often more combined in the Casino gown. One less admirable but more admired than the blue serge was a spot crepon of pale green and white, the colors magically blending in a fantastical effect. Each of the triple skirts is plain and the two upper ones run downward to a slight point in front, are cut higher at the sides and plaited full behind. There are no ruffles or trimming, but at the waist a wide belt of rich dark green satin furnishes a heavy dash of what artists call "color" when they mean merely emphasis. This darker satin edges the double angle of the wide lapels or revers of opal shot moire and a touch of jet. From the comfortably low neck falls a wealth of fine soft old lace, disappearing beneath the revers at the bottom. The sleeves were formed by two full flounces or frills of the crepon the arms thrusting out from among these folds, tightly clad from the elbow down. From the satin belt depended two long, full streamers of the same material.

But the prettiest gown I have seen to-day—it was not in the Casino—consisted of a serge skirt and Eton jacket, worn above a light silk waist, the whole from a bargain counter at eight dollars and ninety-nine cents. She who wore it was fresh and wholesome looking, a teacher down for a day's outing with her family, I should say; and her vivacious way and pretty face showed charmingly beneath it illustrating once again the old saying—which isn't true—that some women look well in anything and others in nothing.

The whole jacket tribe — Eton, bolero or what not—are for the able woman. The statuesque creature, whose walk proclaims her a goddess, has no use for jackets. She it is, divinely tall if not always divinely fair, who is bringing upon us the ruffle and the panier and the overskirt.

Shall we never be freed from the tyranny of the tall, slender woman? She is in a minority. She is but one in ten at the most. In a republic in such [illegible] plump woman. She sat in front of me at a Casino concert this morning and I studied her most carefully. She wore a blue and white lawn frock that was all wings. There were wings at the bottom of it, plaited ruffles that blew up and fluttered and displayed their tendency to soar whenever a breath of air struck them. There were wings at the waist—ruffles that escaped from under the belt and wavered and wondered as if they were waiting their cue to rise. There were wings on the shoulders of it—ruffles that floated about the shoulders capewise and had other ruffles, underneath feathers—perking themselves and making all sorts of rebellious lifts below them about the arms.

The [illegible]

TWO CASINO GOWNS.

The plump woman rippled all over like the petals of an immense double peony. And she wasn't so very big either. I mean it literally when I call her "plump." She didn't belong in the category of fat women; but ruffles, airy as they may seem, add to one's apparent weight, and so, of course, to one's really effective weight, terribly.

But to turn to pleasanter themes. The simplest frocks on the beach, and so very likely the prettiest, are of plain white drill with navy blue trimmings. Take one of these with a broad white drilling hat covered with corn flowers, and the summer girl looks, as she probably feels, in vacation mood, bedight for the midsummer holidays. Brown drill is pretty when it is pretty; that sounds enigmatical, but it's a simple question of complexion; girls who are pretty in brown drill are and those who aren't aren't, and that's the end of it. The brown drill frocks have blue and pink and scarlet trimmings, and the handsomest woman who wore one to-day had an enormous bunch of field lilies at her belt. I could cry when I see the orange and black beauties, for they make me think of the drowsy hum of the berry pastures at home and the smell of the sweet fern and a half grown girl's strange midsummer dreams.

CRUELTY OF A WOMAN.

Nim Crinkle Would Have Us Think Marriage Is a Failure.

A Mill Where Hearts Are Ground to Dust—A Cynical and Ungallant Attack Upon the Gentle Sex—A Domestic Study.

[COPYRIGHT, 1893.]

That phrase, I grant you, is very French, and, consequently, paradoxical, but—soul of the sex—so is my subject.

"Consistency is a jewel," and, for fear that my article will not sparkle too much, I plant that gem at the head as security.

Girls who roll their companions in blankets and brand their college mates with nitrate of silver have not awakened to their powers. They are like their brothers, who think it poignant to cut their names in the grand piano and put pepper on the stove at prayer time. When they have grown to the full exercise of their powers and can break a mother's heart, probably, they look back at these things with contempt.

When a girl gets her first lover she begins to see how terribly inadequate all her previous foolishness was—how gross and material and childish the pin-sticking business was. Now that she has a human heart in her toils she arrives at the first knowledge of her power to inflict pain.

In an article of this kind a fellow has got to allude somewhere to a cat playing with a mouse before she destroys it. It can't be avoided, so I allude to it at once. A girl first begins to be feline when she gets a lover. She is a combination of fur, purr and talons. I have been a mouse myself and I know how it is. She used to let go of me and say in the purr language: "Now run away, you don't amuse me any longer." I don't remember how many attempts I made, but she always put her velvet paw out and stopped me. Then finally she gobbled me.

I have a friend who is a married [illegible]. Sometimes we commune at the club under our breaths. He is a philosopher. Most married mice are. He has told me of the almost superhuman cunning of the [illegible]. He says that [illegible] caught him made him believe that it was his mission to mold cats into the semblance of mice. She used to look down at him, he says, and purr a profound desire to be molded. There were no objects in life but mice objects. She did not care for cats; they were treacherous and small minded. Her ideal was a mouse. O, that she could become more like him.

The molding business he now says is a hollow mockery. It's the wrong fellow who gets molded.

My friend has made several attempts to scamper away. I remember once he came over to my rooms, about ten o'clock at night, very red and flustered, and carrying his traveling bag.

"Well, old fel," he said, "this time she went too far. The die is cast. We have separated. Good-by, old boy. I'm going to a hotel. Take off your slippers and come and take something."

I told him that I sympathized with him, but that he forgot that my wife did not allow me to take things. He wrung my hand and disappeared into the night.

I was very much grieved over my friend's misfortune and came near writing a reproachful letter to his wife. But the next morning he went to his house to get some personal papers that he had left behind. His wife began to play "Annie Rooney" when he came in; he slammed the doors upstairs, jammed the bureau drawers, knocked down the bird cage and then listened. She was still playing in the parlor, but she had changed the tune to something like a waltz. Then he opened the door savagely and called down the stairs:

HER VELVET PAW.

"Esther, what the deuce did you do with my papers that were in the bureau?"

Esther came up in the most unconcerned manner, still humming the waltz. "I think," she said, "you might wipe your feet before you come into my room."

"O, I haven't time now to think about wiping my feet," he replied. "I've something more urgent to attend to."

"Are you sure," she said, demurely, without looking at him, "that there are any papers? I don't remember seeing any."

"Well, I want you to understand," he snorted, quite savagely, "that I will not leave this house till I get them."

"Can't I send them to you?" she meekly asked.

"No, sir, I want them now, and I don't stir a foot till I get them."

And he didn't. So you see it was lucky for me that I didn't write the letter to his wife.

Whenever he comes over now at night to wake me up and inform me that this time the break is for good, that no earthly power can heal the breach, and all is over at last, I mildly inquire why he can't arrange the final breach in the daytime. And the last time I was so aggravated that I dropped to the momentary perfidy of a pun. "Look here, old boy," I said, "I have heard of wives wearing the breeches, but these breaches must be wearing the wife, really now."

And They Don't Think It's Absurd.

He (the bridegroom at the world's fair)—Do you want to go to the Art building, dear?

She (the bride)—Do you?

He—I do, if you do.

She—If you do I do, dear.

He—Just as you say.

She—Do, dear, take your choice.

He—Well, I don't want to unless you want to.

She—I don't want to unless you want to. (With solicitude.) Do you want to?

He—If you want to, dearest.

She (timidly)—Well, let's go.

He—Are you sure you want to go?

She—If you are.

He (timidly)—Well, let's go.

JOE HOCKED MARY'S DIAMOND RING.

THEN BORROWED GOOD HARD CASH OF HER, BESIDES.

The Gilded Youth's Father Promised to Settle with Miss VanRiper, but Didn't, and That's Why She Sued Papa Pike for $62 After Joe Skipped—Lots of Letters Were Read in Court—Mary Won the Suit.

The case of Mary VanRiper against Noah W. Pike was tried yesterday afternoon by Justice Mosher, with the result as exclusively told in Thursday's Press. The suit was brought to recover $62, the amount which it cost Mary to get from pawn a diamond ring which Mr. Pike's festive son Joe borrowed from her two years ago, and subsequently pawned.

As the case promised to be an unusually interesting one, the court-room was crowded by 2, the hour set for the trial. Lawyer George DeMena appeared for the plaintiff, and Lawer Winfield Angleman for the defense. A stack of letters were produced and read as evidence by both sides.

The plaintiff is a decidedly handsome young woman, about 22, of medium height, and fine figure, with large snappy blue eyes, brown hair, and clear, regular features. She was fashionably dressed in a tailor-made gown of black serge with white bodice. Her conduct throughout the trial made a most favorable impression, especially when it was realized by all present that she was placed in a most trying position. Miss VanRiper was accompanied by her uncle, Judge Frank VanCleef, of Paterson, a shrewd lawyer and a most valuable adviser for Attorney DeMena. The story that came out in the trial is a decidedly interesting one.

Joseph Pike in the summer of 1891 met Mary VanRiper at the Hotel Pierrepont in Asbury Park; and the acquaintance there begun was continued through the next winter, Joe frequently calling on Mary at her home. Joe spent money rather freely; and Miss VanRiper, it seems, thought that he was a millionaire's son, and encouraged his advances accordingly. Indeed, Joe had himself put in the Asbury Park papers as heir to a noble fortune, and swelled around the hotels with the biggest strut of any man in town. In January, 1892, the gilded youth borrowed a diamond ring worth $100 of Mary, as young men sometimes do of foolish maidens, saying he wished to wear it. What he really did was to hock it at once for $40. The next spring, in answer to a letter from Mary inquiring for her ring, Joe called at her home, made a plausible explanation about it, and borrowed five dollars of her. He then discontinued his visits to Mary, and remained beautifully silent. Mary again and again wrote to Joe, saying, "Bring back the ring I loaned thee."

Joe kept on saying nothing. The elder Pike then came upon the scene. He one day wrote to Miss VanRiper stating that it had come to his knowledge that his son had pawned a ring belonging to her, that he might relieve a friend who was embarrassed.

Either in this letter or in a subsequent one—for he wrote several—the elder Pike sent the pawn ticket for the ring, and said that he wished to reimburse Mary for her loss as soon as his limited means would allow, promising to pay the amount in monthly installments of $10, if she would be patient, and not disgrace Joe and the family by making the unfortunate matter public. Mary expressed satisfaction at this proposal, redeemed her ring at a cost to herself of $62, and awaited the promised remittances from Pike. None came, however, and at last having lost all patience she recently laid the matter before her uncle, Judge Frank Van Cleef. Young Pike in the meanwhile had skipped; and is now enlisted in the United States regular army.

After an unsatisfactory and rather stormy interview between Judge VanCleef and the elder Pike, suit was brought to recover Miss Van Riper's fifty-two dollars.

In the court-room yesterday Judge VanCleef showed himself an able lawyer and a fluent and impressive speaker. He told how he had called on Noah Pike in Plainfield and had heard from the defendant's own lips an admission that he never intended to repay Mary Van Riper the money she had lost, and that his conciliatory letters to her had been written solely to gain time in which Joe could get out of the State and beyond the reach of the criminal law.

The Judge then made a sensation in the court-room. He turned suddenly toward Noah Pike, and looking him full in the eye said slowly and distinctly: "I then said, Your Honor, that this man had played us a scary trick; and I must confess that it was the most contemptible piece of work that I ever heard of."

It was hard, hard English—the kind that hurts—and the two men gazed grimly at each other across the court room, while the clock ticked audibly as if it feared something dreadful was about to happen.

In the cross-examination Pike proved an expert at evading Lawyer DeMena's questions. It is not putting the matter too strongly to say that he made a decidedly clever witness. He was perfectly composed throughout the trial, and denied having admitted that he deceived the young woman in order to gain time to send his son out of the law's reach.

After patiently hearing all the evidence, Justice Mosher rendered a verdict of $62 and costs for the plaintiff. The case has been appealed.

Lawyer Angleman for the defense moved at the beginning that the trial be dismissed on the ground that the summons specified no particular place for the defendant to appear. It was a summons to appear at "137 or 143 North avenue". The defense also objected to the continuance of the trial on the ground that previous to the institution of the suit attorney for the plaintiff exhibited to the court letters which were made the basis of the action, and that the court had expressed an opinion that the defendant was liable for the claim sued for.

Before the case was moved, Lawyer Angleman demanded a jury, but the demand was refused by Justice Mosher, on the ground that the application was not made soon enough. Mr. Angleman claims that the justice in taking this action sets himself up as a superior to the Constitution of the State and of the United States, which give to every man the right of a trial by jury.

HYMENEAL.

Woolley—VanMiddlesworth.

A pretty wedding took place Friday evening, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry VanMiddlesworth, 111 Elmwood place, when Miss Estelle VanMiddlesworth became the wife of Lindley Woolley of Westfield.

Forty guests were present, being the immediate relatives and friends.

At 7:15, the bride, leaning on the arm of her father, and attended by Miss Madeline Bridge as maid of honor and Miss Emma Woolley as bridesmaid, entered the parlor from a rear room, while through another room came the groom with Charles VanMiddlesworth as best man.

The bridal party were met by the Rev. Dr. C. R. Barnes, of the First M. E. church, who performed the marriage ceremony, assisted by Benjamin Head.

Congratulations were immediately showered on the happy couple.

The bride was becomingly attired in a golden-blue [illegible], while the groom wore a suit of black diagonal.

After the ceremony the evening was spent in pleasant conversation, during which refreshments were served.

Better Look After This Tree.

A fine old elm tree on East Second street directly back of Noah Pike's place is going to destruction in a rather curious manner. The tree about a month ago received a break at the top of the trunk and the split has gradually extended downward, dividing the immense trunk, the parts of which are slowly separating, leaving between them a widening gap, and threatening to fall at any time and injure passersby. In New York some years ago a large tree was injured in a similar manner, and received much attention in the newspapers. Before the tree could be removed one half of it fell into the street, striking a passing carriage and injuring the occupants. The Street Commissioner should give this matter his immediate attention. If the parts cannot be bound together and the tree saved, it should be removed at once, and not be allowed to remain in its present state, a menace to life and limb.

But Joe Has Probably Skipped.

Constable Mattox is looking for Joe Pike with a warrant sworn out by Mary Van Riper, charging Joe with grand larceny.

Young Pike has been in town recently on a furlough. His counsel says that he cannot be arrested; and if the thing is attempted, serious trouble will result for somebody, as Joe is a member of the United States Army, and therefore amenable only to martial law, and because in any event the claim against him was satisfied when the judgment of $62 was obtained by Mary Van Riper against Noah Pike, making good the loss she had sustained at the hands of Joe.

Every Home Should Own This Book.

The Phillips Brooks Year Book, published by E. P. Dutton & Co., New York, and on sale at Estil's bookstore, is a dainty volume in white and gold, having on the front a miniature portrait of Bishop Brooks. Within the attractive covers is a feast of helpful and inspiring thoughts, selected from the writings of Phillips Brooks and arranged in short readings, one for each day in the year. This book should go into every home and be read there daily. Was it not Goethe who once said that a person seeking to grow in character should look on a beautiful picture, hear a fine song, and read a selection of good literature, every day? It is possible to obey the last of these injunctions by keeping on the table and making daily use of, a volume like the Phillips Brooks Year Book.

Crescent Wheelmen Elect Officers.

The Crescent Wheelmen met Thursday in their club rooms, on North avenue, and re-elected most of their officers. The list is now as follows:

President—Charles Leggett.
Vice-President—William H. Rogers.
Captain—Joseph A. Haynes.
First Lieutenant—George Stevens.
Second Lieutenant—Nate Titsworth.
Secretary—H. S. Thomas.

Vice-president William H. Rogers presented the club with a wheel to be disposed of in whatever way they wish.

It's a Sumptuous Success.

The Quarterly Illustrator is a magazine that will delight all lovers of fine art in magazine illustration. It is a collection of the finest and most representative engravings that have appeared each quarter in the leading magazines and illustrated weeklies. Accompanying the illustrations are articles on art and artists, from the pens of engaging writers.

The latest number contains specimens of the illustrating art of over one hundred well-known artists. Among the articles of interest is one by Charles DeKay on "The Art Students' League of New York", and one by Frederick W. Weber on "A Clever Woman Illustrator". The press work and paper are of the highest quality, rendering the magazine a veritable thing of beauty. The Illustrator is published quarterly at 30 cents a copy, which makes the yearly cost quite small, a thing unusual in high class art magazines. The publisher, Harry C. Jones, is to be congratulated on the happy result he has obtained in his most excellent magazine.

Hunting's an Elegant Show.

Concerning the big show that is coming to Plainfield next week Thursday, the Newark Advertiser says:

> The performances of Hunting's Great Railroad Circus, Museum and Menagerie were greeted yesterday by packed houses, and the extraordinary performances of this unrivaled aggregation of first-class female equestriennes and male riders, singing and grotesque clowns, acrobatic and aerial exhibitions of strength and agility, and last though not least the wonderful performances of the highly educated horses, ponies, mules, goats and dogs, were received with shouts of laughter and applause. To say that the show gave universal satisfaction, would be only to repeat what has been said of it by our exchanges throughout the country during the past season. The management are to be congratulated upon their thorough efficiency in looking after their [illegible] of patrons, more particularly in the absence of all the rough element, of card sharpers and swindling devices so common with the many shows that infest the country during the tenting season. In addition to this feature and the gentlemanly manner of all connected with the show, we bespeak for it the immense business they are bound to receive.

Plainfield's Eternal Springtime.

Ex-Councilman John B. Brown of Park avenue has on his grounds an apple tree that is now bearing both fruit and blossoms. A twig broken from the tree and sent to the Press office, has the unusual curiosity of an apple from whose stem a pretty pink blossom is growing.

—Duer street, between Craig place and Emily street, is in possession of Street Commissioner Gavin and a force of men, who are preparing the surface of the road-bed for its coating of crushed stone.

HER 105TH BIRTHDAY.

Mrs. VanNostrand Attributes Her Longevity to Not Wearing Corsets.

There was a line of vehicles hitched to the fence in front of the VanNostrand house in Millstone, Somerset county, during the whole of Thursday. Few of the villagers passed through the street on which the house faces without stopping to congratulate Mrs. Sarah Farley VanNostrand. Seated in a rocking chair in the hall Mrs. VanNostrand had a cheery word for everyone who entered. It was the old lady's 105th birthday. These anniversaries in Millstone have now attained the dignity of a local holiday.

Less than a mile distant from the house in which she now lives, Mrs. VanNostrand was born in 1788, and her long life has been passed entirely within the neighborhood of Millstone.

Save a slight deafness, Mrs. VanNostrand's faculties are unimpaired. Her memory was never better, and she recognized readily all who called yesterday.

Mrs. VanNostrand has twelve grandchildren, thirteen great-grandchildren, and one great-great-grandchild. The last is two years old. She has five children living, and her age with them aggregates 461 years.

Mrs. VanNostrand has never lived on any particular principle of diet or dress, but she has her opinion in the matter of corsets. She has never worn them, and believes that lots of other women would live to her age if they would only leave corsets alone.

Dunellen and New Market.

(From The Dunellen Call.)

Frank D. Covey has rented a flat on Park avenue, in Plainfield, and intends moving there today.

The sermon for next Sunday evening in the New Market Baptist church will be "The Use and Abuse of Amusements".

A. J. Whitney, the new Dunellen principal, arrived in town Tuesday afternoon and spent the evening with the Rev. A. I. Martine. He will make his home with Mr. Nailor until the arrival of Mrs. Whitney.

The New Market public school has again opened, and there is no doubt that it will rank high with the schools in this county under the direction of Miss Maud Titsworth, principal, and Miss Hannah Larkin, teacher of the primary department.

Miss Sarah Rogers's property on Church street and New Market road, extending through to Prospect avenue, has been sold by E. Runyon, real estate agent, to Lewis Lane, of Jersey City, who will move into it in a few days and expects to improve and beautify it.

Pierre V. Hallett formerly of New Market won a gold medal and fifty dollars last Monday in a one-mile swimming match at College Point, L. I. The race was under the auspices of a social club, of New York city, and as the prize was valuable ten good swimmers besides Mr. Hallett entered. The exercise and practice he had had in the New Market lake in the past made him feel he might at least stand a chance of winning. During the race he made the other contestants feel that his early training was not in vain.

BOARD OF TRADE OPENING.

There'll be a Jolly Time at the Elegant New Quarters—Mayor Gilbert and Others Will Speak.

The Plainfield Board of Trade will have a formal opening of the elegant new Board of Trade rooms, at 117 and 119 East Second street, next Thursday evening at 8. A grand time is expected, and addresses will be made by Mayor Alexander Gilbert, by Edmund C. Hill, President of the Trenton Board of Trade and by F. T. Quinn, Secretary of the Newark Board of Trade.

Music will be furnished by a band and the Quartette Club, and later in the evening refreshments will be served.

Last night a meeting of the directors of the Board was held and the following persons were elected members of the board: W. F. Arnold, Alexander Gilbert, W. J. Stevenson, John DeLaney, D. W. Rogers, H. G. Runkle and John Chandler.

The case of young Pike should teach tender and trustful maidens the folly of entrusting jewelry to giddy youths of chance summer acquaintance. But perhaps the beautiful belle of Paterson was testing the depth of Joseph's affection and the strength of Joseph's integrity. In that case, her experiment got her well rid of a fellow whose attributes as an accepted suitor would have become distasteful to her when it was perhaps too late. As a forerunner of the trusting of hearts, the trusting of jewelry may in this case be considered a success.

There seems likely to be considerable rivalry for the Republican Assembly nomination in this district. C. E. Codding, of Westfield, is supported by many influential men in the district. The opposition to him seems to come from Rahway, which has seven candidates. As Rahway had the nomination six years ago, and Westfield has not had it in twenty, it would seem that Mr. Codding's chances are the better, since Westfield is the largest township outside the cities.

LIFE-SAVING LEGISLATION.

With much gratification The Press learns that its agitation of the life-saving question is bearing fruit. The Press was the first newspaper to plead for the perpetuation of the Life-Saving Service, and while other influential journals were falling in line presented strong argument in its columns and by personal letter before the proper representatives at Washington. Now the glad news comes that its recommendations are to be adopted. A Washington despatch of yesterday says:

> It is expected that bills will be brought in both houses before the end of the week to open the life-saving stations for the summer months. The recent wrecks along the Jersey coast and the loss of life within sight of four life-saving stations, which were closed under the law, have aroused feeling for an earlier opening of the stations. Governor Sayers, chairman of the Appropriations Committee, said today: "I will cheerfully pledge myself to pass through the House any appropriation however large that will increase the efficiency of the life-saving service. Last week's story of disaster along the Atlantic coast is too eloquent to require any comment. I will say the same of the lighthouse service and of the quarantine service."

WARREN ACKERMAN'S WILL.

Criticism is being made by thoughtless persons because nothing of Warren Ackerman's immense fortune was left to charity. The will, which has just been admitted to probate, retains everything in the family. The estate, including personal property, stocks and cash, is estimated to be worth $2,000,000 to $3,000,000. He bequeaths to his wife all his real estate and household effects, paintings, works of art, books, etc., for her lifetime; to his nephew, Ernest R. Ackerman $100,000 in cash and all his shares of stock in the Lawrence Cement Company of New York; to his nephew, Marion S. Ackerman, he gave $50,000 in cash and his stock in the Cumberland Hydraulic Cement and Manufacturing Company of Maryland.

To gossiping critics The Press would say that Mr. Ackerman has bequeathed his property wisely and well. His good wife and his good nephews can safely be trusted to use for no selfish ends the wealth left in their control, but to continue wisely, judiciously, faithfully, the bestowal of all such bounties as delighted the heart of the dead millionaire, and to administer abundant charities in all deserving quarters within their province.

AN ECHO OF OUR LAST-YEAR WAR.

Secretary Herbert has turned a particularly illuminating ray of light upon the "Chilian war" episode of the Harrison Administration in his letter to the Senate regarding the unpaid duty on a consignment of European shells for the navy, which has been lying in the Custom-house for a year or more. He shows that these shells, comprising 96 ten-inch Firth armor-piercing shells, 60 twelve-inch Holtzer armor-piercing shells, 200 six-inch and 200 eight-inch Holtzer armor-piercing shells, and 500 ten-inch Hadfield common shells, were ordered by cable by the Navy Department in January, 1892, the emergency being so great that the mails were too slow to meet it. January, 1892, was a great month for the Harrison Administration. The news from Washington began with the first days of the month to be saturated with war rumors of the most stirring kind. All the navy-yards were said to be in a perfect fever of war preparations, the Navy Department was full of bustle and war talk, heavy shipments of powder and ammunition were reported as starting from San Francisco for Washington, and large consignments of gun-cotton were discovered on the way from Newport. War was in the air, and the number of warriors who were determined to "blow Chili out of existence" was on the increase hourly.

Viewed now, in the light thrown upon the episode by this cable order for shells, there can be no doubt now that the President was really preparing for a war upon Chili, and was actually collecting ammunition to begin the fight.

All this was serious business, but there seems to have been an amusing aspect to the affair. The New York Evening Post is laughing editorially because when President Harrison's shipload of European shells arrived, he could not get them out of the Custom-house without paying duty, and the Navy Department had no funds at its disposal which could be drawn on for the purpose. "If"—says The Post—"the President had been a little more ferocious, or if Chili had been a little less prompt and manly in sending her answer to our 'ultimatum', our Presbyterian President would have had to start his war-ships for Chili, to 'blow her out of existence', with no more powerful shells than our American manufacturers were able to invent, or he would have been compelled to ask Congress, as Secretary Herbert asks it now, to pass a resolution remitting the duty. Mr. Herbert makes the request as an 'enemy of the protective-tariff system', but President Harrison would have been obliged to make it as a friend of the system in distress. The spectacle of Uncle Sam, brought to a standstill at the beginning of a war of his own provocation because he had not the money in one pocket to transfer to the other to enable him to pay duty on his foreign ammunition, would have been a rare one. We do not think that Congress ought to remit the duty. To do that would be to cast reflection upon the protective-tariff system. The bill ought to be sent to Benjamin Harrison, at Indianapolis, Ind., and he ought to use the shells as object lessons in international courtesy and Christian civilization in his lectures on international law before the students of the Leland Stanford, Jr., University."

Made 'Em Long for Plainfield's Monument.

The third annual reunion of the 30th Regiment New Jersey Volunteer Association was held yesterday at Flemington. There were a number present from Plainfield representing Companies A, I and H. Among them were Letter-carrier Peter V. Weaver, ex-Borough Councilman David E. Weaver, Samuel Moore, and T. J. Casey. The Plainfielders express great admiration for Flemington's soldiers monument, erected by the citizens of that town. The question that naturally arose in their minds as they gazed upon it was, What has happened to the project to erect a soldiers monument in Plainfield, which was set on foot five years ago? Is it dead or only sleeping?

TIME TO FIGHT THE RACE-TRACK EVIL.

It is to be hoped that the indignation expressed so generally throughout New Jersey last spring over the passage of the race-track gambling bills has not died out. If it has not, it will soon be able to take a practical form, because nominations for the Senate and Assembly must be made within the next few weeks, and the place to fight the race-track gamblers while this work is going on will be in the primary meetings and conventions. Eight counties—Camden, Essex, Gloucester, Monmouth, Salem, Somerset, Union, and Warren—will each elect a State Senator to serve for three years, and there will also be elected a full House of Assembly. Annexed are the names of the men in the Senate and Assembly who voted for the race-track bills last spring. Only three of the Senators whose places are to be filled voted yes, namely, Terhune of Monmouth, Butcher of Salem, and Cornish of Warren. As Cornish had already been elected to Congress, he was in a position to defy public opinion. In some counties, as Bergen, where the Assemblymen voted to please the gamblers, their names are not even mentioned in connection with a re-nomination; but in many other places allies of the gamblers will be returned to Trenton unless the same public opinion which protested against the passage of these bills when it was too late protests against the re-nomination of the gamblers' friends. One county especially which ought to purge itself of its record of last spring is Passaic, which is having a local illustration of the effects of the gamblers' legislation. The decent people of every community should stir themselves and begin a systematic work at the primaries and the polls, against the race-track evil. Both Democrats and Republicans should endeavor to nominate candidates pledged to fight this monstrous curse.

THE VAN DEVENTER FAILURE.

Alarmists and partisan fanatics will doubtless herald the VanDeventer failure as a result of the change of Administration. But Mr. VanDeventer himself says that Democratic rule has nothing to do with his misfortune. Instead, he traces his downfall back to the time of Harrison's presidency, when he began to lose money and to argue among his friends in favor of Free Trade. Free Trade, he held, would be a great benefit to his own business, and the Tariff Reform of Democracy of incalculable help to all American industries.

But while the VanDeventer failure cannot be truthfully used as a political object-lesson by opponents of the Democracy, it does speak impressively of the mutations of fortune, the uncertainty of riches. It seems but a little while ago that Augustus Van Deventer was counted one of the wealthiest men in Plainfield. Today he is without a dollar to his name.

And this is through no fault of his own. The Creston Carpet Mills was a good stand, and Mr. VanDeventer knew his business. But losses came, and losses grew. Mr. VanDeventer found himself each year becoming deeper and deeper involved, and when the hard times of this summer were struck he was producing goods at a loss, on borrowed capital, with current expenses heavy, losses of the past to meet, and no money in the market. So he shut down his mills. Ordinarily when a man closes his factory he begins to make money, for his expenses stop and collections come in. But in this case he found himself unable to secure payments from his customers for goods that had been produced at a loss, there was therefore no hope of his collections tiding him over the dull times till brisk business could be resumed. There was simply no present income, and no hope of future profit.

It's a bad failure, but the Administration cannot be blamed.

CARPET MILLS CLOSE DOWN.

Augustus VanDeventer Fails with Heavy Liabilities.

Augustus VanDeventer, who has been engaged in the business of the manufacture of carpets at the Creston Carpet Mills on South avenue in this city, Friday made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors, to S. St. J. McCutchen. The liabilities amount to about $70,000, and the assets amount to $25,000. There are no preferred creditors, and the bulk of the indebtedness is to New York and Philadelphia houses. Outside of the amount due to J. H. VanDeventer for money loaned, the creditors residing in this city are for very small amounts.

In the Best of Hands.

Michael Farrington, of Chimney Rock, who has had much trouble with one of his legs for several months past, has come to Plainfield to be treated by Dr. C. M. Field and Dr. Donohue, at Dr. Field's house.

—The Crescent Wheelmen's Credenda racer which is to be awarded October 28 is on exhibition at J. Harvey Doane's store on Park avenue, where tickets may be purchased.

MR. HONEYMAN TALKS.

DISCUSSING BOROUGH HEALTH.

Provisions That the North Plainfield Board Have Made for Disposing of the Garbage Nuisance.

The North Plainfield Board of Health recently passed an ordinance that any person wishing to collect garbage in the borough must first obtain a license from the board, permitting him to do so.

This action has occasioned considerable comment, and much inquiry, and Thursday a Press representative called to interview the Rev. W. E. Honeyman, a member of the board, in reference to the matter.

Mr. Honeyman was in his library, and received the Press man cordially.

"Take a seat"—he said.—"I am glad that you called. The Board of Health has been misrepresented in this matter, I think, by a certain newspaper which tried to make it appear that we were by means of the license ordinance forcing upon the people certain men as garbage collectors, who would not otherwise receive the work. This is a mistake. The truth of the matter is, that all last summer it was wellnigh impossible for citizens of the borough to get rid of their garbage. All the collecting that was done was done by one man, who would call for your garbage today and possibly would not be seen or heard from again for a month. He was an autocrat, coming when he pleased; and when he did not please, staying away and leaving you to dispose of the garbage as best you could. I myself have often been compelled to burn and bury garbage, after waiting in vain to have it carted away. Complaints about this were frequently made to the board, and with good reason. At length the board became impatient at the State of affairs, and in the meeting of August 2 passed an ordinance requiring garbage collectors to obtain a license."

"Is the fee charged a heavy one, Mr. Honeyman?"

"The fee is only a nominal one—a few dollars;—and the object of the ordinance is simply to enable the board to bind the collectors to do their work with regularity, to charge only reasonable fees, and to work in territory that is exclusively their own, and not too large to be well covered. With this ordinance, you see, we can prevent any man who is incompetent or untrustworthy from collecting garbage, by simply refusing to grant him a license.

"How this works can be seen in the case of the man Drake who was last week arrested for collecting without a license. A man named Willis is licensed to collect in the borough, west of Somerset street. License was not refused to Drake: he simply refused to apply for it. After warning Drake several times to obtain a license, Health Inspector Frank Whitely swore out a warrant for the offender and he was taken before a justice and fined ten dollars.

"Drake has since obtained a license to collect to the east of Somerset street, so that we now have two good men collecting in the borough, whose territories do not conflict. If they should prove inefficient or overcharge the people their licenses will be revoked. If the two men cannot cover so much ground satisfactorily, the districts will be subdivided and more licenses will be granted."

"What is the charge for collecting garbage?"—inquired the Press man.

"The charge for collecting is not to exceed ten cents a week for each family. If any family cannot pay this, the collector will not refuse to take their garbage.

"I hope"—Mr. Honeyman continued—"that I have made this matter clear to you and that you will set us right before the people. I believe that North Plainfield has a most competent health board; and I believe that the interests of the people in health matters are being well looked after. Eternal vigilance is the price of safety in health matters. Not long since the health inspector detected a man slaughtering calves on the sly. The man was warned not to repeat the offense. There has also been more or less sewering in the brook. This has been stopped, too, and all sewage connections from the houses to the brook have been cut off."

"Is that all you wish to say, Mr. Honeyman?"

"I believe it is, thank you. I might simply add as a matter of justice to Frank Whitely, that he has made a most efficient health inspector, and that it is owing in part to his thorough house inspection that the board has been able to do some of its best work."

PEACHES AND CREAM.

Luscious Time Among the Grace M. E. Church People.

A person to enjoy himself should attend one of the entertainments that are given from time to time in Grace M. E. church, in the borough. Thursday night a peach festival was the attraction, and it is safe to say that those present never had a better time.

It was to have been given on the lawn adjoining the church, but the rain prevented, so all went inside of the church, where a most pleasing sight greeted the eye. The rooms were very prettily arranged with tables and booths, and were indeed tempting. In the centre of the main room was a large tent filled with "gypsy girls", and so well were they disguised that it was hard to tell them from originals.

At the candy table were Mrs. Winckler, Mrs. W. Langer, the Misses Alice and Grace Carroll, who made things very pleasant for those wanting to buy sweets, strictly home-made.

Mrs. W. H. Griffen, who had charge of the lemonade booth, assisted by Miss Polhemus, had no trouble in selling tempting glasses of this favorite beverage to a thirsty lot of people.

One of the most attractive tables was that laden with fruit and cake, in charge of Mrs. L. A. Hummer, assisted by Miss Drew and Miss Langer. It was most tastefully decorated.

The flower booth, in charge of Miss Lillian Steiner, assisted by the Misses Martha and Gussie Perrine, did a thriving business, selling pretty bouquets of the choicest cut flowers.

The following young ladies were to be found in the gypsy tent: Miss Humble, Miss May McDonald, Miss Schroeder, Miss L. Springer and Miss Lydia Pangborn.

A charming bevy of young women waited on the tables serving ice-cream, cake and peaches. They were the Misses May Conroy, Annie Derringer, Minnie Force and Nellie McGinnis.

A. A. Taft who had arranged the affair kept his eye on things in general, while Dr. H. K. Carroll, John Valiant, Charles French, Ezra Loomis and Elmer E. Winckler formed his corps of able assistants.

Miss Lola Lewis is back from the west.

WIND AND GAS.

Years ago there was a member of the Legislature from the City of New York well-known as Hon. Mike Walsh.

He possessed integrity of character and a good share of unpolished natural ability, and although his words were not purely classical, yet they generally struck the intended mark.

Among his colleagues was a large broad-shouldered orator given to much random speechification. One sultry day he essayed to kill time and startle the assembled wisdom. With a pitcher of ice-water on his desk and perspiration streaming from his heated face he belched forth a cyclone of senseless twaddle and poured down torrents of cooling water.

Mr. Walsh unable to longer stand the infliction arose to a point of order.

"The gentleman from New York will state his point," responded the Speaker.

"My point, Mr. Speaker," replied Mr. Walsh, "is this—CAN A WIND-MILL BE RUN IN ORDER WITH WATER POWER?"

That brought down the House and for once silenced the garrulous member.

Last week three valuable sessions of the United States Senate were monopolized and wasted by a Senator from Nevada, that mining camp State numbering in total population less than the limit of a single Congressional District, with a harangue on the worn out question of silver, his ignoble object being to consume time. He shouted, gesticulated and shouted, until the seats of listeners became almost deserted and himself nearly exhausted.

They have in the Senate an unwritten rule called "Senatorial Courtesy," which may be well enough for those gentlemen who know and respect the meaning of the term.

But there was no courtesy in such wanton obstructionists as the Nevada Senator and others of his ilk, whose stubborn purpose, aimed, if possible, to defeat the popular will regarding silver.

It might have been eminently proper and not entirely discourteous had some aggrieved Senator brought forward the Walsh snap-judgment by exclaiming—"MR. PRESIDENT, IS IT IN ORDER TO RUN A QUARTZ-CRUSHER WITH ORATORICAL GAS."

The British House of Lords by a majority of ten to one threw out Mr. Gladstone's justly framed Home Rule Bill for Ireland. The aristocratic life-serving Lords, spiritual and temporal, by thus ignoring the rights of the people have laid a train which may result in an unpleasant explosion. Why Ireland should not enjoy the same home rule privileges accorded to Canada is a strange perversion of authority?

Emma Goldmann has been indicted for inciting foolish people to crime by her anarchistic speeches, and is held under $2,000 bail. This is as it should be. Our country is large; but there is no room in it for enemies of law and order.

The old men do n't seem to stand much show in the churches nowadays. Young blood is cried for. There is n't much satisfaction in a young man going into the ministry if he feels he's going to be turned down when silver hairs come.

The death of Oscar Smith was particularly distressing because it rudely broke the circle of a family whose sons had all attained majority with never such an affliction before. The Smith brothers—Franklin, Robert, Oscar and Stanton—were bound together by ties more firmly cemented than is usual even in one family. They were closely associated from childhood to manhood in all their deeds. To the three others, and to the devoted parents and sister, the loss of the one is a most heartrending and crushing blow, but it is also a personal grief to a host of people in this and other cities who knew the departed spirit and loved him for his manly qualities and endearing attributes.

How blessed is the memory of those who live for humanity and die in the Lord! Good old Mother Martine, as everyone loved to know her, has passed into the happy rest and perfect peace of her heavenly reward. Her long life was spent in deeds of lovingkindness. Was there sickness among neighbors, or trouble among friends, it was Mother Martine's hand that soothed, Mother Martine's word which comforted. Was the hand of death heavy on a household, Mother Martine was a ministering angel. She was one of Plainfield's oldest residents, and everyone respected and loved her. She did all the good she possibly could in life, and now wears the crown of her Lord for her faithfulness. What more beautiful spectacle has there ever been in the community than the picture of her life, radiant with kindly deeds, and of her happy home life, surrounded by the family of children who had never left her roof-tree. While sincest sorrow pervades the community, to them the affliction is heartrending. Their comfort is in the memory of her lovely [illegible], her noble life. The highest tribute that mortal words could ever bestow in [illegible] of a departed mother, is that she was a devoted Christian woman: and that was Mother Martine.

If the President will pardon a suggestion, shall it not be Ruth and Esther?

There's some satisfaction in living in North Plainfield, these hard times. Dr. Cooley, North Plainfield Assessor, has figured up the borough tax rate, and it is $1.50 on each $100.

The Elizabeth Journal is continually expressing admiration for Senator McPherson, and now says that one thing it likes about him is that he is a decent politician, and another is that he has always "got there" when the proper time came.

"Not enough gold to do the business of the world"—continues to be the cry of the silver Senators. And the New York Evening Post epigrammatically remarks: "What is it to us whether there is enough gold to do the business of the world? There is enough to do our business."

The most powerful sermons come not from pulpits, but from little incidents in everyday life. Thomas Bohn, once an industrious husband and father, shot himself in Central Park in a fit of remorse over wasted prospects. He left a note for his poor wife in Chicago. It was brief and impressive: "Drink has done it".

Editor Pearsall's ever-refreshing Standard is booming a centennial celebration to take place in the spring when Westfield township is 100 years old. In the course of his columns the Luminary of Ripley Hill remarks that in the old days Westfield township took in Cranford, Garwood, Branch Mills, Locust Grove, Willow Grove, Scotch Plains, Netherwood, Fanwood and Plainfield. Goodness me, Bro'r Pearsall, how you has shrunk!

Scientists who are trying to solve the puzzle of what becomes of Jersey sands as the coastline creeps steadily inland, should reflect that everyone of the multitude visiting the beach carts into the interior vast quantities of the tiny granules. When so many thousands of people daily fill their hair and clothes—and especially their shoes—with the sand that sticketh closer than a brother, and transfer it elsewhere, it is no wonder Asbury Bradley is beginning to worry about where his real estate is at.

It is highly proper to call attention at this time to the disgraceful spectacle which North Plainfield presents in allowing her barrooms to remain open nightly until long past midnight. This state of affairs ought not to exist. In Plainfield all barrooms close at 11; and those in the borough, also, should be closed at that time. At least let this be done Saturday nights, so that these places cannot turn a disgraceful crowd loose on the streets Sunday mornings. The Sunday quiet of Plainfield was disturbed and two policemen assaulted yesterday morning, by ruffians from these barrooms. The streets could have been clear of this disgraceful element long before that time if drinking places had been closed at a reasonable hour. Immediate steps should be taken in this matter by the authorities. Close the borough barrooms at 11.

DOWN WITH THE RACE-TRACKS!

The Press would again urge the county committees of both parties in the six counties where racetracks are situated to be careful about their nominations for Sheriff this year, for it is part of the plan of the race-track managers to place in that office men previously committed to the interests of the race-tracks. This will insure the selection of the right kind of Grand Jurors, such as they have been having in Camden and Hudson for the protection of the Gloucester and Guttenburg race-tracks.

In eighteen out of the 21 counties there will be county elections, and the important office of Sheriff and Clerk will be the paramount consideration in the November election. Sheriffs will be elected in every race-track county but Bergen, where Sheriff Bogert, who has been protecting the pool-rooms at Fort Lee, will have until 1895 to serve in the same patriotic manner that has already given him a reputation.

Union county has two tracks, and the fact that Linden was recently licensed against the pr[illegible] of the reputable citizens of the county, and because, too, it is the cradle of the Citizens' League movement, and has within the borders of its county more Citizens' League organizations than any other, makes the race-track men particularly anxious to be protected by the drawing of Grand Jurors, and the fight will be a desperate one when time comes to make a nomination.

The lovers of good government, and the foes of the race-track evil, have their duty to perform in this matter, which is to turn out to their primaries and put none but anti-race-track delegates on guard. It is not a time for partisan consideration. The purity of the home, the protection of the youth, is paramount. Let Democrats and Republicans alike strive for the nomination of men pledged to fight this monstrous evil.

Injured in a Collision.

In the Troy Press of Sept. 12 appeared the following concerning Mr. Jameson who was for many years in the draughting department at Pond's and who has many friends here:

A BICYCLER RUN DOWN.

Carl Jameson, Nelson Young and William Nichols, of the West Troy Cycle Club, were riding last evening on the Albany road when Jameson was struck by a vehicle. He was thrown to the ground and received a severe cut on the head and also above his right knee. The index finger of his right hand was caught between the brake and the handle bar of the bicycle and part of the member almost severed. Dr. M. J. Zeh dressed the injuries. There were two men in the carriage which struck Jameson's wheel and they were driving rapidly toward Albany, where it is believed they live. The wheelmen were on the extreme right of the road and had lamps burning brightly. The men in the carriage did not stop to inquire into the accident. The West Troy police telephoned the authorities at Albany to apprehend the party. Jameson is a draughtsman at the Watervliet arsenal.

Their Bed Found Burning.

A fire occurred at the house of Andrew Jennings, 315 Richmond street, Tuesday. One of the Jennings boys preparatory to studying in his bedroom, lighted a lamp and went down stairs. Shortly afterward, he returned to the room, and found the bedclothes ablaze. The cry of fire was raised, and Mrs. Jennings, who was down stairs, ran with rare presence of mind to bring a pail of water.

It fell to the lot of Policeman John Flynn, however, to extinguish the fire. He happened to be passing when the cry was given, and, hastening into the house and up the stairs, he seized the burning bedclothes, regardless of consequences to himself, and flung them through the window into the street. The fire department was not called out; and no damage was done except to bedclothing and nerves.

WHAT IS DOING OVER THE BROOK.

BIG BATCH OF NOTES BY THE STROLLER.

No Gossip of North Plainfield People and Affairs.

From The Press of September 12.

Special Marshal Samuel Moore is occasionally on duty.

Frank Blair is becoming a most proficient flute player.

Chris. Pope and Lew Smalley are assisting in "pinkin'" up the streets.

Dr. J. H. Cooley has left the borough for the World's Fair, for a few weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Moore, of Grove street, are home from their long vacation.

Johnston Drive—that cost so much to build—should be looked after, for it needs attention badly.

Millionaire Charles Hyde contemplates many improvements round about Quality Hill next spring.

The borough bank has gone up—five cents on a load—and the masons and builders are kicking.

Cornelius Ackerman, Jr., is another old resident returned to us again. He has a flat on Somerset street.

Mr. and Mrs. Wyckoff, of Craig place and Duer street, are home from a few days spent at Long Branch.

The household goods of Architect Jacques were moved to Lakewood in the Pines by Jas. E. Bailey last Saturday.

J. T. Wilson says he will soon have the ledge of rock that projects out on Somerset street near Wetumpka Falls removed.

A canary was found on Manning avenue the other day, and left in the house occupied by the Corys until its owner could be found.

E. A. Pope and family have moved from Dunellen and taken up their residence in the borough on Somerset street opposite Emily.

Poor old "Vic"! How he misses his master! Were it not for the fleas keeping him busy scratching, some folks say he would die of a broken heart.

The Carsons over on Belmont avenue are a very industrious set. They have recently erected a large hothouse, and are making decided improvements up that way.

The old Greenbrook road, down where the staid Quakers reside, has been macadamized and put in a good condition under the direction of Committeeman A. P. Voorhees.

Charley Willis and David Drake, the licensed garbage-gatherers of the borough, will race from one end of Johnston Drive to the other on Thanksgiving Day for a small stake—or chop.

The katy-dids are chasing the tree-toads, and the toadstools are running the mushrooms, while the little rabbit and the nimble wee chipmunk are in clover or in a cornstack. Summer's gone.

Duer street will soon be macadamized. This will be the last macadamizing done this year, for the balance of the road appropriation will be kept for emergencies—such as cyclones and snowdrifts.

James Stewart, of Brook avenue, a special marshal, glides gracefully along our macadam roads on a tricycle. He's a dandy rider, and is open to all comers for a five-mile race over the John Stine course.

"Winnie" Philpitt, the electric light engineer over in the city, has apple trees so loaded down with fruit that the limbs are almost breaking from the weight. He lives on Mountain avenue, corner Westervelt.

Town Committeeman Elias Allen extends a cordial invitation to his young friends to come up to his farm and help husk corn and chase gray squirrels. Food and ammunition are free—but do n't stay too long.

The Somerset House has been taxed to its utmost limit the past season with summer boarders. They come and go and they are always sure to return the next season. Landlord Boyce keeps a model hotel.

The "founder", the "original" and the first Mayor of Bull Frog City, Edward Kennedy, is spending a few days in that mushroom and ozone-laden mountain-side part of the borough, just "furninst" the brickyard.

Letters received from Collector H. H. Spencer tell that he is enjoying himself hugely, and say that he never knew the world was as big as it is. He will be home in time to register and vote the straight Republican ticket.

All the old settlers and natives are dusting their shoes and clothes preparatory to visiting the county fair and having a "shake" with the politicians and judges and a stroll around among the cattle and pumpkin exhibits. Come along.

The colored boy who has been winding the clock and practising shadow dancing in the old building next to the electric light station will soon return to Albemarle county, Virginia, to finish his education. He says he "don like this part of the country for nothin', sah!"

Rutgers V. Cadmus, of the Greenbrook road, our old bachelor friend, visited the west before railroads were built, by easy stages, and from his experience then obtained he says Jersey has been good enough for him ever since, and therefore declines an invitation to visit the World's Fair.

That part of our population who cannot spare the money for a trip to the World's Fair have the consolation of attending, if they desire, the one and the only Somerset County Fair that has its gates now open just above the pottery fields, alongside the Pluckamin road, and just back of Somerville.

Several parties were fishing down at Watchung Lake last week from the borough, and partaking of the hospitality of ex-Councilman Sebring's apple orchard and the free use of his boats. This is the longest lake in this section of the State, and the largest sheet of water of any round about here.

The left-handed pump now in use in Warren Engine house has a rattlety-bang suction attachment, and is daily giving those who are compelled to use the same palpitation of the heart. Why did not those who gave away the water right franchise compel the recipients to place free water in the engine house, and a fountain or two about the borough? They could easily have procured that much from this now gigantic rubber-neck-three-ply-sealed corporation.

The small boys of the borough held a one-cent circus in the rear of old man Pootmen's second-hand place on Somerset street, yesterday. The Beckers, the Schencks, the Hansons, the Kellers, the Vosbis, with Low. McCann and young "Amber" Carney and John Dowd, were some of the performers. The goat that was down for a trick act balked, but the old cat with the kittens did her part nobly.

A prominent person who takes an [illegible] terest in borough affairs about the macadamizing of its streets, advanced the argument—and it is not a bad one—that Mountain avenue should be put in first-class condition, as it is the only outlet we have to Newark without going down through Plainfield and Scotch Plains and coming almost back to where you started from to commence over again. That's [illegible] just what he said—but from Somerset street, Mountain avenue is a direct route to Springfield, and if the same were to be [illegible] travel [illegible] would [illegible] a [illegible] better [illegible] by taking that route.

Amos E. Vail, of Greenbrook, has been very successful this season with his crops.

Adam Fritz, of upper Somerset street, has lately erected a number of neat cottages on Fritz avenue.

David Lowrie, of the western end of the township, is troubled with rheumatism. He is a brother to the editor of the Dunellen Call.

"Why should the spirit of mortal be proud" when you can buy peaches for 30 cents per basket, and great big juicy onions so cheap!

Frank DeCamp's little daughter of Linden avenue has been visiting at Cobbtown, just over the line in Middlesex county beyond Sebring's Mills.

Mr. and Mrs. "Wilse" Fulper, with their friend Miss Smith, were fishing yesterday in the pond at Glenside. They caught only a fe[w] sunfish, a slight sunburn, and armfuls of autumn leaves and golden-rod.

Ed Coneboy, the genial clerk at the Arlington Hotel, is soon to give his friends in the profession a reception. "Con" says it is to be the best the market affords, and some other side dishes that are new around here will be at the spread.

Frank Lenke, the beer king, contemplates a trip to the "Faderland". He has been very attentive and successful in business and wants to see the old folks and home once more. He'll spend the holidays with his parents near Heidelberg in Germany.

INSIDE FACTS OF THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC.

Dr. Barnes Tells How Jersey Cider Comes Back from France to Be Sold as Cognac Brandy.

Howell Division, Sons of Temperance, No. 79, held a public meeting Wednesday in their rooms on Front street. A good-sized audience was present, though the gentler sex were in the majority.

William B. Ayers occupied the chair, and seated beside him was Mrs. Stratton.

The meeting was opened by singing the ode of the society. The Rev. Dr. G. R. Barnes made a prayer.

Mr. Ayers made a few remarks explaining the objects of the society and what it was doing. He then introduced Miss A. V. Scribner, who recited a very touching story where drink had played its destructive part. Miss Try Mattox then rendered with telling effect "Jesus Lover of My Soul".

The Rev. Dr. G. R. Barnes was announced, and gave an excellent temperance address. At times he became exceedingly humorous. In part he said:

"When I was asked to deliver an address I thought it was to be before the Sons of Temperance, but this gathering looks more like the Daughters of Temperance, with a few sons thrown in.

"I hardly know what to talk about, but if you should tell me what to say there would be no need of my saying it, as you would know yourself.

"At the present time we are in the presence of the greatest foe to humanity. I am thoroughly opposed to the traffic in all forms. In the last half century it has put on a new phase. I can remember that when I was a boy my father had decanters standing on the sideboard, and nothing was thought of it. Prominent Methodist officials met at our house, and those decanters would be taken from their place and used. Nowadays we doubt a man's honesty as to his profession of Christianity if he drinks. I once heard of a place where a church and a tavern were situated near one another, and the minister and members of the church would visit the tavern before services. The result was, sometimes, most ridiculous. Nowadays, if a member of the Methodist church signs a liquor license he is liable to be disciplined.

"The old-fashioned tavern used to be quite the thing; if cold, a man would stop to get something to warm him up; when warm, he would stop to get something to cool him off.

"In the olden times it was the object to give licenses to good moral men for their taverns. Now it's different. Why do n't they get Methodist ministers to run them? There is a good basement in our church, and I might run one there, and we could pray over our success. Would that be right?

"No; it is the wicked class that get the license. They are profligates in a moral sense.

"Jersey cider is put in barrels, and sent to France, where foreign stamps are put on and a name burned in the barrels, and the barrels and cider are then sent back to this country, where the stuff is passed off as cognac brandy. There is not one saloon-keeper out of a thousand that would not break the law in some particular case. You expect a saloon-keeper to be a law-breaker just as much as you expect a minister to uphold the law.

"We are all partners in the traffic, by permitting it to exist, and by legalizing it; and it is the duty of everyone to rid the country of this curse."

At the close of the address, Miss Emma Anglesian gave an instrumental solo, and Miss Bertie Clum a recitation, and remarks were made by Brethren Scribner and Ayers. The closing ode was sung, and the meeting came to a close.

The Division will hold a picnic in the near future.

DEATH OF JOEL CODINGTON.

A Good Man, Whose Eccentricities Made Him Well Known on The Streets, Is Gone—Left His Money To Churches and Worthy People.

Joel Codington died early Tuesday morning after a three days attack of hiccoughs and stomach trouble. The deceased was a distant relative of ex-Judge W. R. Codington, who will be his executor. Mr. Codington boarded for many years, until his death, with the family of Samuel Voorhees, at Warrenville. He was a familiar figure on the streets of Plainfield, being known to all because of his habit of going about continually in his shirt sleeves and standing in the sun, with an umbrella in his hand. The deceased was a bachelor and owned considerable property in and about Plainfield, most of which he has bequeathed to churches and to worthy people. The funeral will take place tomorrow; and the burial will be in the Methodist Episcopal cemetery, this city.

The Son Helps the Father.

In the case of Fosher against Seguine, Tuesday, a jury decided the ownership of certain property which had been seized by Constable Matlock to satisfy a judgment held by Fosher against Seguine. Andrew Seguine, Jr., claimed the ownership of the goods.

The trial was held at 2, before Justice Nash. The evidence for the defense was overwhelming; and after short deliberation the jury, which consisted of Charles Beck, Foreman, George Rockafellow, Jr., Dr. Frank C. Herbert, W. H. Clum, Garrett Smith and Michael Coyne, brought in the verdict that the property in question belonged to Andrew Seguine, Jr., instead of to his father.

Lawyer George DeMott appeared for the prosecution and Lawyer Winfield S. Angleman for the defense.

"BOYS, WHAT'S TRUMPS?"

True Tale of a Blacksmith Who Suffers from Eventful Hard Times.

Not a thousand miles from Scotch Plains is a blacksmith shop with an occasional attendant in charge. For convenience, we will call the blacksmith Bob.

A day or two ago, just after the noon hour, our friend, the smith, was standing at the bar of a local hostelry engaged in a stand-up game of euchre with a produce dealer by name MacDonald and two others. Suddenly in walked a neighbor and called out to Bob, saying he wanted some hooks fixed on his wagon. "Will do it at once"—responded Bob.—"Boys, what's trumps?"

Within ten minutes a noted liveryman rushed in, and, spotting Bob, said he wanted his mules shod, and shod quickly. "Will do it at once"—responded Bob.—"Boys, what's trumps?"

The game proceeded, when without warning in dashed Billy Stansbery, with another order for the genial Bob. "Will do it at once"—responded Bob.—"Boys, what's trumps?"

About sunset, the game was at last ended; and Bob with a pitiful expression on his countenance turned to the landlord, saying:

"Billy, times are awful bad. I can get no work, so put my games down on the old score."

And the fire burned low in the forge.

THE MORALIST.

The Drinks Were on Him.

The large rock used in "A Flag of Truce", which will delight Music Hall patrons Saturday night, is the cause of considerable comment as to weight and material.

A reporter on a New York paper was positive it was made of pasteboard, so that even if it did fall on the actor who is placed beneath it, it would not injure him. Mr. Sheldon, manager of the theatre, invited the knight of the quill back of the stage, and placed a ten-dollar bill on the rock, saying "Lift the rock, and the bill is yours."

The reporter was not to be bluffed, and, as the saying goes, thought he had a "cinch". He made the attempt and shortly afterwards a neighboring "soda-water" cash register rang up one dollar and sixty cents and the reporter paid it.

IN CHANCERY OF NEW JERSEY.

To Mary A. Cornell.

By virtue of an order of the Court of Chancery of New Jersey, made on the day of the date hereof, in a cause wherein John E. VanWinkle, Frederick W. McCully and Harry Marshall, executors of the last will and testament of Daniel J. Marshall, deceased, are complainants, and you and others are defendants, you are required to appear, plead, demur or answer to the bill of said complainants on or before the 3d day of November next, or that in default thereof such decree will be made against you as the Chancellor shall think equitable and just.

The said bill is filed to foreclose a mortgage made by Charles E. Noel and wife to Margaret Hoppock on lands in the city of Plainfield in Union county, New Jersey, dated April 1, 1887, and duly assigned to Daniel J. Marshall, and you are made defendant because you are said mortgaged lands or some part thereof.

Dated Sept. 2, 1893.

Solicitor of complainants, Plainfield, N. J.

SHERIFF'S SALE—In Chancery of New Jersey.—Between [illegible] complainant, and Matthias Schmitt and wife, defendants. Fi. fa. for sale of mortgaged premises.

By virtue of the above stated writ of fieri facias to me directed, I shall expose for sale by public vendue at the court house, in the city of Elizabeth, N. J., on WEDNESDAY, THE EIGHTEENTH DAY OF OCTOBER, A. D. 1893,

at two o'clock in the afternoon of said day, all that tract or parcel of land and premises hereinafter particularly described, situate, lying and being in the township of Fanwood, in the County of Union and State of New Jersey, being those four lots numbered 10 (ten,) 11 (eleven,) 60 (sixty,) and 61 (sixty-one,) in block 8 (eight) on a certain map made by J. W. Boyer & Co., civil engineers, designated as a map of Building Lots on Stansbery farm in the village of Scotch Plains, filed in the clerk's office of Union county in the year 1870.

W. H. HICKS, Sheriff.

NELSON RUNYON, Sol'r.

MASTER'S SALE.

By virtue of a decree made by the Court of Chancery of the State of New Jersey bearing date the twenty fourth day of June, A. D. eighteen hundred and ninety-three, in a certain cause pending in the Court of Chancery of New Jersey wherein James Smith is complainant and Mary J. Bartle et als. are defendants, I, John D. Bartine, one of the Special Masters of the Court of Chancery of New Jersey, duly appointed and commissioned to make said sale and all necessary things pertaining thereto, will sell at public auction to the highest bidder on the premises at Murray Hill, in Union county, New Jersey, on Monday, the twenty-fifth day of September next, between the hours of twelve and five o'clock, to-wit, at two o'clock in the afternoon of said day, all those two tracts or parcels of land and premises hereinafter particularly described, situate, lying and being in the township of New Providence, in the county of Union and State of New Jersey:

The First Tract—Lying south of the Stony Hill road. Beginning at an iron stake in the middle of the road leading from New Providence to Scotch Plains at a corner of land lately purchased by Charles F. Smith, and running thence along the line of said Charles F. Smith south six and a quarter degrees east thirty-seven chains and eighty-seven links more or less to a stake for a corner in line of Ann Bartle; thence along Ann Bartle north eighty-seven and a half degrees west fourteen chains and thirty-six links to a buttonwood tree for a corner; thence along the Bartle estate north one and a half degrees east thirty-two chains and forty-four links to a stake in the middle of said road; thence north seventy degrees west four chains; thence north sixty degrees east six chains and sixty-two links to the iron pin, the place of beginning. Containing forty-one and ninety-hundredths acres more or less.

The Second Tract—Lying north of the Stony Hill road. SHERIFF'S SALE.

IN CHANCERY OF NEW JERSEY.

Between Daniel H. Manning complainant, and Mary E. Cline and Kate Noel, defendants. Fi. fa. for sale of mortgaged premises.

By virtue of the above stated writ of fieri facias to me directed, I shall expose for sale by public vendue, at the Court House, in the city of Elizabeth, N. J., on WEDNESDAY, THE FOURTH DAY OF OCTOBER, A. D. 1893,

at 2 o'clock in the afternoon of said day, all that tract or parcel of land and premises hereinafter particularly described, situate, lying and being in the City of Plainfield, in the County of Union, and State of New Jersey.

Being known and designated as lots Nos. 3, 4, 5, 9 and 10 in block "B" as shown on map of property of the Washington Fire Insurance Co. made by F. A. Dunham, 1887.

W. H. Hicks, Sheriff.

J. R. COWARD, Sol'r.

IN CHANCERY OF NEW JERSEY.

To Mary A. Cornell.

By virtue of an order of the Court of Chancery of New Jersey, made on the day of the date hereof, in a cause wherein Frederick W. McCully, John E. VanWinkle and Harry Marshall, executors of the last will and testament of Daniel J. Marshall, deceased, are complainants, and you and others are defendants, you are required to appear, plead, demur or answer to the bill of the said complainants on or before the 3d day of November next, or that in default such decree will be made against you as the Chancellor shall think equitable and just.

The said bill is filed to foreclose a mortgage made by Charles E. Noel and wife to Margaret Hoppock on lands in the city of Plainfield in Union county, New Jersey, dated April 1, 1887, and duly assigned to Daniel J. Marshall, and you are made defendant because you own said mortgaged lands, or some part thereof.

Dated Sept. 2, 1893.

JOHN E. VANWINKLE,

Solicitor of complainants, Plainfield, N. J.

TOWNSEND'S

Marble & Granite Works,

30 SOMERSET STREET,

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

If you have not engaged your work, I should be pleased to do it for you.

I buy only first-class Marble and Granite and do not sell unless at prices that will enable me to put up the work with credit to myself and justice to the parties purchasing.

I employ no agents and therefore am enabled to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customer, of the commission generally paid to agents.

I am under a very small expense in running my shop, myself and my son doing the larger portion of the work, and we personally attend to the setting of all work, and look upon business in this light, that Good Work and Good Material, at Fair Prices, is a standing advertisement for my business, which will tend to build up trade, and I feel safe to warrant that no dealer can sell you the same work and same stock any cheaper than I can.

Hoping to be favored with your patronage, I am yours respectfully,

CITY DEPARTMENT.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE STATE, THE COUNTY AND THE CITY, AND HAS THE LARGEST CIRCULATION OF ANY PAPER PUBLISHED IN THE COUNTY OF UNION.

Walter Irving Clarke, City Editor.

—The Brill Company say they will ship the first of the Somerset street cars September 20.

—Dogcatcher and chicken-fancier Frisbie has entered seven silver-spangled Hamburg chickens at the Somerville Fair.

—Lightning struck the Lincoln school building in Westfield during Thursday night's storm, damaging the cupola of the building.

—Motorman Martin, of car No. 4, is off duty. He cut the forefinger of his right hand with a piece of glass, and it thought that the finger is poisoned.

—Proprietor A. H. King of Hotel Albion is gratified at the way the hotel is filling with guests. The prospects are bright for a large fall and winter business.

—E. S. Brewster, proprietor of the McVey Restaurant, has made some valuable improvements in the way of cleaning and purifying his place from top to bottom. He now considers it worth the patronage of all.

—Peter G. Emmons last week found a coupon for a silver watch in a paper of tobacco purchased in the store of Vincent W. Nash. Yesterday he received the watch by mail from the firm, whose headquarters are in New York.

—Superintendent Adleman is desirous of pleasing the patrons of the street railway, and when he learns that smoking on the cars is becoming objectionable, especially to women, he will remedy the evil without delay. Several complaints have already been heard in regard to this matter.

—A grand rally, to aid in erecting a chapel for worshipers in Emmanuel Baptist church, will be held in Reform Hall, Sunday, Sept. 17. At 11 a. m. there will be preaching by the Rev. D. E. Robinson, of Elizabeth; at 7:45 p. m. by the Rev. William Hill, of Newark.

—A large American flag is flying over the North Plainfield public school grounds, although the building is not yet completed. The flagpole has been repainted and erected. There can be no doubt of the borough's patriotism, when it is shown in this unmistakable manner.

—A quarryman engaged on the big Jersey City tunnel, during a recent engagement of a "Flag of Truce", which appears in Music Hall Saturday night, became so interested during the quarry scene that when the whistle announced the dinner hour he bawled out, "Where is my feed pail?"

—Charles Schlitz has returned from Pittsburg and Philadelphia after an absence of seven years from Plainfield, and is prepared to fill all orders for high-grade upholstering. He is one of the best workmen in his line in the country, and should be given the fullest support of Plainfield people.

—The manual training school to be opened Sept. 18, at 209 East Front street, by John Dalziel, promises to be the success it deserves. The school room is a nice high apartment, well lighted, well ventilated and well heated. It is just the place, and Mr. Dalziel is just the man, to bring out what is best in a boy.

—Saturday evening Music Hall will produce Walter Sanford's sterling play, "It is a play"—says the New York Sun—"which seems to improve on acquaintance. Its stirring plot and magnificent scenic effects, together with its sensational stone-quarry scene, have placed it in the front rank of recent successes."

BLAIR—ACHESON.

A Pretty Home Wedding—Congratulations and Presents from a Host of Friends—Bride and Groom Depart After The Wedding Supper.

A pretty wedding took place last Tuesday at 8, when Adam Craig Blair and Miss Martha Acheson were joined in marriage by the Rev. Charles E. Herring at the bride's home, 406 East Fifth street.

Harry McDonald, of Plainfield, was best man; and Miss Clara Nelson, of Philadelphia, was bridesmaid. The bride was given away by her father, Samuel J. Acheson. She was dressed in white brocade silk, trimmed with duchess lace. The bridesmaid carried in her hand a large bunch of France roses.

The parlors were prettily decorated with clusters of bridal roses and goldenrod; and from the ceilings hung heavy floral festoons.

After the ceremony, a wedding supper was given, and the large company made merry until 10, when the bride and groom left for their wedding trip through New York State. The presents were handsome and numerous, many of them having been sent by friends and relatives who could not be present.

One of the bride's presents was a diamond brooch, the gift of the groom.

Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Samuel J. Acheson, father and mother of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Ramsey Blair, father and mother of the groom; Samuel Acheson, Jr., Millard Acheson, Joseph Acheson, brothers of the bride; James Blair, Thomas D. Blair, Miss Bessie Blair and Miss M. Agnes Blair, brothers and sisters of the groom; Miss Ella Acheson, sister of the bride, Miss Pansy Jean Herring, Robert A. Mosher, Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Boice, James Craig, Miss Lottie Craig, Miss Nellie F. Doud; J. Hazelwood Craig, Miss Emma Craig and Miss Ethel Boice, of Dunellen; and Mrs. Grace Perry, Miss Maggie Acheson and Miss Blanche Keenan, of Philadelphia.

The groom was formerly employed in the Plainfield post-office, and is now in the livery business.

After their return to Plainfield next week, Mr. and Mrs. Blair will live at the home of the bride's parents, on East Fifth street.

This Is a Delightful Drama.

The next attraction in Music Hall will be Walter Sanford's elaborate production of William Haworth's sterling and successful play "A Flag of Truce".

A play coming from the author of the glorious naval drama "The Ensign" (a play which holds a place in the war literature of the stage, side by side with "Shenandoah" and "Held by the Enemy") is undoubtedly an event of no ordinary occurrence in the history of the American drama.

The story of "A Flag of Truce" is one of love and war, the former phase elaborated, the latter merely suggested; the actual presence of the grim god of battle is done away with, and the murky smoke of musketry and cannon forms but a martial frame for the prettier domestic picture of the quaint New England home where the action of the play is laid.

Suit Against Pastor Sagebeer.

Much interest is shown in Flemington in the slander suit brought by Dr. W. W. Hawk, a practising dentist, against the Rev. J. E. Sagebeer, pastor of the First Baptist church of that place, which begins there today before Justice Abbott. It will be remembered that the Rev. Mr. Sagebeer is the minister who denounced the dentists and several other young men for alleged drinking and singing hymns in a music store during revival services there last fall.

Dr. Hawk claims the publicity given the matter has ruined his business and accordingly brings suit to regain his reputation.

PERSONALIA.

Postmaster E. R. Pope is home from the World's Fair.

H. L. Manson has returned from Port Richmond, S. I.

Jere Allis, of West Fifth street, has returned from his vacation.

Dr. O. L. Jenkins and wife have returned from the Thousand Islands.

S. P. Dunn and family, of East Seventh street, are home from Newfoundland.

Ex-Judge W. R. Codington and wife will leave for the World's Fair Friday.

Principal O. E. Ross and wife, of North Plainfield, are home again from Smyrna, N. Y.

F. Goode has returned to this city after an enjoyable summer spent at Asbury Park.

Mrs. Caleb Dickinson has returned from Point Pleasant, with a fine coat of seashore tan.

The wedding is to take place Sept. 28 of Will D. Craig to Miss Graham, of Graham, Texas.

Horace G. Adams, of Duer street, North Plainfield, is confined to his home by illness.

The Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes has returned from Saratoga, and will occupy his pulpit next Sunday.

Walter Arnold Hudson, is again in Plainfield, and has opened his class for the fall or winter months.

Miss Ida F. Randolph is home from the World's Fair and from the Seventh-Day conference at Milton, Wis.

F. E. Kinsman has been granted a patent on his invention of an electric circuit for controlling trains.

Alfred Love, of this city, returned Saturday from a visit of five weeks at Highview, Sullivan county, N. Y.

Auguste Saltzman sold his Chicago ticket to Horace J. Martin, who therewith takes Mrs. Martin to the Fair.

Alfred W. Sutphen, of Newark, after a week's visit with relatives and friends in North Plainfield, has returned home.

Charles Mitchell, a graduate of Leal's School last year, is spending a few days in town prior to entering Yale College.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. H. M. Cadmus, of Brooklyn, spent Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Cole, 78 Duer street.

O. T. Waring and daughters leave town by Lehigh Valley Railroad, Saturday night, for Niagara Falls and the World's Fair.

The multitude of friends of both contracting parties are happy over the approaching nuptials of Miss Nettie Worth and George F. Brown.

George Sandiher, of Grove street, North Plainfield, entered Pennington Seminary Monday, to add finishing touches to his education.

Whit Freese, who has for a long time assisted his father in the package express business, will succeed to control of the business next week.

Charles Schemerhorn, Jr., son of the Western Union manager, is still very ill at his home, 130 North avenue, thereby causing his many friends much anxiety.

Miss Bigelow, of Watchung avenue, has returned from her visit to the World's Fair, in Chicago, and will resume instruction to her piano pupils next Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Rankin, of Sandford avenue, have arrived home from their cottage in Kennebunkport, Maine, where they had been spending the summer.

The Rev. D. E. Robinson, of the Shiloh Baptist church, Elizabeth, will speak at Plainfield next Sunday at a rally in aid of a chapel to be built for Emanuel Baptist church.

E. Dean Ryder of this city and Margaret E. Donaldson of Dingman's Ferry were married last Saturday by the Rev. Horace F. Fuller, assisted by the Rev. Robert MacKellar.

Henry P. Williams, the Schepflin block grocer, has taken unto himself a partner in the grocery business. The beautiful new delivery wagon now reads Williams Bros. They are honorable men to deal with.

Mr. and Mrs. James H. Force, of the Manston House, Bound Brook, are at the Vanover Cottage, Lake Hopatcong. The delightful air at that mountain resort has been quite beneficial to Mr. Force's health.

The host of friends of George H. Babcock are relieved to learn that the first reports of his illness were exaggerated. He has recovered, and is now at Alfred Centre with his family, who are enjoying good health.

Harry Dorsey, fresh from Saratoga, after an absence from Plainfield of over five years, is again [illegible] many with the skill he handles a razor [illegible] the tonsorial establishment of E. [illegible] Maynard, Park avenue.

J. Barton Kline has surprised his friends by joining the army of Benedicks. They will all heartily congratulate him, however, when they meet his charming bride, Miss Carrie A. Mosher, one of Old Chatham's belles.

The Plainfield Street Railway Company is about to lose one of its best employes, Conductor Jesse Hetfield, who is prized so highly by the Pacific Mail Tea and Grocery Company that they have secured him for their store.

The father of P. A. Emmons, of Jackson avenue, North Plainfield, spent Friday and Saturday with his sons P. A. and J. P. He is over 80 years of age, hale and hearty. He and his wife reside at Washington, Middlesex county.

Mrs. M. Ritterbusch, who is about to open a class in piano teaching at 22 Summit avenue, came here from Brooklyn. She is an able teacher of either advanced scholars or new beginners. In order to form a first class she is prepared to make liberal terms.

The body of Oscar B. Smith, late son of G. R. K. Smith of 721 Watchung avenue, has been recovered, and the funeral will be held over his remains from Newton, Mass., Friday. Oscar and his brother Robert, who had been inseparable and known one another's every thought, had arranged just what should be done in case either died first. Robert is assistant rector in a Newton Episcopal church.

F. A. Dunham, of this city, has recently been appointed as engineer in charge of the street improvements about to be commenced in Poughkeepsie, N. Y. The city intends to use the vitrified brick pavement similar to that constructed under Mr. Dunham's supervision in several cities in western New York, and which has given such universal satisfaction.

A partnership has been formed between Lewis A. Hummer, Andrew Lutkins's old partner, and Lewis R. Mulford, Mr. Lutkins's old clerk, and the firm of Hummer & Mulford succeeds to the business of Andrew Lutkins. As they are perfectly familiar with the desires of all patrons, from their long connection with this house, they should receive the fullest support of all old friends and make many new ones.

Margaret E. Conway, who passed away Thursday, at her home, 325 West Third street, at the age of 19, after an illness of eighteen months, was before her illness a leading singer of St. Mary's church. The hand of death has often touched this family of late. The mother of the young woman who is now mourned died January 4, 1893; and a brother, Thomas Conway, died May 31 of this year. There are still living two sisters of the deceased, and one brother, a young lad. One sister is Mrs. David Angerbauer; the other is Mrs. Louis Coombs, whose happy marriage was recently reported in the columns of The Press. The father who is now again sadly afflicted is ex-Policeman Conway.

Theodore Maris is on a business trip through New York and Massachusetts.

Bert Haberle of Orange is visiting his uncle, Fred. Haberle of West Front street.

Judge John B. Green and Miss Green, of Westfield, have started for the World's Fair.

Mrs. J. J. Cordo, of Highland Park, is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Adams, of Linden avenue.

Casper Wagoner is once more at his post of duty in Leiterer's store, after a brief rest.

Miss Jessie Coddington accompanies Mr. and Mrs. Horace J. Martin to the World's Fair.

Miss Clara Bledner, of Somerset street, has returned from an enjoyable vacation spent in the Catskills.

Wm. Chandler, brother of John, is dangerously ill at his home in Westchester county, N. Y.

The marriage of Miss Annie Gill, of East Second street, to Dominick J. McNamee, is to take place September 20.

Charles Potter is home from his visit to the World's Fair and to the National Convention of the Seventh-Day Baptists held at Milton, Wis.

Mildred Moore of this city won first premium on cucumber pickles, at the State Fair, and George C. Evans won first premium on a yearling bull.

Miss Drew, an accomplished school teacher of Newark, is visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Langer on Westervelt avenue, North Plainfield.

Alfred W. Sutphen of Newark is visiting his sisters, Mrs. Gilbert S. Martin of Duer street, and Mrs. Cora Ryno of Grandview avenue, North Plainfield.

Miss Christine Clark has returned to her home, Prospect Heights, Brooklyn, after a pleasant summer with her mother, Mrs. Fred Haberle of West Front street.

AT REST.

Anna M. Martine.

The funeral of Mrs. Anna M. Martine, mother of the Hon. James E. Martine, took place on Monday afternoon at 2:30 from her late residence on Watchung avenue. The Rev. Dr. Wm. R. Richards, of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, and the Rev. S. P. Simpson, of the Church of Our Saviour, Netherwood, officiated. The singing was by a selected quartette, the members of which were Mrs. J. K. Myers, Mrs. Henry Manning, E. E. Runyon, and Alfred Holmes. The pall-bearers were Capt. Wm. B. Ostrom, William McDowell Coriell, Stephen A. Ginna, Otto Arens, Isaac P. Brown and James Ritchie. The floral pieces were numerous and elaborate. Hosts of relatives and friends attended the funeral.

Mrs. Martine passed away from earth at 10 p. m. Friday. The immediate cause of death was heart failure. She was in her seventy-seventh year.

Interment was in the North Plainfield cemetery.

The sympathies of an unusually large number of friends are with the stricken family in their bereavement; and Plainfield mourns the loss of one of its most estimable women.

Mrs. Martine leaves six children, all of whom lived with her: James, William, Miss Kate, Miss Etta, Miss Mary, and Mrs. Hattie Myers, whose husband William is a brother of Lawrence and J. Kirtland. Mrs. Martine was a devout member of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church.

LUXURY FOR PRISONERS.

Fanwood's Hard Cases to Have Snug Quarters of Their Own, and Escape the Indignity of Being Brought to Plainfield's Hovel of a Jail.

Residents of Fanwood are awake to the fact that a local lock-up is desirable, and have requested the magistrate to investigate the matter and report to the Town Committee at its next meeting as to possible location and cost of construction of a suitable cell or cells for the retention of prisoners. Accordingly, Judge Moore has been in consultation with Overseer of the Poor Hezekiah Hand, and made a complete tour of the township yesterday. He also conferred with the police authorities of New York city as to the best-made cells, and his report will unquestionably be promptly acted on, as the Fanwood township authorities are determined to preserve order at any cost, and are backed by the taxpayers to a man.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR CONFERENCE.

Elaborate Preparations for the Coming Event in Plainfield.

The Fall Conference of the Union County Christian Endeavor Union will be held in this city Friday evening, September 22. The address of the evening will be delivered by the Rev. L. R. Dyott, of the First Methodist Protestant church of Newark. The District Secretary, Miss Alice B. Spangenberg, of Netherwood, will speak on junior work. There will be short reports from delegates to the Montreal convention, and the singing will be led by a large choir, selected from various societies in the county.

THEY'VE CAUGHT HIM.

Gus VanAngleman, One of Marshal Pangborn's Assailants, is Held by the New Brunswick Police.

Gus VanAngleman, colored, Saturday night resisted Marshal Pangborn and with Aleck Williams assaulted the policeman and escaped. Tuesday the police received a message from New Brunswick saying that VanAngleman is held under arrest in that city. Chief of Police Grant and Marshal Pangborn will go to New Brunswick after Van Angleman.

All Hearts Captivated by "Liberty Hall".

"Liberty Hall", the leading comedy success of the opening season in New York city, is in its second month at the Empire Theatre. It has caught the popular and fashionable fancy, and is filling the beautiful new theatre at every performance. It is the second play that has been produced at the Empire, and, following the long run of "The Girl I Left Behind Me" at this house, it would seem to have a hard task to duplicate the success which that play made, but "Liberty Hall" is a really beautiful piece of work, with a love story so simple and natural that it finds no difficulty in winning friends and capturing hearts, and it is so enthusiastically talked about and so lavishly praised that it gives promise of being every bit as popular and successful as "The Girl I Left Behind Me" was. Manager Charles Frohman believes that it will prove to be one of the best plays in his repertory. "Liberty Hall" has a delightful comedy element that will be gratefully accepted after the hurly-burly and horse play of farce that has pervaded the stage for the past few seasons. Its love story, so different from that with which theatre-goers have been familiarized, is genuinely human, goes right to the heart, and holds one charmed to the very end. Humor and pathos are beautifully blended in its scenes, and the characters have a realistic Dickens-like flavor that makes them seem as real as ourselves. The intense hold which "Liberty Hall" has taken upon the people of New York is shown by the large audiences it has drawn to the fashionable Empire Theatre all through a season when theatre-goers are supposed to be still out of town at the summer resorts. On the last Wednesday of this month special Wednesday matinees will begin at the Empire.

POISONED BY ONE TOADSTOOL.

D. B. VAN ORDEN'S NARROW ESCAPE FROM DEATH.

He Partook But Sparingly of His Poisoned Dish of Mushrooms—Two Cats Ate of the Rest, and Died—Dr. Adams Saved the Man.

D. B. VanOrden, whose home is on the Rock road, just off the Valley road, back of the First Mountain, owes his life to the good ministrations of Dr. D. C. Adams of Grove street, North Plainfield.

VanOrden gathered some mushrooms Friday, and ate slightly of them Friday night. Saturday morning he was taken with violent vomiting and purging, and had convulsions of the limbs. Dr. Adams was called immediately, and by strenuous efforts saved him from death. By Saturday night the patient was out of danger, but very weak and sore.

The mushrooms were found to have been contaminated by one toadstool. The residue was thrown out, and two cats ate of it and died. They must have eaten all the balance of the poisonous part, as a dog that ate after them survived.

LOST ON SUNDAY, AS THEY DESERVED.

A team from Plainfield visited Newark yesterday, and, after a rattling good contest, the Ironsides made a great rally in the last inning, and a three-base hit by A. Rothfuss won the game. The score:—

A GREAT JURY, THIS.

Would That All Had So Excellent a Composition.

The man who would not be willing to be tried by the struck jury selected Monday in the case of Vail against the C. R. R. of N. J., would be hard to suit. If such men could always be obtained for juries the jury system would be well nigh perfect. The case is over a railroad accident. Craig A. Marsh represents the plaintiff, and R. V. Lindabury and J. L. Conover represents the defendant:

NEW JERSEY AT THE FAIR.

State Officials Planning to Secure the Exhibits on Their Return Home.

The several department exhibits of New Jersey now at the Chicago Exposition have been so generously praised that the heads of the departments are at a loss to know what they will do with these exhibits when they are brought back to Trenton. The school, geological, agricultural and horticultural displays are sufficient in themselves to fill a good-sized building.

State Geologist Smock and Dr. A. B. Poland and Franklin Dye, Secretary of the State Board of Agriculture, have had their heads together recently, and are discussing the possibilities of getting an appropriation from the Legislature next year sufficient to erect a building in which all these exhibits can have a permanent place. There is a fair-sized geological museum on the top floor of the Statehouse at the present time, and nearly all of the available space is taken by the collection secured for the New Orleans Exposition, augmented at various periods by new specimens. A custodian of the museum has been appointed and is now in charge. He is Samuel Semple, of Burlington, who is Secretary to the State Geological Survey.

When the geological exhibit from the exposition is brought back it will crowd every part of this room. The school exhibit would more than fill this room should it be vacant, while the State Board of Agriculture have some permanent features in their display, such as grasses, cereals, specimens of wood and soil, that they would like to have placed somewhere where the citizens of the State could inspect them.

The matter has been brought to the attention of Gov. Werts, and while he made no definite expression as to what will be done, he is of the opinion that something should be done, so that all these valuable articles should be permanently preserved.

It has been suggested that a large room could be erected over the Supreme Court and Chancery chambers in which to place the school exhibit, but this would leave the agricultural display out in the cold. Superintendent Ford thinks it would be as cheap to erect behind the Senate Chamber, and extending to the water-power bank, a regular museum building, properly arranged for such purposes. Then all the curios collected from time to time by the State could be gathered together and classified and placed in cases for convenient inspection.

Gen. Stryker is also interested in the scheme, because he has in his keeping a large number of battle-flags carried by the New Jersey regiments during the war. These he is obliged to keep in his vault, along with a large miscellaneous collection of books and pamphlets, and almost out of sight, so that this valuable collection is rarely seen by anyone visiting the Statehouse.

There are also at the State Arsenal many old cannons and other relics of the early wars, which could be arranged with the flags and make quite a creditable display. It is more than likely that the present agitation will result in the Governor's recommending to the next Legislature an appropriation for a museum building, and for the time being the school, agricultural, geological and horticultural exhibits will have to be stored away either in the cellar of the Statehouse or in the storage room of the State Arsenal.

LATEST ATTRACTIONS AT HULETT'S.

This Flourishing Music House to Become More Popular Than Ever.

F. M. Hulett, Plainfield's well-known music dealer, in preparing for fall trade has made important changes and improvements in his store, 324 West Front street, and now has an establishment that should be a source of pride to him and to the city.

The west window of the store is furnished to represent a parlor scene. The floor of the window is carpeted in fawn color; an upright oak piano draped with silk stands in one corner, and near it a piano lamp and a music stand. A piano stool is pushed carelessly to one side as if left so by the pianist. On a silver stand nearby some beautiful palms are growing. The effect here is most attractive and homelike.

The east window is given up to photographs of well-known musicians, and the latest sheet music.

As one enters the store the office of Mr. Hulett is on the left, and on the right hand opposite the office is ranged a large stock of minor musical instruments, including banjo, guitars and violins. Beyond this department and taking up the main part of the store, is the large stock of upright pianos, of all qualities and finishes, nicely arranged and ornamented with drapings and bric-a-brac. Instruments are here to suit every taste and purse.

Beyond the piano department at the back of the store, is a well equipped repair shop. Mr. Hulett now has an experienced tuner always at the store, so that tuning can hereafter be done without delay.

The whole appearance of the store is most pleasing to the eye, and is an evidence of the proprietor's enterprise in giving Plainfield a high-class music store. Mr. Hulett informs The Press that a women's banjo, mandolin and guitar club; and a men's banjo and guitar club will be organized Sept. 20, both under the direction of Prof. Armstrong, of the New York Conservatory of Music. Later in the season concerts will be given by these clubs.

The studio and dancing school in the Manning building, on Front street opposite Mr. Hulett's store, will reopen Oct. 1. Fancy dancing will be taught at the school this winter.

GEORGE BECOMES A FIREMAN.

But He Hasn't Learned the Pointers that Alert's Boys Can Give Him.

George hasn't been a fireman long, but nevertheless when he hears the alarm at the dead hour of night he leaps from bed as though shot out by a catapult and rushes forth to conquer. Thus, at a late fire, notwithstanding the protestations of his better half against his venturing forth in the storm, he began to don his clothing. After getting into his trousers he found that there was an unusual amount of goods to tuck away in the roomy part of them, but kept on until everything was stowed away. He went to the fire and did good service under difficulties, as it was a great strain on the trousers to bend forward, and his right leg was cold and so was his left foot. When he got home he found that in dressing he had got only one leg tucked in his drawers, the other drawers-leg having slipped his grasp and fallen out over the waistband of his trousers. It was this that he had tucked away, and he had also forgotten to put on one sock. It had tried to go with him, and was found on the front stoop the next morning. George has learned that a fireman must arrange his trousers so that he can jump right into them and that his socks must be placed away one in each boot or shoe.

CAPT. MARTIN GETS HIS WHEEL.

Curious Complication Resulting from Its Sale by the Thief.

A curious complication has resulted from F. L. C. Martin's attempt to recover a bicycle stolen from him last Wednesday. The bicycle, it appears, was taken to New York by the thief and sold to a dealer for $65. The thief took the check which he received in payment for the wheel and had it certified at the bank. He then went to a firm in 125th street and purchased a bill of goods, in payment for which he tendered the certified check. The check was accepted, and the thief left the store saying that he would call later on for the goods. He evidently became frightened, for he never returned for the goods or the check. The dealer who purchased the bicycle had in the meanwhile learned that the wheel was a stolen one, and stopped payment of the check at the bank. As can be readily understood, a rather amusing complication ensues. The goods which were left at the merchants are really not his own, because he was paid for them with a certified check. He wants the cash for his check. The dealers who bought the stolen wheel do not wish to pay the money on their check, so they must give up the wheel to Capt. Martin.

Two things seem assured, however, that the thief will get nothing for his pains, and that Capt. Martin will recover his wheel.

ASSAULTED MARSHAL PANGBORN.

Jail Bird Williams Rescues a Comrade from Arrest—The Police are Looking Sharply for Him.

As Marshal Pangborn was about to arrest Gus VanAngleman, colored, for disorderly conduct on Somerset street in the borough, Saturday night, Aleck Williams, also colored, came to the rescue of VanAngleman. He struck the policeman an ugly blow on the jaw with a heavy bottle, inflicting a flesh wound. Both men then fled. Policeman Cooney was attracted to the scene by two shots fired after Williams by the Marshal. Williams, who is an old jail bird, cooly dodged the club which the second policeman flung at his head and, slipping in between French's Mills and the carriage factory, threw his pursuers off the track. Today a sharp lookout is being kept for the fugitives. Marshal Pangborn is able to go about his duties, though still suffering somewhat from his wound.

NOT DUE TO FRIGHT.

Mrs. Chamberlain's Sad Death Was the Result of Malarial Fever.

The funeral of Harriet Ada, wife of James S. Chamberlain, of the Potter Press Works, took place Thursday afternoon at 2, from her late residence, 603 West Third street. The Rev. G. Kennedy Newell, of Hope chapel, officiated. Interment was in the Baptist cemetery.

Mrs. Chamberlain leaves behind her a husband and three small children, aged respectively 9, 5 and 2, and the sad bereavement arouses the sympathy of all.

It was rumored that Mrs. Chamberlain's death was the result of a fright caused by the blowing down of a tent in which she was staying, in Ocean Grove, during the severe wind storm of two weeks ago. To a Press representative who called at the house in reference to this rumor, it was stated that Mrs. Chamberlain's death was caused by malarial fever, and that while her nerves had received a shock in the Ocean Grove storm, the tent was not blown down at the time, and her death was probably not at all hastened by the incident.

Progressing Steadily in Its Great Career.

An interesting and encouraging report of the work of the Y. M. C. A. was presented at the meeting of the Board of Directors held on Monday. The interest in the young men's meeting for the month of August was shown not only by an average weekly attendance of 70, but also by requests for prayer and the interest in the after-meeting.

Conscientiously Commended.

The Trenton Gazette speaks admiringly of Hunting's great show which is coming to Plainfield Thursday:

> Did you go to the circus? Well, if you did n't you missed it, as it was a good all round show. Mr. Hunting doesn't profess to conduct the greatest show on earth, but just the same it is a good old-fashioned affair. The riding, tumbling and trapeze work was far above the average, while the menagerie is not to be sneezed at. And there is one thing about Hunting's show which the bigger institutions might well emulate. All the attaches are courteous, obliging and gentlemanly and seem to realize that it is their duty to look after the comfort of the audience. Mr. Hunting is a gentleman, and will retain no one in his employ who does not aim to come up to the standard of excellence. There is an entire absence of the element and sharpers, so that the smallest child is safe under Hunting's tent. A good-sized audience was present in the afternoon, and in the evening the seats were all occupied. We can conscientiously commend Mr. Hunting to the brethren of the press, and assure them that they will meet a gentleman from the ground up.

Lucky It Wasn't Worse.

L. D. Titsworth, a director of the First National Bank, living between New Market and Dunellen, was alighting from his carriage in front of the bank building Wednesday, when the horses started, throwing him headlong and bruising his forehead on the curb.

Mr. Titsworth was helped into Miller's drug store and received the proper attention, after which he attended the directors meeting in the bank, feeling not much the worse, apparently, for his shaking up.

There'll Be a Team Next Year.

It is not likely that the Crescents will play any more games at home this season. Manager Keller will arrange a game this Saturday away from home, and on the following Saturday his team will play the N. J. A. C. team at Bergen Point. The Crescents will then disband for the season.

Mr. Keller promises the friends of baseball that there will be a team in this city next year.

Sampled Pop's Peaches.

On invitation of Captain J. Haynes, of the Crescent Wheelmen, fifteen of their number journeyed last Sunday to the home of "Pop" Cramer, of Annandale, where his choicest peaches were sampled by the hungry wheelmen. The ride was much enjoyed by the Plainfielders.

Headache and Dyspepsia.

William E. Rockwell, No. 512 West 57th street, New York, says:

"I have been a martyr to bilious headache and dyspepsia. Any indiscretion in diet, overfatigue or cold, brings on a fit of indigestion, followed by a headache lasting two or three days at a time. I think I must have tried over twenty different remedies, which were recommended as certain cures by loving friends, but it was no use. At last I thought I would take a simple course of purgation with Brandreth's Pills. For the first week I took two pills every night, then one pill for thirty nights; in that time I gained 3 pounds in weight, and never have had an ache or a pain since."

Disease in one part of the body will eventually fill the whole body with disease. Every year or two some part of the system grows weak and begins to decay. Such part should be removed at once and new matter be allowed to take its place. There's no need of cutting it out with a surgeon's scalpel. Purge away the old, diseased and worn-out parts with Brandreth's Pills.

CAN'T FIND ONE TO FILL THE PLACE.

HOW THEY SAVED DOLLARS FOR THE CAUSE.

Christian Temperance Women Have an Interesting All-Day Meeting.

The annual all-day meeting of the W. C. T. U. was held in their rooms on Watchung avenue, on Monday, beginning at 10:30 a. m.

Officers were elected, and other business of importance transacted.

Mrs. Tomlinson, President of the Union, occupied the chair.

The morning session opened with a devotional service, after which the reports of the Recording Secretary, Treasurer, and Superintendent of Creche, were read, and showed marked advancement, especially the last. Faithful work has been done with the children, and those in charge deserve much credit.

Following this came the reports of the Superintendents. These were:

Social Purity—Mrs. Aaron Powell.
Kitchen Garden—Miss May Tomlinson.
Creche—Mrs. S. Cahoone.
Mothers' Meeting—Mrs. J. C. Pernald.
German Work—Mrs. Voehl.

After these interesting branches of the work had been fully explained in well-written papers, Mrs. Bourne, the State Superintendent, gave a most excellent and helpful Bible reading, which was a rare treat.

At the close of this a recess was taken for dinner. Each member brought her own lunch, and a most inviting spread was the result.

The afternoon session convened at 2, with a devotional service which was followed with a report of the Evangelistic Committee, Miss C. B. Yates, Chairman. The report set forth the objects of the Union, and just what work was being accomplished, in a most complete and yet concise manner.

A very interesting paper discussing "Unfermented Wine" was read by Mrs. John Coard. The subject was treated pro and con, and the discussion exceedingly helpful. Then came the election of officers for the ensuing year.

As was to be expected, no one could be found willing to succeed so capable a President as Mrs. Tomlinson. Everyone declined, until finally it was decided to leave the matter in charge of the Nominating Committee. The following other officers were elected:

Honorary Vice-President—Mrs. J. W. Yates.
Recording Secretary—Mrs. Emma French.
Corresponding Secretary—Miss Minnola Tomlinson.
Treasurer—Mrs. R. K. Case.

The vice-presidents, who are representatives from the various churches, remain the same as last year.

An interesting part of the day's proceedings was that in relation to each member bringing in a dollar, which had to be earned or saved by the giver. The following will tell how the dollars came in: Shampooing a friend's head, saving car fare by walking, knitting baby socks, darning stockings, peeling fruit, picking cherries, good behavior, making and selling crab apple jelly, being patient while confined by illness, collecting bad debts, sewing for the poor people, keeping house for a man, self-denial.

Thirty-nine dollars in all came in, with five more promised.

It was nearly 6, when a motion was made to adjourn.

Neumann Bros. very kindly sent a choice basket of pears at the noon hour, and another party sent some peaches; the donor in this case was not known.

During the day a very able and forcible address was made by Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, the President, reviewing the past year's work and giving an outlook for the future. It was much enjoyed by those present, who regret that this worthy woman will not accept a reelection.

Pastor Hand to Take Part.

The Fourth Church of Christ of New York city, commonly known as the Disciples Union church, 119th street, near Lenox avenue, held their first services in their new white stone church on Sunday. James Millard Philpott is pastor, and his wife is organist and chorister. The church will seat about 700. A more formal opening will be given Sunday, October 1, when B. W. Hand, of this city, and other ministers, will be asked to take part. Mr. Philpott says he desires to exchange pulpits with Mr. Hand soon. The visitors from here yesterday were J. Holmes and H. VanMiddlesworth. The latter was entertained pleasantly at Mr. Philpott's home on West 127th street.

To Build on the Mountain at Last.

J. T. Vail sold to a New York gentleman on Wednesday Mrs. Carmon Parse's one-half interest in a beautiful building lot on Johnston's Drive, near Vail's Spring. If the owner of the other one-half interest in said lot can be prevailed on to dispose of his interest, the gentleman will build a fine home on the property next spring.

ROUND THE OLD CAMP FIRE.

VETERANS GROW JOLLY AT THE RELIEF CORPS SOCIABLE.

The Camp Ground at Front and Church Streets a Scene to Be Remembered—Coffee in Tin Cups—Waitresses in Red, White and Blue—As the Women Managed It Was a Big Success.

On the grounds at Front and Church streets, beneath old elms that showed their tracery against the stars, the Women's Relief Corps, auxiliary to Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., Friday night held their postponed lawn sociable.

The scene was a picturesque representation of an old camp ground, with the harsh lines that make up the picture of war softened by beauty and good cheer. At the entrance to the grounds hung two mammoth American flags, fit ornaments for such a scene. As the visitor passed beneath these he was greeted with a burst of light from row upon row of myriad-tinted Japanese lanterns, beneath which laughing groups and couples walked and talked.

Here and there a face would occasionally come full into the light of a lantern and be etched upon the memory, only to vanish quickly, and be replaced by another.

As one moved on to the big tent in the centre of the grounds, which was draped about with the Stars and Stripes, there was unfolded a vision of tables spread snow-white and heaped high with dainties. Waitresses attired in red, white and blue lent the scene additional charm.

The candy table was in charge of Mrs. B Summers and Mrs. W. C. Smith, the cake table was supervised by Mrs Andrew Cox and Miss Howlett, the soda water was dispensed by Mrs. Westphal and Mrs. I. L. McVoy, the ice-cream was served by Mrs. Charles Radin and Mrs. John Angleman, the coffee came from the hands of Mrs. S. Mattox and Mrs. J. Huntington, assisted by Raymond McVoy. Mrs. Isaac Brokaw and Mrs. F. M. Whiteley managed the apron sale.

The object of the sociable is to raise money to pay for the Post's new piano. The affair was therefore conceived and carried out by the Piano Committee, of which Mrs. M. C. Dobbins is chairman, Mrs. Emma K. Cox, treasurer, and Mrs. W. C. Smith, secretary.

Among the ladies present whose faces the Press representative recognized in the swiftly moving throng were: Mrs. Corwin, Miss May Howlett, Miss Sarah Smith, the Misses Nash, Miss Carrie J. Drake, Miss Maggie Summers and Miss Radin. Capt. Hand was there also. He sat on the ground in the tent playing "Mumblety peg" with some ladies and small boy. He was the centre of an admiring group.

Near the entrance to the tent, a little removed from the glare of the lanterns, crackled the camp fire. The heavy logs sputtered and wheezed; the flames leaped up and clutched with sinuous fingers at the great camp kettle in which the coffee boiled.

The light fell about and showed distinctly the faces of the comrades gathered round. The boys of '61 were living over in imagination their days and nights on the battlefield, and it seemed to the beholder as if war really meant something again.

Among the comrades gathered round were: Commander M. C. Dobbins, Past Commander W. C. Smith, Wm. Alpaugh, C. Bechtel, Henry C. Drake, Abram King, James Huntington, I. McVoy, V. W. Nash, Chas. Stephens, Wm. Stites, Sam'l Terry, Chas. Westphal and F M Whiteley of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73; and William Boe and Benj. S. Braider of Major Anderson Post, No. 109.

The arrangements were all well made and reflected much credit on the women of the Relief Corps. The sociable last night was so successful that it was decided to continue it tonight, when Gutmann's Band will furnish additional music.

THE SEWER CRISIS IN PLAINFIELD.

The ordinance by which the city withdraws from partnership in the North Avenue sewer business has received the Mayor's signature and is now a law. Henceforth, until the city provides relief by a correct system of public sewers, those using the North avenue outlet are at the mercy of the long-suffering residents of North Plainfield whose noses are daily assailed by the vile odors of the obnoxious nuisance. They are also at the mercy of Chas. H. Hand. When that Napoleon of real estate owned the Elkwood building on West Second street, he forced the Council to grant him connection with the North Avenue sewer by the threat that if he couldn't connect no one else should. He carried his point. Now the Council has refused him connection from his Crescent building, and has refused further sanction of present users of the sewer. It is true that Councilman See said "Oh, we won't hurry about severing connections; we only want to set the city right so that it shall not be a party to the violation of the State law against the contamination of streams; we don't want to force disconnection till a public sewer system is provided". But the good intentions of Councilmen won't save the North avenue people from the consequences of the Councilmen's act. Any citizen can now complain of the North avenue nuisance, and put users of the sewer to much trouble and expense. Charles Hand, for instance, may fall back on his old policy of "You shan't if I can't", and have every North Avenue sewer connection severed forthwith, or the property-holders arrested for their violation of the law. It is to be sincerely hoped that no one will exercise this power against the unfortunates who have no room for cesspools and no sewer but an illegal one; but hasn't the city made a mistake in adopting such a measure before relief is provided?

To hurry up those sewers is the especial duty of every good citizen at this time.

FUNERAL OF MOSES FRENCH.

The Life of a Faithful Saint Appeals to Those Left Behind.

The funeral services over the remains of the late Moses H. French took place Thursday afternoon from his late residence, 36 Craig place.

There was an unusually large number of friends present who had known the deceased over a half century. His personal qualities were of a high standard, and those who knew him were pleased to be counted acquaintances.

The Rev. Dr. E. F. Ketcham conducted the service and spoke in high terms of Mr. French. His text was taken from the words "Being dead, he yet speaketh". His remarks were, in part, as follows:

"The above words are true of our brother who has passed away. Though being dead he speaks to us today through his past life. The fact of our being dead is insignificant; it is the details of their living that impresses us, and what we remember of their deeds in life, that causes us to mourn their departure from earth."

Dr. Ketcham paid a loving tribute to his aged father who is 93 years old, and though advanced in life he is still very active in Christian work. In fact, always has been.

Continuing, he said: "Mr. French's life will speak to those left for years to come, and his godly example will be a source of much strength to those who knew him. If he could talk today he would tell us not to mourn, for heaven is better than earth, and he is a great deal happier. If we mourn it should be for ourselves.

"There are great lessons to learn from the death of the deceased, and may we take heed to them and follow divine instructions."

A closing prayer was made by the doctor, after which an opportunity was given those present to view the remains.

It was a noticeable fact that a number of those attending the funeral were persons well advanced in years. One in particular was Peter Wooden, who looked exceptionally well.

Interment was made in Hillside Cemetery.

SOMERSET COUNTY RATABLES.

The County Board of Assessors was in session at the Court House on Tuesday. Joel Coddington, of Warren, acted as Chairman, and Charles L. Voorhees as Secretary. The result is given below. It shows very little change from last year in the footings. The debt has decreased about $10,000 in the various townships, and the taxable valuation has increased about $800,000. The most noticeable increase is in the polls in Bridgewater, from 2,052 to 2,478. Bedminster's polls have increased from 451 to 496, and Bound Brook Borough from 428 to 502. The total runs up from 6,[illegible] to 7,480. There is a decrease of nearly $5,000 in the school tax. The table follows, showing the apportionment of taxes to each township:

THE MAN ON THE CARS.

What He Has to Say About the Graceland Hero, the Tough Sunday Conductors, and the Hearses That Pass for Cars.

"Talk about curiosity!"—said The Man on the Cars the other night as the six o'clock train pulled out of Westfield—"if you want to see an interesting, wholesale exhibition of it just look out of the window when we slow up at Graceland, and observe the anxious faces protruded from every car in the train when that solitary Graceland commuter gets off and starts for home. Here we are now; push up the sash and take it in. You see they don't stop the cars—merely slack speed and let him jump. Ah, there he is, with his usual bundles and packages—he's the only man in this 'ideal spot', I presume. But look at the inquisitiveness of the other passengers—five or ten heads stuck out of each car to look at him, and they've seen him time and again before. Funny what a freak that lonely man is, and I always admire the nonchalant way in which he endures it. Probably I should be quite as much of a curio as he if I lived in a place like Graceland.

"Mercy, how this old car creaks and rattles! I don't understand why steady patrons like ourselves, and a thousand others, have to tolerate such prehistoric hearses as this all through the sea-shore season while the nice new cars are given to the fickle patrons of the Long Branch division, most of whom are used to New York "L" cars and cannot appreciate a suburban service as we could. But it maybe they are a more aristocratic lot than we, and there, perhaps, is the rub. The method at any rate is too obvious to be entirely madness.

"And, speaking of madness, did you ever observe the peculiar behavior of our Sunday conductors? It is queer that men who seem civil and clever enough all the work-days should metamorphose so completely on Sunday, but the fact remains that those in charge of the trains are terribly ungallant on the first day of the week. Of course, a holiday crowd is harder to handle, and conscientious scruples and the Fourth Commandment may tend to make Sunday work unpalatable, but even these are not sufficient excuse for the absurd irascibility of the Sunday conductor. Next time you have occasion to use the railroad instead of going to church just watch the man with the punch and I'll warrant you will find him in a frame of mind as tranquil as a Spanish bull fight in full cry, or the yolk of an egg when the beater is getting in its work, but be circumspect and lay low or he may throw you off the train, for the Sunday conductor, like the larger share of his passengers, is as Mr. Dickens has made old Joe Bagstock put it, 'tough, de-vilish tough'."

THE CAPTAIN AND THE COLONEL.

They Heal the Breach, and Tell a Terrapin Story.

"Now see here, Colonel,"—calmly observed the Captain,—"you missed our last week's little smoke together, and the newspaper man tell me you stated to them that you were here, and sent a report, by a hack-boy, for delivery, for publication, of your military tale. That, I could not believe, knowing your absolute veracity; but do you know, sir, I pay little attention to false reports of my utterances, and lately my reminiscences having been truly set forth I must ask you, how it occured." "My Dear Captain,"—suavely replied the Colonel,—"these are the facts: when we met last week, you had been dining out, and were naturally a little wearied, so I considerately related my little experience, as you requested, in a modulated tone. On its completion I was grieved that you did not bid me adieu, and noticing your somnolent condition am not now surprised that you did not even remember my presence afterward."

"Colonel, forgive me. Apology is accepted, and I have on my mind a tale that is not at all remarkable to to those who sailed the South Pacific sixty years ago.

"You must know, sir, that the Galapagos group of Islands comprises about a dozen small isles situated about seventy miles from the main land. Those islands were naturally of different shapes, no two alike. The charts in those days though as a rule crude were sufficiently correct to give the shape and dimensions of the isles if not the accurate depth of water. Now the natives from the main land, knowing these islands to be overrun with terrapin, would come over in their canoes and gather them in great numbers, some being so large as to require the strength of four men to lift them. There was little butter made in those latitudes at the time and these rascals used to try out the terrapin fat and use it as we do butter at the present day, and preserve the edible part for a 'rainy day.'

"Well one voyage we had to put in at these islands, being short of food as well as water. By the way, the water found is at a great distance inland and held in basins, as it were, naturally formed in the rock. After filling the water-butts the crew commenced to 'turn-turtle'—that is rolling them over on their backs till the vessel's boats could come and take them aboard. On this voyage we loaded over 700 terrapin and placed them in the hold alive for food. As you know, sir, these terrapin only drink once a year, so we did not fear they would die until despatched by ourselves for [illegible]. Before leaving we observed that the shape of the terrapin taken from the several islands differed and upon consulting the chart noticed that the shape of the shell exactly conformed to the coast line of the isle where it was found, so that upon again visiting those waters and finding a terrapin an experienced mariner could at once tell his location without taking an observation."

With a visible yawn the Colonel said—"there was nothing remarkable about that."

"Hold on, sir!—I have not told you what these terrapin had for food—nothing less than a cabbage tree with a trunk 14 to 18 inches in diameter, (formed precisely like our cabbage stalks), and from 20 to 30 feet high with the cabbage of course above."

"Those terrapin must have been good climbers, Captain"—quietly remarked the Colonel.

"There was no climbing about it; they would simply 'circle' that tree with their teeth until it was almost eaten through when it would topple over and they could eat the fruit at their leisure."

"Good-Night, Colonel."

"Good-Night, Captain."

A Sensible Way of Meeting Hard Times.

ONE FIRM WHO WILL KEEP THEIR HELP BUSY IF THEY HAVE TO SELL GOODS AT COST.

At this time, when we hear so much about mills closing, factories shutting up and workmen being discharged all over the country, it is good news to learn that we have one firm in the city who are not only keeping their workmen busy, but are actually increasing their force by hiring many extra good men who have left other houses.

We refer to the old established firm of Geo. Watson & Co., the Broad and Market Street Clothiers, who have lately added to their force Mr. Edwin B. Ennis as manager of their new Custom Department, Mr. William A. Marcell, late of the firm of Zehnder, Marcell & Co., and are ready to make further additions to their large force when men of talent apply.

Pushing the business by way of superior garments and low prices will be the way that Watson & Co. propose to meet the business troubles caused by tariff and currency changes, and you may now expect to find their new fall stock full of the choicest garments that can be produced at the lowest prices ever known—and see the finest custom goods in the forty-foot window of their new custom department, Nos. 166 and 168 Market street, entrance through their Broad street building, which is completely filled with new fall suits cut and made right up to the lines of the fashion plate, at $10, $12 and $15, and all styles of overcoats in light, medium and heavy-weight, from $10 up to the highest cost satin lined garments, any of which will certainly improve your dress appearance and most of which you cannot find elsewhere.—Newark Item.

He Drew the Line.

"My answer is final, Mr. Whackster," haughtily replied the young woman. "The idea is absurd!"

"Haven't you any use for me, Miss Gertie?"

"None, sir! What have you ever seen in me that has led you to suppose I would listen to a proposal of marriage from you?"

"I don't know," answered the young man reflectively. "What have you seen in me that causes you to reject me so scornfully? I think I am not mistaken in the conclusion that you reject me with more or less scorn."

"You are not mistaken, Mr. Whackster, and I am perfectly willing that you should know the reason. You seem to have no worthy ambition, no definite purpose, no object in life. You are a drone in society. You have wasted in trivial amusement the years that other young men in your station would have devoted to fitting themselves for a high and noble destiny. You have no conception of the joys that reward the man who consecrates himself to a lofty ideal. You know absolutely nothing of the pleasures of the thinker. Content to drift along on the surface of things, with no wish or ambition to control the course of events and leave your impress on the age in which you live, you are a man with whom no high minded, self respecting, intellectual woman could think of linking herself without a shudder!"

"Perhaps I am," rejoined the young man, reaching for his hat and confronting her as he rose to go with a look as proud and haughty as her own. "Perhaps I am, Miss Gertie Plunkitt, but I don't wear a pink shirt!"—Chicago Tribune.

"Just Like Hanner."

"Hey, hey," he called in front of a Grand River avenue grocery the other day as he stopped his team.

A clerk went out to the edge of the walk to see what was wanted.

"What's aigs worth?"

"How many have you got?"

"'Leven dozen."

"Bring 'em in, and I'll see."

The farmer turned around in his seat and looked the wagon box over, but there was nothing to be seen but a bridle, which needed mending.

"Bring 'em in," continued the clerk.

"Jerushy to Jackson! but I hain't got a blamed one!" exclaimed the farmer. "Here I've driv nine miles to sell 'leven dozen aigs, and the aigs is to home!"

"Forgot 'em, eh?"

"That's what I did! Hanner brought 'em out to the barn and sot 'em down on the fanning mill and hitched up and never looked to see if they was in the wagon! Jest like Hanner! She never knowed nuthin to begin with, and she's knowed less every day since. Waal, if they hain't here they hain't, and I'll take a plug of tobacker and git my bridle fixed and jog back."—Detroit Free Press.

Afraid to Wake Up.

Little Johnny wasn't lazy, but he did hate to get up in the morning. One day Johnny came down very late, and his mother said to him:

"Johnny, why did you not rise earlier this morning?"

Johnny looked rather sheepish, but he was equal to the occasion.

"Mother," said the rogue, "I dreamed that I found $500, and me and Charley Smith were having such fun spending it that I was afraid to wake up until I had got rid of all the money."—American Traveler.

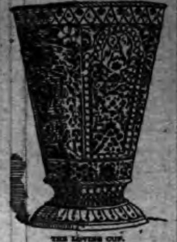
GHERARDI HONORED.

Presented with a Rare Loving Cup by Russian Officers.

Rear Admiral Bancroft Gherardi, of the United States navy, who commanded the international naval squadron during the recent review in New York harbor, has received a most delightful surprise at the hands of the admiral and officers of the Russian fleet. In appreciation of the many kind attentions shown them during the review and their visit in New York waters, they have presented to the American admiral a rare Russian loving cup of the most exquisite workmanship.

The cup is five and one-half inches high, three and a-half inches in diameter at the top, and two and one-half inches at the base. It is of transparent enamel, with a gold framework and has never been successfully imitated in the United States.



THE LOVING CUP.

The exterior is divided into six sections, one containing the standing figure of a hunter reloading his musket, another a multicolored crane, another plants and flowers in decorative arrangement, and so on. The general ornamental scheme is Slavonic, with a suggestion of rococo.

Tiffany has made for it a handsome oak box, highly polished and lined with white satin. On the cover is a silver plate with the following inscription:

To REAR ADMIRAL BANCROFT GHERARDI
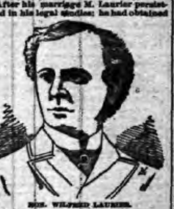
From
Vice-Admiral N. Kaznakoff and captains and officers of H. I. M.'s cruisers Dimitri Donskoy, General Admiral and Rynda, in remembrance of the Naval Review in New York Harbor.
1893.

Naturally Admiral Gherardi feels highly honored at being so remembered by the gallant Russians, and will always value the cup, not for its intrinsic value, but for the good will and fellowship which accompanies the gift.

WILFRED LAURIER.

Leader of the Liberal Party in the Canadian House of Commons.

It is not too much to say that among present-day Canadians there is no man better known, more universally admired or more highly esteemed than Hon. Wilfred Laurier. M. Laurier is a man of affairs. He is the leader of the liberal party in the Canadian house of commons. He is an eminent jurist. He is a writer of recognized force. He is an orator without peer in all the length and breadth of his native country. He is absolutely steadfast, absolutely reliable and wholly just. He is a Christian gentleman. M. Laurier is a young man for the position he holds. Born at St. Lin, L'Assomption, Que., in November, 1841, the son of M. Carolus Laurier, P. L. S., the present leader of the liberals came into the world as the descendant of an excellent French family which had been one of the earliest established in La Nouvelle France. He was educated at L'Assomption college and in 1868 married the beautiful Miss Zoe Lafontaine, of Montreal. It was a romantic courtship, for M. Laurier was then but a poor young barrister and she was a beauty and a belle. It has been an ideal marriage, and society has no brighter ornament and leader than Mme. Laurier, while their united home is a synonym for household happiness. After his marriage M. Laurier persisted in his legal studies; he had obtained a degree of B. C. L. at McGill college in 1864, was called to the bar in 1865 and was appointed queen's counsel in 1880. In 1871 he was first returned to the Quebec legislature from Drummond and Arthabaska, and in 1877 he was returned to the dominion parliament from the same constituency, when he was made a member of the privy council and given the office of minister of inland revenue. In the parliament of 1885-86 he made his famous speech upon the Riel question, and ever since has been known as the "silver-tongued orator" of the house. When Edward Blake withdrew from the commons the leadership of the party was given to the brilliant young Frenchman, and worthily and well he has filled the high position. He is a ready debater, possessing the gift of words without verbosity and a courtliness and tact that befriend him on both sides of the house. In appearance he is tall, slender and graceful, always faultlessly dressed and alert. He is an advanced liberal and believes in commercial reciprocity with the republic.



HON. WILFRED LAURIER.

How Parrots Shaped America's Destiny.

A flight of birds, coupled with a sailor's superstition, robbed Columbus of the honor of discovering the continent. It is a curious but historical fact. When Columbus sailed westward over the unknown Atlantic he expected to reach Zipangu (Japan). After several days' sail from Gomera, one of the Canary islands, he became uneasy at not discovering Zipangu, which, according to his reckoning, should have been two hundred and sixteen nautical miles more to the east. After a long discussion he yielded to the opinion of Alonso Pinzon, the commander of the Pinta, and steered to the southwest. Pinzon was guided in his opinion solely by a flight of parrots which took wing in that direction. It was good luck to follow in the wake of a flock of birds when engaged upon a voyage of discovery—a widespread superstition among Spanish seamen of that day—and this change in the great navigator's course curiously exemplifies the influence of small things and apparently trivial events in the world's history. If Columbus had held to his course he would have entered the gulf stream, have reached Florida and then probably have been carried to Cape Hatteras and Virginia. The result would probably have given the present United States a Roman Catholic Spanish population instead of a Protestant English one, a circumstance of incalculable importance. "Never," wrote Humboldt, "had the flight of birds more important consequences."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Father of American Law Reform.

In the history of American jurisprudence the name of David Dudley Field will always be associated with law reforms. He began as early as 1839 to show by public utterances his interest in the subject and issued a number of pamphlets on the subject in the years immediately following. His work in the preparation of codes and simplifying forms of procedure in the courts [illegible] the British [illegible] and other countries have adopted forms of procedure founded more or less closely upon those which he advocated. In international law also his influence has been great. He prepared single handed a code of international law which was published twenty years ago, and which has been translated into many languages and has had an important influence in forming public opinion on many branches of the law of nations.

NYE ON THE NEW ERA

ONE OF GOOD FEELING, TAKEN OFTEN, IS EARNESTLY ADVOCATED.

He Meets a Porter on the Train Who Intelligently Discusses Human Nature and the World's Fair—Strange People Going to the Fair.

[Copyright, 1893, by Edgar W. Nye.]

SPOTTSWOOD CENTER, S. C., August.

The new law regarding the sale of liquor, by which Governor Tillman assumes the duties of bartender, state comptroller of jags and purifier of cuspidors, has driven a good many town people to the country, where the laws are less severely executed and where detectives are expected to watch a whole county apiece.

AN ERA OF GOOD FEELING.

Already the governor has been required to use a cash register, and even his friends regard this as an indication that the state treasurer will have to sit up nights when business is good and watch the governor.

Ten cases of apollinaris were received here yesterday, and it was noticed that when opened they did not pop. There has been an era of good feeling ever since. Northern and southern guests have shaken hands and even hugged each other in some instances while talking over the late war.

Some said they were glad of it. One South Carolinian said it turned out just as he knew it would from the start. "Oh, no," said a man from Massachusetts, trying to sit on the mantelpiece, "the north could have been whipped 40 times in as many weeks if the south had read the papers, and I am sorry it was not done, for we never had such fun before the war as we are having now."

"We were wrong from the start," said the southern man. "We should have taken the niggers back to where we got them and paid Africa $50 per month for their time. I saw that all the while. Then there would have been an era of good feeling. I like an era of good feeling, don't you?"

"Yes," said the Massachusetts man, "and we might have had it 40 years ago if I could have had my way. My theory was for the abolitionists to buy out the slaves and take them north, where we would treat them so well that they would gradually die off of gout. But, no; nothing would do but fight, fight, fight. I hate to fight, and I hate to see people fight just because the politicians need the excitement. Don't you? You fought because the brass mounted orators with alligator lungs told you there was a principle involved, and so did we, when in fact there wasn't a blamed principle in the whole business. It was just suffer and die and make the papers spicy for four years and then take all the next 30 years to pay for it."

"That's my idea. You see how few eras of good feeling we have had in the last 35 years! Well, my idea would be to have one every night. No north, no south, no east, no west; just have eras of good feeling on Thursdays and Fridays anyhow, and oftener if possible. Who was benefited by the war? Why, nobody but people who escaped the draft and spoke pieces at home. I'm a man 58 years old, and I can safely say that, though I was a soldier and slept in my clothes as long as they lasted and ate field corn most of the time, there was not a moment when I would not have gladly gone to some quiet place with a northern man like you and opened an era of good feeling with him."

"That's it exactly. The war is over, and who's got the nigger? You have. He entitles you to a whole lot of congressmen and lets you pick out the congressmen. How much are we ahead on the war? We have 30 middle-aged single women to one man where we ought to have homes and taxpayers. You've got the niggers to feed, clothe and execute, and we have most of our best men buried in your cotton fields. That's the result of the war. Who brought on the war? Show me the man, and I'll show you a man who did not enlist. He remained at home and cussed because the papers in their lists of dead did not print the names of his wife's relatives correctly. Here's to Tillman. In this pure element we pledge fidelity to our era of good feeling. I'll bet a dollar Tillman brought on the war, if we could get at the facts."

"Yes, Tillman would bring on a war if he could get it out of the freight office when it arrived, but he couldn't. He is the kind of man to bring on a war and let some other man fight it. If we could have got fanatics like him into Vicksburg and blown them up and put quicklime on the place, we'd have been 30 years ahead of what we are now. There ought to be a fanatic pruner in the cabinet with nothing to do but go around over the United States and fertilize the country with fanatics.

"War is only a good thing for sutlers and bad women."

"I say, dog on the war."

"That's it. Dog on the war. Each town has got a nice soldiers' monument with the terrible cost mark on it. That's all. God save us from another!

"War makes an advance on mourning goods, that's all.

"Let advanced thinkers like Tillman and naked savages in a light uniform of cocoanut oil have wars and fight in them. I'm for peace and an era of good feeling with soda on the side."

This meeting was one long to be remembered, and following as it did the meeting between Mrs. Grant and Mrs. Davis will, I am sure, do much to fraternize the two sections and bring many southern capitalists north to live.

On the train the past week I got to talking with a porter on the palace car Asphyxia.

"Is travel generally good for this season?" I asked.

"Yes, we call it fair, sah, just fair."

"World's fair?" said I, poking him in the ribs with my eight pound cane.

"Not exactly," he said, with a look of pain. "We have some World's fair people, but not many. They didn't start at all till lately, and now some of them would make you sad to look at them.

"They are a good many of them that before the wah was called white trash by us colored people. They didn't call themselves no way up to us. They was mos' generally po', sah, and had no fambly. They lived in the mountains and shot possums and made crooked whisky and wore yellow pants dyed with copperas and faded with perspiration, sah; yass, sah, perspiration that they had started up chasin a possum or a revenue offisah, sah."

"Do you mean that any of that class are on the way to the World's fair?"

"Oh, yes, we see 'em every little while, folks that has sort of bossed up since the wah; folks, you know, that never had slaves. The wah give them a chance to start in square with the aristocracy so far as money goes, and they're ahead now, some of 'em, in a money way. They begun to work and hustle and dress better, and, by doggy, now you'd be surprised to see 'em break loose and ride on the cars.

"Some of 'em don't know the wah is over, sah. Some is knittin socks for the soldiers yet."

"Are they afraid of the cars?"

"Oh, yes; lots of 'em was never on board a cyars, sah. One woman come to me Thursday and says, 'Look heah, boy, I want you to look out for me [illegible] wild as a hawk and mos' jumped out the window two times, but I ketched her. She rode on the woodbox most of the way. Puferred it sort of. One of 'em put her trunk on the engine the other day. She didn't know about the check system. She was like a hyena, and her husband threatened to kill the engineer for throwing her trunk off his machine. She dodged every time we passed a telegraph pole."

"How do the men act?"

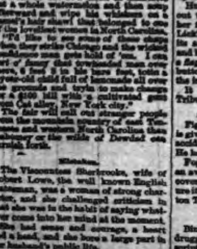
"Well, some lays low and watches the other men till they find out; but you ought to be a porter a year or so to see things. Captain Chase, the conductor, he'll tell you I ain't lyin about these folks. One woman got on at Sandy Bottom, and we called 'Skyland' a mile or so outside the place, because Skyland you have to watch pretty close or you won't see it in time to stop, for it's only a little enlargement of the wagon road from Asheville to Hendersonville. But, great king! the minute the brakeman said 'Skyland' she jumped off the train and went down the 'bankment like the evil one beatin tanbark."

"Was she killed?"

"W'y, no; not exactly. She sort of frappayed her skull, the doctor said, and she was off her head for a week or two and mos' died, and we ain't had no travel from Sandy Bottom since."

"How about the men?"

"Well, they travel better'n what the women does. But on the sleepin cyars they seem sort of rattled. One of 'em 'tween here and Cincinnati got a tin cup out of his basket and filled it with water and made his toilet on the platform. Then he wiped his face and hands with his bandanner and came back in the car and looked proud. Mostly they wear sort of red whiskers faded to a clay bank and chew tobacco, aiming to spit out the winder, but if the glass is fairly clear they 'casionally forgit it's there.



THE CAR PORTER REPLIES.

"Papers sometimes pokes fun at the northern farmer, but they wouldn't if they could see a poor white that had become prosperous."

"What stock do they come from?"

"I couldn't say, sah. Mostly they don't feel right sure theirselves, I guess. I see one of 'em at a hotel in Charlotte eat a whole watermelon and then soap afterward and wipe his whiskers on a camel's hair shawl that belonged to one of the loveliest women in North Carolina.

"I'd like to see some of these chaps when they strike Chicago and the wicked confidence man gets hold of 'em. I can sort o' fancy that towheaded man over there, 6 feet 3 in his bare feet, totin a 3-year-old child full of lemonade all over the grounds and tryin to make change for a $100 bill with a cultivated gent from Cat alley, New York city."

The fair will call out stranger people from the mountain country of east Tennessee and western North Carolina than Dahomey or the wilds of Dowdad can furnish forth.

Mistaken.

The Viscountess Sherbrooke, wife of Robert Lowe, the well known English statesman, was a woman of strong character, and she challenged criticism in that she was in the habit of saying whatever came into her mind at the moment.

She had sense and courage, a heart and a head, and she bore a large part in her husband's public life.

One repartee ascribed to her shows that she was at least ready with loyalty of speech. The French embassador one day said to her somewhat patronizingly:

"You know England is said to be a land of shopkeepers. I had no idea of finding there such great military displays."

"Ah," she replied, "the people of different countries do not understand each other. Now, I have actually been under the impression that the French were a great military nation!"—Youth's Companion.

A MODERN EPISODE.

She Still Clung to the Doll She Had Taken Away With Her.

CHAPTER I.

"Nancy, there's only one thing to be done with this child!"

The voice of Mr. Lickladder had that strong, vibrant, masculine quality that frequently asserts itself when the official head of the family is addressing his wife.

"We must send her away to school," continued Mr. Lickladder. "A city like this is no place to bring up children."

"I don't see that Gussie is so very much worse than other children, Silas," piped Mrs. Lickladder.

"Oh, you don't!" retorted Silas. "You don't hear her whistling about the house a hundred times a day, don't you? You can't see that she talks in the dialect of the stockyards, walks with a John L. Sullivan swagger, spends the money we give her for Sunday school purposes in buying ice cream soda, and chews gum on the sly?"

"She's about like other girls of her age, Silas."

"Yes, about like other girls of her age in this town! That's what I said, madam. This is no place for children to to grow up in."

"Where do want to send her?"

"To some first class eastern school for girls. I know of one."

CHAPTER II.

"I'll go, mamma," sobbed Gussie. "I'll go away off to that nasty, horrid school and I'll be a good girl if you'll only let me buy that nice, great big doll I saw in Hunker & Spatt's window down town this morning!"

"What do you want of that doll?"

"I want to take it along with me. I won't get so lonesome maybe. I'll dress it every morning just as careful! It'll seem like one of the family, and I shan't get homesick."

The doll was bought, packed in Gussie's trunk, and when the fateful day of her departure came 12-year-old Gussie, smiling through her tears, kissed mother, big brother and little sister goodby and went away with the paternal Lickladder on an east bound train.

CHAPTER III.

"How you have grown, Gussie! Have the three years been long ones, dear?"

"Awfully, mamma! You don't know how strict they are with us. Watch us like hawks. Never let us go anywhere without some of them being along to take care of us. Study, study, study—that's the way it is all the time."

"That's the way it ought to be," interposed Mr. Lickladder in the calm, assured manner of one whose judgment time has fully vindicated. "The way to train up a wild girl is to send her to some place where they know how to do that sort of thing."

"You soon got tired of that doll, didn't you, Gussie?"

"Tired of it? Indeed I didn't, mamma! I've got it yet. It's in my trunk. But it's old and all out of shape. I'll take it up stairs and put it away."

Hurriedly opening her trunk, she lifted out the precious doll. It slipped from her fingers and fell to the floor. Mr. Lickladder picked it up. Something in its appearance struck him as curious, and he proceeded to inspect. There was a flap on the back buttoned up. He unbuttoned it and examined the doll on the inside.

It was full of cigarettes.—Chicago Tribune.

Something to Look Forward To.

Figg (speaking of a mutual friend who is given to egotism)—Did you hear of the accident that has happened to Brown? He has broken his leg in two places.

Fogg—You don't mean it! It will be an awful pity if he should die. If he recovers, what a continual source of pleasure it will be to him to talk about!—Boston Transcript.

Not a Safe Man.

Bingo—You would better not let that druggist on the corner put up any prescriptions for you. He doesn't know his business.

Mrs. Bingo—Why, what has he done?

Bingo—He sold me a bottle of cough mixture yesterday that he didn't make himself.—Club.

A Slow Process.

"Miss Passee seems to be aging rapidly."

"On the contrary, she ages slowly. Ask her, and you will discover that she is only two years older now than she was ten years ago.—Harper's Bazar.

Never Mind the Age.

Mr. Totterly—Could you marry a very old man with a good deal of money if he told you frankly how old he was and how much he was worth?

Miss Timely—How much is he worth?—Vogue.

A Conditional Reply.

Mr. Gilley—Will you share my lot, Miss Gilderslieve?

Miss Gilderslieve—Build a $10,000 house on it and then ask me again.—Detroit Free Press.

A NEW ERA IN PLAINFIELD.

THAT'S WHAT THE BOARD OF TRADE HOPES TO ENGENDER.

Trade Temple Opened with Much Good Feeling and Cheer—Mayor Gilbert's Humorous Reminiscences of the Mud Age from Which We Have Emerged—Serious Work Ahead.

The Plainfield Board of Trade formally opened their rooms at 117 East Second street Thursday; and a royal opening it proved, despite the inclemency of the weather. Long before 8 the Plainfield Cornet Band took possession of the little second floor balcony; and as the members of the board and the invited guests gathered, music, sweetly-subdued, swelled the air without the building and crept subdued into the rooms, adding another charm to brilliant lights and the sparkle of greetings, conversation and jest.

At 8:30 the company gathered in the handsomely furnished meeting room; as many as could, occupied chairs; the remainder gathered about; the jam was so great, it blocked the doorways; Judge W. A. Coddington as chairman rapped for order. On motion of J. B. Coward, the regular order of business was suspended and the date of the next meeting fixed for next Thursday night.

The special programme for the evening was then taken up. The Beesly Quartette, composed of Elmer Runyon, first tenor, Frank Knight, second tenor, Robert Gorton, first bass, and Arthur Freeman, second bass, sang a selection entitled "The Happiest Land", which was heartily applauded.

Mayor Gilbert was then called upon, and delivered an address that should have been heard to be properly appreciated.

"A gentleman in New York city, with whom I am acquainted,"—the Mayor said in part,—"mentioned to me some time ago that he had read in the newspapers that Plainfield was to have a board of trade; and he expressed a doubt as to the city's need of such an institution. I maintained at that time that we did need a board of trade—not merely to supervise matters of retail trade, small buying and selling, but to advance the city's larger interests; and I find that what I said then, half in earnest and half in jest, was true, and that the organization of the Board of Trade is a most important step in Plainfield's development. A city is not built in a day. Its building is a slow process and necessitates first a recognition on the part of the people of what is needed to promote the city's growth, and a willingness on the part of individuals to bear some part of the burden.

"I look with pride upon the growth that Plainfield has made since 1860, and especially upon the growth of our ideas, which now demand that Plainfield shall occupy no second-rate place among sister cities. I remember the time when we emerged from the mud age to the stone age. All public meetings were held in Laing's Hall twenty-five years ago; and a meeting was called there to discuss public improvements.

"There were men who arose in that meeting and opposed flag sidewalks. They said it was another new-fangled notion of the New Yorkers. They said we only slept here; they called us roosters, and said they didn't wear patent leather, and if they could walk in the mud, New Yorkers could.

"Then came the struggle over the city charter—a struggle to obtain a government clothed with adequate power; and the foresight of our people triumphed; and business principles were introduced and economy was enforced in the city government.

"When we look back, we are surprised to find how much we have accomplished. When a larger annual outlay was necessary for city improvements, the people gave a charter amendment authorizing an increased tax rate.

"But, gentlemen, the picture is not all of bright colors. There are dangers confronting us. We hear more about practical politics in Plainfield today than ever before. There are more political bosses in each ward than the whole city once had; and the power of patronage is talked of. Along with this, there is a lessening of interest on the part of the people in public affairs. Now I dare say that our guests from Newark and Trenton know what the evils of practical politics are; I lived a number of years in Newark and I speak somewhat from experience. This same evil of practical politics is confronting us, and it results from the neglect by the individual citizen of the simple duties upon which good government depends. The Board of Trade is a non-partisan institution; through it the business man speaks irrespective of party. He speaks in no uncertain sound and commands respect. The important part which boards of trade had in influencing Congress to pass the silver repeal bill is an evidence of their influence.

"But the Board of Trade must be broad enough in its scope to include all interests. It should be the aim of this organization to fix public attention on important matters and to mould opinion thereon. Few of us perhaps realize the denseness of popular ignorance on such a subject, for example, as sewage for our city. As is known, I have been circulating a petition to be presented to our Common Council, for the introduction of a system of sewage. Most of the opposition that I have encountered in circulating this petition was based entirely on ignorance. Because a man thought this thing or imagined that thing, without any knowledge whatever he had condemned a system which experts have pronounced perfect. Now it is the duty of this organization to instruct the people in public affairs and to make good citizens of men. The Board of Trade will then be a power in the community, and what nobler work can any man be engaged in than laboring conscientiously for the interests of the community in which God has placed him."

Prolonged applause followed Mayor Gilbert's speech.

Edwin O. Hill, president of the Trenton Board of Trade, was then called upon and spoke in an interesting manner of the results accomplished by the Trenton board as illustrative of what might be done in Plainfield.

The speaker expressed great pleasure in the beautiful appearance of Plainfield. The city—he said—seems like a paradise, and ought not to be marred by the bringing in of factories. One duty of the Trenton Board of Trade, said the speaker, was to keep a close watch on the Mayor and the Common Council. That however hardly seemed necessary in Plainfield, because Gilbert is Mayor.

Mr. Hill was inclined to think Plainfield's tax rate of 2.20 rather high. They were complaining bitterly in Trenton against a rate of 1.80. The speaker ended his talk by wishing the board every success and inviting the members to visit the Trenton organization when they chanced to be in that city. "Trenton isn't much of a city" he said,—"The only places of interest are the State Prison and the Legislature and we have to depend on the rest of the State for them."

The speaker was roundly applauded.

P. T. Quinn, President of the Newark Board of Trade, was to have spoken; but a telegram was received saying that he was too ill to be present. The Beesly Quartette sang "Annie Laurie" and as an encore "When All The World Was Young."

At 10 Judge Coddington arose with a serious air, as if he had a painful duty to perform and feared that somebody would object, and announced that refreshments would now be served. In the billiard room were tables ready spread; around them members and guests gathered, while the sandwiches, cake and fruit took unto themselves wings, and the lemonade flowed as freely as champagne. Music floated in from the veranda, and for a happy hour conversation and good cheer were rife. Then slowly the goodnights were said, silence crept in, and the lights took offense and went out.

The gathering was fairly representative of Plainfield's best citizens.

Among those present were: Mayor Gilbert, Postmaster E. B. Pope, Judge W. A. Coddington, ex-[illegible] Place, of North Plainfield; W. B. Codington, John Abbott, Alonzo H. Titsworth, James K. Arnold, J. A. Hubbard, Street Commissioner E. A. Mosher, John Doane, George Godown, C. M. Ulrich, Dean Redman, Councilman Frost, ex-Judge Ulrich, City Clerk Runyon, William H. Sampson, Stephen E. Struthers, George A. Hallock, J. P. Laire, W. A. Freeman, F. L. C. Martin, J. Fred MacDonald, J. Hervey Doane, Albert Demarest, George L. VanEmburgh, Edward Ryder, Howard Pope, Harry Coward, Thaddeus Smith, Frank C. Langhorne, Robert Radford, W. A. McClurg, Bateman Thatcher, David Leaux, F. M. Hulett, William Woodruff, Garret Q. Packer, John McIntyre, Dr. F. C. Ard, Charles C. Vail, Rev. Edward Love, Peter Emmons, John Emmons, Alvin E. Hoagland, Clarence Teel, the Rev. J. F. Taylor, J. Howard Leggett, Thomas Hughes, John Chandler, James Davis, George Serrell, Horace M. Sherwin, David Rogers, Justice Vincent W. Nash, Councilman Elias Bird, John W. Murray, D. W. Littell, Assemblyman Kyte, of Fanwood, George Griffin, George Tobin, O. T. Waring, Cashier Arnold, of the City National Bank, Arthur Crane, J. A. Haynes, Fred H. Martin, Fred W. Dunn, Lemuel B. Woolston, Architect Augustine L. C. Marsh, B. T. Barnes, Councilman E. N. Erickson, E. J. Shaw, Dr. J. T. Pritts, J. G. Pope, Dr. Conegys, Paul A. M. Runyon, Harry Lowrie, Winfield S. Angleman, Dr. H. H. Lowrie, Charles Angleman, C. B. VanWinkle, J. Frank Hubbard, Martin Whitenack, Dr. Frank A. Searles, J. B. Coward, Dr. George W. Endicott, Linn Edsall, Elliot French, Justice Joseph E. Mosher, Burt Heiterich, A. D. VanDeiver and F. A. Dunham.

A FESTIVE WEDDING NEXT.

Fanwood's Physician Buys a Fine House for His Prospective Bride.

FANWOOD, Sept. 14.

Mrs. Ernest L. Kieb returned today from her sojourn at Canada Lake, N. Y.

L. J. Briggs, Jr., leaves his father the Captain to hold up his end of the whist and seven-up tournaments, which he is doing successfully. L. J. expects to take in the Midway once more, as he wishes to give a fuller report to The Press of his experiences there.

Harry Robinson and family have returned, and are as yet the guests of Abner P. Downer. They will probably take possession of their new mansion within a few days.

Horace Young, of Fanwood, who was taken sick while on his return from Asbury Park, is up and about again.

Edwin Fancher has just returned from a shooting trip in upper New York, and says the woods are full of welsh rabbits.

H. P. Robinson and family, formerly of Brooklyn, are now residing at Maple Knolls.

John Cothell, of Bergen street, spent last Sunday with the Fancher family.

Col. C. K. Moore has been keeping bachelor quarters, while his family were visiting friends at Eagle Bridge.

H. Robinson and family will move into their pretty Queen Anne cottage in a few days.

The colonial residence of Mr. Urner is rapidly approaching completion, and certainly the grounds are beautiful. The foundation for the house of his son-in-law, William E. Gibbs, is well under way, and the grounds surrounding the same, being connected with those of Mr. Urner, will make a most magnificent park.

Dr. F. W. Westcott has bought the property now occupied by Mr. Gibbs at the corner of North and Martine avenues. They do say the Doctor is going to fit it up for a bride. Heartiest congratulations are extended by THE CHRONICLER.

A New Excursion Resort.

Churches and other organizations in this vicinity have been troubled of late days to find a place suitable for excursion parties. Asbury Park is in many respects all that could be desired by excursionists; but it woefully lacks the eager interest that goes with newness and change. Its sights are too familiar; they fail to interest. Other excursion resorts have been tried by venturesome parties, sometimes with fair, sometimes with indifferent success. This year the Epworth League of Westfield have hit upon something a little out of the beaten track. They will go on a steamer forty miles up the Hudson, to Ossawana Island. Many who are interested in the management of excursions will be pleased if this venture is a success, as it will open a new field for excursionists hereabouts.

NOT YET DECIDED.

The Tie Between Willis and Collis Not to be Run Off at Once—Collis Has Other Irons in the Fire—Willis Took a Header.

The Catholic Young Men's Lyceum race which resulted in a tie between Willis and Collis, has not yet been run off, and no date is set for the race.

The Lyceum have met and left it to the contestants to arrange the date of the race.

Collis, however, has started on a thirty days' wheeling tour through New England, while Willis is unable to ride, by reason of a severe header which he took last Saturday at the bicycle road race of the Associated Cycling Clubs of New Jersey, over the Elizabeth-Cranford course. Willis was the pace, however, and would have broken the world's record for the distance had it not been for his ugly tumble, caused by a small boy pitching in front of his wheel over the fence.

AGAINST THE RACE-TRACK.

The Citizens' League Holds a Secret Session to Make Arrangements for a Campaign Against Gamblers.

The Executive Committee of the Citizens' Anti-Race-Track League of New Jersey held a special meeting late yesterday afternoon in the lecture-room of the First Presbyterian church, Elizabeth. The meeting was largely attended by representatives from all parts of the State, among them being the crusader, Very Rev. Dean McNulty, of Paterson.

The Rev. Dr. Kempshall presided, and Editor McBride, of the Elizabeth Journal, acted as secretary. While the proceedings were conducted with closed doors, it is understood the gathering was for the purpose of taking steps to begin at once an aggressive campaign throughout the State against the race-track gamblers and their allies in the Legislature. Vigorous efforts are to be put forth to defeat every member of either House in the last Legislature who voted to license the race-tracks and now aspires to re-election.

Determined efforts are also to be made in counties where race-tracks are now in operation and a Sheriff is to be chosen next fall to beat any candidate who may be named by the race-track element. This especially applies to Union county, where the crusaders are going to sacrifice everything to elect a Sheriff who will enforce the law against the gamblers. The big fight in Union will this year be not on the Senator, but on the Sheriff, as the race-track men, it is believed, will try to dominate the conventions of both parties so as to have only men favorable to them nominated for Sheriff.

In case this programme should be successful, then the anti-race-track league will place an independent candidate in the field and issue an appeal to the moral and religious people, irrespective of party, to support him.

WEATHER AND CROP CONDITIONS.

Damage Done by Storms, and Prospects for Winter Grains.

(From The Official Crop Bulletin.)

The observers and crop correspondents of the New Jersey State Weather Service report for the week ending Monday, September 11, 1893, that the weather conditions which prevailed during the week have been most favorable for the maturing of corn and the gathering of the various farm products. Fall plowing and the seeding of wheat, rye and grass are well under way, and in the districts where this work is completed the grain is reported as coming up nicely. Corn cutting has already commenced, and great difficulty is experienced, owing to its tangled condition. The yield will be reduced one-third. Sweet and round potatoes are being dug; the former is reported good in yield and quality, and the latter, that the yield is better than was expected two weeks ago.

In the fruit growing districts the storms of the 23d, 24th and 29th of August did serious injury, yet sufficient fruit remains on the trees to insure a fair crop. Winter apples are coloring and sizing up nicely, as also are the late varieties of peaches and pears; during the week, prices for these products have improved.

In the cranberry growing districts, all reports show that the present condition of the fruit is most promising, with little or no scald being noted. Picking has already commenced, and it is estimated that the yield will reach 650,000 bushels.

In the vineyard districts, the picking of grapes has already commenced and the yield will be an abundant one.

As this is the last issue of our Weekly Crop Bulletin, for the season of 1893, we desire to extend our grateful acknowledgments to those who have so well performed a gratuitous and valued service. We hope to renew your acquaintance and secure your service for the season of 1894.

E. W. McGANN, Director.

PLAINFIELD—Farmers are now cutting corn which is down so badly that it is difficult to cut; the crop is fair. Fall plowing is being pushed. The amount of rainfall during the growing season helped the crops to some extent but the drought had done its injury before the rain came. The rainfall from May 1 to date was 19.32 inches. Rainfall for the week, 0.39 inch; average temperature, 62 deg.

JOHN NEAGLE.

Special Privileges in Y. M. C. A.

The Y. M. C. A. membership fee of $2 entitles to the following privileges in the educational department: Instruction in mechanical drawing, plain geometry, typewriting, book-keeping, arithmetic, vocal music, light gymnastics and such other classes as may be required and can be arranged for in the present limited quarters of the association. The class in English branches for foreign-speaking young men will be continued this year. There will be a small additional fee for shorthand. Further information will be given at the Y. M. C. A. rooms.

A Fashionable Milliner.

Madame Knight, of Twenty-third street, New York, has taken a long lease on the entire building at 112 West Front street, and on or about the 20th of this month will open a first-class millinery parlor. The owner, J. O. Campbell, has put the building in thorough repair, and Mr. and Mrs. Knight will occupy the upper part as their place of residence. Their stylish turnout will attract attention on Plainfield streets.

Another Death from Eating Toadstools

Another death from eating toadstools occurred yesterday in Union Township, just outside Elizabeth. Undertaker Ogden shortly before noon received a message from Freeholder Noah Woodruff, of Union, that the eleven-year-old daughter of Peter F. Henry, a farmer of Aldine, had died in agony from eating the poisonous fungus. The girl cooked the toadstools herself and ate some; her mother then threw the rest away. A valuable house dog belonging to the family ate these and was also killed by them.

Reappointed by the Governor.

County Physician Edward E. O'Reilly, of Elizabeth, has received a telegram from Trenton informing him that Governor Werts had just reappointed him for seven years as a member of the State Board of Health. The doctor is highly pleased at this mark of the Governor's appreciation of his services. Dr. O'Reilly was only appointed a few years ago to fill a vacancy on the board.

The Economic Grass-Widower.

He was a Fanwood man.

His wife had been gone just ten days, when he planked down a 40-cent dollar on the Western Union shelf, and wired:

My dear girl. Cellar looks like silo. Come home immediately.

And she came.

THE MAN ON THE CARS.

FREAKS THAT ARE NOTICED ON THE JERSEY CENTRAL.

The Philosophical Chap Chats About a Couple of Freak Commuters, and Tells What Makes Life Worth the Living.

"Speaking of funny things,"—said The Man on the Cars one night this week as the conversation turned that way, and he settled himself for a comfortable ride homeward—"there used to live, up near where the Job Male Library now is, an old man who amused me more than a little. The poor old fellow is dead now, but that doesn't hurt the story. He used to get up about five o'clock every blessed morning and go to work in the little garden that struggled along and did its feeble best in his backyard. With a trifling intermission for breakfast, he would rake and shovel and dig away in in all sorts of weather until after seven o'clock. Then, washing and dusting off, he would plod down Park avenue—it was Cherry street in those days—and arrive at the station just in time to miss the half-past seven train. Not wishing to waste a single valuable moment, he would hurry back home, work a few minutes more, and start out again for the eight o'clock train, and generally had the pleasure of seeing this dash over the bridge and hearing it puff away from the station before he got as far as Fifth street. Nothing daunted, back he would trudge to his little garden, and repeat the miscalculation on the next train. And so on every day in the week, Sundays, of course, excepted. They say he never caught a train much earlier than ten o'clock, and I certainly never saw him on the cars before that hour. Frank Stockton's 'Late Mrs. Null' was never half so chronically late as this old farmer, and he did try so hard, too. I never knew how his business in New York came on, but it goes without saying that the little garden prospered in the fulness of its possibilities.

"Then there was the old chap who used to commute regularly but whom I have not seen on the road for a year—the short, grizzly, storm-beaten customer with good clothes and bad manners, whose eccentricities have made lots of Plainfielders laugh. I used to see him on the way to the city many, many times, and his resources for attracting attention never failed him. His pet trick was to be troubled, while sitting in the forward end of a car, by an opened window at the other end, a draught from which could not by any possibility under heaven reach to where he sat. Rising, with a little shiver, he would look down the length of the car and regard the proprietor of the offending window with a contemptuous glare that would have paralyzed a Midway Plaisance coryphee. This measure seldom closed the window, however, and his next move was to walk boldly down the aisle and request that the draught be discouraged. Another freak often exploited was to rise from his seat and stand out in the aisle of the car whenever he wanted to blow his nose, and in winter he would invariably add dignity to this operation by removing his overcoat prior to using his handkerchief and resuming it before reseating himself. These were but two of his many specialties. I tell you he was a dandy, and I often wonder what has happened to keep him away from the cars; but he was not the only one, oh dear, no! Life would n't be worth the living if were not for just such little diverting side-shows as his. Great Scott, what's this! Slowing up at the gas house, sure enough! Good-night; if I jump off here I save myself five minutes walk."

And he jumped off.

"Cannons."

There are few large business houses in New Jersey that have achieved marked success without liberal advertising, and during recent years a number of these, in order to keep fully abreast of the times, have begun to use printer's ink liberally. The Newark furniture house of "Cannons", in Market street near Mulberry, was founded many years ago, and at the present time is the largest house outfitting concern in New Jersey, yet until recently the sum spent annually was small in comparison with the immense volume of business transacted every year. The firm is well known in Newark and its immediate vicinity, but to the suburban buyer it has not before been so widely advertised as it has during the last three months.

The best newspapers in central and eastern New Jersey were selected early in June to spread still further this mammoth furniture business, and among those high-grade papers was included The Constitutionalist. The "Cannons" advertisements will continue in this paper for a year at least, and they will bear careful reading. Thus far they have been distinctly attractive in design and thoroughly businesslike in tone. "Cannons" have an immense establishment containing every nature of household furnishing, including furniture, carpets and kitchen ware, and the prices are plainly marked in figures anyone can read.

The poor man buys just as cheaply as the rich here, and each pays cash or receives credit as he desires. The intending purchaser of house furnishings will do well to read "Cannons" advertisement in this paper, and visit that store before buying. The firm's fair business dealings please all customers.

Sidewalk Improvements at the German Church.

As a result of the entertainment which friends and members of the German Reformed church gave a short time ago, in Reform Hall, new flagstones have been laid on the sidewalks in front of the church on Craig place, and from the sidewalk to the entrance of the church.

This is most convenient, as the basement of the church has been leased to the trustees of the North Plainfield public school temporarily. There will now be no danger that the children will fall over rotten boards.

—The police want it understood that they are not looking for Joe Pike. They say they have no use for him.

—Vanderbeek & Sutphin, the Park avenue music dealers, have on sale a Steinway baby grand piano. It is a little beauty, nearly new; and the firm say it will be sold at a bargain.

—Fashion journals say that black goods will be worn more than ever this season. Edsall advertises a full line of Priestley's black silk warp henriettas, and a great variety of other black goods, at New York prices or less.

—Jesse Hatfield, H. T. Williams and Walter J. Swaim are the hustling clerks in the employ of the Pacific Mall tea and grocery store, recently opened at 103 East Front street, and they are all well-known Plainfield people. If you get within gunshot of that store, Jesse will surely sell you a bill of goods.

EXTENSION TO DUNELLEN.

Plainfield Railway Directors Approve Jacob Kriney's Plans.

Messrs. Nevius, Riker and Fritts, Directors of the Plainfield Street Railway Company, met Thursday afternoon and received the petition gotten up by Jacob Kriney for the extension of the trolley line down Front street to Dunellen. The petition is signed by 600, being all except 3 or 4 of the property-holders along the route. The Directors said that if the petitioners would agree to certain conditions they would build the road this fall.

The road will be single track, with turnouts.

Mr. Kriney deserves credit for his public-spirited zeal and enterprise in working up this and other public improvements. He says: "I secured the fire-alarm box; the railroad is coming; and next I'll work for water".

PLAINFIELD THE MODEL.

Plainfield's prosperity is the admiration and envy of sister cities, one of which, New Brunswick, through its leading newspaper, The Home News, sets up this wail:

> Business men of this city who go to Plainfield come back disgusted, not because there is anything the matter with that city, but because they found an excellent electric railroad in operation there, and their disgust is engendered because all we have here is a poor, one-horse railway that runs between two cemeteries. One's disgust is turned to indignation when it is remembered that our city was offered a first-class electric road a year or so ago, and before Plainfield had its road. The people of that place are delighted with the trolley road and patronize it very generously. It has recently been extended and will shortly be further extended to Netherwood and other suburbs. Just now there are numerous costly buildings in progress of erection in Plainfield, including one on Front street covering nearly a block to cost about $150,000, and another to cost about $60,000. All these evidences of prosperity might have been even more abundantly ours were it not for the baneful influence of the grasping politicians who are in control here.
>
> New Brunswick has been as unfortunate in its government as it is fortunate in natural advantages. By right of situation, on the heights overlooking the pleasant Raritan, the old Dutch settlement has grown to be a powerful commercial centre and a city of some beautiful and aristocratic homes. This growth has been in spite of the tremendous drawbacks put upon it by selfish political schemers: and what a city might not New Brunswick be, were it not for that! Public officials have robbed it; personal and corporate greed have kept the taxes high and the treasury low; public improvements have been steadily prevented. So easy and desirable a thing as the erection of a new stone bridge across the Raritan has been delayed until now, though it was a grave necessity ten years ago. The rapid transit of the age is resolutely kept out of the streets, and wornout horses drag hearse-like cars about like snails. What New Brunswick needs to lift it out of the slough is public spirit and modern push in the hearts of its citizens. Its voters are dead to their city's welfare. They may well rub their eyes and look to Plainfield for example. The reason Plainfield forges ahead is because its people are wide-awake, and because public and private purse alike are open for the liberal expenditure of money in channels which are sure to return manifold benefits.
>
> The most charitable thing New Brunswick can do itself is to have an overturning at the polls and put in power men who will use the public funds to uplift and upbuild their decaying municipality.

The Last Series of Cheap-Rate Excursions to the World's Fair via the Pennsylvania Railroad.

ADDITIONAL DATES FOR THE POPULAR EXPOSITION TRIPS.

As the period of the existence of the World's Columbian Exposition draws to a close the demand grows stronger for the economical and satisfactory means of reaching Chicago provided heretofore by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. Recognizing the urgency of this popular need, that company has fixed a few additional dates on which excursions of the same character as the previous ones will be run. September 19, 25, 28, October 2, 11, 17 and 21 are the days selected from New York, Philadelphia, and points east of Pittsburg and Erie and north of York.

The special trains will be composed of the standard coaches for which the Pennsylvania Railroad Company is noted, and the arrival in Chicago at an early hour the following afternoon obviously gives ample opportunity for the securing of accommodations at that place.

The trains will leave New York at 9 a. m., Jersey City 9:13, Newark 9:26, Elizabeth 9:32, New Brunswick 9:53, Trenton 10:28, Philadelphia 11:30, Frazer 12:09 p. m., Downingtown 12:22, Parkesburg 12:41, Coatesville 1:03, Lancaster 1:25, Conewago 1:57, Harrisburg 3 p. m., Lewistown Junction 4:30, Tyrone 6, Altoona 7, and Pittsburg 10:40 p. m. The excursion rate, good only on the special train and valid for return within ten days, is $20 from New York, $18.25 from Philadelphia, and proportionately low from other stations. Return portions of tickets are good for ten days.

These trains will be run on fast schedule, and will be provided with all modern conveniences with the exception of Pullman cars.

Many expressions of complete satisfaction have been made by people who have availed themselves of this excellent opportunity of visiting the greatest and grandest exhibition the world has ever seen.

Vets to Visit Battle Fields.

The 13th New Jersey Regiment's pilgrimage to the battle fields of Gettysburg and Antietam will pass through and stop at this city next Monday at 8:45 a. m. The entire cost, hotel bills included, is but $13.50, and those whose time is limited can reach this city on the evening of Sept. 21, giving time to see the cities of Gettysburg, Hagerstown, Harper's Ferry, and Washington, and two hours to view the sights at Penn Mar. Geo. W. Moore, of 26 East Front street, who will attend, will be pleased to answer any further inquiry, as will also Capt. John Arey, of Oak Tree, and Reune Manning, grocer, of South Plainfield.

Got the Bicycle Fever.

George H. Moore, Jr., a young man whose parents reside at Cleveland, was arrested in Westfield Thursday on complaint of Fred Toms, of Cranford, for borrowing a bicycle and pawning it in New York. He was committed to jail to await the action of the Grand Jury.

—At Townsend's marble yard, on Somerset street, is to be seen an attractive monument chiseled to the memory of Nancy H. Southard, late wife of A. H. Frazee. The monument will be placed in position next week in the M. E. cemetery, and will be a fitting tribute to her memory.

The Constitutionalist.
A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.
A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor.
PUBLISHED AT Plainfield, New Jersey.
TERMS—TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

The lunatics are not all dead yet; an attorney in Pittsburg is urging old soldiers to organize and assassinate President Cleveland. This man needs a wet sponge applied to his cranium.

The Lehigh Valley Coal Company is about to establish an office in Westfield and deliver coal in the town from Picton, on the Lehigh Valley Railroad. If that means that the price is to be cut, Plainfield would welcome a similar innovation from South Plainfield.

DAMMING THE DELAWARE.

Forty years ago a pet hobby of Abram S. Hewitt, who then lived in Trenton, was the project of constructing a dam across the Delaware at that point in order to utilize the water-power for manufacturing purposes. It now seems about to be realized, but electric instead of water-power will be developed, a company having been organized to build a wing dam, with a complete outfit of sluiceways and turbines for the generation of power. The works will be located at Morrisville, and the power will be sold to Trenton shops and factories. At the last session of the Legislature a bill was passed authorizing the construction of dams halfway across the river, when the State of Pennsylvania should agree to co-operate. Objections came, however, from lumber interests on the Pennsylvania side and from the city of Philadelphia, which had been considering a plan to get its future water-supply from the Delaware above Trenton. These objections were satisfactorily met, and the company was recently incorporated with a capital of $500,000. Work on the dam will be started about the latter part of this month. Among other things which the company is empowered by its articles to do are the following: "To erect and maintain mills, factories, ice-houses, dwelling-houses, power-houses, and plants; to erect and maintain dams and reservoirs for the storage of water for the purpose of power; to supply power for mills and factories and electrical power-houses and plants and water-wheels; to erect and lay cables and wires overhead, under water, and under ground for the transmission of electricity; to manufacture, sell, furnish, rent, and lease all kinds and manner of power and machinery for the carrying on of all kinds and manner of mechanical business, mining, street-railways and tramways, and to acquire franchises and privileges for such purposes."

A MAN IN THE CASE.

That unique enterprise, the Woman's Baking Company of Chicago, has come to grief, a number of stockholders having petitioned the Court to appoint a receiver. It was incorporated Nov. 10, 1891, and was to be strictly a women's concern. To women the circular of the company soliciting subscriptions was addressed, and they were told that as the finances and all details of the management, even down to the work done in the bakeries, would be in the hands of women, handsome dividends were assured. An extract from the circular will illustrate the methods of the projectors. "The actual net profits from the sale of our bread," it said, "will exceed 2 cents per loaf, and that on pies will exceed 5 cents per pie. To give a very conservative estimate, however, of the annual profits on these articles, we will, for example, place the profits at ½ cent per loaf and that on pies 1 cent per pie. If twenty-five bakeries were established, averaging 2,000 loaves of bread and 1,000 pies per day, it would equal an annual profit on this basis of $136,875 on bread and $46,625 on pies, allowing nothing for our profit on cakes, buns, etc., which will be large. This will enable us to pay a dividend to our stockholders of $18.35 for each share of the stock." It is now charged that the whole scheme originated in the brain of a designing man, who, contrary to the terms of the prospectus, was engaged as manager. He is accused of being the author of the extravagant eulogies on the lives and characters of the incorporators that appeared in its pages. Their connection with philanthropic societies, temperance unions, and charitable organizations was set forth with much pious flourish and attracted liberal subscriptions. The petitioners say the company has lost $47,000 on two bakeries which it established, and that whatever profits there might have been the manager has received in the form of a commission of $12.50 on each share of stock sold. The petition finally alleges that he and the stockholders of the company "relied for immunity from the consequences of his transactions on the fact that the stockholders of the company were impecunious and widely separated, and would be unable to expose such rascality in a court of justice."

Heartfelt Sorrow.

At a regular meeting of Mizpah Lodge, No. 1, U. O. of I. O. L., held Sept. 11, 1893, the following resolutions were adopted on the death of Sister Elizabeth Dockrie:

WHEREAS, In view of the loss we have sustained by the decease of our friend and sister, and the still heavier loss sustained by those nearest and dearest to her. Therefore be it.

Resolved, That it is but a just tribute to the memory of the departed to say that in regretting her removal from our midst, we mourn for one who was in every way worthy of our respect and regard.

Resolved, That we sincerely condole with the family of the deceased on the dispensation with which it has pleased Divine Providence to afflict them, and commend them for consolation to Him who orders all things for the best and Whose chastisements are meant in mercy.

Resolved, That this heartfelt testimonial of our sympathy and sorrow be forwarded to the daughter of our departed sister.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be placed on our records, also printed in the daily papers.

Home Ideals.

The Rev. J. W. Richardson, of the Park Avenue Baptist church, will begin next Sunday night a series of sermons on domestic and sociological subjects. Following is the list:

Sept. 24.—The Ideal Wife.
Oct. 1.—The Ideal Parent.
Oct. 8.—The Ideal Son and Daughter.
Oct. 15.—The Ideal Employer.
Oct. 22.—The Ideal Employe.

Forsaken By The Captain.

Captain L. J. Briggs, accompanied by Mrs. L. J. Briggs, Jr. and her children, left Fanwood today for a ten days visit to relatives in Brooklyn Heights.

His departure breaks up for a time those evenings devoted to reminiscences by "The Captain and the Colonel". The latter is inconsolable.

His Landlord Seized the Goods.

J. P. Myer's shoe business in Westfield has been closed. He had given his landlord, L. E. Hart, a bill of sale on the stock and fixtures to secure the rent. When he went to the store Thursday morning he found that Hart had taken possession and removed the entire stock of goods from the store to his house during the night.

A MODEL BANK.

When the first Bank of the United States failed to prolong chartered existence, Stephen Girard, a rich merchant of Philadelphia, purchased its commodious and well-equipped building and therein continued, under his own individual name and responsibility, the banking business of discount, deposit and issue.

Mr. Girard was a merchant in the broadest meaning of the term. He had accumulated a solid fortune, not by venturous and tricky speculation, but through close and intelligent attention to legitimate commerce. The sails of his ships whitened almost every sea, and his commercial credit stood unexcelled in the marts of the world.

As a banker he was no less successful as a merchant, bringing into its detailed transactions the same practical and sound methods of business he had for long years observed. With patriotic spirit Mr. Girard subscribed liberally to public loans, both National and State, then not easy of negotiation, but with mere speculative papers and securities he would have nothing to do. His well entertained idea of lending money was to prudently aid and encourage bona-fide business men, their industries and enterprises, and in following out that real purpose of banking, he gave especial regard to the wants of the smallest tradesmen and mechanics known to be honestly endeavoring to prosper. Girard's bad debts were trivial.

Without any chartered authority whatever, and solely upon his own personal credit, Stephen Girard issued regularly engraved bank bills signed by himself and attested by his Cashier. Those promises to pay entered widely into circulation and no description of paper money surpassed them in public confidence.

It was a most remarkable fact, that when Mr. Girard died and the executors of his estate desired to promptly settle all outstanding liabilities, much delay was encountered in drawing back his bank bills for final redemption, they being hoarded by the farmers of Pennsylvania as of equal value with gold and superior in quality to any other kind of paper currency.

The Bank of Stephen Girard was indeed a model institution, because it carried into constant effect the true principles and practices of Banking.

THE OLD STORY.

The Cashier of an up-town New York Bank is under arrest for abstracting $20,000 worth of bonds from its assets and converting them to his own use for the purpose of making good stock speculating losses.

It is the same old story of self-inflicted ruin.

He was not a dissipated man, lived moderately with wife and children, and received a fair salary.

But yielding to the modern mania of money-getting, trying to grow suddenly rich by chance, like scores of other dupes, he has shipwrecked character, blasted life's prospects, incurred the penalty of committed crime, and overwhelmed with grief parents, family and friends.

It is the old sad story.

Would that men were content to live within the bounds of rigid honesty and to shun the tempter's wiles.

What floods of tears would thereby cease to flow and what a legion of hearts be spared the pangs of agony.

THE STRAIGHT AVENUE.

There appears to be considerable political interest throughout New Jersey regarding County and Legislative candidates to be voted for in November.

So far as concerns the party of Democracy we hope the people will rally for the control of Primary Elections and Nominating Conventions, in order that Democrats of unsullied personal repute, political integrity and undoubted ability shall alone be named for public positions.

Put none but reliable men on guard.

The sovereign people can do it, if they will.

Our eminent Democratic President was nominated and elected by popular sovereignty, and so was our present worthy Democratic Governor.

Let a similar verdict be again registered.

It is the only straight avenue that leads to victory.

Dr. Talmage offers to give $100 to any infidel who can furnish satisfactory proof that he has read the Bible through twice. The inference is that no man can twice read the Bible thoroughly, and honestly disbelieve its teachings.

The ease with which secret divorces may be secured in New Jersey is no credit to the State, and no help to social conditions. For the protection of society, publication of the fact of every divorce should be legally compulsory, the same as the fact of every marriage.

As if matters were not bad enough, speculation is again appearing in provisions. A man who is so heartless and mercenary as to juggle the prices of necessities for the sake of his own profit, especially in these hard times, deserves to lose in the speculation—and lose heavily.

Pennsylvanians hardly get through with one patriotic anniversary before they take up another. Recently they celebrated the 116th anniversary of the battle of Brandywine, and now the people of Philadelphia are making preparations to commemorate the landing of Penn's ship Welcome on October 27, 1682. The initiative has been taken by Superintendent of Education Brooks, who recommends that the public schools signalize the anniversary of next month with patriotic exercises. Pennsylvania people have the right idea of developing patriotism in the breasts of the rising generation early in life.

The Minneapolis Journal tells a genial tale of an Arizona bank cashier who nailed to the door the legend:

> This bank has not busted; it owes the people $60,000; the people owe it $80,000; it is the people who are busted. When they pay, we'll pay.

George Kyte has enlisted the services of The Mail and Express to secure his nomination for sheriff on the Republican ticket. He'd make a good nominee—for a Republican; but he'll never have the chance of showing how good a sheriff he'd be.

What sort of vaults can those be in the Philadelphia mint, if gold bricks can be drawn out under the doors with a rake? The doors of the vaults would better be removed, to save the mint clerks from getting their trousers bagged at the knees every time they are in need of a few hundred thousand dollars.

The Holy Cross church vestry has peremptorily refused to grant the petition of the members and patrons of the church, asking that they and Mr. Minor be given a hearing in the choirmaster matter, and the petitioners are highly incensed at the pointblank refusal of what they considered an unbiased request. Further developments are anticipated. The question arises in their minds, Has not the vestry exceeded its rights, and involved itself in difficulty, in declining to hear supporters of the parish?

Joseph Fleischmann, the New York florist whose magnificent floral rooms in the Hoffman House were opened with a flourish Monday night, made $100,000 last year on roses alone. Many would say that this was money spent unnecessarily. But men will never be content with the mere necessities of life, and after bread and butter why should not flowers be bought? There is inspiration in the beauty of a flower, and the man who loves roses, like him who loves children, has a great deal of good left in him.

The way Plainfielders are looming up as political candidates is an indication that before long this town is going to have the recognition it deserves. Just now Judge Coddington is being mentioned as a senatorial possibility; George Kyte is booming himself for sheriff; John J. Kenney has been slated by Congressman Dunn for postmaster. The only certainty in this excellent trio is Mr. Kenney. In choosing him, Mr. Dunn has selected a wide-awake young business man who will devote his best attention to the duties of his new position. But Mr. Kyte won't reach the office he is striving for, because he is a Republican. And the worthy Judge will hardly find it possible to capture the senatorship from the rest of the county. If any Plainfielder is to have it, it is James E. Martine's by all that is good and holy.

Old! Who said the Rev. Dr. Yerkes was growing old! He preached a rousing sermon to a large congregation yesterday on "Let your light shine", and it had all the fire of stalwart youth and all the intellectuality and wisdom that years of ripe experience alone can bring. The Press still insists that his powers as a pulpit orator and his influence as a teacher of the divine message are as vigorous as ever. Time, which has brought a crown of silver to his brow, has touched his faculties with sterling gold, and his eloquence not only rings the ear but lingers in the memory. Who has ever heard his Sunday evening talks without being impressed with their tenderness and truth! When he started out in the ministry he set up as his standard of lifework the preaching of Jesus Christ and Him crucified, and today he is doing that work even more steadfastly and more nobly than ever before.

The project adopted by the farmers of Saratoga county, N. Y., to protect their crops from damage by early frosts, is worthy of imitation elsewhere. It seems that a Swedish farmer had talked of the use of "frost torches" in his native country, made of petroleum-soaked peat, but as peat is not common in Saratoga county the farmers employed their leisure time in the summer in preparing pine stakes two inches in diameter and five feet long, then they laid in a stock of kerosene. A few evenings ago the thermometer dropped to 36 degrees by 8, and the agriculturists began soaking their pine sticks. By midnight they had them in place about fifty to the acre and blazing vigorously, the dense smoke preventing the chilling of the atmosphere. As the torches cost but about half a cent each, and as the torch-illumined farms escaped damage, while the others in the vicinity were probably depleted of two-thirds of their produce by frost, it is clear that the scheme is as economical as it is successful.

STREET RAILWAY EXTENSION.

Jacob Kriney has the job of his life before him. It transpires that the condition the Plainfield Street Railway Company imposed on him was that before the Dunellen extension shall be built he must secure subscriptions to $10,000 of stock from the people whose property will be benefited. It's easy enough to find the people who want the road, but to find enough willing to pay for it is another matter.

Sometime ago, when imputation was cast by another paper against the financial ability of the company to extend its tracks, the company's representative assured The Press that it had no lack of funds, and that all it wanted was signers and it would extend.

Inasmuch as the Dunellen extension would mean largely increased profits to the company, it seems strange that the company should put such an impediment as a $10,000 condition in its own way. The stock would be a good investment, but neither Mr. Kriney nor anyone else will ever secure the subscription of the amount specified among Dunellenites.

Plainfield and Dunellen are entitled to the rapid transit petitioned for, and the company has no right to refuse or to block it.

WHITEHEAD HAVEN FOR TRAMPS.

What kind of a place is Westfield, if it would not welcome the Saviour?

In the current issue of The Standard appears a communication signed Celia B. Whitehead, in which the estimable woman says:

> I have never been a believer in the doctrine of total depravity, but I fear I shall soon believe in the total stupidity of legislators. Our tramp laws seem an embodiment of it.
> If I have read aright the story of Jesus of Nazareth, Westfield would be a very unsafe place for him if he wished to live the same sort of life he lived when on earth before. Our laws would imprison him.

The Press doesn't seek to defend Westfield from the insinuations made by a worthy citizeness who doubtless knows the place like a book; but it does believe that Miss (or Mrs.) Whitehead is not so familiar with the festive tramp, or she wouldn't write such essays in his favor. Miss (or Mrs.) Whitehead evidently has never been confronted when alone in the house by a big, burly, bewhiskered chap of the sort that bulldoze Plainfield wives into surrendering the choicest eatables of the larder and saving the bones for the "master" of the house. The Press will be pleased to direct members of the tramp fraternity to their Westfield friend, and terrified Plainfield housewives will bless her for her goodness. Will Miss (or Mrs.) Whitehead kindly chalk four red crosses on her gatepost so they may know the house?

Miss (or Mrs.) Whitehead has a good and liberal heart, but what kind of a place is Westfield?

HERE'S A WORTHY EXAMPLE BY AN HUMBLE CITIZEN.

Henry Stiles Would Not Keep All His Money in the Family, But Distributed It Around Among Worthy Churches as Well as Relatives—This Example Might Well Be Imitated by the Wealthy—Muhlenberg Hospital Gets a Plum.

Tuesday night at 7 the will of the late Henry F. Stiles, of Scotch Plains, was read. Deceased left a wife but no children, and the nearest of kin is supposed to be a grand-nephew. The reading of the will took place at his late residence in the presence of the widow and friends. He leaves the use and income of all his estate to his widow during her life, and after her death he gives to the Methodist Episcopal church of Scotch Plains $500; and to All Saints Episcopal church of the same place also $500; and after making a few other legacies he gives the remainder of his estate, both real and personal, to the Muhlenberg Hospital of this city. Counsellor Walter L. Hetfield was honored by being appointed sole executor of the will. The estate is estimated as being worth from $40,000 to $50,000. Deceased was an honest, upright man, a good citizen, and a thorough believer in the golden rule.

Here is a choice specimen of British geography, gleaned from the London Sun:

> Rev. Dr. A. H. Bradford, who preached in Westminster chapel recently, hails from Montclair, N. J., one of the three divisions into which New York city may be said to be divided, the other two parts being the island of New York and Brooklyn. New Jersey and Brooklyn each have about 1,000,000 inhabitants.

There can be no doubt that the building now being erected where Laing's Hotel used to be will do credit to the city, but the manner in which its builders are permitted to obstruct Front street with their materials will never reflect glory upon anything. Why doesn't the Street Commissioner make them carry their boards and bricks around into the unused space at the west side of the structure, and keep them there?

The danger of eating overripe or partly decayed fruit is well understood, but there are still many persons who are not alive to the peril there is in eating eggs and meat, and certain forms of sea food, such as oysters, lobsters, and crabs, that are not fresh. The poisonous matter caused by decay often exists in quantities so small that the taste is in no way affected, yet serious digestive disturbances, often laid to other causes, are the result.

The lock-stitch bobbin, which gives out just when you get nicely started with your sewing, has long been one of the annoyances of the sewing machine. A bobbin that will carry a thousand yards of thread successfully is shown among the inventions by women at Chicago. Another convenience that has long seemed a necessity is an adjustable step for a railway car that looks more secure and trustworthy than the foot-stool used by sleeping-car porters.

THE REASON WHY

Watson & Co. Are Selling Their New Fall Garments So Far Below the Rates of Other Houses.

For some months Watson & Co. have been closing out all garments without regard to cost or value, as they saw that currency troubles would certainly make low prices for goods so when they commenced to buy materials for making their fall clothing, they had plenty of cash on hand to offer for desirable styles that suited their fine trade. Good men who had been laid off by other houses could be hired at fair rates, and many fine tailors needed work, and with all these conditions favorable to producing the best styles of clothing at lower prices than ever known, they decided to go on strong while many houses loaded up with last year's goods or orders at last year's prices were waiting for something to turn up. A new custom department, which is a credit to the city, was fitted up and put in charge of Edwin B. Ennis, with competent assistants. W. A. Marcell was given full swing in the cutting departments, and all minor places were filled with the most competent, careful and experienced workmen.

Watson & Co. say they know we are in for an era of low prices, and propose to meet them, profit or no profit, and have the stock to fill any demand. We were shown long lines of handsome Cheviot Suits, cut both D. B. and S. B., in black, dark blue, gray, and many stylish mixtures, some lined with fine black striped cassimere, and made up in faultless style at $10 for the complete suits, while whole departments are filled with handsome Dress Worsted Suits in all the new cuts, either silk faced or plain, at $12 and $15, and shown through long floors in which the new Fall Overcoats at $10, and the advance styles of long D. B. Overcoats and Ulsters were hung as fast as their tailors finished them.

Watson & Co. believe there will be sweeping changes in Tariff which will let in foreign goods at low rates, which suits them, as they like a free fight, but they don't believe you will buy clothing even under free trade as cheap as you can get it this Fall, when the currency trouble has made almost any offer of spot cash accepted for the finest goods.—Newark Item.

Christian Endeavor State Convention.

The seventh State Christian Endeavor Convention, to be held in Trenton, Oct. 11 and 12, promises to be one of unusual interest. Taylor Opera House, the largest meeting place in the city, has been secured for the occasion. The new Y. M. C. A. building has been placed at the disposal of the committee for the reception of the delegates. And in case of the need of overflow meetings the hall of this building will be called into use. The Park Sisters, of New York, who so acceptably led the singing at Montreal, will serve in a similar capacity in our State gathering. It is too early to announce the programme as a whole, but among those who have been secured to make addresses are Dr. Clark and John Wanamaker.

Trenton is easy of access from all parts of the State, and ample accommodations will be provided for all who come.

The Way of the Transgressor.

Two tramps, giving the name Wilson, and having in their possession several baskets of peaches, were arrested at 2 this morning at the railway station by policemen Cooney and Vanderweg. They were suspected of stealing the fruit from a peach train that had stopped a little while before at the station.

In court this morning, as the prisoners could give no satisfactory explanation of themselves or of how they came by the peaches, Judge Coddington sentenced them to sixty days in jail.

TWO CITIZENS LAID AT REST.

SCOTCH PLAINS AND PLAINFIELD BURY THEIR DEAD.

Dr. Parks Can Give No Higher Eulogy to Henry Stiles, Than the Life Record Went Concluded—Pastor Herring Condoles the Widow and Daughter of F. J. Horr.

From The Press of September 20.

Funeral services over the remains of the late Henry F. Stiles were held yesterday afternoon, at 2:30, in the Scotch Plains Baptist church. A large gathering of friends attended, including not only those who had known the deceased for so many years in his own village but also a number of friends from this city.

The Rev. Dr. Parks, pastor of the church, had charge of the service, and gave a strong and impressive talk to those present, urging the necessity of being prepared for the last great call. The departed one was not eulogized. The doctor said he thought the dead man's own past life would speak louder than any words he might utter.

A delegation from the Excelsior Hook and Ladder Company was present, and the pall bearers were chosen from the members.

Interment was made in the cemetery back of the church.

The funeral of Frederick J. Horr took place at 2 yesterday afternoon, at his late residence, 27 Westervelt avenue. The Rev. Charles E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church, officiated.

After reading selections from Psalms, and offering an eloquent prayer, the clergyman made brief and fitting remarks from II Samuel, III: 18—

Let Him do what seemeth Him good.

He said, among other things: "Friends, we talk about Eternity—Eternity is here. Death is but a doorway that leads us into fuller life, in which there is no such episode as death."

Many sorrowing relatives and friends gathered to pay their tribute of love and respect to the memory of the departed. Among them was the sister of the deceased, who lives on Staten Island.

Among the floral tributes were two large pillows of white roses and several wreathes and crosses.

The casket was borne by colored pallbearers. The interment was in Hillside Cemetery.

Fanwood Club Sold.

Last Wednesday all of the property of the Fanwood Club was sold under mortgage foreclosure by order of the Chancery Court.

The mortgage was for $7,000, and the property was purchased by the Central New Jersey Land Improvement Company for $1,000.

Under the Boat-Club act the members who created the debt are apparently individually liable for the deficiency.

The question now disturbing the minds of our Fanwood friends is: "Who will pay?"

THE PATH OF GOLD.

An Indian legend, beautiful and old,
Tells how a sinner sought the path of gold

Cast by a midnight moon on waters deep,
And there lay down to his eternal sleep,

With faith that, though the sea his bones should hold,
His deathless soul should mount the path of gold,

And steal, unchallenged, through the gates of heaven,
Its guilt forgotten, or, perchance, forgiven.

Oh, low-hung moon! Oh, quivering path of light!
The savage legend comes to me to-night.

At water's edge I stand, and at my feet
The sands of earth and heaven's gold do meet.

Would that I held the simple faith and hope
That bore the Indian's soul up yon bright slope!

But even as my prayer is cried aloud,
Thy face, O moon, is hidden with a cloud;

Thy light is gone; the waters, cold and gray,
Clutch at my feet and chill all hope away.

Oh, can it be that souls in sin grown old
Can never find the shining Path of Gold?

Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union.

OFFICIAL.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Sept. 7, 1893.

Regular meeting of the Board of Chosen Freeholders held on Thursday, Sept. 7, 1893.

Present—Director Sauer and Freeholders Badgely, Donahue, Ehrlich, Howard, Halliday, Kyte, Moore, Boll, Swain, Scudder, Trabue, Vanderbeek, Winans and Woodruff.

Absent—Freeholders Hubbard and Hunt.

The minutes of the last meeting, except bids for County Roads, were read and on motion approved.

REPORT OF THE COUNTY ENGINEER.

To the Honorable Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union county:

Gentlemen—The undersigned herewith respectfully presents a detailed estimate of the values of all proposals received Aug. 31, 1893, for the building of Telford macadam and macadam roads on Morris avenue, Springfield avenue, Newark avenue and Elgar road. The proposals are all regular except the proposal of Mr. F. Fanghana for the Telford macadam pavement of Newark avenue, which is irregular in the fact of his specifying a different stone for the foundation than is called for in the specification.

Respectfully submitted,
LOUIS QUIEN, County Engineer.

On motion of Freeholder Boll received and filed.

RESOLUTIONS.

By Freeholder Winans:

Resolved, That the contract for improving and macadamizing [illegible], from [illegible] street in Elizabeth to [illegible] street in Linden township, be awarded to John F Stanley, upon his giving proper bonds and executing the contract; and be it further

Resolved, That the Director of this Board be and is hereby authorized to execute the aforesaid contract on part of this Board.

Freeholder Moore moved to adopt.

Freeholder Boll moved to lay on the table, which was carried by the following vote:

Ayes—Freeholders Howard, Halliday, Kyte, Boll, Swain, Scudder, Vanderbeek and Woodruff—8. Nays—Director Sauer and Freeholders Badgely, Donahue, Ehrlich, Moore, Trabue and Winans—7.

By Freeholder Trabue:

Resolved, That the contract for paving and macadamizing Newark avenue County Road be and is hereby awarded to Patrick Fanghana upon the condition that he accept County Road bonds at par in payment thereof, total amount of contract not to exceed [illegible].

Freeholder Donahue moved to adopt.

Freeholder Boll moved to lay on the table, which was carried.

Freeholder Moore moved that when the Board adjourn it be until Thursday, Sept. 14, 1893, which was carried.

By Freeholder Woodruff:

Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed to examine bridge on Filbert street, Roselle, and report at the next meeting.

On motion of Freeholder Howard adopted.

By Freeholder Moore:

Resolved, That the members of this Board, either individually or acting as a committee, shall not contract or order to be constructed any new bridge work or culverts during the present fiscal year without approval of the same by resolution of the Board at a regular monthly meeting.

On motion of Freeholder Boll adopted.

By Freeholder Vanderbeek:

Resolved, That the bill of [illegible], for [illegible] work on [illegible] bridge be paid when finished; also bill of [illegible], for [illegible], on account of [illegible] avenue bridge, be paid when finished and signed by the committee.

On motion of Freeholder Halliday adopted unanimously.

By Freeholder Trabue:

Resolved, That the bill of Engineering News for advertisement of County Road proposals amounting to [illegible], be paid when properly audited by the committee.

On motion of Freeholder Kyte adopted unanimously.

By Freeholder Trabue:

Resolved, That the compensation of the County Road inspector be fixed at [illegible] per year.

On motion of Freeholder Moore adopted unanimously.

By Freeholder Badgely:

Resolved, That the road commencing at the [illegible] in the township of New Providence, thence westerly along what is known as the Valley Road to the Passaic river at Townley's bridge, be adopted and made a County Road, under the provisions of an act to enable boards of Chosen Freeholders to acquire and maintain public roads, approved March 13, 1889, and the supplements thereto.

On motion of Freeholder Moore referred to the committee of the whole.

TOBACCO HABIT EASILY CURED.

A FEW Testimonials from persons who have been cured by the use of Hill's Tablets.

THE OHIO CHEMICAL CO.:

DEAR SIR:—I have been using your cure for tobacco habit, and found it would do what you claim for it. I used ten cents worth of the strongest chewing tobacco a day, and from one to five cigars; or I would smoke from ten to forty pipes of tobacco. Have chewed and smoked for twenty-five years, and two packages of your Tablets cured me so I have no desire for it.

B. M. JAYLORD, Leslie, Mich.

DOBBS FERRY, N. Y.

THE OHIO CHEMICAL CO.:—GENTLEMEN:—Some time ago I sent for $1.00 worth of your Tablets for Tobacco Habit. I received them all right and, although I was both a heavy smoker and chewer, they did the work in less than three days. I am cured.

Truly yours, MATHEW JOHNSON, P. O. Box 45.

PITTSBURGH, PA.

THE OHIO CHEMICAL CO.:—GENTLEMEN:—It gives me pleasure to speak a word of praise for your Tablets. My son was strongly addicted to the use of liquor, and through a friend, I was led to try your Tablets. He was a heavy and constant drinker, but after using your Tablets but three days he quit drinking, and will not touch liquor of any kind. I have waited four months before writing you, in order to know the cure was permanent.

Yours truly,
MRS. HELEN MORRISON.

CINCINNATI, OHIO.

THE OHIO CHEMICAL CO.:—GENTLEMEN:—Your Tablets have performed a miracle in my case. I have used morphine, hypodermically, for seven years, and have been cured by the use of two packages of your Tablets, and without any effort on my part.

GEMS IN VERSE.

A Builder's Lesson.

"How shall I a habit break?"
As you did that habit make.
As you gathered, you must lose;
As you yielded, now refuse.
Thread by thread the strands we twist
Till they bind us neck and wrist;
Thread by thread the patient hand
Must untwine ere free we stand.
As we builded, stone by stone,
We must toil unhelped, alone,
Till the wall is overthrown.

But remember, as we try,
Lighter every test goes by;
Wading in, the stream grows deep
Toward the center's downward sweep;
Backward turn, each step ashore
Shallower is than that before.
Ah, the precious years we waste
Leveling what we raised in haste;
Doing what must be undone
Ere content or love be won!
First across the gulf we cast
Kite borne threads, till lines are passed,
And habit builds the bridge at last!

—John Boyle O'Reilly.

Judge Not.

Oh, man, who are good, who are honored and great,
Be kind to your brothers of lowly estate.
If masters, then be not in tasking severe.
If rulers, then rule men in love and not fear.
And if ye be fathers, wise, learned and strong,
Lead the little ones tenderly, slowly along.
Ere you sneer at the humble or punish the base
Pause and think for awhile, "Put yourself in their place!"

Fair lady, so haughty, so chaste and so cold,
Kept safe from harm in love's sheltering fold,
Ere you turn from your frail, erring sister with scorn,
Think how she was tempted and how she was born.
Her ruin may date from a smile or kind word,
The first that her poor, hungry heart ever heard.
Then pause ere you taunt her with sin and disgrace—
How if you had been tried? "Put yourself in her place!"

Proud man, whom the white robes of ermine enfold,
As you weigh others' sins in the balance you hold,
Ere you crush the last spark in a heart doomed to blood,
Let mercy come in for a moment and plead,
Ere you sentence "for life" a poor brother to dwell
With the ghosts of the sins that shall people his cell,
Think why you are honored, and he in disgrace.
What is hid in your heart? "Put yourself in his place!"

"Put yourself in their place!" Yes, have mercy on all
Who through love or through hate, good or evil shall fall;
Who knows in the light of a judgment divine,
Which soul shall be whitest, the sinner's or thine!
Fear to judge lest you stand at the heavenly door,
To see harlots and publicans go in before,
While your cover with guilty confusion your face,
And cry when too late, to be put in their place!

—Phoebe Cary.

To Trouble Borrowers.

There is many a trouble
Would break like a bubble,
And into the waters of Lethe depart
Did we not rehearse it
And tenderly nurse it
And give it a permanent place in the heart.

There is many a sorrow
Would vanish tomorrow,
Were we willing to furnish the wings;
So sadly intruding
And quietly brooding,
It hatches out all sorts of horrible things.

How welcome the seeming
Of looks that are beaming,
Whether one is rich or whether one is poor;
Eyes bright as a berry,
Cheeks red as a cherry,
The groan, the curse and the heartache can cure.

Resolve to be merry
All worry to ferry
Across the famed waters that bid us forget,
And no longer fearful,
But happy and cheerful,
We feel life has much that is worth living for yet.

—Frederick Wallace Bauer.

In the Woods In Summer.

These mighty trees with their centuries
Of miracles of wood,
Like their sires who stood before the flood,
Mock at man's perjuries.

Under the screen of this forest green,
Unheeded by human eye,
The passions die like sounds in the sky,
And my spirit walks serene.

The shining sun may his journey run
Through a sky of cloudless blue,
Yet the morning hue of the fragrant dew
Here waits like a kiss unwon.

The winds may blow or their fights forego
On the treeless plain and hill;
Here all is still save the tinkling rill
Or a bird hoto loon and low.

Here the squirrel peers with uplifted ears,
And the rabbit stops to stare,
And the woodsdove dares to coos to coos,
And just with their own fears.

'Tis a precious boon on a summer noon
Through the ancient aisles to stray,
Where the shadows play like wood nymphs gay
While summer takes off her shoon.

The sounds which jar, the things which mar,
The ills which sting the heart,
Here have no part or lose their smart
From the babbling world afar.

—Clarence A. Buskirk.

The Mirror of Life.

Do you wish for kindness? Be kind.
Do you wish for truth? Be true.
What you give of yourself, you find.
Your world is a reflex of you.

For life is a mirror. You smile,
And a smile is your sure return.
Bear hate in your heart, and erewhile
All your world with hatred will burn.

Set love against love. Every deed
Shall armed as a fate, recoil.
You shall gather your fruit from the seed
That you cast yourself in the soil.

Each act is a separate link
In the chain of your weal or your woe;
Cups you offer another to drink
The taste of their dregs ye shall know.

It Shall Be Well.

If thou shalt be in heart a child,
Forgiving, tender, meek and mild,
Though with light stains of earth defiled,
O soul, it shall be well.

It shall be well with thee indeed,
Whate'er thy grace, thy tongue, thy creed,
Thou shalt not lose thy fitting meed.
It shall be surely well.

—Lewis Morris.

Love and Justice.

Said Justice to Love—she was shy as a dove—
"I can lose my way back I can't find."
"Take my hand," said Love, bold; "I can lead, you are cold,
I can feel our way out if you'll mind."
On the way dark as pitch both fell into ditch—
Ah, the blind had tried leading the blind!

—Nelly L. Brown.

Speech is but broken light upon the depth
Of the unspoken. Even your loved words
Float in the larger meaning of your voice
As something dimmer.

—George Eliot.

Marble & Granite Works,
30 SOMERSET STREET,
PLAINFIELD, N. J.

If you have not engaged your work, I should be pleased to do it for you.

I buy only first-class Marble and Granite and do not sell inferior at prices that will enable me to put up the work with credit to myself and justice to the parties purchasing.

I employ no agents and therefore am enabled to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customer, of the commission generally paid to agents.

I am under a very small expense in running my shop, myself and my son doing the larger portion of the work, and we personally attend to the setting of all work, and look upon business in this light, that Good Work and Good Material, at Fair Prices, is a standing advertisement for my business, which will tend to build up trade, and I feel safe to warrant that no dealer can sell you the same work and stone much any cheaper than I can.

Hoping to be favored with your patronage, I am yours respectfully,

CITY DEPARTMENT.

Walter Irving Clarke, City Editor.

—The Miller Bros' first-class restaurant grows in popularity every day.

—Mrs. Whittemore, the famous mission worker, will come to Plainfield October 10.

—The State convention of the W.C.T.U. will be held in Camden, October 3, 4, 5 and 6.

—The first dance of the Shamrock Club will take place in St.Mary's T. A. B. Hall, the evening of Sept. 28.

—It is hoped that the fall conference of the Christian Endeavor Union will be held in the First Baptist church.

—Suit on a note has been brought by Aaron Thompson against Samuel Johnson, before Justice Mosher. The summons is returnable Sept. 26.

—The well-known "Dresden Trio" have been secured for the concert to be given in the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Clinton avenue, next week Thursday evening, Sept. 21.

—Tuesday evening, September 26, a Junior Vice Commander will be elected by Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., in place of Monroe R. Brewster, who left the city recently.

—The young people of Trinity Reformed church will give a fair Saturday, Sept. 23, at 323 East Second street, for the benefit of the new Sunday-school fund. Admission will be 5 cents.

—The first prize offered by the Coachman's Beneficial Association of this city, for bringing in the most members, was awarded to Charles Lang. He gathered in 17 new members.

—The Crescents will play the Montclair Athletic Club nine here Saturday. The Plainfield players receive all the receipts, and every lover of base-ball should attend this last game of the season.

—A strong petition, signed by influential parishioners, has been presented to the Holy Cross vestry, urging that body to investigate the case of Choirmaster Miner, since the signers feel that injustice has been done.

—The drug store of the late F. A. Miller, Spooner avenue and South Second street, is hereafter to be known as Freeman's Pharmacy. The store has been thoroughly renovated and restocked.

—Edward Richards, R. J. Shaw's head drug clerk, will soon take charge of the drug business now owned by Dr. Simpson at West Fourth and Liberty streets. Mr. Richards is an earnest and enterprising pharmacist.

—"Black Betty", the well-known cook who was employed in McVey's restaurant, and latterly at Force's Hotel, in Bound Brook, died recently at the home of her children, in New York. She was well-known in Plainfield.

—J. Thorn's grapevine on Terrill road was raided by a party of boys, Monday, while the owner was away from home, and many grapes were stolen. Mr. Thorn knows the boys, and they will probably be made to answer in court.

—Percy Davis, head waiter of the Hotel Grenada, stunned a patron of the hotel today by making him out a check for $165 for three meals. Another waiter corrected the mistake before the customer's purse was seriously damaged.

—Mr. Honeyman advertises that his next special party from New Jersey to Chicago goes Oct. 9, and that the cost of membership is only $43, inclusive of hotel rooms and board. There is no excuse now not to see the wonderful Fair.

SEPTEMBER'S COMING MOON.

Why "Harvest Moon", and Why the Full-faced Orb Rises Evening After Evening at Almost the Same Hour—The "Hunter's Moon".

Terrestrials will have this month an exceptionally fine exhibition of what is known as the "Harvest Moon"—a moon full or nearly full rising for several successive evenings at about the same hour.

This happens in September, when the sun is near the autumnal equinox, and when the full moon, being in the opposite quarter of the heavens, is near the vernal equinox, that is, the point at which the sun's path crosses the celestial equator from south to north, and when, in consequence, it is greatly inclined to the horizon at the time of sunset. This month the moon will be "full" on the 25th, three days after the sun has passed the equinox. Furthermore, its path when it rises on that date will have an unusually great obliquity to the horizon from the circumstance that it will be near its "ascending node"—the point at which its crosses the sun's path from south to north.

It will be seen that in consequence of the great inclination of its path, the moon's distance from the horizon—either above or below it—is very much less at sunset each day than would be the case were its path nearly perpendicular to the horizon, as it sometimes is. On the 23d it is less than an hour high at sunset; on the 24th it is only 25 minutes high; on the 25th it is just rising; on the 26th it will rise in 28 minutes after the sun has set, and on the 27th it will rise within an hour after sunset.

As we go northward the inclination of the moon's path to the horizon increases, and this phenomenon becomes more striking. In the latitude of London—52 degrees—there is little more than an hour between the times of its rising on the 23d and on the 27th, five days later.

This phenomenon really happens every month when the moon is near the vernal equinox: but it is only in September that the moon is full at that time and that the appearance is therefore noticeable.

The August full moon shows a similar though less marked disposition to favor the harvester, particularly if it occurs late in the month, and it is, perhaps, of more real service to him than the September moon. The October moon, which also exhibits to some extent the same propensity to rise promptly at about sunset when near the full, is known as the "Hunter's Moon".

Gus Williams, Music Hall, Tomorrow Night.

Life is too short, and cares are too numerous, for anyone to stay home and ponder over financial troubles on the night that light-hearted Gus Williams is in town. It is light-hearted Gus Williams, for how can a man who so successfully drives away the blues from the feminine heart, and the "V-cut" frown from the bread-winner's brow, be aught else than light-hearted! As it is more blessed to give than receive, Gus Williams should be thrice blessed, as he spreads his sunshine all about him. He not only cheers for the night, but for many a following night, when busy brains turn back upon the memory wheel to catch up the refrain of a song which the singer left in his hearers' hearts as he passed on. To say that Gus will be in Music Hall to-morrow night should be sufficient to crowd the house.

has characterized the growth of the Great Inter-State Fair. It has not been a mushroom growth; each year's success has been built on the prosperity of the past season. Two factors have played an important part in the remarkable history of this Association. One is its liberal and shrewd management; the other, the confidence of the people, gained by an experience of a half-dozen years. The increased attendance every year is conclusive evidence that people are getting fifty cents of value for every half dollar spent in admission to the Fair.

Don't forget the place: Trenton, N. J.; nor the dates: September 26-29, 1893.

THE STROLLER.

A New Feature Next Month.

Worthington's Magazine for October is a royal number. As the season draws near when the large army of magazine readers will decide the question, "What magazine shall we take another year", it is well for them to keep an eye on Worthington's, and, whatever else may be taken, add it to the list. It is second to none in choice, high quality of matter and attractive illustrations, and it is very much more entertaining than many of its rivals. Its low price brings it within the reach of all. A. D. Worthington & Co., Hartford, Conn., are the publishers.

It costs only $2.50 per year, or 25 cents a single number, and is for sale by all newsdealers. A new and notable feature will be added to the November number and will be continued regularly thereafter. Walter Blackburn Harte, the vigorous and critical essayist, whose papers under the heading of "In a Corner at Dodsley's" have hitherto been a noticeable feature of the New England Magazine, will hereafter contribute these essays exclusively to Worthington's under the heading of "In a Library Corner".

NEWS FROM JACK MORTIMER.

He Sends a Paper East Telling of John Crane Among the Mormons.

Ever since Jack Mortimer left town three years or more ago, the people who so well remember him here have wondered just where he went. At last news of him has come. On the margin of The Deseret Evening Evening News, issued in Salt Lake City, Utah, Sept. 13, and reaching The Press Friday, is the inscription "From J. Mortimer", and the following paragraph is marked:

> PLEASED WITH THIS CITY.
>
> Mr. John M. Crane, general superintendent of the American Casualty Insurance and Security Company, has been in Salt Lake for three days looking over the business of his company in this section in connection with Messrs. Sloan and Krighaum. He thinks this the making of a fine city. Mr. Crane is one of the originators of the casualty insurance in the United States, was an organizer of the Fidelity and Casualty, knows the business as a father knows his child, is a sleight of hand performer, a business maker and a business getter, a good story teller, is the prime mate for his company, an all-round good fellow and is held in high esteem by the insurance press and companies generally.

Death of the Giant Engineer.

Preston Moffett, a brother of Mrs. Isaac Counsell of Watchung avenue, died at his home in Jersey City, Saturday night, of paralysis.

Deceased was aged 57 years. He had been in the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company more than 30 years, most of the time as engineer of a Washington express train. He was also at one time in the employ of the Jersey Central Railroad Company. Mr. Moffett was an extraordinarily large man, so that an extra-large door had to be placed in the cab of his engine for him. He was a skilled engineer, and like all giants was cheery and good natured, and highly esteemed by all who knew him.

The funeral took place today in Jersey City, and the railroad company provided a private car for the mourners.

Hard for Young Men to Keep the Sabbath.

Miss Ernestine C. Smith of this city read an interesting paper on "Young Men", at the Young People's Hour of the General Seventh-Day Conference, Milton, Wis. Among other things she said:

> The great want of the nation is manhood, enlightened, educated and inspired by Christian principles, and the great want of our denomination is conscientious young men who have individuality of character.
>
> It is not easy for our young men to keep the Sabbath. It interferes constantly with social and business pursuits. They are oftentimes led into unpleasant discussions, and scoffed at for their peculiar belief. Their social circle is necessarily limited, and the lucrative positions are not open to them because of their Sabbath. These are all trying circumstances for the ambitious young men of the day, and the struggle is hard, but God is ready with reinforcements, and if "God be for us who can be against us"? We want young men who can afford to be poor in this world's goods rather than to violate their conscience; to be scoffed at for the time rather than lose their hold upon the generations that are to follow.

Presbyterian Rallying Day.

Last Sunday was Rallying Day in the Sunday-school of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church. Special singing was a feature of the services, and the pastor, the Rev. William R. Richards, D. D., delivered an interesting address to the children.

The Rallying Day exercises of the First Presbyterian church will take place Sunday at 9:30 a. m. The special singing will be led by two cornetists from Cranford; and the pastor, the Rev. Charles E. Herring, will deliver a short address.

The Rallying Day exercises in Hope chapel Sunday-school will begin at 3, Sunday afternoon. The Rev. W. R. Richards, D. D., will address the scholars of the school.

In Warren chapel, Sunday, the Sunday-school Rallying Day exercises will take place at 2:30 p. m. Special exercises will be given, and the Rev. Joseph McKelvey, the pastor, and the Rev. Wm. R. Richards, D. D., will deliver short addresses.

Columbian Lodge, A. O. U. W.

A new lodge of A. O. U. W. will be instituted in Plainfield Sept. 28. The name will probably be Columbian Lodge, and the charter members will number about forty. Last night was the appointed limit for receiving applications for charter membership. The time has been extended, however, and all those making application before Thursday night will be entitled to enter as charter members. D. D. G. M. Adams is the organizing deputy.

GOOD SPORT AT CLIMAX TRAPS.

LIVELY SHOOTING ON THE GROUNDS OF THE NEW CLUB.

Plainfield's Crack Handlers of the Breech-Loaders Pepper Clay Pigeons With Varying Success—The Young Organization Winning Fame Among Sportsmen at Home and Abroad.

Fourteen members of the young and prosperous Climax Gun Club presented themselves at the club grounds Tuesday to take part in the regular monthly club shoot. Although organized but a few months, the club is recognized in the trap-shooting fraternity as one of the leading organizations in the State, and the Climax boys are able to present as strong a team of crack shots as can be found.

The club is incorporated under the State laws, and every member is obliged to enforce the laws for the preservation of game.

The shooting yesterday was entirely at inanimate targets, blue rocks being the targets used. The shooting was governed by Association rules, and the targets were thrown hard, and at unknown angles. The result of the first event was as follows:

Event No. 1. Regular club event for club prizes. 25 targets. Handicap allowances—C. Smith, scratch, scored 24. D. Terry, scratch, 21. T. Brantingham, scratch, 21. T. H. Keller, scratch, 20. August Trust, shooting at 30, broke 24. D. Darby, 28, broke 17. Scott Terry, 28, scored 23. "McGinty", 28, broke 23. W. Terry, 28, broke 23. Carpenter, 28, broke 17. And J. Darby, shooting at 28, scored 21.

After this main event had been shot, sweepstake shooting was indulged in, with the following results:

Sweepstake No. 1. 10 targets—C. Smith 10, T. H. Keller and D. Terry 9, Trust and Brantingham and S. Terry 8 each, D. Darby 4, Soper and J. Darby 3.

Sweepstake No. 2. 15 targets—Smith 15, Keller 14, Brantingham 12, "McGinty" and Dalone 11, Soper 10, D. Terry and J. Darby 9, Trust and Carpenter 8, D. Darby and Camp 7.

Sweepstake No. 3. 10 targets—D. Terry and Keller 9 each, McCord and Smith 8, J. Darby and "McGinty" 4 each.

LAST OF THE SEASON.

Hillside Tennis Teas End in a Pleasant Gathering Around an Autumnal Fire.

The Hillside Tennis Club wound up the season of teas Saturday afternoon. The rain in the morning made the grounds so wet that it was necessary to hold the reception in the club-house, but the fall in temperature made the shelter of the house very acceptable, and many of the guests gathered around the cheerful wood fire that had been lighted in the gentlemen's room, and found its warmth not amiss.

Mrs. Stephen A. Ginna received the club's guests. She was assisted by Mrs. D. F. Ginna, Mrs. DeWitt Clinton Ivins, Miss Tompkins, Miss Stewart, Miss Streuli, Miss Huntington, Miss Gilman and Miss Cooley.

Only one court was in fit condition to be used, the others being very wet, so that the tennis was not watched with the usual interest. The attendance was not large, owing probably to the late hour at which it stopped raining.

Everyone is sorry that the teas have come to an end, as they formed a very pleasant incident in the week, but now that the cooler weather is coming on there will be dances and other festivities to take their place.

Among those present were: Mrs. Henry E. Bowen, Miss Bowen, the Misses Davis, Miss Lawrence, Miss Laura Worthington, Miss Whiton, Miss Erskine, Percy Stuart, Harry Opdyke, James Murray, the Rev. W. R. Richards, Albert Simmonds and Louis Walz.

Luckily, Escaped Harm.

Mrs. John Doull Miller, of Ninth street, and Miss Daisy Shepard, of Scotch Plains, daughters of Augustus D. Shepard, were driving on Watchung avenue, at 4 Saturday afternoon, when their horse took fright at an electric car, and threw the ladies from the carriage. John E. Keely, who happened to be on the scene, assisted the ladies to Dr. O. L. Jenkins's office. Fortunately, they had received no serious injury, except a severe shock to the nerves.

Peach Festival by the Lake.

The peach festival of the young ladies of the Y. P. S. C. E. of Trinity Reformed church, which was held in the W. C. T. U. rooms last Friday evening, will be repeated Thursday evening of this week, at J. H. Tier's lake house pavilion. No admission fee will be charged, and as Mr. Tier has donated the use of his pavilion the young ladies look for a financial success. The amount realized will be given to the Sunday-school of the church.

Capt. Williams Was from Plainfield.

Captain Williams, of the missing steamship Alvo, which it is supposed went to the bottom with all hands in the terrible storms of a few weeks ago, was at one time a resident of Plainfield, living with his family at Ninth street and Arlington avenue. Three years ago Mr. Williams took his family to Westfield, where he built a fine home and had since kept his family. His grief-stricken wife and children are still hopeful of his safe return.

General Demarest's Experience on a Canadian Railroad.

The Brockville, Ontario, Times tells that "Among the many distinguished guests at the Leeds County Agricultural Fair, Thursday, was United States Consul James A. Demarest. Although something of a traveler in all waters, and having been around Cape Hatteras a dozen times, yet the Honorable Mr. Demarest was seasick for the first time in his life during his trip over the Brockville, Westport & Sault Ste Marie Railroad".

Moving Lots of Buildings.

Harry S. Jenkins, of 203 East Sixth street, has been in Bethlehem, Pa., since March last. He has been doing a thriving business moving buildings, in his usual careful and satisfactory manner. Mr. Jenkins returned to Plainfield last Saturday.

Another Loss to Holy Cross.

Robert Clark, one of the best singers in the Holy Cross church choir, has had trouble with the new organist. He was present at a recent rehearsal, and was expected to sing a solo the following day. After the rehearsal, he asked the organist if he was to receive the same pay as formerly. He was told they could not afford it. He has left the choir, and his excellent voice will be missed.

The Newsboy and the Dude.

At Dunellen station the other evening a dude was awaiting a train going east when Newsboy Eddie Ballows rushed up with the cry "Have a World?"

The train being late, and the dude impatient, he angrily retorted: "No, I don't want no World; I want the Earth."

"You don't want much"—said Eddie, and skipped out.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

T H SEASON'S GAY DANCES BEGUN.

YOUNG PEOPLE MAKE MERRY AT THE PARK CLUB.

Successful Subscription Affair, with a Cotillion of Novel Figures—September Snowballs Sent Swirling Swains—Big Boys Burst Baby Balloons.

The first dance of the season took place Monday at the Park Club. It was a subscription affair; and the invitations, which were limited in number, were sent out about a week ago. The Park Club was chosen on account of its size, as the Casino is rather large for a small dance. No attempt was made at decoration, but the dancing room at the Park Club is sufficiently attractive without covering up the walls with bunting.

Informal dancing was indulged in until 10:30, when supper was served. The cotillion was danced at 11, Irving West leading with Miss Corlies.

There were several amusing figures, one of the best being the contest between the men to decide who could break a toy balloon first and get away to choose his partner. One of the prettiest was the snowball figure, in which the girls designated their choice of partners by breaking a small tissue-paper bag, filled with clipped paper snow, over the heads of the fortunate swains.

The favors were simple but pretty, the floor was superb, and the music was good. The cotillion was finished about 1:30.

Some difficulty was experienced in getting a list of patronesses, on account of the number of matrons out of town. Mrs. Daniel F. Ginna and Mrs. J. K. Boome presided at the favor tables, besides lending their names as patronesses.

Those dancing were:

Irving West and Miss Corlies, Edward Bloodgood and Miss Bessie Ginna, Gifford Cooley and Miss Gilman, Rowland Cox and Miss Cooley, Howard Huntington and Miss Elizabeth Evans, John Munn and Miss Maude VanBoskerck, Mr. Streuli and Miss Tompkins, Harry Opdyke and Miss Mitchell, Thomas VanBoskerck and Miss Florence Huntington, Harry West and Miss Gertrude Walz, O G. Waring and Miss Marion Dumont, Walter Murray and Miss Holly, Mr. Jewett and Miss Holly, George VanBoskerck and Miss Murphy, Augustus D. Shepard, Jr., and Miss Elizabeth Stewart.

Those dancing stag were Percy Stewart, Walter Stewart, Clifford McGee, John Holly and Clarence Logan Murphy.

OBITUARY.

F. J. Horr.

Frederick J. Horr died at 7:25 a. m. Monday, after an illness of eight weeks, at his residence, 47 Westervelt avenue, of meningitis of the brain, succeeding nervous prostration.

Mr. Horr was in his fifty-seventh year. He was a native of Frankfort, Germany, and had lived in Plainfield ten years.

The deceased was a commission merchant with Markt & Co., of New York. He and his family have long attended the First Presbyterian church of this city. In Brooklyn, where Mr. Horr lived previous to his coming to this city, he became a member of the Royal Arcanum, from which the widow will receive benefits.

A sister living on Staten Island, his wife, and a daughter aged 15, survive him, and are heavily stricken with grief at their bereavement.

The funeral services will be held tomorrow at 3 p. m., at the residence, 47 Westervelt avenue. The Rev. Charles E. Herring will officiate.

Henry F. Stites.

Last Saturday morning at 6, Henry F. Stites, one of the original settlers in Scotch Plains, died at his residence in that place.

Mr. Stites had been ill a comparatively short time, having been seen on the streets only one week ago.

He was in his sixty-ninth year, and a widow survives him. He will be sadly missed in the community, as he was ever a progressive citizen and highly respected by all. The funeral will be from the Scotch Plains Baptist church tomorrow afternoon at 2:30.

HAMMERED THE HACKMAN.

Michael Kennedy's Tough Experience with a Couple of Fares on Saturday Night.

Michael Kennedy, so long a hackman in this city, met with a rather hard time of it Saturday night.

Kennedy was approached at his new stand in Elizabeth, at a late hour, by two apparently respectable looking men who asked to be driven to Newark. When midway between Newark and Elizabeth, the men got Kennedy to halt and, getting out of the coach, assaulted him by hammering and kicking him to their heart's content, after which they took to flight.

It's said that Kennedy, during the struggle, was relieved of his watch and purse, and that before his assailants left they kicked in the windows of his coach.

Morning Services at 2 P. M.

Two Plainfield pastors, of the Trinity Reformed and the First Baptist churches, made an Irish bull Sunday in saying that "the morning session of the Sunday-school will hereafter be at 2 p. m." It was unintentional in both cases, and is enjoyed by the pastors themselves as much as by the people who heard it.

Safe, Quick and Effective.

The valuable curative properties of ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS are due to the employment of the highest medical and chemical skill. They are purely vegetable; and in ingredients and method have never been equalled; safe, quick and effective in their action; they do not burn or blister, but soothe and relieve while curing, and can be worn without causing pain or inconvenience.

AT LAST THEY GET A PRESIDENT.

SHE'S A NEWCOMER, AND HAS A GREAT RECORD ELSEWHERE.

W. C. T. U. Work Not so Languid—Reception to the New Head of the Organization, Planned for Thursday.

The September business meeting of the W. C. T. U. was held in their rooms Friday afternoon. The Vice-President from the First Baptist church presided.

The Nominating Committee appointed to find a President reported favorably. By a rising vote the Secretary cast the ballot and Miss Cara L. Peck was declared elected. The oldest member of the W. C. T. U., who is seldom absent from the meetings, carried to Miss Peck a beautiful bunch of flowers announcing her election.

Miss Peck is a woman of exceptional qualities. Though a stranger as yet in Plainfield, she has understood the work of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, having been associated with the organization in Michigan some few years ago. She is a newcomer and lives on East Front street.

Many will remember the paper Miss Peck read at the Union County School of Methods, touching in a most interesting and concise manner the Juvenile work; and later at the Ocean Grove Summer Convention, where she spoke most acceptably on the general work of the W. C. T. U. As an organization, while we deeply regret losing our retiring President as our leader, we feel most fortunate in securing one so able and efficient to fill the office.

An informal reception and tea will be held by the Union next Thursday afternoon between 3 and 5, when it is hoped every member will be present to meet and welcome the newly elected President.

The Executive Committee met at the close of the regular business meeting to appoint the Superintendents and other Standing Committees for the ensuing year's work.

C. R. YATES,
Superintendent of Press.

WHAT A MEMBER THINKS.

Views of One of the First Baptist Church Flock, Who Favors Frankness.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—As a member of the First Baptist church, I can say that even as far back as the jubilee service, in celebration of Dr. Yerkes' 25-year pastorate, dissatisfaction was apparent; and that since then it has showed itself in many ways.

The deacons from time to time have held meetings to adopt methods by which better results in church work might be obtained. A young man in the church was secured to assist the pastor, and by close application was able to accomplish considerable good. But the deacons did not wholly approve of his methods, and frequently corrected him.

In the meantime certain members complained that the pastor's sermons were too doctrinal, and not practical enough.

In reality, a younger preacher was the choice of their hearts. It was not an open complaint, but one that could be heard; and it was not confined to the younger members of the church, but was rife among the older and more conservative ones as well.

At a recent meeting of the deacons, at which the pastor was present, the subject of a younger man for the pulpit was discussed. The pastor said the time had not come for such a move, although it might come later on.

Whereupon one deacon, who is noted for his quietness in turbulent times, arose and said, that there had been a time, not very far back, when it was hard to secure a choice seat in the church, but now it seemed that the pastor was preaching to empty seats. Other remarks of like character followed.

Since that time the lack of interest in the regular prayer meetings of the church and the Sunday evening services has been a cause of much anxiety; and it is positively known that certain members of the church have desired a younger pastor, one who would revive the too apparent deadness in the church.

From these facts it seems to me that the better way of handling this subject is to make a plain statement of affairs to the pastor and the people.

It is an undeniable fact that a young pastor is wanted, and if the officials of the church deny it they show that they are not thoroughly acquainted with the church's affairs. Of course, publicity in such matters is unpleasant; but there are times when frankness is better than concealment; and this, I think, is such a time.

Reduced Rates of Fare to Washington via Pennsylvania Railroad.

The hundreth anniversary of the laying of the corner-stone of the United States Capitol will be celebrated at Washington on Monday, September 18, with ceremonies appropriate for an occasion so nationally momentous.

Patriotic and historic orations will be delivered by well-known speakers and statesmen, and it is intended to have other fitting tributes paid to this national commemoration.

That people from other cities and towns may attend the celebration, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company will sell excursion tickets from all points on its system east of Pittsburg and Erie, except the Downingtown and Lancaster branch, at one and a third fares, which is a considerable reduction. The tickets will be sold by the company's agents on September

A WET-WEATHER FAIR.

Delightful Time for the Visitors, and Some Profit to the Sunday-School Fund.

The Christian Endeavor Sunday-school Committee of the Trinity Reformed church held a peach festival in the W. C. T. U. rooms on Watchung avenue, Friday evening. It was most successful, in spite of the inclement weather. A most commendable feature of the affair was that the entire committee was there ready for business, and all those who braved the storm to reach the place found a warm reception awaiting them.

A table, laden with choice candy, home-made, was in charge of Miss Ella Dunn, and no difficulty was experienced in disposing of it.

Around the room were tables neatly arranged where one could sit down and partake of inviting refreshments, served by charming young ladies, who were very anxious to please their customers. Miss Lizzie Dunn made a most efficient cashier, and received the money as fast as handed in.

As chairman of the committee Miss Mabel Wilson was most efficient, and managed everything in a business-like manner.

During the evening Miss May Berg played several instrumental selections to the enjoyment of those present.

The committee having the affair in charge were:

The Misses Mabel Wilson, chairman, Lizzie Dunn, Helen Bogert, Carrie Mohl, the Misses Berg, the Misses Wyckoff, Lottie Wilson, Ella Dunn and Nellie Crawford.

Although everything was not sold, a most creditable return was made from the sales, and the young ladies made $15, clear of all expenses, which is remarkable under the circumstances. They are very grateful to those who purchased tickets and helped them in any way. The fair would have been continued tonight, but the rooms are engaged.

"Look here, tomorrow I intend bringing a pig to town. I shall put it in my cart and cover it up with cabbages. If you will just close one eye, you shall have a handsome tip."

"All right," said the collector.

Next day the countryman drove up with his cart loaded with cabbages. The collector stepped up to him and whispered in his ear:

The Fishing Party.

Wunst we went a-fishin—me
An my Pa an Ma—all three,
When they was a picnic, way
Out to Hanch's woods, one day.

An there was a crick out there,
Where the fishes is, an where
Little boys 't ain't big an strong
Better have their folks along.

My Pa he ist fished and fished!
An my Ma she said she wished
Me an her was home, and Pa
Said he wished so worse'n Ma.

Pa said ef you talk, er say
Anythin, er sneeze, er play,
Hain't no fish, alive er dead,
Ever go to bite, he said.

Purt' nigh dark in town when we Got back home, and Ma, says she,
Now she'll have a fish fer shore!
An she buyed one at the store.

Nen, at supper, Pa he won't
Eat no fish, an says he don't Like 'em, an he pounded me
When I choked! Ma, didn't he?

God Counts by Souls.

Who shall judge a man from manners?
Who shall know him by his dress?
Paupers may be fit for princes,
Princes fit for something less.
Crumpled shirt and dirty jacket
May beclothe the golden ore
Of the deepest thought and feeling—
Satin vests could do no more.
There are springs of crystal nectar
Ever welling out of stone;
There are purple buds and golden
Hidden, crushed and overgrown.
God, who counts by souls, not dresses,
Loves and prospers you and me,
While he values thrones the highest
But as pebbles in the sea.

Man upraised above his fellows
Oft forgets his fellows then.
Masters, rulers, lords, remember
That your meanest hinds are men—
Men by honor, men by feeling,
Men by thought and men by fame,
Claiming equal rights the sunshine
In a man's ennobling name.
There are foam embroidered oceans,
There are little weed clad rills,
There are feeble inch high saplings,
There are cedars on the hills;
God, who counts by souls, not stations,
Loves and prospers you and me,
For to him all famed distinctions
Are as pebbles in the sea.

Toiling hands alone are builders
Of a nation's wealth and fame.
Titled laziness is pensioned,
Fed and fattened on the same,
By the sweat of others' foreheads,
Living only to rejoice,
While the poor man's outraged freedom
Vainly lifteth up his voice.
Truth and justice are eternal,
Born with loveliness and light;
Secret wrongs shall never prosper
While there is a sunny right.
God, whose world-heard voice is singing
Boundless love to you and me,
Sinks oppression with its titles
As the pebbles in the sea.

A Little Feller's Sundays.

Say, Sunday's lonesome for a little feller,
With pop and mam a-readin all the while,
An never sayin anything to cheer ye,
An lookin 's if they don't know how to smile,
With book an line a-hangin in the woodshed,
An lots o' 'wums down by the outside cellar,
An Brown's creek just over by the mill—
Say, Sunday's lonesome for a little feller.

But Sunday's never lonesome for a little feller
When he is stayin down to Uncle Ora's.
He took his book onct right out in the orchard
An told us little chaps just lots o' stories,
All truly true, that happened onct fur honest,
An else 'bout lions in a sort o' cellar,
An how some angels came an shut their mouths up,
An how they never teched that Dan'l feller.

An Sunday's pleasant down to Aunt Marthie's.
She lets us take some books that some one gis her,
An takes us down to Sunday school 't the schoolhouse,
An sometimes she has nice shortcake fur dinner,
An onct she had a puddin full o' raisins,
An onct a frosted cake all white an yeller.
I think, when I stay down to Aunt Marthie's,
That Sunday's pleasant fur a little feller.

A young Richmond man who was traveling in Hanover a few days ago got a young negro to watch his horse, as there was an engine nearly ready to start. When in the store a few minutes the boy came in.

"I can't watch yo' hoss no longer, boss," said he anxiously.

"Is that engine there yet?" asked the traveler.

"Yassir."

"Well, go and watch him. I'll be there in 15 minutes, and I'll give you a quarter."

"Deed I can't, boss," he insisted. "I'se got to go so go powerful quick."

"What's the matter?" he asked, considerably provoked.

"Well, you see, boss," said he earnestly, "it's dish yer way: A man drov up by yo' hoss wid a wagon load of ripe watermillions an ax me to watch 'em for him while he go ter de blacksmith shop, an I done tole him I would, but I hain't got de strength ter stan hit, boss, 'deed I hain't. I jis' got 'ligion las' week, an ef I stays roun whar dem millions is an nobody a-lookin sumpin's goin ter happen, sho', an dis chile doan' want ter be backslidin, fo' he's got a fair start, boss, 'deed he done'. Here and There.

"Did I understand ye to read that there was up'ards o' 240,000 folks at that Chicago show in one day, Ezry?" inquired Uncle Tobias Slocum of his son.

"Them was the figgers," responded Ezra solemnly.

"An there wa'n't no crowd, even then?" asked Uncle Tobias, after a pause.

"No crowd anywher's," said Ezra.

There was a long silence, broken only by the fluttering of the newspaper in Ezra's hand as the breeze flew in at the window.

"Well," said Uncle Tobias at last, "I ain't prepared to doubt the papers, an I know they've got a powerful lot o' land set apart for that show, but it does appear to me that if I'd ben on hand along with them 240,000 folks I sh'd have calculated that there'd be here an there a man!"—Youth's Companion.

A PHILOSOPHER.

A Case Where Words Were Entirely Out of Place.

Robert Grant, in Scribner's Magazine, defines by an incident what he calls a "thoroughgoing, square trotting philosopher." This is his illustration, necessarily shortened. Possibly lovers of fishing will agree that not even the most unmerciful curtailing could deprive it of force:

I remember taking little Fred, my eldest son, to skate with me one winter's afternoon on a suburban pond. He did famously for a tyro, but we both wearied at last of his everlasting strife to maintain the perpendicular, and I was conscious of a rush of joy when he became completely absorbed in watching a man who was fishing for pickerel through a hole in the ice.

"Caught anything?" asked he.

"Nop."

"Had a bite?"

"Nop."

"How long you been fishing?"

"An hour."

As I glided away lightheartedly on the delicious curves of the outer edge, I reflected that he was evidently a persevering pot hunter, who would not be easily discouraged, and that I could count upon his engrossing the attention of my offspring for a considerable period.

Accordingly I was surprised some five minutes later to observe the fisherman shambling across the pond toward the shore. A moment afterward I learned what had happened.

The horny handed pot hunter, having presently pulled a solitary pickerel out upon the ice and freed it from his hook, turned aside to cut another piece of bait, whereupon my hopeful picked up the fish and popped it back into its native element without so much as a syllable of commentary, and thereupon he of the horny hand, having realized the situation in its terrible entirety, pulled up his line, shoveled back the particles of ice into the hole and betook himself upon his shambling way without a word.

Not a word, mark you. The only alternative was child murder or silence, and my pot hunter chose the simplest form of the dilemma.

"I thought the fish would like it," said little Fred, when interrogated upon the subject.

Qualified.

It is rare tact that "gets all the best words" after a rebuff. Politicians need it. Colonel Stone of Tennessee on one occasion got the last word at least. When he was running for governor, he [illegible]

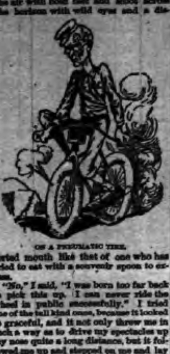
BILL THE BICYCLIST.

NYE'S EXPERIENCE OFF AND ON WITH A PNEUMATIC TIRE.

He Mows the Lawn in the Early Morning and Acquires a Tired Feeling—The Famous Ride of Riley and Reed—Nye's Latest Poem.

[Copyright, 1893, by Edgar W. Nye.]

For a long time I would not be argued into getting a bicycle, for it is not suited to my time of life. It is not dignified for a man who has chatted with crowned heads to hump his back and claw into the air with both feet and scoot across the horizon with wild eyes and a distorted mouth like that of one who has tried to eat with a souvenir spoon to excess.



ON A PNEUMATIC TIRE.

"No," I said, "I was born too far back to pick this up. I can never ride the wheel in public successfully." I tried one of the tall kind once, because it looked so graceful, and it not only threw me in such a way as to drive my spectacles up my nose quite a long distance, but it followed me up and stepped on me and lay down on me and got one of its cold, hard treadles in the bosom of my bicycling jacket, where my lunch was.

But with a pneumatic tire and a low wheel there is less danger of shortening the spine and finding vertebræ in your shoes when you undress at night. The pneumatic tire is blown full of air, being a tight rubber tube encircling the wheel. Riding on air that way is great sport, especially to the witness. It is like running a lawn mower.

I have a large colored gent who exerts himself for me at a reasonable price, and I saw him from my study pushing the lawn mower one bright June morning till I could not stand it any longer. He pushed it from him as he would a watermelon, it was so easy. He kept singing something about like this:

Shell I be called when de great day come,
Or shell I hide my hade in shame?
Shell I jine de hosts dat wail and gum
'Cos Dennis is my Christian name?

And the green grass rolled like a fragrant cataract over the machine. I couldn't write because the sputter and buzz of that lawn mower and the hymn, or whatever it was, kept wooing me to the window, and I couldn't get two ideas together to save my reputation. Finally I gave up my job and went outside. It looked even easier out there than it did from the house.

"You may go down to the garden, Alcibiades," I said, "and weed the succotash pines awhile. I will finish mowing the lawn."

I took off my rich dressing gown and hung it up on the doghouse; took off my reversible cuffs and put them on the tail of a beautiful, ornamental iron dog which stands on the lawn, and started in.

But why go on? Every man with a soft muscle or two has tried these things to get up a glow. I did not do anything more or less than other men have done who need exercise and gorge themselves with it in an hour so that they can't bear the sight of it any more forever.

I mowed a place as big as this morning's paper, I think, a small rosebush and a rubber doll, when I began to see that the sun was rapidly removing the shade from the lawn and putting it over on the north side of the house.

I mowed down the old rusty arches of a forgotten croquet set and got mad eight times and started a tumor at the place where I rested the handle of the mower against my person. The hotter I got the less I knew. I aimed at first to just fool with the machine awhile and quit, but as I went on and overheated my judgment I mowed down a bed of mignonette and some tuberoses that were just beginning to bear.

I would have mowed down a trainload of fresh air fund children if they had come my way, but that's nothing. Anybody would do that if they had ever met a fresh air fund outfit alone on the road.

Well, that's the same way I rode the bicycle, only I concealed myself while practicing. Then I went at it on rainy days. It was in the barn. I enjoyed it some, though at times I knocked the rafters a little to one side with my head. I soon learned, too, to carry in one hand a heavy club with which to knock over the machine whenever it hopped on me while I was down.

Next I learned how to repair my wheel if the pneumatic tire got punctured and let the climate out. You carry a little kit of things, gum and things, also a plumber's furnace by a strap over your shoulder, with your vest pocket full of charcoal, and then when your pneumatic tire gets a hole in it and looks like a pink tight in the hands of the sheriff you get off the wheel at the roadside, and the children of the district school come and stand by your side while you fix it.

I am not of a mechanical turn of mind, and so I could not find the hole where the air had escaped when I broke down. When you puncture your tire, you blow into the valve, and then, if you look soon enough, you will deftly discover the air [illegible]

CASTORIA
for Infants and Children.

THIRTY years' observation of Castoria with the patronage of millions of persons, permit us to speak of it without guessing. It is unquestionably the best remedy for Infants and Children the world has ever known. It is harmless. Children like it. It gives them health. It will save their lives. In it Mothers have something which is absolutely safe and practically perfect as a child's medicine.

Castoria destroys Worms.
Castoria allays Feverishness.
Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd.
Castoria cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic.
Castoria relieves Teething Troubles.
Castoria cures Constipation and Flatulency.

Castoria neutralizes the effects of carbonic acid gas or poisonous air.
Castoria does not contain morphine, opium, or other narcotic property.
Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep.
Castoria is put up in one-size bottles only. It is not sold in bulk.
Don't allow any one to sell you anything else on the plea or promise that it is "just as good" and "will answer every purpose."

gaining speed as the grade seemed gently descending, till directly the Misses Trask began to giggle and look sort of apprehensively toward the front of the car. Mr. Reed looked, too, and discovered that there was no driver. Moreover, the mules were running away.

The pastor made about two strides of eight feet each and found himself at the dashboard of the car, the lines dragging along the track and the driver a mile back looking for his whip.

The Misses Trask screamed as the car now and then returned to the track with a cruel shock, and Mr. Riley, extending his head through a ventilator at the top of the car, exclaimed "Help! help!" twice in rapid succession.

Mr. Reed, holding his hat on with one hand, reached twice for the lines beneath the car, and twice the off mule most put the pastor's eye out with its impressionist tail. At last Mr. Reed succeeded, and scorning the brake he slapped the nigh mule across the person with the lines, and waving his broad hat in the air he cried:

"On, Atair! On, Rigel! What, Antares, dost thou linger now, good mule? Oho, Aldebaran! I hear them singing in the tents. I hear the children singing and the women singing of the stars, of Atair, Antares, Rigel, Aldebaran, victory, and the song will never end."

As the car passed the corner near where The Journal office was Mr. Riley again extended his head through a new place in the roof which he had made with his silk hat and ejaculated hurriedly: "Help! Help! Help! Will no one derail the car and save us?"

But his cry was drowned by the roar of the car and the remarks of Mr. Reed as he slapped the off mule with his slouch hat and exclaimed:

"Well done! Home tomorrow under the black tent—house! On, Antares! On, Aldebaran!"

It was a grand sight.

His Error.

The smart man was getting off a train, when he saw a couple ahead of him, who at once challenged his attention and indignation. The husband was walking off with his hands in his pockets, while the wife carried a baby and a large basket and valise.

This was too much for the smart man, and stepping up to the overloaded woman he said:

"Let me assist you, madam," and seizing the basket and valise he ran after the husband, whom he grabbed without ceremony.

"Here, sir, carry these things for your wife. I should think you would be ashamed to call yourself a man and permit your wife to bear all the burdens in this way. Let this be a lesson to you, sir, to"——

"Hello," interrupted the stranger indignantly, "she ain't my wife! I never saw the woman in my life till now."

At the same time the woman was shrieking at the top of her voice, "Stop thief." And it took the smart man's utmost eloquence to convince the depot policeman that he was not a sneak thief instead of a self appointed reformer of other people's morals and manners.—Detroit Free Press.

Fun at the Table.

A man read in a paper that the family table should always be the scene of laughter and merriment and that no meal should be passed in the moody silence that so often characterizes those occasions. The idea struck him so favorably that when his family was gathered around the table that evening he said:

"Now, this sort of thing of keeping so mum at meals has got to stop. You hear me? You girls pitch in an tell stories an keep up some agreeable sort of talk, an you boys laugh an be jolly, or I'll take an dust your jackets with a stick till you can't stand. Now, begin."

JULIAN SCOTT IN THE SNAKE DANCE.

THE PLAINFIELD ARTIST FRISKED WITH LIVING REPTILES.

Fearful Experience Among the Pueblo Indians—Invocations for a Rainfall—Smeared with Paint and Grease, the Savages Marched in Circles, with Rattlesnakes in Their Mouths, Initiating the White Man Into the Antelope Lodge.

These columns a few days ago recorded briefly the return of Julian Scott from the wilds of Arizona, where he fraternized with the Indians, and since then the artist's friends have been regaled with lively tales of the sights he saw and the snakes he met.

Mr. Scott may well talk familiarly of the thrilling ceremonies, for while in the Pueblo of Wal-pi he joined the Antelope Lodge, being taken into the society, and going through the necessary forms peculiar to their rites. Two other white men were initiated with him, Walter R. Fales, of Wrentham, Mass., and Artist Harvey Longren, of Cincinnati. Six have thus been honored, the other three being Dr. J. Webster Fewkes, A. M. Stephen, and the late J. G. Owens.

"Working the Antelope Degree"—relates the Colonel—"consists of songs and prayers to the snake deity, Balla-la-kong-wa, and the god of moisture. An altar is formed of different colored sands or pigments upon the south floor of the ke-va representing cloud forms, lightning and rain.

"Surrounding the altar are a large number of perpendicular sticks resting in small cones of clay. These sticks are from two to two and a half feet in height, bent at the top like a shepherd's crook, and attached to their ends are little feathers and bits of corn husks which symbolize prayer; the sticks are memorials of the departed priests of the Antelopes.

THE MESSENGER TO THE GODS.

"Interspersed among them are curious old ceremonial axes, spear heads and other stone implements that belonged to some of the departed ones, and which have been given to the altar as offerings for their descendants. There are three gates to the altar; one is guarded by the courier who, on the morning of the second day of the ceremonies, carries ba-hoos (prayer sticks) to all the remote watering places, beginning with those at the north and moving to the west, thence to the south and to the east, then back to the ke-va. The entire circuit is about twenty-four miles, and this ancient type of a messenger to the gods made it this year in less than three hours and a half. He ran all the way, stopping at the springs only to deposit the prayer plumes. He wore only a kilt of cotton cloth of Ho-pi manufacture, richly embroidered with symbols of rain, moccasins and a feather adopted by men of the Antelope order, at the crown of the head. A small ceremonial blanket served to carry the prayer plumes in.

"Before he left the ke-va the guardian of the opposite gate approached him and put honey on the soles of his feet, in the palms of his hands, on his back, breast, forehead and in his mouth. Sacred meal was then sprinkled upon him as he departed. This guardian, who thus prepared the messenger, is the altar-maker, and it is his duty, too, to keep the altar in order. The principal gate is held by the chief priest, who leads in prayer, song and the work of the lodge. The snake priest reports to him for all orders and communicates them back to his men in the snake ke-va.

"The messenger continues to carry to different watering places the emblematic prayer offerings for four days, contracting his circuit each day so that the final one is in connection with the pretty springs that skirt the mesa.

"At early dawn on the eighth and ninth days an interesting ceremony takes place in the Antelope ke-va. A boy typifies the snake god and a virgin the growing corn; the boy holds a snake in his hands, while the girl carries a bundle of unripe corn; the boy stands back of the courier; the girl in the rear of the principal priest. As the early morning light appeared these two young figures, in white robes, back in the dingy corners where they stood, the circle of men sitting upon the floor about the altar, chanting and making their invocations, presented a weird picture, more impressive from the pathetic side that these good people should feel so much time and ceremony was necessary to propitiate the water deity and thus gain his favor.

THE ANTELOPE DANCE.

"The Antelope dance was public, and was initiatory to the public exhibitions which closed the long prayer for water, and now one comes to the final and strangest part of all. Dr. Fewkes came through the narrow covered way from the ke-vas to the plaza; looking back frequently, he attracted all attention. Every voice was stilled.

"A few moments later the members of the order of the Antelope appeared in single file and marched over to the northeast end of the plaza and turning to the left passed in front of the 'snake house', which was made of fresh cottonwood boughs, and so on around the sacred rock they continued till every given point was passed four times. Then they took position at the right of the snake house, facing to the front, keeping up a continuous rattle with small round disks made of buckskin stretched over hoops of cottonwood and each containing a small number of beans or peas. These they held in their right hands, while in their left they carried ba-hoos made of eagle feathers. On the tops of their heads were tufts of yellowish brown and pink feathers; the front hair was banged, the side locks cut off at the shoulders, while the back hair or scalp locks fell flowing down their backs.

"The color of their faces was natural, except the lower part from the bottom of the nose back in a straight line to the lobe of the ear, painted a line of white, below which was metallic black to the neck. The arms, body and legs were of a grayish dirt color, while angular lines, representing lightning, were painted up the outside of the arms, over the shoulders, down over the breasts to the kilts and down the outside of the legs. Besides the white embroidered kilts of Hopi cotton they wore long sashes of the same material and similarly ornamented with rain emblems. Armlets and anklets confined small bundles of cottonwood twigs in full leaf, which added color as well as livelier composition to the otherwise exceedingly picturesque costumes. Earrings, bracelets and necklaces were of varied character of shell, silver and turquoise. Moccasins of a dull reddish color, heavily fringed at the top, completed the costumes of the Antelope, excepting that of the 'whimo' and the chief priest, Wee-Ki, a venerable and dignified looking man.

THE "WHIMO".

"The 'whimo' wore an exceedingly large wreath of cottonwood twigs that reached out in every direction; his armlets and anklets were called upon to hold more of the same kind of decoration than the rest. His appearance was [illegible] as well as grotesque. Over his right shoulder was suspended an old bow and quiver, and there was an anxious air about him when he made 'bloo' [illegible] with his 'whip' that made him as conspicuous as a drum-major.

"The chief priest wore no ornaments except the single snake feather of the Antelope order and a simple string of shell beads. In his left hand he carried the badge of his high office, which was a large ba-hoo. While standing in position at the right of the snake house, continuing their rattle, another sound broke upon the air; it was the fierce tread of the snake men, headed by their young chief Co-pe-le. Their approach was rapid and with each step of the right foot clashed the tortoise shell and sheep-toe rattles that were suspended at the knee. Their moccasins were patterned like those of the antelope, but were of a uniform reddish brown. Their lower legs and forearms were painted a grayish pink; their faces were painted from the upper lips to the eyebrows metallic black, which gave them a hideous look. Their kilts were of buckskin, painted around the centre, the emblem of the snake—a broad white zig-zag line on which were traced in black three black lines and two parallel alternating; a belt with long fringe hung at the right side.

"They wore armlets and anklets of cottonwood, some of them cut to represent lightning. Their hair was worn in the same style as that of the Antelope. In addition to a tuft of brown feathers at the top of the head there were suspended from the same point two or more long, straight eagle tail feathers, that hung down over the long black back locks of hair. Ornaments of shell, silver and turquoise, such as earrings, necklaces and bracelets, were worn according to fancy. All dance, except every third man, who carries a snake whip of eagle feathers and a long ba-hoo in the left hand. I forgot to mention that the actors of both orders all wore at the back, suspended at the waist, fox-skins.

"Moving along with the same measured tread, these men of the snake, describing an ellipse, passed the snake house and around the sacred rock four times. Each successive return to the snake house each man in turn would stamp with all his might upon a thick plank that was sunk into the rock on level with the surface of the mesa. At the conclusion of their marching they halted, and facing the snake house they began a low, dismal chant, increasing in volume as they proceeded, the sound resembling much that of great wind. The clattering of the tortoise-shell rattles and the disk ones of antelope conveyed the idea of driving rain. At the close of the chant the priests met at the snake house and prayed, sprinkling sacred meal around them.

A HORRIBLE CEREMONY.

"The snake men marched again around the plaza, and as they came to the snake house every third man reached in and took out a snake, some of them two; these they placed in their mouths, with the heads of the snakes to the right, closed their eyes, raised their forearms slightly and allowed their hands to dangle as if helpless. Then the first attendants placed themselves upon the right side of the carriers and extended their left hands over to the left shoulders of the carriers, in which position they continued the dance side by side, the attendants carefully watching the temper and movements of the snakes, which they seemed to control with the 'snake whip.' The second attendant followed behind to gather up any fugitive that might escape from the jaws of its captor.

"Round and round the ellipse these grim and now diabolical actors continued their hazardous and fearful dance. Some of the snakes, large rattlers and small ones, freed themselves, causing consternation among the bystanders and no end of amusement for those who occupied comparatively safe places. All, however, were skillfully gathered up. During this devilish dance one of the priests made a large circle of sacred meal near the sacred rock, and at a given signal all the reptiles were thrown within it, and then a general rush was made by the actors to gather them up, a work performed in a remarkable short space of time, something less than a minute, when they disappeared off the mesa, going to the north, west, south and east, each man carrying all that both hands could hold and depositing his 'younger brothers', as the Indians affectionately term them, among the rocks and sands in the desert below, whence they came.

"The Antelopes then moved away to their ke-va, and thus closed the most unique and thrilling performance I have ever known.

"It began raining on the day of the Antelope dance, and continued several days. When the snake men returned to the mesa they gathered beyond the houses on the west side, close to the edge of the cliffs, where the women had taken ollas of a violent emetic, prepared by the snake priestess. This is a cleansing process, and ended the ceremonies."

THE MUTUAL BOOK CO. SPEAKS UP.

It Replies to Charles H. Hand, and Defends Its Female Agent.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—We received a copy of your paper a few days ago which bears date of August 31, and contains a statement purporting to have been made by Charles Hand and family of your city. After reading it over, we feel justified in introducing ourselves through the columns of your generous and worthy paper. The young lady who appointed Miss Hand to act for our firm is one of the managers, and did not misrepresent when she claimed to be. She is a very trustworthy and bright young lady, and we are here to protect her. We wrote Miss Hand soon after receiving the notice of appointment, and also sent a reply to Mr. Hand's letter. Contrary to Mr. Hand's thoughts, we are here in business, and it has always been our aim to do all that should be expected of any honorable firm.

Thanking you for the publication of this brief letter, we remain,

Very respectfully,

Lawyer Stover's Story.

Lawyer Rowland M. Stover states to The Press that the claim of R. Howell Holmes against him for $1,[illegible] as told in Thursday's Press, is not a legitimate one, but was prompted by the plaintiff's knowledge that Stover had just come into possession of a considerable amount of money, from the publication of his law volume. The case, Mr. Stover says, will never be tried, as the plaintiff knows he would be beaten in court.

WOUND UP IN A FREE FIGHT.

DISGRACEFUL DOINGS AT THE NEGRO CAKE WALK.

Young White Gem'men Awarded the Pedestrian Pastry, and When the Trouble Began by a Gent Slapping His Ladifren's Face.

The cake walk in T. A. B. Hall, conducted by the Etna Cycling Club (Colored), was attended by nearly 400 people. The music was orchestral. The costumes, especially their colors, were striking.

The walk for the gold-headed cane and silver cup was delayed an hour, till 11. At that hour, President Frederick Mitchell ordered the promenaders to get ready. Twenty pairs competed. As they made the circuit of the room, the favorites were loudly cheered. Leander Brown and lady attracted special attention. David Martin and lady wheeled corners like soldiers on dress parade. Joseph Mitchell and lady walked artistically.

The judges, Messrs. Cox, Nate Titsworth, Irving West, Richard Williams and Wm. Runyon, ruled out pair after pair, and announced Joseph Mitchell and Miss Jennie Vail the winners.

Dancing followed the walk, and in the height of the festivities someone slapped his partner's face. Eye-witnesses say the slapper was John Venable, and the slappee Etta Washington. Fights thereupon started up in various sections of the hall, and were kept up both inside and outside the building. A blue-eyed white man leaped through a window and fled for his life.

Women as well as men were concerned in the row.

Policeman Schlemer was sent to T. A. B. hall after the performance in Music Hall, but it is claimed he did nothing to quell the disorder.

The president of the club said this morning that he asked another officer that was present to arrest a certain man, and that he replied "Let them fight!"

Chief Grant will look into the matter and find out who was to blame, and whether the officers performed their duty.

Although the club officers claim none of the club members fought, many of them take the disgrace of the affair deeply to heart and will resign from the club and strive to disband Tuesday night.

The officers of the club are:

President—Frederick Mitchell.
Vice-president—George Henry.
Recording Secretary—Wm. Kline.
Financial Secretary—Geo. Randolph.
Treasurer—Wm. Randolph.

PEACHES BY THE LAKE.

Delightful Evening's Enjoyment Provided by Trinity Young People.

The peach festival given for the benefit of the Sunday-school fund of Trinity Reformed church on Friday passed off happily, and was a social and financial success. The front of the Lake House was decorated with Chinese lanterns. The pavilion was crowded with members and friends of the church. Luscious peaches and other fruits, Tier's celebrated candies and cream, and home-made cake, were served in abundance.

The young people are grateful to Mr. Tier and his family for their assistance and for the free use which they gave of the Lake House and pavilion.

Miss Mabel Wilson acted as general superintendent, being here, there and everywhere, and making everyone feel at ease. Miss Lizzie Dunn received the cash, and the Misses Grace and Minnie Berg, Nellie Crawford, Lizzie Bogert, Olive Wikoff and Cora Gardner were waitresses.

At the fruit and candy table were Miss Carrie Mohl and Miss Mamie Berg, and the cake table was presided over by Miss Ella Gardner and Miss Helen Bogert.

An East Front street woman as a gypsy created much merriment and sold numberless bags of popcorn. Frank and George Reynolds assisted materially.

THEIR ANNIVERSARY SOON.

How the Red Men Are Getting Ahead and Capturing Palefaces in Plainfield.

At the regular meeting of Miantonomah Tribe, No. 118, Improved Order of Red Men, held in their wigwam last evening, the Chief's Degree was conferred on five hunters, and several palefaces made application for membership. Representative to the Great Council of the United States, Norman C. Magee, gave a glowing account of the session of the Great Council held in Iowa.

The committee in whose charge has been left the arrangement of the anniversary, which takes place October 6, are sparing no pains to make it one of the events of the season.

On next Friday's sleep eight palefaces will be instructed in the mysteries of the Red Men, and the original and unique war dance will be executed.

District Deputy Great Sachem Andrew J. Stiglitz is untiring in his efforts to advance the interests of the order at large, and his district bids fair to be the banner district of the State.

City Ordinance Cleverly Evaded.

Policeman McCue on Saturday arrested George Green for peddling without a license. In court Green produced a paper signed by one John Goff and authorizing Green to act as his agent.

As Goff holds a license, Judge Coddington could do nothing but discharge the prisoner, although it seemed evident that Green was carrying on the business for himself. It is a case which the City Ordinance does not touch; and Green and Goff, it seems, were clever enough to know this.

NOVEL AND INTERESTING HARVEST HOME FESTIVAL.

Pastors Richards, Herring and Alexander, and Visiting Clergyman Byrd, Tell of the Fruits of the Soil—Fruits and Vegetables from Eve's Cherry Up to Date.

The Harvest Home festival given in Bethel chapel, Thursday, under the management of the women of the congregation, proved a unique affair and an enjoyable one to the large number who were present.

The pretty chapel was filled before 8, when the Rev. W. R. Richards, D. D., the Rev. Charles E. Herring and W. A. Byrd, the speakers of the evening, went forward with the pastor, the Rev. William A. Alexander, and took seats upon the platform.

The pulpit platform was a pretty representation of the harvest season. The pulpit furniture, with the exception of the few chairs occupied by the speakers, had been removed; and the platform was piled high with the products of the soil. On the left as one faced the platform stood sheaves of ripened grain, which were to furnish the subject for one of the speeches. At the other end of the platform were autumn leaves, tastefully arranged in the form of a large basket. The leaves were the subject of the Rev. Charles E. Herring's remarks.

Between the grain and the leaves, with a little open space at each side, stood a mound, fully eight feet in height, composed at its base of all varieties of fruits and vegetables, and rising at the top into a pyramid of flowers, topped with a bunch of goldenrod. The fruits were the subject of the Rev. Dr. Richards's talk.

The Rev. W. A. Alexander, the pastor, presided. After a selection was sung by the choir of thirty voices, W. A. Byrd gave an interesting address on "Grain". The speaker showed how largely the prosperity of the country is based upon the product of its grain fields, and how essential grain is to human life. He then likened the Christian life in its usefulness to the grain, and drew a comparison between the gathering of the wheat by man, and the gathering in at the last great harvest, when the wheat and the chaff should be separated, and the Lord of heaven and earth should gather in His own.

At the close of Mr. Byrd's remarks, the choir sang, "Where are the Reapers?"

The Rev. Dr. Richards, of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, which is the founder of the chapel, then spoke about "Fruits". While admitting the greater utility of grain, he defended the fruit because God had made it, as he had also made the grain. He had made it for a more delicate purpose, to give pleasure after the more necessities of the appetite were satisfied. From this he drew the lesson that God wishes men to have enjoyment in life, and not merely to eke out an existence.

Everything of beauty, adapted to minister to our finer natures, God has given us to enjoy. Let us remember, however, the speaker continued, that God made not only beauty, but duty. Fruit, especially the clusters of the vine, had been perverted to a base use, and had been made a source of woe. It was fruit with which the serpent tempted Eve. The Hebrew text did not say explicitly that it was an apple; but simply that it was fruit. The speaker thought that it was a cherry with which Eve was tempted, because the cherry trees in his back yard had always been a strong temptation to his neighbors. The lesson that Dr. Richards drew from the fruit was that we should use, but not abuse, the things given us to derive pleasure from.

When Dr. Richards had finished speaking there was singing by the Misses Hattie Langford, Lulu Douglas, Mary Walley, and a quartette composed of the Misses Alice Woods, Ida Dunham, Susan Reasoner and Phyllis Holland.

The Rev. Charles E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church, then spoke on the subject of leaves. He said that they had left him "nothing but leaves" to talk about. Leaves, he thought should have been first on the programme, as they were the first to appear in Nature's process and were also most essential to the life of the tree. The leaf was small and insignificant but it made the fruit possible, did its particular work well; it also helped purify the atmosphere; and in all these characteristics it should typify the Christian life.

"Plainfield is not paradise,"—continued Mr. Herring—"and it needs the influence of everyday Christian living to purify the atmosphere. The leaves of the tree are for the healing of nations."

At the close of Mr. Herring's remarks he was applauded. The choir sang "Nothing but Leaves" and "Bringing in the Sheaves". At the close of each stanza in the latter hymn, while the refrain was being sung, six small children would march up the aisles and deposit sheaves and baskets of flowers and fruit on the platform. The effect of this was very pretty. At the close of this hymn the audience were invited to remain and partake of refreshments at the tables which the ladies had arranged in the little rooms at the sides of the main room. Cream and cake were freely disposed of, and for over an hour good cheer reigned in the large gathering.

The Committee of Arrangements were Mrs. A. Peters, Mrs. A. E. Walker, Mrs. Rebecca Voorhis, Mrs. L. Henry, Mrs. M. E. Brown and Miss E. Dorsey. Miss Cora Lane presided at the organ.

Deeply Deplore Their Loss.

At the regular meeting of Iona Council, No. 14, Degree of Pocahontas, held Sept. 20, the following resolutions were adopted:

WHEREAS, It has pleased the Almighty God in His all wise providence to remove from us by death our sister, Elizabeth [illegible], Therefore be it,

Resolved, That while we bow in humble submission to the will of Him who doeth all things well, we deeply deplore our loss and extend to the family of our deceased sister our sympathy in this their hour of affliction and

Resolved, That in our natural sorrow for the loss of a sister we find consolation in the belief that it was well for her for whom we mourn, and

Resolved, That this heartfelt testimonial of our sympathy and sorrow be forwarded to the family of our departed sister, by the Keeper of Records, and entered in full on our minutes.

THE MAN ON THE CARS.

HE CHATS OF THE ALLURING CIGARETTE GIRL.

Talks Just As If He Knew All About Her, and It Would Seem That He Likes Her, Too.

"It is very seldom that I ride in the smoker"—said The Man on the Cars the other evening when I had lured him into the tobacco car and given him a cigar.—"Not that I am averse to smoking—I love it; but one cannot regulate the quality of his neighbor's pipeful, and it is sometimes unendurable. Did you ever notice how the young men mostly run to either cigarettes or pipes—these are cheaper than cigars, I presume, but then the cigarette is a charmer anyhow, and the American product is to my mind everlastingly sweeter and better than the alleged Turkish and Egyptian affairs which some affect. I saw an item in a Sunday paper last week which said that actresses as a class were much addicted to cigarettes, and that most good people would be startled if they could know the number of little paper rolls that go up in smoke at our female colleges—Vassar, Wellesley, Smith, Bryn Mawr and the rest. But, as a matter of fact, one need not go to the actresses or the Seminaries for dainty smokers. Why, I have pretty good proof that a majority of the younger fair ones of Plainfield, while not all habitual 'fiends', at least have dallied to some extent with the fascinating smoke, and that when mamma is out and they are alone the fragrant little cigarette is often called upon for company and comfort; and, you know, there is a dash of diablerie about it that must appeal to every right-minded girl. How do they get the things? From their male friends as a rule: by stratagem, theft or begging. The favorite game is to ask a young man to give them a cigarette or two for an imaginary collection which they claim to be making of the gifts of friends. This never fails to work, and often wins a whole package—all but the photograph, of course.

"I know, however, of one or two cases when young women have deliberately requested a friend to buy the cigarettes for them, and trusted to his honor to keep the matter quiet. I suppose any young fellow in town could surprise you by naming a half-dozen cigarette girls if he would; but be it said to the credit of the boys that they are not likely to give it away; they enjoy it too much themselves; and besides, disclosure might go hard with the girls: although when you stop to consider, where's the harm? Cigarettes are perfectly safe, and in the Spanish countries they are a lady's right. Down in New England and through the South about every other old woman has either her pipe or her snuff, and as between these and our girls' preference it is not difficult to choose.

"A young man told me a nice story last week; and, not to abuse a confidence, you will pardon the omission of names. He said that he and another chap of his age were cycling along the Springfield road one fine day of late, when, passing one of those seductive retreats that line the highway and seem but made to loiter in, they dropped from their wheels, and, clambering up the grassy bank, filled their pipes and pushed through a small jungle of berry bushes, seeking a shaded spot whereon to lie and smoke and rest. Imagine their surprise when suddenly they came upon a pair of ladies' bicycles reposing beside a convenient tree; and beyond, reclining gracefully upon the yielding sward, two of the prettiest and demurest girls in all Plainfield, lazily puffing their little cigarettes, watching the misty smoke-rings wreath and twist and drift away, and dreaming of—no one knows what. I asked whom he supposed was the most surprised, and he said it seemed that the girls were. I shouldn't wonder.

"Well, here we are—five minutes late, too. Good-night—what's that? My story has rather shocked you? Oh, come now; you're not shocked; you're selfish! What's the use? Let the poor, dear girls have a little fun—we men don't want it all; do we?"

And he had me there.

WALLACE AGAIN LOCKED UP.

He's Suspected of Causing Another Scotch Plains Fire.

A large barn belonging to the estate of the late John Taylor Johnston, near Lowe's Hotel, Scotch Plains, was burned to the ground at 11:50 Thursday.

John Flynn, who had possession of the barn, had stored in it 100 shocks corn, and other farm products, which were destroyed. The fire is supposed to be of incendiary origin.

Lawrence Wallace, who has been suspected of starting fires at different times in the village, and who is under bonds for trial, was found lurking about the barn. He was arrested on a charge of being drunk and disorderly, and was sentenced by Justice Moore to 90 days in jail. Wallace was previously sentenced for 30 days for the same offense. The charges of incendiarism against him are being investigated.

Wallace spent the night in the Plainfield jail, and was taken to Elizabeth today.

SUPPLEMENTARY PROCEEDINGS.

Lawyer Hetfield Will Seek to Prove that Young Seguine Never Had Money to Buy the Property.

The case of Seguine vs. Fosher, to prove the right of certain property, came up before Justice Nash and a jury of six men Thursday afternoon at 2:30.

This is the second time an endeavor has been made to prove certain property in the possession of A. M. Seguine, Jr., to help the senior Seguine out of a financial hole. Walter L. Hetfield appeared for the defendant, and Winfield S. Angleman for the complainant.

Personal remarks by the lawyers made the trial a heated and spicy one. The jurors, Messrs. Garrett Smith, Amos Moffett, Nathan Laing, Loyd Fangborn, B. Fosgate and Mayer L-ichenstritt, gave verdict in favor of A. M. Seguine, Jr.

Mr. Hetfield will now apply to the Court of Common Pleas for an order granting him supplementary proceedings, so that he can disclose all of young Seguine's private affairs.

Bicycle Exposes in the Park.

A walk through Washington Park is quite amusing at times. Yesterday afternoon two charming school teachers were there learning to ride a safety. They were deeply in earnest, and gave evidence that they would master their untamed steed or die.

On the same street were some small boys hugely enjoying themselves. One was riding a safety to which was attached, by a rope, a small wagon, in which was a number of boys, whom the cyclist was giving a ride.

Messrs. Keys, Bergen, Beekman, Clark and "Ander" Lane all want the Democratic nomination for Senator in this county. Had Mayor William L. Saunders permitted his name to be presented, he could have received the nomination easily. He'd made a great Senator, too!

County Attorney James J. Meehan, of Somerville, that hustling young Democratic coming statesman, was visiting clients in the borough yesterday. Jimmy views the Senatorial question as do all Somervillians—none of them can ever see outside of Bridgewater township. He's for Alvah A. Clark for Senator, in whose office he pondered for hours over Blackstone, and of whom he is a great admirer and friend.

There are two ladies who reside in the borough, who, if they keep on practising, will some day be pedestriennes. While out for a stroll a few days ago one of the ladies suggested that they make a call on Mrs. Cornelius Taylor, who resides in Dunellen a few blocks from Taylor's Hotel; and her companion acquiesced. The ladies leisurely walked down West Front street, discussing the styles and such other innocent feminine gossip as women will do when together, when one of the ladies, while climbing Rocap's hill, exclaimed: "There! I left a pie baking in the oven in the kitchen when I left home, and forgot to take it out". Her companion laughed, and they trudged along down past Evona and the many fenceless places that abound between that village and Dunellen, and at last reached their destination. Mrs. Taylor was glad to see them, and entertained them nicely. The ladies told of their walk, and after a few pleasant hours of rest and recreation returned to their homes by train.

All Out But the Watchman.

It is announced that the Hall Signal Company, at Garwood, will shut down for an indefinite time Saturday and discharge all employes except the watchman. The Constitutionalist.

A. L. Force, Publisher & Proprietor.

The Federal election laws which the Democrats desire to have repealed ought to be undoubtedly blotted out, but it is questionable whether it is good policy to bring up this issue while the great and financial question is still unsettled. Nothing should be done that will complicate the situation or afford excuses and opportunities for coalitions and combinations that might jeopardize the all-important measure which is pending in the Senate.

Nearly $17,000,000 have been paid in bounties to sugar-growers, under the outrageous McKinley law, up to September 1. This is direct robbery of the people, as the bounties collected by tariff-protected manufacturers are indirect robbery. There is absolutely no more right or justice in taxing the people to pay bounties to the growers of sugar than there would be in paying bounties to the growers of potatoes, corn or cabbages. This is one big leak in the revenues which the Democrats will stop as soon as they can get at it.

The debate in the United States Senate is of interest to nobody but the speakers. The public have had a surfeit of it, and awaits the continuous session which must ultimately break down obstruction and bring about a vote on unconditional REPEAL. The expedient of a continuous session, with its consequences of physical exhaustion for the minority, is the accepted method and has usually worked well. Some Senators are speaking only for "buncombe." They will be glad to be coerced after a becoming amount of resistance.

The Montreal Gazette remarks: "Business is rapidly recovering in Australia, which a few months ago passed through a crisis as sharp fully as that which the United States is now experiencing. An English-speaking people has to bend before the wind of disaster sometimes, but the elasticity in its nature brings it upright again as quickly as it swayed in the first place. In a few months the evil of the crisis in the United States will also be a thing to talk about only." The fact noted above shows how intimately the financial world is joined in its myriad parts.

SOMERSET DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION.

The Somerset County Democratic Convention will meet in the Court House, in Somerville, Monday, October 16, 1893, at 10 a. m., for the purpose of nominating candidates for Senator, Member of Assembly and Coroners, and the transaction of such other business as may properly come before it.

Each township is entitled to five delegates, and they will be selected by the Democratic voters of the respective townships Saturday, October 14, at 2 p. m., (excepting North Plainfield, where the primary will be held Friday, October 13, at 8 p. m.).

HONEST JAMES.

The New Brunswick Home News says: James E. Martine, the farmer orator of Plainfield, is likely to get the Democratic nomination for Senator from Union county. He was defeated for the Congressional nomination by John T. Dunn, but turned in and helped his successful competitor. His views on the race-track legislation of last winter should be known before he is nominated.

Whatever is right, whatever is manly, whatever is honest and true: that is James Martine. And his views on the race-track question are the views of every good and upright citizen.

CENTRAL JERSEY BOWLING LEAGUE

Park Club Joins Fanwood, Westfield and Other Towns, for Good Sport's Sake.

A meeting was held last night at the Westfield Athletic Club, of eight bowling clubs situated along the Central Railroad. A league was formed called the Central New Jersey Bowling League, composed of the following:

- Bayonne Bowling and Athletic Club.
- Newark Bay Club.
- Elizabeth Athletic Club.
- Roseville Casino Club.
- Westfield Club.
- New Jersey Athletic Club.
- Watchung Club.
- Park Club.

The officers named were:

President—E. J. Whitehead, Westfield Athletic Club.

Vice-President—J. C. Smith, New Jersey Athletic Club.

Secretary and Treasurer—J. P. Stevens, Watchung Club.

Eight clubs will constitute the limit of membership. Bowling will commence the first week in November.

Eighty Years Old and a Thief.

[From The Elizabeth Herald.]

WESTFIELD, Sept. 25.—Robert Hudspeth, of Branch Mills, the octogenarian chicken thief who has only been out of jail seven days, is in trouble again. Complaint was made against him Saturday by one of his neighbors, upon whose poultry he has been making inroads since his release from jail. Efforts will be made to have the old man taken care of by the authorities, as he has no means of support and depends for a living upon what he can steal.

Exposed When One Robbed the Other.

John F. Collins, of Scotch Plains, and Ernest Jennings Greene, the alleged dishonest cashier and bookkeeper of Reinhard, Siedenberg & Co., cotton brokers, of 75 Cotton Exchange building, New York, were held at the Tombs yesterday for examination this afternoon.

The discovery of the thefts is said to have come about in this way: Collins placed the last $500 which he stole in the firm's safe. Greene found the money there and stole it. Collins reported the disappearance of the money to his employers, who notified Inspector McLaughlin. While the Inspector's detectives were working up the case Greene went to Collins and told him that he had taken the money. Then each explained to the other that he had been robbing the firm. It was then too late to stop the police investigation, and exposure followed.

—See advertisement in this issue, auction sale of horses, carriages, stages, harness, &c., at Scotch Plains on Monday next at 12 o'clock. The stage route between Plainfield and Scotch Plains will be sold at same hour and place.

DISTRESSING ACCIDENT.

DELUGED WITH MOLTEN SOLDER.

William Wright's Three-Year-Old Son Severely Burned About the Face—A Sad Occurrence, Purely Accidental.

Mrs. William Wright, of 722 West Front street, was walking on West Front street at 4:30 Tuesday afternoon, with her three-year-old son. The little fellow stopped to look at some lithographs in front of Stillman Music Hall. A workman was near mending the iron railing in front of Powlison & Jones's store. As the child turned from the pictures, he brushed against the arm of the workman, who had in his hand a ladle of molten solder, which he had melted on a small hand furnace, and was about to pour into a cavity in the railing. The hot metal was dashed into the child's face, making deep burns on the right cheek, and about the forehead and eyes, and taking off the skin. He was carried into a nearby drug store and Dr. J. B. Probasco was summoned and dressed the wounds. The child was taken home in a carriage, suffering severe pain from his burns.

IS MAKING REPARATION.

John F. Collins, the Scotch Plains Defaulter, Is Doing His Best to Pay Up, Says Lawyer Friend, Who Ought to Know.

Emanuel M. Friend, of the law firm of Friend & House, World Building, New York, attorneys for Reinhard, Seidenberg & Co., whom John F. Collins, of Scotch Plains, robbed of over $40,000, as told in yesterday's Press, was in Plainfield today on business connected with the case.

To a Press reporter who managed to get an interview with Mr. Friend the lawyer said: "I am glad to talk with the representative of a Plainfield newspaper about the case of Collins. As counsel of the firm whom Collins has robbed, I cannot be suspected of partiality to him and his family.

I desire to say, however, that Collins has acted in a most creditable manner since his defalcation became known, and both he and his good wife are doing all in their power to make reparation to those he has robbed.

"Collins bought a line of stages for his father, and this interest is to be sold at auction next Monday, together with all the property connected with the interest. This is done to help repay my clients.

"Nothing has yet been said by the newspapers of this aspect of the case, and I think the creditable action of young Collins and all his family should be made known."

The lawyer returned to New York this afternoon.

THE MELOPOIA WILL SING.

But Only Two Concerts Will Be Given, and Subscribers Will Get Four Seats for $12.

The Executive Committee of the Melopoia announce that, to meet the wishes of a number of the members of the Society, a change has been in the plans for the approaching season.

Two concerts, instead of three, will be given; and the subscription price, entitling the subscriber to four seats at each concert, will be twelve dollars. The chorus will continue to be under the direction of Wm. B. Chapman.

The concerts will take place at dates to be announced hereafter, and at each of them the society will be assisted by artists of high reputation, who have not been heard in Plainfield.

One of the Fair's Astonishers.

An amusing incident is related of Calverley, the man who has astonished the world by walking across Niagara Falls on a three-quarter-inch cable.

During the week's engagement at the Falls, general arrangements were made whereby the hero of Niagara carried a man across the water on his back. The first journey was made in capital style, both Calverley and his jockey appearing to enjoy the trip, and the spectators shouted themselves hoarse.

But when the end of the wire had been reached a difficulty presented itself which had been overlooked.

Reaching the landing stage, Calverley unbuckled his harness and threw the apparatus to the ground, and then for the first time came the question: How was the jockey to reach the ground, one hundred feet below? There were no steps to the pole, nor were there any means by which the jockey could descend.

The two men looked at one another a moment in blank dismay, and then Calverley laughed till the pole against which the two men were standing shook violently.

The spectators wondered what would happen, and Manager Jackson was getting fidgety, when Calverley struck an idea, the carrying into execution of which produced for the first time a high-wire feat the like of which had never previously been witnessed, and which must rank among the most famous of Calverley's performances.

"All right, Colonel"—he called to his manager, and then, telling his jockey to place his hands on his shoulders and follow him across the wire, stepping only when he stepped, he started. At first the jockey displayed a little nervousness, but after a few steps he recovered his composure, and the pair proceeded slowly across the wire amid the breathless silence of 20,000 spectators. Calverley displayed extraordinary balancing power, and all who saw the feat recorded it as the most wonderful on record.

Mr. Calverley will be one of the many special attractions at the Great Inter-State Fair, now being held at Trenton, and to remain open until September 29. He will give daily performances on a wire eighty feet high.

This Canadian Blondin is the greatest high-wire performer in the world.

The National Baby in Wax.

Talk about being up to date! The Eden Musee has just added to its wax groups a "lifelike" picture of Baby Esther, the newcomer in the White House. Baby Ruth for a long time occupied the pretty imported cradle which the Musee had designed especially for the group, but now the new National baby occupies it, and Baby Ruth stands in the background holding the hand of her proud father, while Mrs. Cleveland affectionately caresses the new infant. This wax group is much discussed by all the patrons of the Musee, particularly the women.

"The Lovely Meteor", a new illusion by Delprado, the famous Parisian, is now being produced nightly at the Musee, and is most astounding. It represents a lovely woman floating in midair.

The Girards, two famous dancers, are also included in the stage performances.

The Hungarian orchestra's concerts, every afternoon and evening, are brimful of charming and popular selections. A well-conducted buffet is attached to the Winter Garden. There is an afternoon and evening performance every day at the Musee.

AUTUMNAL BRIDAL.

GRACEFUL BEGINNING OF THE FALL CHURCH WEDDING SEASON.

Miss Hull and Dr. Baker Adopt the Vows to Cherish and Protect—Charming Match of Two Highly Popular Young People.

It was a pretty wedding that was solemnized in Grace church at high noon Tuesday, when, as these columns briefly stated, Dr. Vincent Washington Baker and Bessie, daughter of the late William L. Hull, were united in marriage by the Rev. E. M. Rodman.

Mrs. B. T. Barnes was organist. There were no bridesmaids. The bride wore white brocaded silk, trimmed with duchess lace.

Only relatives were invited to the wedding. Those present were Mrs. William L. Hull, mother of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Abram Baker and Miss Baker, of Asbury Park, the father, mother and sister of the groom; Dr. and Mrs. W. F. Gaston, of Plainfield; Mrs. Perot, of East Orange; Mrs. B. T. Barnes, of Plainfield; Mr. and Mrs. George Blauvelt, Miss Blauvelt, B. Blauvelt, Mrs. S. L. Conant, Miss M. B. Weeks, Miss Hoeesmann and Miss O'Neill, of New York; Miss Howard, Miss Mary Howard, Frank E. Howard, Mrs. Taylor Carpenter, and Miss Alice Carpenter, of Brooklyn.

After the wedding ceremony, the guests were driven to the home of the bride's mother, 22 Norwood avenue, where a wedding breakfast was spread. The company spent two hours most happily, showering good wishes on the bride and groom, who departed at 2 on their wedding trip, which will last three weeks. On their return Dr. and Mrs. Baker will reside for a time with the bride's mother, on Norwood avenue. Choice wedding gifts testified to the esteem in which the young people are held. They will be at at home after Nov. 1.

SLAUGHTERED A COW.

FARMER COLE'S ANIMAL FOUND DEAD IN THE PASTURE.

An Unknown Man, who Must Have Been Desperate Through Hunger, Slew the Cow and Cut Off a Hind Quarter—The Deed Was Committed Last Night.

Louis Cole is a farmer, living on Front street, near Terill road, Scotch Plains. Today he and the neighbors are wondering who the man is that slaughtered one of his cows last night and cut from the carcass a hind quarter of beef.

Mr. Cole has charge of the place on Front street near Terrill road belonging to Franklin Wylie, of New York; and during the summer he has pastured his three cows in the field behind the Wylie house.

The cows are generally left in the pasture over night, secured by long chains, which allows them considerable freedom.

One of Cole's farm hands, who with his family occupies the Wylie house, going into the pasture at six this morning, found one of the cows bound closely to a tree, slaughtered. In the throat of the animal were three ugly gashes. One of the hind quarters had been cut off and carried away. Tracks resembling those of a wheelbarrow were found in the field.

James Heath, a butcher, who dressed the meat this morning, said that the slaughtering of the animal was the work of an experienced person. No butcher working in daylight could have done a neater job.

Great interest in the affair is manifested by the people of the village. Crowds came and went in the field throughout the morning. Great indignation is expressed against the man who did the deed. It is thought that he must have been desperate through hunger.

The Plainfield police are at work on the case.

MRS. TOMLINSON STILL REIGNS.

The Union County Union Can't Find a Better President.

The ninth annual convention of the Union County W. C. T. U. was held yesterday in the Park M. E. church, Elizabeth.

President Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, of Plainfield, presided. A large number of delegates attended from Rahway, Cranford, Roselle, Dunellen, Westfield and Plainfield, besides members from the Elizabeth unions.

The Rev. Mr. Hutchinson, in an address, said in part:

"Formerly I have been associated with and helped to formulate and carry out plans for Sunday-school conventions, and I have the opinion that a welcome speech of very few words was quite as much appreciated and understood as a long drawn out one." He drew the picture of a boy coming back to his old homestead. His mother didn't recite in a thirty-minute address her joy and welcome, but all through the day he knew they were glad of his coming. And so he hoped the delegates would know all through the day the welcome expressed and felt. The Park M. E. church, its pastor and members, were glad of their coming.

Mrs. Baker, president of the Elizabeth Union, also welcomed those present.

In the absence of the recording secretary, Miss Starr of Westfield was appointed.

The corresponding secretary's report showed the membership of the County Union to be 490. Thirty-eight new members had come in during the year, and forty-three honorary members. It requires a membership of 500 in each county to send a delegate to National convention. A motion was made and carried that the corresponding secretary pay over the required assessment to make up the deficiency in membership, and hold Plainfield responsible for the balance of the membership.

The president's address was then read, followed by the treasurer's report.

In the evening Mrs. Henrietta Moore, of Ohio, made an address on "Personal Responsibility".

Mrs. M. J. Francis was appointed a delegate to National Convention, with Mrs. L. H. Noe alternate; both are from the Elizabeth Union.

The officers elected were:

President—Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson.
Corresponding Secretary—Miss C. B. Yates.
Recording Secretary—Mrs. D. D. Irving.
Treasurer—Mrs. L. H. Noe.

MISS C. B. YATES,
Press Superintendent.

A Scholarly Plainfield Author.

[From The M. E. Visitor.]

James R. Joy and family started on their vacation Thursday, Sept. 14. We take this opportunity of referring to Mr. Joy as an author. A gentleman in New York, a few days since, said: "I had a conversation with Dr. Wilkinson, who spoke on this wise: 'I have carefully studied every history of the English people from Hume to Green, and before or since; but I have never risen from the perusal of a history with higher esteem of the abilities of the author, or more pleasure from the mere exercise of reading than came to me from the reading of the history written by Mr. Joy.' Recently he has written for the Chautauqua Series a work entitled 'Rome and the Making of Modern Europe'. We have no hesitation in saying that it surpasses in grasp of thought and style of authorship any work he has yet produced."

This author, whose work is so highly spoken of, is one of our number, and we predict that in this case the prophet shall not be without honor in his own country.

Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union.

OFFICIAL.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Sept. 7, 1893.

Freeholder Moore moved to proceed to the election of county road [illegible], which was carried.

Freeholder Trahon nominated John E. S. Corbett. [illegible]

The Director appointed Freeholders Trahon and Roll as tellers.

On ballot John E. S. Corbett received thirteen votes. One blank.

The Director declared Mr. Corbett elected for the unexpired term until July 14, 1894.

The Director appointed, as the committee on bridge at [illegible], Freeholders Woodruff, Donahue and Vanderbeek.

The following bills, audited and approved, were read and on motion ordered paid;

[illegible]

Salary—A B Cook [illegible]

Incidental—A B Cook [illegible]

Freeholder Vanderbeek moved to adjourn, which was carried.

The director declared the board adjourned to Thursday, Sept. 14, 1893, at 2:30 p. m.

A. B. COOK, Clerk.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Sept. 14, 1893.

Adjourned meeting of the Board of Chosen Freeholders held on Thursday, Sept. 14, 1893.

Present—Director Sauer and Freeholders Badgeley, Donahue, Ehrlich, Hubbard, Howard, Halliday, Hunt, Kyte, Moore, Roll, Swain, Scudder, Trahon, Vanderbeek, Winans and Woodruff.

Absent—None.

The minutes of last meeting, except bills ordered paid, were read and on motion approved.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Patrick Faughnan:

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union county:

Gentlemen—I hereby respectfully withdraw my bid for paving Newark avenue. It would be impossible for me to accept bonds in payment for the same, and there seems to be no chance of my getting cash, which was the basis of my bid.

Very respectfully,
PATRICK FAUGHNAN.

On motion of Freeholder Trahon received, filed and withdrawal accepted.

From J. F. Shanley.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union county:

Gentlemen—If your Board sees fit to award me the contract for Edgar Road and Newark avenue, I will agree to take bonds for the same, and commence work at once. I mean the four per cent. bonds that you propose to issue.

Yours respectfully,
J. F. SHANLEY.

On motion of Freeholder Roll received and filed.

From Wm. Chamberlain.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union county:

Gentlemen—I will take county bonds at par for the work to be done on Springfield avenue as per my bid.

Yours respectfully,
WM. CHAMBERLAIN.

On motion of Freeholder Trahon received and filed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Report of committee on Filbert st. bridge, Roselle, Union township:

We have examined the old bridge and find it in a bad condition, and would recommend the building of a new bridge at a cost not to exceed $650. Signed, Noah Woodruff, John J. Donahue, A. Vanderbeek, Committee.

On motion of Freeholder Howard received, filed and recommendation adopted unanimously.

RESOLUTIONS.

By Freeholder Vanderbeek:

Resolved, That the bill of Loomis & Rice, amounting to $7, for bridge plank, be paid when properly signed and audited.

On motion of Freeholder Donahue adopted unanimously.

By Freeholder Hubbard:

Resolved, That the sum of $3,000 heretofore appropriated under the laws of 1886 for charity hospitals be appropriated as follows: $2,000 to the Elizabeth General Hospital, of Elizabeth, N. J., and the remaining one-third or $1,000 to the Muhlenberg Hospital, of Plainfield, N. J., and that the county collector be and is hereby authorized and directed to pay the above named sums to the respective treasurers of said institutions.

On motion of Freeholder Moore adopted unanimously.

By Freeholder Roll:

Resolved, That the contract for improving and macadamizing Springfield avenue, from Morris avenue, Springfield, to Essex county line, said Springfield avenue running through Springfield and Union townships, be awarded to Wm. Chamberlain, the lowest bidder on said avenue, and the Director be empowered to sign contract on the part of this Board.

Freeholder Howard moved to adopt.

Freeholder Winans offered the following as a substitute:

Resolved, That the contract for improving and macadamizing Newark avenue, from Broad street, Elizabeth, to the Essex county line, and the Edgar Shunpike, from Grove street, Elizabeth, to Stiles street, in Linden township, be awarded to John F. Shanley, upon his giving proper bonds and executing the contracts; and be it further

Resolved, That the Director of this Board be and is hereby authorized to execute the aforesaid contract on part of this Board.

Freeholder Hunt moved to amend by striking out the words Edgar Road, from Grove street, Elizabeth, to Stiles street, Linden township.

On roll call the amendment was adopted unanimously.

The substitute as amended was then adopted by a unanimous vote.

The original resolution of Freeholder Roll was then adopted by the following vote:

Ayes—Freeholders Badgeley, Ehrlich, Hubbard, Howard, Halliday, Hunt, Kyte, Roll, Swain, Scudder, Trahon, Vanderbeek, Woodruff—13.

Nays—Director Sauer and Freeholders Donahue, Moore and Winans—4.

By Freeholder Winans:

Resolved, That the contract for improving and macadamizing Edgar Road, from Grove street, Elizabeth, to Stiles street, Linden township, be awarded to John F. Shanley, upon his giving proper bonds and executing the contract; and be it further

Resolved, That the Director of this Board be and is hereby authorized to execute the aforesaid contract on the part of this Board.

Freeholder Moore moved to adopt.

Freeholder Roll offered the following substitute:

Whereas, Messrs. Hillpot & Ayres, of [illegible], have [illegible] the lowest bidders [illegible] of County Road known as the Morris avenue turnpike, in the township of Summit; and

Whereas, The said bidders have expressed their willingness to accept the contract, and to postpone the commencement of the work under it until such time as the Board of Freeholders has disposed of the bonds whose issue has heretofore been authorized; therefore be it

Resolved, That the contract for the Morris avenue turnpike road, in the township of Summit, be and it is hereby awarded to the said firm of Hillpot & Ayres; and be it further

Resolved, That the County attorney and Director of this Board be directed to prepare the said contract in such manner as will properly protect the interests of the county, by such stipulations concerning the time for commencing work as are necessary under the conditions existing.

On motion of Freeholder Trahon the substitute was adopted unanimously.

Freeholder Winans withdrew the original resolution.

The following communication was read:

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

Gentlemen—We, the subscribers, a majority of the directors of the Consolidated Traction Co., hereby petition your Honorable Body for a location of tracks of a street railroad on Newark avenue, in the city of Elizabeth, N. J., between North Broad street and the division line between the counties of Union and Essex.

Signed, Wm. F. Shanley, Wm. J. Conner, Thomas Pearson, J. B. Naughton, F. M. Stillman.

Freeholder Moore moved that Mr. Frank Bergen be heard on the above, which was carried.

Mr. Bergen made a statement of what the company wanted, and Freeholder Donahue offered the following resolution:

Whereas, Application having been made to this Board by a majority of the directors of the Consolidated Traction Co. for a location of tracks of a street railroad on Newark avenue, in the city of Elizabeth, N. J., between North Broad street and the division line between the counties of Union and Essex; therefore be it

Resolved, That the second day of October, 1893, at 2:30 o'clock, at the Court House, in the Freeholders' room, in the city of Elizabeth, be and the same is hereby fixed as the time and place when the same will be considered and for hearing all parties interested in said matter, and that notice of such hearing be published in the Elizabeth Daily Journal, Herald, Freie Presse and Leader, newspapers published and circulated in said city.

On motion of Freeholder Moore adopted.

Freeholder Hubbard moved that the communication from the company be received and filed, which was carried.

Freeholder Donahue moved that a committee of five be appointed to confer with the Traction Co., which was carried.

The Director appointed the following committee: Freeholders Donahue, Moore, Hubbard, Woodruff, Howard.

Freeholder Howard moved to reconsider the resolution granting contract for Morris avenue to Hillpot & Ayres, which was carried.

After changing the words County Attorney to read Clerk, and adding that the Director be empowered to sign contract on part of the Board, the resolution was on motion of Freeholder Donahue adopted unanimously.

Freeholder Howard moved to adjourn, which was carried.

The Director declared the Board adjourned to Monday, Oct. 2, 1893, at 2:30 p. m.

A. B. COOK, Clerk.

STOLE A ROOSTER.

That's the Charge to Be Made Against a Prominent Citizen.

One of the popular and most successful entertainments of the day is the mock court trial, given under the direction of an expert, Capt. A. V. Newton, manager of the Newton Entertainment Bureau of Worcester, Mass. Many of the cities and large towns in New England as well as in the Middle States have been greatly excited over it as attested by the lengthy and favorable reports in the newspapers, and by the great audiences that have packed the largest halls and opera-houses to the doors.

So great has been the interest that in many instances hundreds are said to have been turned away, unable to even obtain standing room.

It is a pleasure to announce that the mock court trial will be given in Stillman Music Hall, Monday evening, October 16, under the personal direction of its originator.

One of Plainfield's prominent citizens will be tried for the larceny of a Plymouth Rock rooster, and it is safe to predict that there will be fun by the score.

The entertainment is instructive, interesting and exciting as well as fun-provoking. All the rules of a regular court of justice will be observed.

STABBED IN SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

Boys Play Over a Rubber Ring and an Open Knife, with Serious Results.

[From The Elizabeth Herald.]

WESTFIELD, Sept. 25.—Yesterday morning at the Presbyterian Sunday-school Frank Warnicke was accidentally stabbed by Chauncey Smith during a playful tussle over a rubber ring. Young Smith was cutting the ring with his knife when Warnicke attempted to snatch it from his hand. Smith drew back and Warnicke sprang at him, and caught the knife in his hand. The blade penetrated Warnicke's breast two inches below the heart. A doctor was called at once, but the boy almost bled to death. He is not yet out of danger.

Change of Church Hours.

Beginning next Sunday the M. E. church makes a change in the time of services. The Sunday-school will meet at 2:30 p. m. instead of in the morning. The hours of public worship will be 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. [illegible]

RESOLUTIONS OF SYMPATHY.

The North Plainfield Board of Health Sustained a Great Loss in the Death of Robert T. Currie, Who Was a Member.

The North Plainfield Board of Health met Monday night at 59 Somerset street. The routine business was transacted, and Alfred Hankerson was granted a license to collect garbage in the borough.

The following resolutions on the death of the late Robert T. Currie, who was a member of the board, were adopted:

Resolved, That the Board of Health of North Plainfield learn with deep regret of the death of one of their number, Robert T. Currie, and desire to express their great appreciation of his faithfulness, his kindly spirit, his regular attendance at meetings, and his solicitude for the welfare of others.

Resolved, That this Board extends to the bereaved family its deep sympathy in this hour of their affliction and sorrow, and

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be furnished to the family and also to the city press.

TOWNSEND'S

Marble & Granite Works,

30 SOMERSET STREET,
PLAINFIELD, N. J.

If you have not engaged your work, I should be pleased to do it for you.

I buy only first-class Marble and Granite and do not sell unless at prices that will enable me to put up the work with credit to myself and justice to the purchaser.

I employ no agents and therefore am enabled to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customer, of the commission generally paid to agents.

I am under a very small expense in running my shop, myself and my son doing the larger portion of the work, and we personally attend to the setting of all work, and look upon business in this light, that Good Work and Good Material, at Fair Prices, is a standing advertisement for my Business, which will tend to build up trade, and I feel safe to warrant that no dealer can sell you the same work and same stock any cheaper than I can.

Hoping to be favored with your patronage, I am yours respectfully,

J. E. TOWNSEND,
Manager.

CITY DEPARTMENT.

Walter Irving Glenn, City Editor.

—Quinn & Co's representative will next be here Thursday, Oct. 12.

—John H. Tier & Son have closed their ice-cream pavilion for the season.

—The M. E. Junior League will begin its autumn meetings October 12, at 2:30 p. m.

—A Sunday-school social will be held in the chapel of the First Presbyterian church early in October.

—A. K. Thomas of West Seventh street has in his possession a healthy five-weeks-old kitten having only three legs.

—The case of Frank Linke against Wm. Sullivan, on contract, is set to come up in Justice Mosher's Court Monday, Oct. 2.

—The new stone dressing on Hillside avenue extends from Prospect avenue to Putnam avenue, a distance of 2,000 feet.

—The Crescents will play in Elizabeth next Saturday against the E. A. C's, the Plainfield players receiving their share of the receipts.

—For winning second place in the Labor Day footrace, Keenan wore home Saturday a stylish derby donated by Hallock & Davis.

—The music in the First Baptist church promises to be a feature this coming winter. Special music will probably be resumed in a short time.

—Several complaints have been heard of the inattention of some of the new conductors on the street cars, in not assisting elderly women off and on the cars.

—Chief Doane and Herbert Chamberlain spent all Saturday afternoon trimming trees through which the fire-alarm wires run, on Netherwood avenue, which caused many "grounds".

—Auction sale of stock and farming utensils on Stony Hill road, two and a-half miles northwest of Scotch Plains, on Thursday of next week, Oct. 5, at 10 a. m. See advertisement in another column.

—The Park Club has arranged a series of five games with the Roseville Athletic Club. The first will be rolled Oct. 12, in Roseville, and the second on the Park alleys Oct. 19. The teams will be of five men each.

—The members of the Coachman's Beneficial Association are expecting their State charter every day. The Association now numbers about 100 members, and there will be more applications at the next meeting.

—W. H. Miner's class for boys' voice culture will open next Tuesday. The class is nearly full, and applications should be made at once. Mr. Miner studied under G. Edwards Stubbs, organist and choirmaster of St. Agnes church, who has trained the finest boy choir in New York city.

—While Stoutenbergh & Co., the reliable clothiers, are paying wages as high as ever, they are enabled through the lower price of good cloth to produce clothing at a reduced figure. No man need go meanly clad, when he can get for $12 a suit, and for $10 an overcoat. That Stoutenburgh house is a wonder.

—An opportunity is again offered to the young men of Plainfield to join a class in short-hand at the Y. M. C. A. rooms. The Association would remind all young men that the advantages to be derived from the study of this art are inestimable and any who have the necessary foundation of a common school education and who are going to enter business or any of the professions or who want to improve their minds should seriously consider this opportunity that is so generously placed before them.

A GOOD PASTOR RESIGNS.

Dr. Parks of Scotch Plains Retires from the Active Ministry.

The Rev. Dr. Parks has resigned the pastorate of the Scotch Plains Baptist church, to take effect Jan. 1, 1894.

The church has voted an annual appropriation, in view of services rendered, and he will reside in his own recently completed house in the midst of the people he has served for eleven years.

A Daniel Come to Judgment.

The case of Ella Peterson, colored, against John Venable, colored, for alleged assault after the cake walk in T. A. B. Hall, last Thursday night, was tried Saturday at 2 before Justice Nash. Several witnesses swore that Venable had only struck one blow, which was directed at Lew. Peterson, the woman's husband, in retaliation for a blow received from Peterson. The Justice did not think that Peterson and his wife could both be struck in the face and one of them knocked down, with only one blow, and consequently he dismissed the case.

He'll Bring Back a Bride.

Max Wiertz, the popular steward of the Union County Country Club, sailed Saturday on the good ship Fuerst Bismarck, for his old home in Brussels. Mr. Wiertz will marry an accomplished lady of the country, whose mother conducts the Hotel de Universe at Brussels and another large hotel at Antwerp, both of them known the world over to tourists. After a bridal tour of a few weeks on the Continent, the newly-wedded couple will return to this city about the middle of November.

Worse Than Keeping School.

(From The New Brunswick Home News.)

Managing a newspaper is worse than keeping school, for the editor has more to do with human nature than the school teacher, and human nature has more contradictions in it than a leopard has spots on his overcoat. What may tickle the fancy of one man is likely to exasperate the temper of another. To write about matters which concern the interests of a good many people is to find out that some are highly pleased with what the editor says, while the very same thing will make others so mad they would like to get their hands on him just for once. We caution everybody against envying a newspaper editor and wishing they were in his place. There are times when the editor would be willing to make a brief exchange with somebody else, and that is when an irate stranger with fire in his eye and a heavy bludgeon in his hand darkens the door of the sanctum and inquires if the editor is in. Then a temporary exchange would be convenient. The hod carrier whose back aches after climbing up and down a six-story building all day, and who contemplates a change of business for the sake of relieving his weary limbs, we would advise him to avoid choosing the management of a newspaper, for if he should be so unfortunate as to make such a choice, he will find out that he'll not only have the backache, but the headache and heartache to keep company with it.

Here's Juvenile Enterprise.

Louise Fisher, Bertha Fisher, Lizzie Denckiau and Frank Denckiau gave a fair at 323 East Front street Saturday afternoon and evening. Many useful things were on sale in the parlors. Last year's "late visitor" was again on hand and purchased liberally. The proceeds of the fair amounted to the handsome sum of $33.45, and will go to the Sunday-school fund of Trinity Reformed church.

NO TAFFY FOR THE DOCTOR.

BUT GOOD, SQUARE, HONEST, AND DESERVED EULOGIUM.

Dr. Hurlbut's Church People Can't Bear to Think of His Leaving Town, and Are Planning to Give Him a Royal Send-off.

The removal of the Rev. Dr. Jesse Lyman Hurlbut from Plainfield is a matter of sincere sorrow to all Plainfield. He will be especially missed from his church, and as a parting testimonial of the sentiment of the congregation the Ladies' Aid Society of the First M. E. church is arranging for a farewell reception to the Doctor and his family. This will take place Friday evening, Oct. 6, and will be in connection with and a feature of the home-coming sociable planned for that date. By that time nearly all of the vacation wanderings will be at an end, and Pastor Barnes hopes for a general rally of the home-comers, as well as the stay-at-homes.

In his September issue of his sprightly church paper, The Visitor, Dr. Barnes writes:

Rev. J. L. Hurlbut, D. D.—It is with no ordinary regret that we contemplate the removal of Dr. Hurlbut, from this city to New York. In the spring of 1884, Dr. Hurlbut became pastor of our church, having declined an invitation the year previous, thinking it his duty to remain at Trinity, Staten Island. While pastor here, he came into close relations with Dr. (now Bishop) Vincent, and became more closely identified with Sunday-school work than ever before. In 1877 he left Plainfield to become pastor in Hoboken, but in the Spring of 1879 was induced by Dr. Vincent to give up the pastorate and devote himself to Sunday-school work with him.

He then took up his residence here, and has lived in Plainfield ever since. Dr. Hurlbut has been deeply interested in our church, and has contributed by counsel and labor to its welfare. In him the pastors have always found a friend and co-laborer. His prominent position before the denomination did not make him any the less approachable and willing to lend his aid to the local church. Both himself and Mrs. Hurlbut have been valuable teachers in the Sunday-school.

While greatly attached to Methodism, Dr. Hurlbut is a true churchman, delighting in the welfare of all Christian organizations. He was welcome to any of the pulpits of the city, and endeared himself to members of all denominations.

The Doctor was a member of the Board of Education from 1883 to 1888, and Superintendent of Schools from 1888 to 1892.

Scholarly by nature and training, kind in heart and deed, Dr. Hurlbut attracted to him very many of his townspeople, who consider his removal a personal loss. Were The Visitor an autocrat, it would seriously consider an edict forbidding his removal, but being ordinary folk it is compelled to acquiesce. We can enjoy a sweet revenge, however, and wish the Doctor and his family prosperity in their new home. When they weary of the confinement of city walls, and long again for nearer communion with Nature, that dear mother of all, Plainfield will forgive the prodigals, and welcome them again with the old love and friendship.

P. S.—This is neither Taffy nor Epitaphy.

William J. Green, of Central avenue, is at Chimney Rock.

Miss Kittie Conde, of Stamford, Conn., is visiting the Misses Carney, in West Third street.

Mrs. V. Burton Hart, of 221 Watchung avenue, is at 203 West Seventy-eighth street, New York.

Miss Lena Schroder, of Maspeth, Long Island, has returned to her home, accompanied by Miss Annie Angerbauer.

Mrs. John Kulp, of Bayonne, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Voehl, of 65 Somerset street, in the borough.

Miss Johanna Cullin of East Ninth street and J. Powers of High Bridge will be married in St. John's church, High Bridge, Oct. 15.

It is understood that William J. Hoome and family will spend the winter in Newark, he being greatly impressed with its social advantages.

Miss Marie E. Stephenson, of West Front street, has returned from her vacation and will resume dressmaking for ladies and children after Oct. 1.

J. B. Dumont has rented his house on Watchung avenue, to J. H. Havens, of Plainfield avenue, who, with his family, will soon take possession of it.

Miss Mary K. Van Fleet, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Van Fleet, of East Third street, is enjoying a delightful visit with her cousin, Miss May LaFarge, in New Brunswick.

Dr. Renay, one of the guests at Hotel Netherwood this summer, has resumed his practice in New York city. The doctor has left a pair of trotters in care of Chas. Brower. Dr. Renay will be at Netherwood again next summer.

P. Ludwig Conde will begin the season at his violin studio 306 East Front street, October 1. Mr. Conde will receive a few additional pupils on the violin, and is prepared to furnish orchestras for entertainments weddings and teas.

T. B. Fenton is once again at his home in Washington Park, after a most extensive fishing and hunting trip, in which he visited Greenwood Lake, Lake Hopatcong and Lake Ontario. Mr. Fenton is now enjoying a visit from his father.

George White has rented of Mrs. Gardner, widow of Francis H., the home at 24 Sycamore avenue, and will acquire possession Oct. 15. He will renovate and overhaul the property and install a bride there before the winter is over.

HAS HIS EYE ON PLAINFIELD.

A Howling, Funereal Dog That Makes Wretched Discord When People Die.

The people living up Westervelt avenue way are looking for a dog that has been doing its best to unsettle the minds of superstitious people in that neighborhood. When a resident on the street died a week or two ago this dog stood beneath the window and howled dismally, as the dying man's breath grew fainter. Another death has since come to the neighborhood, and as the spirit of the dying man was passing away the howling dog drew nigh and filled the night air with his discord. This strange and uncanny critter has considerably upset the neighborhood, and superstitious people are shaking their heads ominously, and hoping that something will happen to silence the dog forever.

Their Fifth Anniversary.

The Y. P. S. C. E. of the Park Avenue Baptist church will celebrate their fifth anniversary Tuesday evening, Oct. 3, at 8, in the church. The Rev. Palmer S. Hulbert, of New York city, will address them on the subject of "Christian Endeavor: what it can do, and how it can do it".

Clark Gets All of Pidcock's.

(From The New Jersey Flying Post.)

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Sept. 25.—Sheriff Hunter, of this county, today sold the real estate of ex-Congressman J. N. Pidcock, consisting of 73 farm lots and houses to Alvah A. Clark, of Somerville, at $1 per tract or parcel. The property consists principally of peach farms —the richest in the county. The yield this fall reached one hundred thousand baskets. Mr. Pidcock's failure was due to the money stringency.

Bowlers Make Merry.

The Grote bowling alleys in the Y. M. C. L. club-house were opened last Monday evening, the members having got them in perfect condition. A large number used the alleys last night; and some good scores were made, Michael Mack making the highest of the evening, 214.

An individual bowling tournament will soon be [illegible], from which [illegible] will be chosen for the Plainfield Journal [illegible].

THE SOCIAL WHIRL IN PLAINFIELD.

VARIOUS PLEASANT FUNCTIONS PAST AND TO COME.

Last of the Five o'Clocks at the Country Club—Grace Church Hosts to Fair for Muhlenberg That Is Sure to Be a Great Event—Waffle Tea for the Rectory.

A stormy sky and a few drops of rain had the effect of keeping all but a handful of people away from the last tea of the Country Club Saturday afternoon, and the many ranks of little cups that had been set out in the dining room for the hot coffee and other liquid refreshment were hardly disturbed.

The shades were all drawn on the first floor, and the gas was lighted, and the few guests that had come sat about in little groups and modified their voices so that the rest should not overhear their remarks.

Outside on the tennis courts Mr. VanBoskerck was superintending the finals of one of his tennis tournaments that was begun about two months ago. Frank Hyde and August Huntington were matched against Edward Ryder and C. Morgan. After some rather ragged but interesting tennis, Ryder and Morgan won; 6-2, 6-1. Mr. VanBoskerck presented each of the winning team with a pipe, these being the prizes which were purchased by the club last summer and exhibited at the beginning of the tournament.

When the half dozen youths who had been lounging around the courts caught sight of the flutter of petticoats through the door of the club, there was a rush for the house, and tennis was at a discount thereafter.

Mrs. Charles Fisk, Mrs. Brooks and Mrs. Harry Runkle received. As there was nothing to pour, there were no young ladies at the tables.

This is the last of the club teas of the season, and the interest in them seems to have died out entirely. While the functions of the little club at the other end of town always manage to draw, the Country Club teas have never been a howling success. Doubtless the Country Club's forte lies in other forms of entertaining, but it is trusted that the popularity of five o'clocks will be renewed next year.

About the first of November the Casino will be the scene of a very elaborate fair to be given under the auspices of Grace Protestant Episcopal church for the benefit of Muhlenberg Hospital. Some other churches have been asked to participate, and the fair will doubtless outshine anything of the kind ever seen before in Plainfield.

Active preparations are on foot among the younger married set of Grace church for a "waffle tea" to be given somewhere about the 12th of October for the benefit of the Rectory Society in the church. The ladies interested have their eyes on several private houses with a view of swooping down on one of them as a place in which to hold the tea, but no final arrangements have been made as yet. All those who attend will be supplied with delectable hot waffles: is it necessary to add, not free of charge?

A few tables may be filled with useful articles for sale. It will doubtless be a success.

THEIR NEW PARISH HOME.

Description of the Building Which the Women's Friendly Society of the Church of the Heavenly Rest Have Erected.

The new parish house of the Church of the Heavenly Rest on Clinton avenue, Evona, the erection of which was commenced last May, is now wholly completed, and is a monument to the industry of the Women's Friendly Society of the church, to whose efforts the church owes the new building.

The structure is twenty-five by sixty-five feet. It contains a Sunday-school room, a room for the different societies of the church to hold their meetings in, and a library and reading room. The Sunday-school room is much larger than the two other rooms, and is to be well heated, and lighted by stained glass windows.

East of the Sunday-school room are the two smaller rooms. In the Sunday-school room, between the doors which lead into the small rooms, is a raised platform for the Superintendent's desk. In the library and reading room are shelves containing a collection of books, racks for holding newspapers, and tables for reading and the playing of games. In the assembly room are drawers, closets and a large sink, to be used when refreshments are to be served in the building. The building is constructed of brick, finished throughout with hard wood, and lighted with gas.

Much admiration for the new parish building is expressed by friends of the church, and those who hereafter enjoy it will not forget to whom they are indebted for the comfortable and homelike structure.

DRANK ARSENIC.

John Hetfield's Five-Year-Old Son Gives His Mother a Scare and Makes the Doctor Hustle.

John Hetfield's young son, aged 5, drank half a bottle of mixture containing arsenic Saturday night. Mrs. Hetfield hurried the youngster to a local drug store, the proprietor of which advised that a physician be called. Dr. Boone was summoned, and the patient was driven back home in a hack, the doctor following. The boy is still alive, thanks to Dr. Boone's energetic treatment.

MAGGIE SKIPPED.

And the Man Whom She Struck with a Barrel Stave Is in Jail.

Policeman Cooney's attention was attracted Saturday night by the noise of a row in Pruden's alley. Maggie Bradford was beating William Kenney's head with a barrel stave when the policeman reached the scene. The festive Maggie escaped; but Kenney was arrested, and in court this morning was sentenced by Judge Coddington to sixty days in jail.

DROWNED IN A BUTTER FIRKIN.

SINGULAR DEATH OF BABY FREDDIE CURTIS.

While His Mother Was Making Out a Sunday-school Card, He Crept Out of the Room and Plunged Headforemost into a Firkin of Water.

A sad and remarkable accident occurred Monday in the family of Eastus F. Curtis, peddler, of 322 East Front street.

Little Freddie Curtis, a baby a few months over a year old, fell into a butter firkin of water and was drowned before any one could reach him to pull him out.

About 2 yesterday afternoon Mrs. Curtis sat down to fill out a Sunday-school card for one of her older children. Little Freddie was playing around the room, and his mother did not notice what he was doing. When she had finished her writing she looked around for the infant and did not see him. As calling was productive of no results, she started to search for the child.

He was nowhere to be found in the house, so Mrs. Curtis went into the yard, and was struck with horror to see the child head downward in the firkin of water. He had doubtless been attracted by the shining surface of the liquid and in looking over the edge of the firkin had lost his balance and had fallen in. The child might have been saved had artificial breathing been resorted to immediately, but no one was there who knew what to do.

It seems almost miraculous that the child did not upset the firkin and so save his own life by his struggles.

If accidents of this kind can take place thus on dry land, it makes one believe in the saying that the safest place in the world, as far as drowning is concerned, is on an ocean steamer.

THE "BENEFIT" GAME.

Plainfield Apathy to Base-Ball Made It a Picnic.

The Montclair Athletics who were to have played the Crescents on Saturday last did not appear, but went to Orange instead. Manager Keller at the last moment secured the Allertons to take their place. Plainfield people showed their appreciation of the good base-ball Manager Keller has provided this season, by staying away. The score:

WESTFIELD TOPICS.

Club Consolidation—Rallying Day—The Fire Bell—Mr. Endicott Is Well Again.

WESTFIELD, Sept. 26.

The Rev. B. F. Bradford, of Upper Montclair, father of the world-famous Congregational preacher Amory H. Bradford, preached to the Congregationalists Sunday morning.

The Westfield Athletic and the Union League clubs each hold a meeting tonight to discuss further the question of consolidation. The proposed union has been delayed longer than was thought necessary by the friends of the movement. At times it seems destined not to be. If this is so a great injury has been done to club interests in the village by a few people. The healthy rivalry which has existed between the clubs was natural and pardonable. But the feeling of enmity which is manifested at this time by a few in the clubs is not what one should expect from grown men. It is suggestive of the nursery.

The Rallying Day exercises at the Presbyterian church were interesting and impressive. There was singing by the little people of the infant class; and addresses were delivered by the pastor, the Rev. N. W. Cadwell and by the Rev. William H. Ruth, of the M. E. church.

The firemen have purchased a $300 bell and are now getting specifications for a bell tower. It is thought that the tower will be constructed of wood.

Charles G. Endicott is able to attend to business after a long illness. He is a man who cannot be spared long by the town, and his recovery gives Westfielders much pleasure. Ersen.

Death of Robert T. Currie.

Robert Thomson Currie died Friday at 9:30 p. m., at his residence, 44 Westervelt avenue, North Plainfield, in his 45th year, after an illness of six weeks. Death resulted from pneumonia complicated with other troubles. Mr. Currie is survived by a widow, two sons, and one daughter, who have the heartfelt sympathies of a large circle of friends in their bereavement. The deceased was a resident of Plainfield for seventeen years until his death, and was a prominent member of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church. He was also a member of the firm of W. M. Iselin & Co., bankers and brokers, of Wall street, New York.

The funeral will take place tomorrow at 11:30 a. m. at the residence of his mother, Pamrapo, Greenville, Jersey City. Interment will be in the cemetery at Greenville.

May He Succeed!

D. S. Donovan, for many years in the employ of D. W. Littell, has rented the store 106 Park avenue, near Front street, and started a tin and iron-working business in his own name. Mr. Donovan is a competent workman and a courteous young man, and should be liberally patronized.

HOT SHOT FOR FLIRTATIOUS WIVES.

WOMEN WHO ARE NOT BAD, BUT PRETTY SILLY.

Pastor Richardson's Sermon on "The Ideal Wife"—He Gives a Few Facts, and Administers Solid Chunks of Reproof—How a Woman Can Make Her Husband Happy and Her Home Bright.

The Rev. J. W. Richardson, of the Park Avenue Baptist church, delivered a telling sermon last night, taking for his theme "The Ideal Wife". The pastor handled facts without gloves, and administered some solid chunks of reproof.

A large audience filled the church. The text was Ephesians v: 22:

"Wives, submit yourselves unto your husbands as unto the Lord."

The speaker said in part:

"The wife, with her patience and pluck, is the best part of many a man—the wife may also be the worst. The Ideal Wife will be true to her husband. This the day, when we need pure homes and devoted mothers. Too many married women are not careful of their deportment in the street, and parlor. There are husbands whose hearts ache, because evil-tongued gossip has involved the good name of the wife. Some of these women would not commit marital infidelity, any quicker than they would pluck out their right eye. But they engage in that curse of modern society, flirtation. This, in itself, is infidelity to the marriage vow. What virtuous, sane husband, can look on and see his wife cast coy glances at another man, and not feel, that his paradise has been invaded. Frown upon this modern custom of flirtation. No woman can be liberal with her smiles, and yet retain the love of her husband. The meanest specimen of human nature is a man-flirt. But there would be no such creatures in society, if some ladies did not offer them encouragement. No man would take the trouble to wipe his lips, with a handkerchief, in twenty different signals, if his attentions were not invited, and he met with no recognition. Some women imagine that it shows a spirit of independence, to be effusive and bold in address, in their intercourse with the gentlemen whom they meet in society and on the street. But, ladies, such deportment is extremely hazardous. It makes plausible every scandalous story from malicious lips! It causes sensible, virtuous people to regard you with suspicion! It is adding kindlings to the flame in your husband's heart, which will burst forth in fury one of these days! In the fear of God—I speak frankly, young married women—let me utter a solemn warning: If you, by a silly flirtation, place a doubt in your husband's heart concerning your trueness to him, you might bring all the snows of the Arctics, and all the snows of a thousand winters, and pile them as high as Saturn, and you could not hide the spot—and though your body and soul might be as pure as the whiteness of God's throne, forever that husband's eyes would see a stain! O ye wives, you cannot afford to assassinate a loving heart—put the sun of your home into an eclipse—and clothe your soul in mourning garments! Why risk the love and devotion of a warm-hearted husband, to gain a few smirks from the man-flirt? Let the sensible, the truly refined, the pure women of society inaugurate a reform. Let them denounce this practice, and in a short time, flirtation would become so outre, that respectable people would shun the practice as extremely vulgar.

"The Ideal Wife will make the Home Life very attractive. If it is necessary for the husband to be considerate, that his wife may sing in her heart despite household cares: so it is necessary for the wife to make the home-life fragrant with the spirit of patience and affection, that the husband may anticipate during the grind of business, the joy of the evening hour at home. It requires a union of two hearts, to make a bow of promise on the storm clouds of life! Let the wife fill her home with the spirit of contentment. Think more of your home than the whist party! Try and fill home with a holier brightness than that found in the ball-room! Pay more attention to evenings at home, than to evenings out, and unless your husband is a reprobate he will esteem his home of more importance than any outside engagements. It is not great skill which you need, only a plodding, patient perseverance. It may be that sometimes the circumstances surrounding your home are like a crown of thorns; but patiently, and bravely wear that crown, and your husband will come to admire your queenhood. The house is a garden: do not plant it with thorns. Your husband's occupation may place him where he listens to business all out of gear, and faces scowls a yard long. When he comes home from the office, or store, don't meet him with another scowl. If anything goes wrong, don't fret before him. He may have heard for ten long hours the constant growling of impatient men. It is dangerous to subject some husbands to the noise of an unoiled tongue at home. In the courtship days it was delightful to spend an evening in each other's society: both looked their best, and appeared their best. But it is decidedly another thing to live in daily contact with each other, and learn each other's shortcomings. Nevertheless, if the wife will avoid peevishness: take the same care to be agreeable: conduct herself as she did when he was a lover she may continue her queenhood, and find him ready to do her will as at first. The wife must be willing to pay the price of success—and, that price, is loving words, and tender acts, and a rigid attention to personal adornment.

"The Ideal Wife will make Religion the guardian angel of the house. Some of these husbands want to be religious, but the wife is so intent on euchre-parties, and theatres, and a general good time, that these men are prevented from accepting Christ. We know of men who would have been honored servants of the church, had it not been for the whims of the wife. The wife should mould her husband's thoughts, and enrich his aspirations. But if she disregards the religious opinions of the husband—if she shuts Christ out of her home, there will not be any foundation for the stability of the marriage vows, nor any guarantee of the continuation of domestic happiness."

A Bright Young Man Outwitted.

A local milkman left his horse and wagon standing unwatched in front of a store on Front street one day last week. It was then that a young man who is inclined to play jokes on his friends took a two-quart can of milk from the wagon, drank the milk and kept the can until a favorable opportunity came for returning it undiscovered.

Yesterday the young man went to the milkman's house, crawled into the yard placed the stolen pail on the back stoop. He was detected by the owner, however, and the laugh is now on him. The joker has paid for the milk which he took so much trouble to secure.

GALA DAY ON THE GREEN.

BOSTON'S BOWLING CLUB ROYALLY ENTERTAINED.

Dunellen's Club Gives Them a Happy Time on Mr. Schepflin's Green—But Dunellen Wasn't In by a Big Majority.

Saturday morning the 9 o'clock train from New York brought the Boston Bowling Club escorted by a delegation of the Dunellen Club, to Dunellen where they were cordially received by Christian Schepflin and other members.

Two grand rinks were formed for the championship games.

The feature was the phenomenal shots made by Mr. Kinnear. The games resulted: Boston—first rink, 25, to Dunellen, first rink, 12." The Bostons also won in the second rink by 21 to 7; the Bostons thus being victorious by 30 points. The visitors accompanying the Boston bowlers were Albert Geiger, James Wemyss, Sr., George E. Bates and W. T. Trewergy. After the games the visiting club and guests were escorted to Taylor's Hotel where a sumptuous repast was served, with Mr. Elliott, Vice-president of the Dunellen Club, at the head of the table. Appropriate toasts were responded to in every case most happily, that of the senior visitor, Mr. Wemyss, particularly being appreciated. In closing he congratulated the members of both clubs, saying that never had he witnessed games in which such good feeling was shown by all. "In fact"—he said—"I wish to bear witness that they were indeed gentlemen's games. After the repast was over, the Bostons repaired to the green and met the Middlesex Club in two rinks, the Middlesex being victorious in the total by 2 points. Scores: Boston—total, 22; Middlesex—24.

After serenading the Dunellen Club with some finely rendered Scottish selections, the Bostonians left on the 6:55 p. m. train, homeward bound.

NOT A QUESTION OF POLITICS.

But All That Is Good and True in Citizenship Is Now at Stake.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Sept. 20, 1893.

To the People of New Jersey:

Again the State Citizens' League feels compelled to call upon you to enlist in what it is hoped will prove a decisive campaign against race-track gambling and Legislative debauchery in this State. It is well known that last year while people slept, the gamblers attended the party primaries and nominating conventions, and succeeded in foisting upon the State a Legislature whose infamous record is today the shame and humiliation of the whole people.

As you well remember, the unprecedented efforts that were made to prevent this disgrace were scornfully and defiantly ignored.

Power has returned to the hands of the people, and the question now is, How shall we use it? How shall we co-operate in order to expunge these foul stains from our statute-book and rescue the government of our State from the control of men who have so basely betrayed us? Must we believe that a majority of the people in any legislative district in this State will deliberately vote in the interest of gamblers and criminals, and thereby approve the infamous conduct of the last Legislature?

There is but one side to this question. It is not a controversy between political parties; it is a contest between honest and dishonest men. No one pretends to defend the conduct of the last Legislature by argument. Their acts were induced and will be defended only by the most lavish and corrupt use of money gained by wicked and criminal practices.

The just indignation of the people must be expressed by acts as well as words. There is no profit in disguising the fact that our greatest danger lies in the possible supineness of the law-abiding people in our State. The gamblers are openly and confidently counting upon this to win in this conflict. Peradventure their expectation proves well-founded, personal regrets for neglect of duty will come only too late.

In order that our action may be effective in escaping so humiliating and disastrous an issue, the State Citizens' League earnestly and urgently recommends—

First—That all voters who do not approve the action of the last Legislature attend the primaries of the party to which they belong, to be called to elect delegates to the conventions for the nomination of candidates for the Legislature, and for the office of Sheriff in counties wherein these are to be chosen—and there make all earnest and honorable effort to secure the election of delegates who will support as candidates for the Legislature only such men as can be relied upon to vote for the repeal of the race-track statutes, and for Sheriff a man who will faithfully and fairly discharge the duties of the office.

Second—That if practicable, even at personal sacrifice, they attend their party conventions, and by their presence and influence lend their aid to securing the nomination of candidates of sterling character upon whom they can depend to carry out their views, and that they urge the adoption of an explicit resolution demanding the unconditional repeal of the disgraceful race-track laws at once.

Third—In case, notwithstanding your best efforts to the contrary, candidates should be nominated by your party for the Legislature, or for the office of Sheriff, who cannot be trusted on the race-track issue, then we advise you to bolt such nominations forthwith, and to support with all your might the candidates of the opposite party if there is reason to believe they can be trusted in the matters above stated.

Fourth—If the nominees of both parties seem to be unreliable and therefore unsatisfactory, we advise you to call a meeting immediately of the law-abiding voters of your district, and unitedly nominate and support candidates of well-known ability and integrity whose position is clearly defined.

Experience warns us not to trust too confidently in evasive assurances of candidates who are too weak to resist party dictation, or to scorn a price for their services.

In conclusion, we beg to suggest that there are no political issues to divide the people this Fall. The one sole and paramount issue is the redemption of the State from the infamy of last Winter, and under whatever political banner that issue can be best fought out, there should every citizen of New Jersey who regards the honor of his State and the best interests of the community and his home, be found. In such a crisis indifference and apathy are little less than disloyalty, and acquiescence in the dictation of professional politicians, a bondage degrading to the manhood of every American citizen.

President State Citizens' League.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR CONFERENCE.

THE COUNTY UNION HOLDS ITS AUTUMN GATHERING.

The First Baptist Church Crowded With Enthusiastic Young People—Addresses by Miss Spangenberg, the Rev. L. R. Dyott, and Others—Washingtonville Society Captures the Banner—Where Was William Titus?

The autumn conference of the Union County Christian Endeavor Union was held on Friday in the First Baptist church. The Union includes fifty-eight societies in eight denominations, with a membership of 2,650. The large church was filled with Christian Endeavorers; and many were unable to find seats. President W. W. Graves presided gracefully. After the organ prelude, a fifteen-minute praise service of song was led by Samuel McQuoid, of Roselle. The hymns were sung by the large audience with true Christian Endeavor spirit. The singing was led by a choir of thirty-six voices selected from the various societies of the county.

After the sound of praise had ceased, and silence had come over the gathering, the Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, pastor of the church, arose and offered prayer. The chorus choir then sang the anthem "Trust ye in the Mighty God."

The Rev. Mr. Goodchild, of Roselle, led a responsive Scripture reading from Psalms xxiv. "Come Holy Spirit" was sung heartily, and the District Secretary Miss A. B. Spangenberg, of Netherwood, delivered a telling ten-minute address on "Junior Work." The address was an earnest plea for more thorough work among the juniors. Miss Spangenberg's words made a deep impression on the endeavorers, with whom she is a great favorite; and she was loudly applauded when she finished speaking. "No Shadows Yonder" was sung while the collection was being taken.

The business matters, which next came before the conference, were soon disposed of, as they consisted only of some slight amendmendments to the constitution of the Union. After the business session the hymn "What Shall the Harvest Be?" was sung.

The Rev. L. R. Dyott, of Newark, was introduced by President Graves, and delivered a ringing address on "The Needs of the Hour". The world, the speaker thought, is in a condition to be speedily saved or ruined, because of the present rapid communication of ideas. News from over the ocean is read in newspapers almost as soon as it has taken place. The speeches of Gladstone are so well reported and widely read here that we have come to feel that we are personally acquainted with the Grand Old Man. Everybody reads; clerks and shop girls remain home Sunday and read French novels, fresh from the printing press. It is not lack of education, but miseducation, that is troubling us today. Bad ideas fly rapidly, but the good ideas only creep.

One of the most imminent needs of the hour is for us to believe firmly in the truth. There have arisen of late, from various sources, many false opinions which have become sandwiched with the true. But let us cling to the Bible. Never mind who wrote the Pentateuch, it was the book of our fathers. At the Montreal convention some one gave us the following good advice:

"Early to bed
Early to rise;
Preach the Gospel
And advertise."

Now this was good advice all through; but, if I were allowed to change it I should say "believe in the gospel" in the third line. We Christian Endeavorers need more co-operation between local societies and with our churches. Take a hand in church work. We can't work ourselves into life by working our pastor to death. Christians in the various churches and societies ought to find common ground for work and unite with all their might. If we did that there would be no more political disgrace, bribery and race-tracks in our fair State. Christians, we are dividing our forces too much. As we get closer to Christ we ought to get closer to each other. Christ emphasized the social side of life, and dined with sinners. We need more earnestness. Singing and meeting together are vain if we ask not "How many souls have I won for Christ and whom can I next lead to the master?" This is the Holy Ghost era in the church. The Spirit takes the place of Christ; and the need of the church is the need of the indwelling of the Holy Ghost. Never was the church of Christ so well organized for work as now. Let us simply pray for the Holy Spirit to come. If we do this, soon victory will come."

The anthem, "I will Love Thee, O Lord" was next sung by the chorus choir. Two ten-minute reports from the Montreal Convention were read by Miss L. J. Herron, of Cranford, and Miss S. E. Allen, of Roselle. Miss Herron discussed "Missions" and emphasized the "Whatsoever" in the Christian Endeavor pledge. Does it mean that Christian Endeavorers should be content to "do a little"? No. They should bring all possible to the foot of the Cross. But how are they fulfilling the obligation?

Miss Allen spoke on "Evangelistic Work", and said in part: "The greatest barrier to evangelistic work is the crime of division among the people of God, the sin and selfishness of sectarianism. Christians in every town are divided into a dozen feeble sects, struggling not so much against sin as against each other. Let the church come together in Christian sympathy and cooperation and more as one man against the hosts of evil, and humanity will be saved.

"The church must stay among the people. We believe Christian Endeavorers are realizing the great truth that hand to hand effective personal work must be done. With profound thanksgiving to God we recall the fact that during the past year 158,000 of our associate members have been won for Christ."

When Miss Allen had ceased speaking the committee to award the banner reported. The society having the largest percentage of its membership present at the conference was given the handsome badge banner. It was awarded to Washingtonville Society which had ninety-five per cent. of its membership present. Great applause greeted the announcement.

William Titus was the only man missing from the Warrenville society, at the conference. He was sought far and wide by the members so that the society could report one hundred per cent. present, but William could not be found.

Miss Nettie Beeching, president of the society, was largely instrumental in obtaining so large a representation for the society.

Hope chapel came second in the race with eighty-three per cent. present, and the First Baptist church society third, with eighty per cent.

"The Lord keeps watch between us" was sung, the Rev. Cornelius Schenck of the Trinity Reformed church, came on the platform and pronounced the benediction, and the Endeavorers dispersed, exchanging cordial greetings as they went, and taking away pleasant memories of the conference.

PULPIT AND PRESS.

The Preacher was resting in the Editor's sanctum during a breathing-spell from a round of pastoral calls. The Preacher sighed a little over the ingratitude of some of his parishioners, and said: "It takes the young folks to see these weak points in human nature. I've tried to talk my boy into entering the ministry, but he won't listen to it. It's just as you said the other night in your paper: there's no encouragement for a young man to take up preaching, if he's going to be turned down when the gray hairs appear."

"Well,"—said the Editor, half in joke, half in earnest—"don't let him go into the newspaper business, above all others, if he's afraid to face the frailties of mankind: for one sees into the hearts of men more keenly and more deeply through journalistic eyes than through any other glasses; and the newspaper man has to do many thankless deeds."

"Every man"—said the Preacher—"thinks his own profession has most drawbacks. But it is a fact that there is no other profession in which one can so soon attain his zenith and so early be retired than the ministry. Plainfield's own cases proving this are too painful to dwell upon. The grayhaired preacher is cast aside like a squeezed-out lemon; whereas the grayhaired newspaper man is supposed to know something, and is respected and honored."

"While the cry of many churches"—suggested the Editor—"is for young men, other people, as for instance a correspondent in a recent issue, clamor for less sensationalism and more divine teaching."

"The trouble with some of those people—responded the Preacher—"is that they can't see the difference between sensationalism and modern thought. Some of these days we old-fogy preachers who are drifting into backnumberhood are going to be scored on that very point. I have a friend, an earnest, progressive, up-to-date young clergyman, who has warned me, in friendly candor, that he's getting tired of hearing the grumblers prate on 'Sensationalism in the pulpit', and he threatens to give the ecclesiastical drybones a rattling with a sermon on the topic 'Sensationalism vs. Stagnation'. He holds that modern tastes and modern ideas demand that everyday topics be handled from the pulpit in a broad, fearless, practical way; and that the era has passed when people desire doctrinal discourses."

"Don't you"—queried the Editor—"find that Press and Pulpit are linking more and more firmly together, and both progress in their efforts to uphold mankind?"

"I do"—was the earnest reply.—"Printer's ink has become an invaluable factor in the work of the church; I might say, an absolute necessity."

"Some misguided people" remarked the Editor—"wanted to make me a minister."

"And wine"—responded the Preacher—"had me booked for a newspaper man. The time may be coming"—he added thoughtfully—"when the two professions will be interchangeable. Their desires and duties to humanity are largely the same.

In Paint the best is the cheapest. Strictly Pure White Lead is best; properly applied it will not scale, chip, chalk, or rub off; it firmly adheres to the wood and forms a permanent base for repainting. Paints which peel or scale have to be removed by scraping or burning before satisfactory repainting can be done. When buying it is important to obtain properly made. Time has proven that white lead made by the "Old Dutch" process of slow corrosion possesses qualities that cannot be obtained by any other method of manufacture. This process consumes four to six months time, and produces the brands that have given White Lead its character as the standard paint.

"Atlantic" "Bradley" "Brooklyn" "Jewett" "Ulster"

are standard brands of strictly pure Lead made by the "Old Dutch" process. You get the best in buying them. You can produce any desired color by tinting these brands of white lead with National Lead Co.'s Pure White Lead Tinting Colors.

A Builder's Lesson.

"How shall I a habit break?"
As you did that habit make.
As you gathered, you must lose;
As you yielded, now refuse.
Thread by thread the strands we twist
Till they bind us neck and wrist;
Thread by thread the patient hand
Must untwine ere free we stand.
As we builded, stone by stone,
We must toil unhelped, alone,
Till the wall is overthrown.

But remember, as we try,
Lighter every test goes by;
Wading in, the stream grows deep
Toward the center's downward sweep;
Backward turn, each step ashore
Shallower is than that before.
Ah, the precious years we waste
Leveling what we raised in haste;
Doing what must be undone
Ere content or love be won!
First across the gulf we cast
Kite borne threads, till lines are passed,
And habit builds the bridge at last!
—John Boyle O'Reilly.

Judge Not.

Oh, men, who are good, who are honored and great,
Be kind to your brothers of lowly estate.
If masters, then be not in tasking severe.
If rulers, then rule men in love and not fear.
And if ye be fathers, wise, learned and strong,
Lead the little ones tenderly, slowly along.
Ere you sneer at the humble or punish the base
Pause and think for awhile, "Put yourself in their place!"

Fair lady, so haughty, so chaste and so cold,
Kept safe from harm in love's sheltering fold,
Ere you turn from your frail, erring sister with scorn,
Think how she was tempted and how she was born.
Her ruin may date from a smile or kind word,
The first that her poor, hungry heart ever heard.
Then pause ere you taunt her with sin and disgrace—
How if you had been tried? "Put yourself in her place!"

Proud man, whom the white robes of ermine enfold,
As you weigh others' sins in the balance you hold,
Ere you crush the last spark in a heart doomed to bleed,
Let mercy come in for a moment and plead.
Ere you sentence "for life" a poor brother to dwell
With the ghosts of the sins that shall people his cell,
Think why you are honored, and he in disgrace.
What is hid in your heart? "Put yourself in his place!"

"Put yourself in their place!" Yes, have mercy on all
Who through love or through hate, good or evil shall fall;
Who knows in the light of a judgment divine,
Which soul shall be whitest, the sinner's or thine!
Fear to judge lest you stand at the heavenly door,
To see harlots and publicans go in before,
While you cover with guilty confusion your face,
And cry when too late, to be put in their place!
—Phoebe Cary.

To Trouble Borrowers.

There is many a trouble
Would break like a bubble,
And into the waters of Lethe depart
Did we not rehearse it
And tenderly nurse it
And give it a permanent place in the heart.

There is many a sorrow
Would vanish tomorrow
Were we willing to furnish the wings;
So sadly intruding
And quietly brooding,
It hatches out all sorts of horrible things.

How welcome the seeming
Of looks that are beaming,
Whether one is rich or whether one is poor;
Eyes bright as a berry,
Cheeks red as a cherry,
The groan, the curse and the heartache can cure.

Resolve to be merry
All worry to ferry
Across the famed waters that bid us forget,
And no longer fearful,
But happy and cheerful,
We feel life has much that is worth living for yet.
—Frederick Wallace Esner.

In the Woods In Summer.

These mighty trees with their centuries
Of miracles of wood,
Like their sires who stood before the flood,
Mock at men's perjuries.

Under the screen of this forest green,
Unheeded by human eye,
The passions die like tempests in the sky,
And my spirit walks serene.

The shining sun may his journey run
Through a sky of cloudless blue,
Yet the morning hue of the fragrant dew
Here waits like a kiss unwon.

The winds may blow or their flights forego
On the treeless plain and hill;
Here all is still save the tinkling rill
Or a bird note lone and low.

Here the squirrel peeps with uplifted ears,
And the rabbit stops to stare,
And the woodmice dare to come to scare
And jest with their own fears.

'Tis a precious boon on a summer noon
Through the ancient aisles to stray,
Where the shadows play like wood nymphs gay
While summer takes off her shoon.

The sounds which jar, the things which mar,
The life which sting the heart,
Here have no part or lose their smart
From the babbling world afar.
—Clarence A. Buskirk.

The Mirror of Life.

Do you wish for kindness? Be kind.
Do you wish for truth? Be true.
What you give of yourself, you find.
Your world is a reflex of you.

For life is a mirror. You smile,
And a smile is your sure return.
Bear hate in your heart, and erewhile
All your world with hatred will burn.

Set love against love. Every deed
Shall armed as a fate, recoil.
You shall gather your fruit from the seed
That you cast yourself in the soil.

Each act is a separate link
In the chain of your weal or your woe.
Cups you offer another to drink
The taste of their dregs you shall know.

It Shall Be Well.

If thou shalt be in heart a child,
Forgiving, tender, meek and mild,
Though with light stains of earth defiled,
O soul, it shall be well.

It shall be well with thee indeed,
Whate'er thy grace, thy tongue, thy creed.
Thou shalt not lose thy fitting meed;
It shall be surely well.
—Lewis Morris.

SOME ODD STORIES.

INTERESTING TALES OF ADVENTURE ON SEA AND LAND.

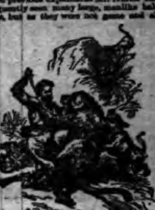
A South African Story—A Desperate Struggle With Baboons—The Band of Faithful Dogs—Perils In the Dark Continent. Vicious Creatures to Encounter.

[Copyright, 1893, by American Press Association.]

When in South Africa last year, I met the hero of the struggle I am about to describe, and my readers will agree with him when he says that "not for all the diamonds taken from the Kimberley mines, nor for all the gold in the hills of Mashonaland, would I repeat that experience."

Mr. Nicholas Hurter, a powerful man of middle age and a famous South African hunter, lives in the district of Somerset East, and within sight of the Vogel River mountains. Last September, accompanied by four powerful dogs and armed with pistols and a repeating rifle, he went into the hills for a few days' sport.

On previous expeditions Mr. Hurter had frequently seen many large, manlike baboons, but as they were not game and always fled at his approach he never bothered them nor ever dreamed that they would bother him.



DRAWN TO THE EDGE OF THE CLIFF.

He had reached a place in the mountains where he had often made camp before because of the abundance of fuel and the fine spring near by, when he was surprised by a prolonged series of half human cries that seemed to come from the top of the precipitous rock at the base of which he had come to a halt.

The dogs at once set up a vociferous barking, and stepping back Mr. Hurter saw a band of at least 20 immense baboons clambering down the cliff with blood in their eyes. It looked as if, tired of flying from the white man, they had resolutely determined to become the aggressors.

As the foremost of the fierce creatures came to the level the dogs, unheeding the call of their master, sprang at him, and as the other baboons now began leaping down from the rocks in a way that would have killed a man Mr. Hurter thought only of the danger to his dogs and started in to save them. He fired into the group, and as he was not 20 feet away he soon laid out eight of the largest of the animals, but in doing so he exhausted all the loads in his magazine.

In that first onset, three of the dogs were speedily killed, and the baboons crowded about Mr. Hurter so that he had to club his rifle to keep them away, and so had no time to load up again.

Fifty feet behind him was the Vogel river, which at that point flowed through a canyon, the precipitous sides of which were fully 1,000 feet in depth. Realizing his danger from the baboons and giving no thought to the canyon, he fell back with his remaining dog till he stood on the edge of the black, yawning chasm.

The animals, with increased cries of anger, followed him, and as he saw the danger behind he was reminded of his pistols, for by this time the stock of his rifle was broken into splinters. Hastily drawing them, he fired into the mass of baboons, which seemed to grow no smaller, though he and the dogs had killed nine.

At length the last shot was fired from the pistols, and at that instant a huge male animal that had been slightly wounded in the shoulder leaped on the dog and dragged him to the edge of the precipice.

Mr. Hurter clubbed his pistols and was running to help the last of his dogs, when another baboon equally strong and fierce attacked him from behind. This creature seized the hunter by the leg with such force as to bring his big white teeth together near the thigh bone.

In moments of great danger and excitement, men do not feel a sudden wound. With a blow from his pistol and a quick turn, Mr. Hurter freed himself from the animal, but the next instant it had leaped upon his chest and was trying to seize his throat in its teeth.

Strangely enough, and fortunately for the hunter, the baboons did not act in concert. Had they done so the result would have been different.

Mr. Hurter never lost his presence of mind. Dropping his pistols, he fastened his powerful hands on the hairy throat of the monster, whose fierce eyes were now not a foot away from his own, but he soon felt that, with only nature's weapons to help him, he was no match for his half human antagonist.

He was being drawn to the edge of the cliff when he bethought him of his knife, and with a quick movement of the right hand he drew it from his belt and plunged it into the baboon's face.

The creature's claws had torn his scalp so that he was nearly blood blinded, while the drain from the wound in his thigh was fast exhausting him.

He felt that the struggle could not continue much longer. His clothes were torn from his back, and with an intelligence that seemed human and a malignity positively devilish the creature was forcing him to the edge of the canyon.

At this juncture the remaining dog, having succeeded in killing his assailant, sprang to the rescue of his master. The baboon, on being attacked in the rear, released his hold on the man and turned on the dog.

The faithful dog, already weakened by the loss of blood, was unable to cope with the baboon, but he clung to him and drew him closer to the precipice, over which the two soon fell.

At sight of this the other baboons made off with cries of alarm, and the hunter succeeded in reaching that night a mining camp, where he was kindly cared for.

Rather Sharp.

The belief in fortune tellers is as old as human curiosity and the yearning to lift the veil of the future, nor is the belief in the powers of gypsies, "seventh daughters of seventh daughters," "trance mediums" or people born with a "caul," whatever that may be, confined to the servant girl class.

I know two well educated young ladies who, made curious by the advertisements of a fortune teller, an alleged gypsy who had made a competency out of "credulous humanity," determined secretly to consult her.

One of the things this woman promised to do was to show the young women who patronized her the faces of their future husbands, and this it was no doubt that induced my young friends to pay $1 each to see, as they imagined, the portraits of the men to whom they were to be wed.

They were admitted into a half lit room, candles burning, though the sun was shining brightly outside, and the walls decorated with snakes in tinsel and many colored little signs that the girls could not understand, and which no doubt conveyed no meaning to the adventuress, except it might be their effectiveness in adding to the awe of her patrons.

The fortune teller called herself "a palmist" and pretended to look into the future of the girls through their palms. Being an excellent judge of human nature and a keen physiognomist, as are all people of that class, the woman had no difficulty in giving a pretty accurate delineation of the girls' characters. This with many of her visitors might have passed for fortune telling, but it did not suit these particular young ladies.

"We know pretty well what we are," said one of the girls, beginning to see through the fraud. "Now, what we want to know is the future."

"But haven't I told you that you are to be married and each of you is to have five children? Yours'll be three boys and two girls, and hers'll be just the opposite."

"That's all right," said the second girl, "but you promised to show our husbands' faces, and we want to see them."

"Or to get our money back," added the first.

"I never returns any money," said the old lady, "but if you are fixed on it I won't mind showing you the faces—that'll belong to your husbands."

The young ladies did not notice the emphasis the old creature put on the words "that'll belong," as they followed her into an adjoining room, where there was more light. Pointing to a mirror hanging against the wall, she said:

"Look into that."

The young ladies did so, and one of them exclaimed:

"Why, I see only my own face."

"Well, isn't that right?" asked the hag with a leer. "It is not right. You promised to show us our husbands' faces."

"And so I have. Them's them that are to be your husbands' faces—when you are married!"

Angered with the woman and disgusted with themselves, the girls left the place, their faith in fortune telling entirely undermined.

Hard Luck.

A couple of dark faced foreigners were passing up Hastings street with a dancing bear when an old colored man came out of an alley driving a limpy old horse before a load of ashes. The horse no sooner saw the bear than he made a shy and a jump, turned the wagon over into the road, and after a few kicks broke loose and ran off. The driver was hurled into the mud and buried under the ashes, but he soon dug himself out and reached the sidewalk to demand of a pedestrian:

"Now, den, who dun run into dat off wheel an upsot me?"

"No one. Your horse was afraid of that bear."

"My old hoss afeared?"

"Yes."

"Did he rare up on his hind legs?"

"Yes."

"An shy an snort?"

"Yes."

"An tip de wagon ober an broke loose?"

"Yes."

"But whar is he now?"

"He ran away."

"Run'd away! Fo' de Lawd! But you dun done' mean it!"

"But I do."

"Wall, wall! Luck has shorely changed fur dis ole man! If dat ole hoss dun all dat, den I'll put his value up $50 mo' an set right down in de house an not do another stroke of work fur 1o' weeks!"—Detroit Free Press.

Made Him Tired.

Uncle Zeb—I'm out of all patience with that there princess, the way she's abusing her beautiful eyes. She doesn't deserve to have none.

Aunt Amanda—What's she been doing now?

Uncle Zeb—I was readin about her being out to the fair, and it said that the first thing she did was to throw her eyes up the ceiling and then let them drop on the floor; then she darted them down a long corridor and rested them on the cool waters of the lagoon; then she must have hauled them back somehow, for it says she bathed them in sad, salt tears, wiped them, and swept them with long lashes. Once she was fool enough to rivet them on the doors, and when I left off she was fixing them on a mantel.—Westfield Standard.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

THIRTY years' observation of Castoria with the patronage of millions of persons, permit us to speak of it without guessing. It is unquestionably the best remedy for Infants and Children the world has ever known. It is harmless. Children like it. It gives them health. It will save their lives. In it Mothers have something which is absolutely safe and practically perfect as a child's medicine.

Castoria destroys Worms.
Castoria allays Feverishness.
Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd.
Castoria cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic.
Castoria relieves Teething Troubles.
Castoria cures Constipation and Flatulency.

Castoria neutralizes the effects of carbonic acid gas or poisonous air.
Castoria does not contain morphine, opium, or other narcotic property.
Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep.
Castoria is put up in one-size bottles only. It is not sold in bulk.
Don't allow any one to sell you anything else on the plea or promise that it is "just as good" and "will answer every purpose."
See that you get C-A-S-T-O-R-I-A.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

Horse Sense.

Plain hoss sense'll pull yer through
When there's nothin else'll do.
Yer may still be poor and needy
With yer head a 'cyclopedy;
An big poets, so they say,
Sometimes eat one meal a day.
Plain hoss sense'll pull yer through
When there's nothin else'll do.

There are big men, I expect,
Walleris in intellect,
Spoutin, swimmin in the sea
Of their own philosophy,
Who might grab the shore an stand
On the dry an solid land—
Plain hoss sense might pull 'em through
When philosophy wouldn't do.

With hoss sense yer'll never fail
If yer haven't been to Yale.
Don't be scared, but use yer head,
Not some other man's instead.
Don't lay up there on the shelf.
Walk about an trust yerself.
Plain hoss sense'll pull yer through
When there's nothin else'll do.
—S. W. Foss.

Growing Old.

The fairest lilies droop at eventide,
The sweetest roses fall from off the stem,
The rarest things on earth cannot abide,
And we are passing, too, away like them.
We're growing old.

We had our dreams—those rosy dreams of youth—
They faded, and 'twas well. This after prime
Hath brought us fuller hopes, and yet, forsooth,
We drop a tear now in this latter time
To think we're old.

We smile at those poor fancies of the past—
A saddened smile, almost akin to pain—
Those high desires, those purposes so vast,
Ah, our poor hearts, they cannot come again!
We're growing old.

Old? Well, the heavens are old; this earth is, too;
Old wine is best, maturest fruit most sweet.
Much have we lost, more gained, although 'tis true
We tread life's way with most uncertain feet
We're growing old.

We move along and scatter as we pace
Soft graces, tender hopes on every hand.
At last, with gray streaked hair and hollow face,
We step across the boundary of the land
Where none is old.
—Atlanta Constitution.

Our Books.

The silent voices of succeeding ages,
Immortal tomes of justice, mercy, truth,
Recorded here within their sparkling pages
The garnered wisdom both of age and youth.

To childhood's dreams they give a matchless glory,
Unknown to later, more prosaic times;
The fascinating page of fairy story,
The precious gift of wondrous nursery rhymes.

Books are life's early friends, bright, earnest, winning;
With added years the interest deeper grows,
And faithful, hopeful, as at life's beginning,
They gently cheer its feeble earthly close.

Multifold the lessons that they teach us—
In business haunts, in earth's remotest nooks,
Where kindred sympathy has failed to reach us,
Staunch at our back are our beloved books.

They laugh to cheer hearts growing over-weary,
They smooth the furrows from the brow of care,
Disperse the gloom from heavens chill and dreary,
Inspire the drooping soul to praise and prayer.

Books hold the past, for as old Time can take us,
And toward the future cast prophetic eyes;
Our sages are they, and they fain would make us
Heroically good, divinely wise.

Along life's vale they scattered hope and gladness,
Nor asked return for all the wealth they gave,
And from their treasures they will cull with sadness
A melancholy tribute for our grave.
—Darlyle Browne.

Why Is It?

Some find work where some find rest,
And so the weary world goes on.
I sometimes wonder which is best.
The answer comes when life is gone.

Some eyes sleep when some eyes wake,
And so the dreary night hours go.
Some hearts beat where some hearts break.
I often wonder why 'tis so.

Some wills faint where some wills fight;
Some love the tent, and some the field.
I often wonder who are right—
The ones who strive or those who yield.

Some hands fold where other hands
Are lifted bravely in the strife,
And so through ages and through lands
Move on the two extremes of life.

Some feet halt where some feet tread,
In tireless march, a thorny way;
Some struggle on where some have fled;
Some seek when others shun the fray.

Some swords rust where others clash;
Some fall back where some move on.
Some flags furl where others flash
Until the battle has been won.

Some sleep on while others keep
The vigils of the true and brave.
They will not rest till roses creep
Around their name above a grave.
—Father Ryan.

Anger.

Bridle thy passions! Anger is the sin
Of all the greatest; it leads up to deeds
Known only to the darkest hours of night;
It tempts the upright man to throw aside
His cloak of reason and go forth to dip
His hands in human blood; it covers up
The path where duty walks with steadfast feet.
It will not listen to the soft appeals
Of sudden kindliness, or turn aside
From the dense purpose which the despised heeds.
[illegible]
at at the curse of youth and middle age,
Of gray haired men and women. It benumbs
The sensibilities of all alike.
'Tis only fit to live where madmen live,
Safe stalled behind the strongest prison bars.
—Herbert E. Day.

Art.

Art is the child of Nature—yes,
Her darling child, in whom we trace
The features of the mother's face,
Her aspect and her attitude,
All her majestic loveliness
Chastened and softened and subdued
Into a more attractive grace,
And with a human sense imbued.
He is the greatest artist, then,
Whether a pencil or a pen,
Who follows Nature. Never man,
As artist or as artisan,
Pursuing his own fantasies,
Can touch the human heart, or please
Or satisfy our nobler needs,
As he who sets his willing feet
In Nature's footprints, light and fleet,
And follows fearless where she leads.
—Longfellow.

Conscience.

Conscience is harder than our enemies,
Knows more, accuses with more nicety,
Nor needs to question rumor if we fall
Below the perfect model of our thought.
I fear no outward arbiter.

Surprising.

One Monday morning Dorothy volunteered to superintend the family washing. When Nora put the clothes on to boil, the little overseer gave one astonished look, then ran to mamma, exclaiming in great excitement: "Oh, mamma, mamma! Nora's cooking the clothes."—Youth's Companion.

She Didn't Like It.

"That was a disgusting tramp I helped this morning," said old Mrs. Smythe of Bungtown Corners. "I gave him a pie and asked him to saw some wood, and about 10 minutes later he came in and asked me if I'd mind if he ate the wood and sawed the pie."—Harper's Bazar.

Outer Guard—E. S. Runyon.

The trustees of the lodge are:

E. C. Pease, for 3 years.
Joseph Shepard, 2 years.
Frank M. Runyon, 1 year.

Speeches were made by Grand Master Workman Diefendorf and the newly elected officers of the lodge delivered speeches.

It was voted to keep the charter list open two weeks longer, to enable those who join the lodge before Oct. 21 to come in as charter members.

Columbia Lodge promises to have a most successful career, as its members are all energetic and solid men.

MR. SCHEPFLIN HAS THE CUP.

Dunellen Club Three Times Victorious, and Holds the Trophy.

The annual games for the prize cup were bowled on Mr. Schepflin's green at Dunellen Thursday by the Middlesex and Dunellen bowling clubs. The two rinks of the Dunellens were:

FIRST RINK.	SECOND RINK.
George Haynes,	James Smyth,
George Haffner,	William Elliott,
D. R. S. Cockburn,	Andrew Love,
James Stevens, skip.	C. Schepflin, skip.

The second rink of the Middlesex club had H. B. Willis for skip, and the first Dr. Betts. Both Dunellen rinks were winners; the first, 21 to 13; and the second, 21 to 9. Col. Moore was referee.

As this was the final game, the cup became the permanent property of the Dunellen club.

It was unanimously agreed by the members of the victorious club to present the cup to Mr. Schepflin as a testimonial of his interest in the games, and as its President it was felt that he was justly entitled to become its possessor.

Mr. Cockburn, who presented the club with the handsome and ornamental score boards, was enthusiastically cheered and heartily thanked.

Mayor Haynes of Newark was an interested witness of the match, and in a toast was complimented on the fact that his appearance showed no change from the time when the cup was first bowled for, three years ago.

BIRTHDAY GAMES AND FEASTING.

Miss May Mulford Was Sweet Fifteen, and She and Her Friends Made Merry Together.

Miss May Mulford, of East Fifth street, gave a birthday party Wednesday evening at her home. It was the fifteenth anniversary. Games and dancing were the principal features of the evening's enjoyment.

A game of Fake Bags was played with much interest. Those winning the prizes were: Silver pin-dish, Miss Louise Wilbur; scarf pin, Volney Green.

The scene was one of gaiety throughout the evening, and Miss Mulford will long remember the celebration, with much pleasure.

Those forming the party were: The Misses Cora Laire, Edith Beach, Mary Collier, Louise Wilbur, Ruth Dalziel, Lulu Packer, Mary Lockey, Bessie Smith, Lillian Glenn, Florence Barnes, Emma Cotter, Addie Lewis, Carrie Mulford, Jesse Hurlbut, Willie Cornwell, Fred Smith, George Watson, Fred Van Epe, George Smith, Volney Green, Sydney Titsworth, Henry Brower, Willie Van-Deventer and Albert Runyon.

WELL DONE, GIRLS!

King's Messengers Give a Successful Missionary Tea—The Money to Help Support an Indian Student.

The King's Messengers, the girls' home mission band of the First Presbyterian church, gave a missionary tea in the church parlors Thursday from 4 to 7.

Miss May Sebring, the president of the band, presided. The Rev. Lewis and Mrs. Bond, missionaries, from Turkey and Macedonia, made addresses.

When the speakers had finished, tea, chocolate, sandwiches, and cake were served by the members of the band.

An admission of ten cents was charged, and the money will be given for the support of an Indian student at Oak Hill, Indian Territory.

The officers of the band are:

President—May Sebring.
First Vice-President—Jessie McKillop.
Second Vice-President—Evelyn Sebring.
Secretary—Mabel Preston.
Treasurer—Miriam Wilcox.
Superintendents—Mrs. Howard A. Pope and Mrs. Edward J. Olsen.

IS SHE INSANE?

Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh, Dr. George W. Endicott and Elias R. Pope Appointed a Commission to Investigate.

The Chancellor of the State has appointed Craig A. Marsh, George W. Endicott and Elias R. Pope a commission to investigate the alleged insanity of an esteemed resident of Plainfield. The commission will sit as a court and will cause a jury to be impanelled by the Sheriff of the county. Counsel and witnesses will be heard and a verdict will be rendered after the jury hear the evidence and arguments and receive instructions from the commission. The object of the investigation is Josephine L. Pound of East Second street.

And Married Only Two Years

Myra Heath, of 314 East Fourth street, complained to the police yesterday that her husband, James B. Heath, the butcher who left town some time ago, had not supported her for the past year. Marshal Pangborn and Constable Taylor last night arrested Heath in the borough. In court this morning the prisoner pleaded guilty to the charge of nonsupport. Judge Coddington placed Heath under bonds to pay his wife $3 a week for one year.

—It transpires that The Press was misinformed in the statement made that the coming Hospital fair was to be given by Grace P. E. church. That excellent organization, the Woman's Auxiliary Board, is responsible for the enterprise, and is preparing to make this event a grand success.

in the lecture room of the First Baptist church, Thursday, was a most successful affair.

The fifteen-minute song service, beginning at 7:45, was led by E. C. Pease.

After the opening prayer by the Rev. Dr. Yerkes, George E. Batchelor, who presided over the meeting, introduced Andrew Wilson, Vice-President of the County Union, who delivered an address on "Christian Endeavor; its past".

The speaker said in part, that, in the twelve years of the life of Christian Endeavor, a very large proportion of the energy which the movement embodies has been spent in organization. Now the forces are well organized and they ought to do organized work. The million and a half Christian Endeavorers are not doing what they can do. They have not really got to work yet. The purpose of the society is to make young Christians more useful in the service of Christ.

"I like the pledge of our society,"—continued Mr. Wilson—"and think it ought not to be modified in the least. It binds us to read God's word, to take active part in Christian work, and to confess Christ with the lips. The Christian Endeavor pledge is the life of the Christian Endeavor society, and if the pledge be faithfully, loyally kept, the society will become the life of the church.

When Mr. Wilson had finished his address, Miss Clara Moore sang with excellent effect a solo, "Deal Gently With the Erring One". Miss Alice E. Spangenberg of Netherwood, the district secretary of Christian Endeavor societies, spoke on "Christian Endeavor; its present condition, work and needs". Miss Spangenberg is thoroughly conversant with Christian Endeavor work, and is besides an effective and interesting speaker. Her remarks were closely followed; and the audience were easily won to sympathy with her work.

Miss Spangenberg said in part:

"I should like to speak briefly tonight upon several branches of the work which at present are attracting some attention. I refer to the Floating Societies of C. E., the work at the life saving stations, the Police C. E. Societies and the C. E. Travelers Union. In speaking of these branches, it seems that at the present time there is scarcely a person in any walk in life who may not if he so desire, be connected with or under the influence of the C. E. Society.

"The secretary of the N. Y. C. P. A. proposed the organization of a police society of C. E. last March. The society was formed, and is now very prosperous. Their motto is, 'The policemen of New York city for the Lord Jesus Christ'. And then we also find societies in prisons and houses of correction, where the unfortunate inmates are being born into the Kingdom of God, and prepared for his service."

Speaking of President Clark's missionary journey round the world, the speaker said:

"The welcome at Ranipet Dr. Clark described as a genuine New Jersey welcome, not only because many of the members of the mission were connected with New Jersey by education and residence, but because, he said, he knew of nothing more delightfully cordial than a genuine New Jersey welcome.

"If the time ever was it has certainly passed when the Endeavorer felt that after he had finished his private devotions and spent an hour in the prayer meeting, where he testified and rendered other service, that his work was completed. Worship is not work, but a preparation for work. The Endeavor Societies of today are great work shops where the machinery of God's Kingdom is kept perpetually in motion by the untiring and indefatigable Endeavor workers. Anything, everything that can be done to minister to the souls and bodies of perishing humanity, is practical work for Endeavorers."

After Miss Spangenberg's address, the meeting sang "The Sweetest Name".

Eugene M. Cave next delivered an address on "Christian Endeavor; its future".

"Tradition tells us"—said the speaker in part—"that after every financial crisis we have had in this country, there has always been a religious revival. I am looking forward to the time when our city shall have another revival among her churches, and I want to see the C. E. societies foremost in the work.

"This is an age of opportunities. The vacation season is over; your servants have returned to their homes; the opportunity for work is now before you. Take to it, actively, boldly. Let nothing deter you in aiming at high things in your Christian life."

Mr. Cave's address was listened to with much interest.

B. T. Barnes at its close sang a pleasing solo, "Be Thou with Me," and Miss Clara Moore sang "Take, oh take me to your care".

The meeting sang "God be with you till we meet again", and the Rev. Dr. Yerkes came forward and pronounced the benediction.

Twenty minutes were then given to social intercourse. The sociability was of the genuine Christian Endeavor brand; and when the young folks left for home, it was with pleasant impressions of Christian Endeavor good cheer.

Swindled by a Fakir.

An agent representing an electro-plating company visited Plainfield yesterday, and was quite successful in doing business. He called on several saloon-keepers and explained the merits of a composition he had for sale, saying it would not only plate but polish. Two or three of the saloon-keepers bought the stuff. It polished right enough, but the after-effects were bad, as the composition was so powerful that metal tops cracked, and holes were burned through them. The composition ruined everything it came in contact with. The agent has left town.

New Officers Were Chosen on Wednesday.

At a business meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society of the First Presbyterian church, held Wednesday evening, the following officers were elected:

President—J. M. Pope.
Vice-President—[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]

Spencer's cider mill, up in the Valley, has commenced to grind out the juice of the forbidden fruit.

Miss Carrie Kuhn, a favorite downtown saleswoman, has returned from a visit to friends in Brooklyn.

Egbert Scribner of Duer street, whose barn and two horses were burned a short time ago, has rebuilt the barn.

Parties and sociables are being booked to take place at the Watchung Inn, Sebring's Mills, in the near future.

Thomas Staats, of Elizabeth, has been in the borough a few days visiting his brother-in-law, William H. Shotwell.

Every twelve minutes the street cars pass one another at the switch in front of the school building on Somerset street.

Contractor John Smith, of Greenbrook road, has finished his contract with the street railway company to remove the old electric light poles.

Letter-carrier J. W. A. Bauersachs, wife and daughter, are spending the week with Mr. Bauersachs's sister in Newark. He also visits the Inter-State Fair at Trenton.

Councilman George H. Neal, Chairman of the Streets Committee, is to be congratulated on the large amount of work done the past season under his supervision; and Street Commissioner Gavis has proved himself a first-class official.

Middlesex and Hunterdon statesmen, with a few from Somerset county, who met recently in the Astor House, New York, will find before they are through that the voters of this county will have something to say as to who shall receive the Democratic nomination in this county this fall for Senator. Our county has not been in the habit of selecting its candidates for office across the Hudson river, even if they have voted for candidates for Congress who were there named over "hot birds" and a few bottles of "sec". The wave from this gathering has already struck North Plainfield, and The Stroller can assure the gentlemen that there will certainly be a stubborn fight when the caucus meets.

The Stroller was driven behind Meyers Compton's thoroughbred "Toby", to Smalleytown, where he halted at Horace Holcomb's dock, at the edge of the muddy stream which disciples of Izaak Walton designate as a river. He donned a fisherman's outfit at the nearby hospitable residence of a former Plainfielder—at one time a prominent builder of this place—and availed himself of permission to trespass on forbidden lands owned by ex-Mayor Hugh J. Grant of New York city and others. Having fishing paraphernalia galore, he was determined to bring home a string of fish that would paralyze all local sports. The drive over the mountains, passing acquaintances made in boyhood, and the hearty, honest greetings that were encountered on the way, were enough themselves to repay for the trip, not taking into consideration the hour's drive home in the face of that beaming, beautiful, bright harvest moon that illuminated our journey and made us sentimental and meditate and wonder and go way back into memory to revive events that had long since vanished. Woodland, dale and dell seemed never dressed so stylishly and even looked as though gentle Nature held both hands outstretched pleading with her lovers to enjoy all her blessings and in the autumn of life to take a day off and get near to Nature's heart by going fishing. The Stroller just fished and fished beyond all expectations. Sunfish by the dozen were captured in short time. The tackle was then prepared for that fighting, gamey, small-mouthed black bass. It being late in the afternoon, almost sundown, The Stroller had to be satisfied with capturing five good-sized bass, and reluctantly stopped fishing, with a firm conviction that the king of all fresh-water fish is more largely represented in this river than in any place in this vicinity. To those Press readers who enjoy this sport a visit to this riverside is recommended. It is a spot where an artist would long linger, and one of poetic tendency cannot help but be amazed at what Nature has wrought in and alongside this babbling river in the lap of the mountain ranges.

THE STROLLER.

A New Social Club.

A social was given by A. W. Ten Eyck, an employe of Seely Edsall, to his fellow clerks and friends, at his home, 72 Watervelt avenue, last evening. Instrumental music, readings, recitations and dancing, occupied the attention of those present, and all had a most delightful time. Later in the evening an elaborate collation was served.

A social club was formed, and the purpose is to meet at one another's houses from time to time and spend the evening socially. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Frank Putnam, Frank Putnam, Jr., Miss Lizzie Wilson, Miss Carrie Beekman, Miss Belle Carkuff, Miss Mabel Wilson, Miss Morton, the Misses Katy and Ella Mullen, Mrs. Kelly, Mrs. Jennie Abbott, the Misses McKillop, Harry Yeager, Ray McVoy, Geo. Hughes, Lewis Ten Eyck, Geo. Wilson, Geo. Scribner, John and William Abbott.

Easter Lodge Insurance Sure.

A committee of four from Easter Lodge, Knights of Honor, consisting of J. M. Burnett, Dictator, H. A. Thorne, Reporter, and Seymour Marsh and E. W. Conklin, Trustees, waited last night upon the widow of the late William L. Force at her residence, City Hotel, and presented her with a draft for $1,000, the amount for which her late husband's life was insured in the lodge. The draft had been in the hands of the committee for some time, but Mrs. Force had been out of town and therefore they could not present it before.

Franklin's Election.

Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., Thursday night elected the following officers for the ensuing quarter:

Junior Past Councillor—Augustus Wilson.
Councillor—F. Monroe Loomer.
Vice-Councillor—Willard E. Force.
Assistant Recording Secretary—Horace G. Adams.
Conductor—William C. Force.
Warden—Howard Lukes.
Inside Sentinel—Samuel R. Pangborn.
Outside Sentinel—[illegible]

A "Spider Web" sociable was given in the chapel by the Christian Endeavor Society.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bodin, of Chatham, paid a flying visit to friends in the valley, yesterday.

Miss Anna Blasier, of Newark, who has been visiting Mrs William Demler, has returned home.

James Terrants, of Glasgow, Scotland, has made a pleasant visit to his aunt, Mrs John Wilson.

Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Smith have returned from Elmira, N. Y., where they attended the wedding of a cousin.

Mr. and Mrs. Dunlap, of Germantown, Pa., recently celebrated their golden wedding by a wedding trip to this place. They are old friends of Mrs. John Wilson, whose guests they were.

Louis Funk and Dora Geitlick were married recently at the Stony Hill church. A reception was tendered to the friends of the bride and groom at the home of the bride's parents. At the height of the festivities the happy couple departed for Sterling where the groom had provided a home.

PLOUGHSHARE.

DANGER FROM ELIZABETH.

Editor Lane Thinks Her Too Selfish to Care for the Rest of the County.

(From The Summit Record.)

The clever manner in which the Freeholders from the townships of Union county thwarted the scheme to abandon one of the sections of county road in the upper end of the county is worthy the warmest commendation. But for the vigilance and energy of Freeholders Swain and Roll and the firm support of their colleagues in the Board, their scheme would doubtless have succeeded, and too much praise cannot be bestowed on those who prevented the Board from repudiating its past pledges and bringing discredit on the good name the Union county Board of Freeholders has hitherto enjoyed.

The incident, however, serves as an object lesson, in the danger of too great an increase in the representation of the city of Elizabeth in the Board of Chosen Freeholders. That city is of course entitled to a larger representation in the Board than it now enjoys, but the spirit its representatives displayed in dealing with the question of distributing the road moneys should serve as a warning against ever permitting it to secure a representation large enough to be a majority of the Board. If it does, there will be little mercy shown to the rest of the county.

REDUCING ROAD EXPENSES.

Essex's Method of Repairing to be Adopted in Union County.

The Road Committee of the Union County Board of Freeholders, Messrs. Moore of Elizabeth, Hubbard of Plainfield, Roll of Springfield, Scudder of Westfield, and Swain of Summit, accompanied by Director Sauer and Inspector Corbett, visited Essex county recently, for the purpose of inspecting the system of building and repairing county roads in vogue in that county. A visit was paid to South Orange avenue, now being repaired, and the method was explained to them by Inspector Burke. The committee found that by adopting a similar system in Union county the county roads could be repaired at a much smaller expense than under the present system. Inspector Burke, who is a road builder of many years experience, declares that the use of large quantities of water and continual rolling in repairing the county roads, the present method in Union county, is entirely unnecessary.

In repairing a county road in Union county enormous quantities of water are used for sprinkling the road, followed by rolling with a heavy roller. The sprinkling cart is filled about 25 times each day, and the Freeholders are obliged to pay the sum of twelve cents per load for the water. The committee decided to adopt Essex county's method of repairing roads, and it is estimated that it will result in a saving of about fifteen dollars per day on each section of the county roads repaired.

Henry Windham Surprised.

The surprise party, arranged by Miss Lou Windham, given to Henry Windham, on his thirty-seventh birthday, at the Arlington Hotel Friday night was a most enjoyable affair. Dancing was the principal feature, and later in the evening the guests partook of a bounteous supper. Those present were:

Mr. and Mrs. Blatz, Mr. and Mrs. Delke, Mr. and Mrs. August Windham, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wittemeyer, the Misses Daley, Miss Minnie Kiely, Miss Josie Herold, Miss Minnie Hendrickson, Miss Justina Schmidt, Chas. and James Daley, Wm. Kiely, Garret Powers, Mr. Cahill, Mr. Polhemus, Chas. Sebring, Geo. Schneider.

During the evening piano selections were rendered by Miss Lou Windham and Miss Justina Schmidt. Miss Schmidt also sang several pleasing solos.

Progressive Euchre.

Upon invitation of Robert and Edward Clark, a few friends gathered at their home in Washington Valley, on Friday. The time was pleasantly spent in dancing and playing progressive euchre. Those present were:

The Misses Maggie and Edith Miles, Miss Martin, of Newark; Miss May McLaughlin, Miss Josephine Fritz, Miss Mamie Sumner, Miss Lena Smalley, Miss Ida Lewis, Miss Belle Lewis; Mr. Manthrop, of New York; William Morrison, William Woodland, Harry Drake, Frank Dodge, William Kitchen, Harry Coddington, Henry Rogers, Stewart Moffett, of Rahway; Theodore Lonsdorf.

A Bad Bridge.

The old bridge crossing Green Brook at Sandford avenue is in a dangerous condition. The cross planks are broken, and in case a horse or pedestrian should step into one of the crevices a suit for damages, it is said, could be brought against the two counties. It is a line bridge between Union and Somerset counties.

relatives.

The rooms were tastefully decorated, adding new beauty to the scene. After the marriage all partook of the elaborate supper prepared. The table was laden with choice viands, served in excellent style by those in charge.

The bride was charmingly attired in a neat traveling costume.

The groom is the junior partner of the firm of James Walsh & Son, brokers and bankers, Wall street, New York.

David E. Morgan was best man, and Miss Mary Murphy bridesmaid.

Mr. and Mrs. Walsh left early in the evening for Chicago, and on their return will reside in Scotch Plains.

Those present were:

Mr. and Mrs. Murphy, father and mother of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. James Walsh, father and mother of the groom, and Miss Mamie Walsh, of Brooklyn; Mrs. Mann, Miss Harriette Squires, Rahway; Miss Anna Murphy, Plainfield; Mr. Johnson, New York; Harry Smith and William Mace, Brooklyn; Miss Mamie Murphy, Newark; Mrs. Hollinsworth, Miss Hollinsworth, Miss Carter, Harry Carter, Miss Lillian Nichols, Mrs. Rourke, Mr. Duyckinck, Scotch Plains; Detective Lyman, of Inspector McLoughlin's Staff, New York.

ANOTHER HOME WEDDING.

The Western Cousin of Dr. George W. Endicott Married at Westfield—Miss Stilwell Becomes Mrs. Malcolm McDonald.

Another charming home wedding took place at 12:30 Thursday at the residence of Charles G. Endicott, Prospect street, Westfield, when Miss Emma Stilwell, and Malcolm McDonald, both of Seattle, Washington, were married by the Rev. W. Cadwell. Only the relatives of the bride and the groom were present.

The happy couple left immediately for Washington, where they will make their home.

The bride is a popular and accomplished young woman, and will be much missed in church and social circles in Westfield, in which she has moved for the past year.

She is a cousin of Charles G. Endicott, and of Dr. George W. Endicott of this city.

HE POWER OF GOLD.

Walter Sanford's Famous Production to Be Produced in Music Hall.

Walter Sanford brings his recent successful production, "The Power of Gold", to Music Hall, Saturday night, Oct. 7. This play has evoked considerable favorable comment in New York. Though it came before the public when English melodrama was considered dead, yet it has proved a greater money-maker than any of its predecessors. While the scene of action is laid in London and while the characters are all of English type, still the author has so fashioned his story that it is perfectly understandable on this side of the Atlantic, and its comedy is of that cosmopolitan order appreciated all over the world. It is a scenic melodrama of modern London life, and in its telling shows massive stage pictures of well-known localities. The readers of Dickens will find many dramatic landmarks in "The Power of Gold": St. Hilda's Foundling Asylum, where Walter Wilding (No Thoroughfare) was placed; the Houndsditch Mad House on the sunken Marshes, where Barnaby Rudge and his Raven rested in durance vile after the Lord George Gordon Riots; an interior of Apsley House near Hyde Park Gate (the former home of the Duke of Wellington); a squalid section of Whitechapel, where Fagin taught his proteges the art of theft; and the Regent's Canal, passing through Old London: all being thrillingly realistic in the extreme. The company has been very carefully selected by Mr. Sanford from his many players, and are all well-known people in the dramatic circles.

A Play of Rare Interest.

"The Power of Gold", the latest of Walter Sanford's massive productions, will be seen in Music Hall next Saturday night, Oct. 7. This play is one of modern life, tells a story common to all great communities, pictures a tale of love, despair and poverty, and shows a series of elaborate stage pictures, rarely seen in local theatres. For the elaborate settings which frame the dramatic incidents, the artists have chosen some of the most weird and most prominent quarters of London, where the action of the play is laid. Most of the localities are about that world-famed church of Sir Christopher Wren's, St. Paul's, which forms the hub of Old London. Ten elaborate scenes, requiring the full dimensions of the stage, are employed, and the story of the drama is left to the hands of those varied types of the upper and lower streets of London society, the one claiming Thackeray as its historian, the other reeking with Fagins, Sykes, Dodgers, Rexams and Riderhoods, immortalized by Dickens. Mr. Sanford will bring to Plainfield one of his very best dramatic companies.

All Their Customers Feel Like This.

A Plainfield man who for many years has purchased his clothing in Newark of Stoutenburg & Co., saw an advertisement of the "fall opening" of this house in The Constitutionalist, Thursday night, and this led him to "hold forth" regarding the substantial clothing that he bought there every season. "You might think I was a talking advertisement for Stoutenburgh & Co., if you did n't know me better,"—said he—"but the truth of the matter is that every customer they have talks just as I do. Every man in that store makes it his particular business to satisfy every purchaser who enters the doors. They have the clothing and they have the low price to do it, so I suppose the rest is an easy matter; and I don't wonder that they have an enormous business. For style, fit and quality of goods for a fair price, Stoutenburgh & Co. surely cannot be beat."

—L. C. Randolph, milkman, has a new delivery wagon, which is a beauty.

made beforehand with Mine Host A. H. King; steeds were pastured in the hotel basement, and the riders took possession of the dining hall, where, at a long table, covers were spread for the party.

The menu was gorgeous with good things, and like jolly Mr. King himself needs only to be seen to be appreciated. Here it is:

Blue Points
Puree of Partridge, a la Gentilhomme
Cucumbers Pickles Olives
Broiled Lake Trout, with Fines Herbes, Maitre d'Hotel
Duchess Potatoes
Roast Chicken, Giblet Sauce
Peach Fritters, Wine Sauce
Spaghetti and Cream
Roman Punch,
Chicken Salad
Sweet Potatoes Peas Rice Croquette
Sliced Tomatoes
Custard Pie Assorted Cakes
Bananas Watermelon
Mixed Nuts Layer Raisins
Cheese Coffee

All this was "a mighty good layout", as the boys said; and if one had a flash-light of the satisfied and smiling faces after the feast it would make a pleasant picture for presentation and a capital testimonial for Mr. King.

Those who sat at the table were: H. G. Parker, President; Dr. H. Iredell, Captain; Dr. Walter Rice, First Lieutenant; Herbert Rastall, Second Lieutenant; George VanVechten, Secretary and Treasurer; William D. Burt, Dr. William Macom, J. A. Blish, George K. Parsell, Charles Farmer, Theodore Lester, Duncan Battison, William Shinnin, R. E. Sampson, Charles Zimmerman, Amil Volkert, Clifford R. Dunham, W. A. Jackson, C. E. Head, William Foulkes, F. Daire, William Drake, Ray Pawley, Daniel Stelle, John Clayton, Ernest Devere, D. M. Vail Kinports, Alexander Merchant, John Strassburger, R. Rastall, E. VanCleef, Daniel H. Voorhees, William E. Winsland, H. Bartle, C. Wolff, Theodore Tegtmeyer, J. S. Reed, A. Atkinson and Charles Kilbourne, all of New Brunswick; and S. H. Thomas and the Daily Press representative.

When the last course had been served, a box of fragrant Havanas was passed round with the compliments of Frank L. C. Martin, Captain of the P. B. C. A vote of thanks to Capt. Martin for his kind remembrance was proposed by Dr. Iredell, and unanimously carried.

The smoke wreaths curled upward and vanished, and dull care went with them. At this point, when all things favored, President H. G. Parker, as toast master, arose and, after a few happy remarks and sallies of wit, called on several of the orators present to favor the company with speeches. Among those who told amusing stories were C. E. Head, William Foulks and Daniel Stelle. In jest and merry-making time passed quickly. It was 12 before the last pleasantry was uttered and the bugle sounded the mount. Forty wheels were quickly in motion, forty lanterns flashed brilliant light over the road, good-byes and compliments were showered on Landlord King, the whirr of wheels sounded, and the jolly party were off for the quaint old city on the Raritan.

CHARITY BENEFIT.

Fair of The Woman's Auxiliary Board of Muhlenberg Hospital.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—The Woman's Auxiliary Board of Muhlenberg Hospital intend to hold a fair on the 1st and 2d of November, both afternoons and evenings, at the Casino of the Union County Country Club on Seventh street.

The members of this board are very anxious to make this fair a great success, financially as well as socially, and for this purpose have taken special pains in preparing a large variety of handsome needlework for the different tables. A grand display of fancy and useful articles will not fail to tempt our friends and patrons into purchasing suitable presents for the approaching Christmas holidays.

The demands upon our hospital during the past summer season have been unusually heavy, and the Woman's Board is therefore particularly desirous of realizing a goodly sum, to be used at their discretion for the benefit of the hospital.

As all the different denominations in Plainfield are represented in our board, it is distinctly understood that the fair will not be held under the auspices of one or more churches, but is to be entirely unsectarian.

Contributions of any kind, money, useful or fancy articles, dolls, toys, large or small, cake, etc., etc., will be gratefully received by the undersigned or any member of the board, and a large attendance at the fair is earnestly requested.

EMILIE SCHIPPER,
Corresponding Secretary.

Gone to Other Owners.

Recent North Plainfield real-estate transfers include the following:

Howard F. Turner to Martin L. Rickerson, $1.
Phineas M. French to Louise H. Jennings, $1,500.
Lambert Heyniger to the City National Bank of Plainfield, $1.
Rose M. Verdon to Louisa Verdon, $1.
Jacob Kliner to Serafino Troiano, $250.
Peter Wooden to Amos F. Allen, $50.
Newton B. Smalley to Peter Ross, $400.

A New Bowling Captain.

John Lynch was elected captain of the C. Y. M. L. bowling team at a meeting held last Thursday evening in the club house. The boys are all anxious to get a place on the team, and some good work is being done.

It was decided to reserve Thursday evening of each week for the ladies.

TENANTS IN ARREARS.

Plainfield Landlords to Organize to Protect Themselves from Loss.

A society to consist of property-owners and real estate brokers is to be formed in this city, similar to a new society in New York. Its object is to discourage the practice some tenants have of renting a house for a short time, then leaving without paying the rent, and defeating other dealings of a similar nature. The society also purposes cutting off free rent for one, two or three months as an inducement to secure tenants for a longer term. A black-list of tenants in arrears will be kept, and reference can be made to it when necessary. The title is to be Property-owners' Protective Association.

The objects of the association will be:—First, no "free rent", and second, the collection from house-seekers of all arrears due to any member of the association.

COMRADES GAVE HOMAGE.

Wm. R. Northup at Rest from Life's Cares and Troubles.

Funeral services of Wm. R. Northup were held at his late residence, 173 North avenue, Tuesday evening at 8.

Members of the A. O. U. W. were present, also members of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R.

The Rev. J. W. Richardson, of the Park Avenue Baptist church, read the Scriptural selection, and offered prayer.

Master Workman Thaddeus Smith recited the ritual for the A. O. U. W., which was simple and impressive.

The ritual of the Grand Army was recited by Commander M. C. Dobbins, assisted by I. McVoy, Charles Stevens, Charles Westphal, and Chaplain John Goodwin.

The drum corps accompanied the G. A. R. Post, and played the funeral march. At the house "Nearer My God to Thee" was rendered.

This morning the remains were taken to Wickford, R. I., for interment. At that place a delegation from the G. A. R. met the party and escorted the deceased to the cemetery.

Those acting as pall-bearers were Thaddeus Smith, Charles Randolph, John Anglemann, I. McVoy and M. C. Dobbins.

Progress at the German School.

The German Day School, Grove street, corner Manor avenue, North Plainfield, opens Saturday, Oct. 14. DRUGGED BY ROBBERS.

BECAUSE OF THIS MISFORTUNE, CULVER'S OUT OF A JOB.

He Was Night Operator and Ticket Agent at the Westfield Jersey Central Station—His Accounts Being Examined, and a New Man in Charge.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

WESTFIELD, Oct. 2.—O. S. Culver, the New Jersey Central night operator and ticket agent here, has been discharged and an examination of his accounts is being made.

It has leaked out that Culver was drugged Saturday night by someone who evidently intended to rob the ticket office. It being the night before the first of the month, there was in the office a large amount of money from the sale of commutation tickets. Two citizens who went about 9 p. m. to purchase tickets, found Culver in a half dazed, half frenzied condition, and wholly unmanageable. Money was lying scattered about the office with nothing to prevent its being stolen. All that the stupified operator could tell in answer to the questions put to him was, that someone had given him drink from a flask. The railroad officials learned about Culver's condition, and sent a special man from Elizabeth to take charge of the office for the night.

When Sunday morning came the drugged man had recovered his senses, but was unable to tell who it was that had given him the drink. A new man is now in charge of the office.

HIS ACCOUNTS ALL RIGHT.

But Nevertheless Culver Stays Out of His Job, for His Carelessness.

When the Jersey Central officials yesterday balanced the accounts of Orville H. Culver, night ticket agent in Westfield, whose escapade was first told of by The Press, they found that not a cent was missing. Culver was unable to say who gave him the liquor by which he was drugged, but admitted having been in the habit of associating during the long night hours with rough fellows who hang about the station. They probably knew the money was in the drawer. They have frequently seen the rush of commuters to buy tickets the last day of each month. One or more of these men, it is thought, induced Culver to take a drink which had been drugged. This happened about 9 at night.

The plans of the men were frustrated by the presence in the office of Chauncey Pennington, a friend of Culver. He suspected something wrong when he saw the operator overcome, and sent for help. Young Pennington says:

"I was in the station about 9 o'clock Saturday night talking to Culver. He was all right then. Soon afterwards he stepped out. While he was absent I heard his call on the telegraph instrument. I yelled to him, and he came and went to the window to sell a man a ticket. Suddenly he fell in a stupor. He remained in that condition over two hours. When he revived he was wild, and struggled so hard three men had to hold him on the floor. I surmised at once that he had been given dosed whiskey, but he was too frantic to give an account of how he got it.

"I notified Horatio Dankel, the special operator who lives here, and he took charge of the office until a man was sent out by the train despatcher. There is no doubt in my mind that Culver was drugged by some one of the roughs who hang about here, to get at the money."

Culver now says that he had felt ill all Saturday. Shortly after 7 a man came to the ticket office window and offered him a flask, telling him that a drink of whiskey would "brace him up". Culver took a drink, as did a friend of his who was with him. About ten minutes later he began to feel dazed and shortly after succumbed entirely to the influence of the liquor.

Culver thinks he was drugged, and that it was part of a plot to rob the office, which contained an unusually large amount of money, as it was the last day of the month. It has been learned that Culver's friend, who drank with him, was similarly affected by the liquor. He was confined to his bed on Sunday, and was unable to attend his business on the next day.

Another theory of the drugging is that a man, who was known to be unfriendly to Culver, and who had been heard to say that he would get "square with him", took this method of revenge, knowing it would throw suspicion upon Culver.

His Integrity Beyond Question.

At a special meeting of the directors of the Plainfield Building and Loan Association, held October 2, the following resolutions were adopted:

WHEREAS, It has pleased the Almighty in His wise providence to remove from us by death our late Secretary, Nathan Harper; therefore be it

Resolved, That while in humble submission we bow to the will of Him who doeth all things well, we deeply deplore the loss of our late Secretary and associate, whose ability, faithfulness, and integrity were beyond question, and we extend to the family of our deceased friend our heartfelt sympathy in this their hour of sorrow and affliction; and

Resolved, That this testimonial of our appreciation and sorrow be forwarded to the bereaved family of our departed friend and associate, and that a copy of these resolutions be entered in full on the minutes of our association, and also published in the local press.

Park Club Forging Ahead.

Park Club members had no opposition Monday to the ticket prepared by C. W. McCutchen, Henry A. McGee and George T. Rogers, the nominating committee; and the following were unanimously elected:

President—Samuel St. J. McCutchen.
Vice-President—R. A. Hegeman, Jr.
Secretary—George D. Hallock.
Treasurer—George F. Dupee.
Governors—Morgan S. Taylor, George A. Evans, Charles A. Reed, Benjamin M. Day, George C. Worth.

Treasurer George Dupee in his annual report made a most creditable showing of the club's finances, including a cash balance-on-hand of $686.63, and a balance of real estate assets of $1,293.70 above the outstanding bonds.

Will Send Delegates.

At the regular business meeting in the Third Street mission Monday night, the following officers were elected:

President—C. E. Thompson.
Vice-president—James Finch.
Recording Secretary—Miss Florence Dodge.
Corresponding Secretary—Irving L. Brady.
Treasurer—Mrs. A. Grant.

The chairmen of the Prayer-meeting and Lookout Committees are Alexander Grant and George Leland.

It was decided to send three delegates to the coming State Convention at Trenton.

The attendance at the meeting was good, and the session was interesting.

Grand Shooting for Smith Again.

A live-bird shoot was held Tuesday at Paterson, twenty-five birds to each man, and $25 entrance. The Patersons offered $50 to the man making the highest score. C. Smith of Plainfield and Ferd VanDyke of New York took first money and the $50, making the total first money $162.50. They killed 24 birds each out of their 25.

To Race at Last.

Next Saturday afternoon, at 3 sharp, Coffe and Willis will run the much-disputed 25 miles, on the track at the Gentlemen's Driving Park. There will no doubt be a large crowd present if the day is fair.

RAN DOWN THE MOUNT.

R. F. M. CHASE HAS ANOTHER DANGEROUS EXPERIENCE.

His Horse Took Fright at the Outset of a Pleasure Drive, Threw Out Mr. Chase and Friend, and Smashed the Village Cart.

A runaway accident in which R. F. M. Chase came near being killed occurred Tuesday afternoon about 4:30.

Mr. Chase had a spirited young horse hitched to a village cart, and with a friend, a young man from New York, intended to take a drive. Just as they got in the cart, the horse became unmanageable, and getting frightened he bolted down the drive leading to the street.

Mr. Chase held fast to the reins and kept the horse in the street until he reached Lynch's shop, when the wagon collided with a maple tree. The shock threw both men to the road-bed. The horse then ran down the sidewalk, on which Misses Rosie Bartells and Jennie Gordon were walking home. They saw the horse in time to run out to the middle of the street, escaping injury.

The horse turned into Johnston's drive, where he ran into a deep ditch, and fell, upsetting the cart. Some men ran up, and held him, while others unhitched him. The horse is slightly cut, and the cart is badly wrecked. Mr. Chase was badly bruised by being thrown on his shoulder, but was able to follow up the runaway. His friend was more severely hurt, as when he attempted to follow he found he was not able. His left arm hung limp at his side, and it was feared it was broken or wrenched out of place. A physician was summoned by telephone, and the injuries of the two were cared for.

JUDGE HARPER'S FUNERAL.

Friend Aaron Powell Pays Glowing Tribute to His Memory.

Funeral services over the remains of Nathan Harper were held at his late residence, 314 Central avenue, Monday afternoon at 2.

The house was filled with friends and relatives of the deceased; noticeable were a number of aged people who were personal friends.

Friend Aaron Powell spoke impressively as follows:

"Again we are summoned to the house of mourning, and again we are admonished that we have no continuing city. Today we come to pay a last token of respect to our beloved friend. He had passed his allotted three-score years and ten, but the transition came suddenly, even to our friend.

"There is one thing appointed in our existence, and that is an admonition to live to be prepared for the inevitable. We are here today, we know nothing of the morrow; it is all hidden in mystery with our loving Father. He doeth all things well, and in His own good time we shall be summoned into His presence. He has many mansions for us; we are not to choose, but accept the assignment.

"Our beloved friend has been known for many years, and with respect. He was a fond and affectionate father. There will be a great void in the home circle in the days to follow. He has gone to join his beloved wife in heaven. His home life showed a true, steadfast friend. How many there are here today that can testify to this!

"He was a member of the Society of Friends, and was especially devoted to the Sunday-school. For 20 years he had been its Superintendent. His fondness for children was apparent on all sides, and though at times the work may have seemed irksome, he felt that the results would fully compensate him. What will be the results of his teaching? It cannot be estimated. He was a public-spirited citizen, as some of you know. He was a father and founder of our municipal government, and later he became mayor of the city.

"As a friend of progress and improvement, none will leave a record more indelible. As a member of the Board of Education, he again showed his interest in children and public schools. He always advocated the best possible facilities for rich and poor alike. I need not, and I cannot, enumerate all the public services he has performed. He was emphatically the people's friend, and his motto was 'The greatest possible good to the greatest possible number'.

"As a jurist he stood preeminent. Impartially he followed the strict lines of justice. In the list of the judiciary of this State none stand brighter than he.

"As a philanthropist he was well known. His effort for temperance, year after year, was recognized. He was always striving to close up the avenue of temptation.

"There is one of many incidents in his life that is valuable. The formation of the Boys Club was principally through him. In the earliest meetings he was always present to give wise counsel, and study plans for it. His Christianity was not so much a creed as it was a life. If we review the life of our friend we will find it was of a high quality. It is said 'God removes his workmen but continues his work'. It is so in this case. How shall the important work be continued. As our narrow circle contracts there is an increased responsibility. Who in this city shall take his place as a friend of the children, as a philanthropist? These are questions we must answer ourselves.

"Someone has said 'Heaven is a relation between God and man'. We need not wait for it, but can have it now. We should be dedicated to the higher Christian truths, and fix the ideal in life high.

"When we have to part with friends, when the heartstrings are torn, this life of God will be a dependence. It was in this sublime realm that our friend lived and died, and may it be a rich legacy for our use, then there will be no burden too great for us to bear."

Dr. Rodman followed with an affecting prayer, and those present took a farewell look at the body.

At the cemetery Mrs. Aaron Powell recited a very sweet verse, which was followed with a Friends' benediction by Aaron Powell.

The rich funeral palms that rested on the coffin were placed inside of the outer box.

Those acting as pall-bearers were: W. R. Codington, A. L. Force, Robinson Pound, Elias Pope, M. F. Marsley and Adelbert Vail.

Their 25th.

Mr. and Mrs. Wenzel of Evona celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding day at their home Monday evening. There were thirty guests present. The house was prettily decorated with golden-rod and dahlias; the presents were useful as well as beautiful. Refreshments were served during the evening. The guests departed at an early hour in the morning, having thoroughly enjoyed the evening's entertainment.

The Last the Most Popular.

The last Honeyman excursion, which starts next Monday for the World's Fair in five different classes of rates, is going to be the most popular of any. The $40 rate, including board for ten days, is a drawing card, but the private sleeping-car rates are also low, and are being taken advantage of.

A Chance for all the Amateurs.

The High School Athletic Association will celebrate Oct. 14 as Field Day, in the Gentlemen's Driving Park.

RARE MUSIC FEAST.

GREAT THINGS IN STORE FROM THE MELOPOIA.

Violinist Marteau and Contralto Rosa Linde Among the Stars Already Secured, and Miss Emma Eames Likely to Be Another of the Artists—What Conductor Chapman Promises.

The Press learns on the best authority that the Executive Committee of the Melopoia have signed with Henry Marteau, the world's greatest violinist, for the first concert; also with Mme. Rosa Linde, contralto, who made such a great success last week at the Worcester Festival.

Negotiations are now being made with Miss Emma Eames to appear at the second concert. Miss Eames needs no introduction in musical circles. In the last opera season she was the great favorite and leading prima donna, and this year she is to be leading soprano in the opera in New York, under the management of Abbey & Grau.

Mr. Chapman assures The Press that the chorus work will be on a higher standard than ever before. The programme will be made up of novelties which he has secured from abroad, many of which have never before been produced in this country.

The enterprise and push of the committee in providing such a high-class of music and such celebrated artists should receive the warmest support of Plainfield music-lovers.

It is understood that the subscriptions are coming in rapidly, and the list will probably soon be closed. Those who have not already subscribed would do well to send their names in at once.

With such an array of talent, the Casino should be more than crowded to the doors. The subscription price is only $12, entitling the subscriber to 4 tickets for each concert. Who but the Melopoia could bring out in Plainfield such artists as Henry Marteau, Rosa Linde, and last but not least the celebrated and only Emma Eames!

She Teaches Grace and Ease.

The opening reception of Madame Ida Lenom's classes, which took place yesterday afternoon, was a great success. There was a large assembly, and everybody seemed delighted. After a short address, Madame Lenom introduced Mrs. Martin, who takes charge of the Delsarte classes and elocution; she has studied and graduated from Dr. VanMeter's Women's College in Baltimore, and gave ample proof of her talent by her splendid recitations. Madame Lenom gave an Italian song in fine style. In a fancy dance, twelve young girls acquitted themselves very gracefully. Mrs. Martin gave a talk on the benefits derived from Delsarte physical culture. A Japanese dance in costume delighted the audience.

Madame Lenom showed graceful poses and gesturing, of the sort to be learned in her classes. Last was the flower dance, that gave so much pleasure in Music Hall at St. Mary's Commencement. The children all did great credit to the Madame's tuition, and especially the three little girls in green, who delighted the audience with their graceful pirouetting.

The audience complimented Madame Lenom on her success, and several entered her class. The Misses Quinn rendered the music splendidly. Altogether it was a novel and refined reception.

GIFTED ROMOLA TYNTE.

She Delighted a Plainfield Audience on Route from India to the Great and Only Fair.

The parlors of The Albion were well filled on Monday with a select audience, including many of the leading society people of Plainfield, who were charmingly entertained with recitations by Miss Romola Tynte, who is well-known in England, and recently came to the United States after a professional tour in India. Miss Tynte is a really gifted woman, endowed with capacity to carry a critical audience thoroughly along with her. Since her arrival in the United States she has had the full support of the leading society women of New York, Newport and Boston.

Col. King, the new proprietor of The Albion, extended an invitation to many of his neighbors, which was generally accepted, and those who were there enjoyed a literary treat seldom presented in Plainfield.

Between the recitations by Miss Tynte, W. E. McClymont favored the audience with several selections on the piano, for which he was applauded to the echo. The evening's pleasure will long be remembered by all who were present, and the expression was unanimous that both Miss Tynte and W. E. McClymont might soon again be the guests of Col. King. Miss Tynte will leave for Chicago today, where, on invitation of the Women's Committee, she will appear in the Women's Building.

His Twenty-Third.

A few friends of Charles E. Reynolds, of 409 East Fifth street, gave him a surprise on Monday, it being the twenty-third anniversary of his birth.

The evening was pleasantly passed in a social way, dancing being a feature. Mr. Reynolds received several presents as tokens of esteem. Later in the evening supper was served.

Those present were: Miss Pauline Newburger, of Elizabeth; Miss Maude Morris, of Roselle; Miss Belle Mitchell and Miss Devine of Brooklyn; Mrs. Andrew Kinney, Miss Lizzie Gavin, of Plainfield; W. P. Sutherland, and I. Miller, Brooklyn; D. E. Gavin, John McLaughlin, Curt Gotthell, W. E. Deane, Plainfield.

The Notes and the Studies.

Young men interested in any of the following educational branches are requested to meet in the Y. M. C. A. rooms on the evenings stated, whether or not they have already left their names at the Association rooms: Mechanical drawing, Monday, Oct. 9; shorthand and plane geometry, Tuesday, Oct. 10; singing, Friday, Oct. 13. Notice of the organization of other classes will be given later.

—The annual meeting of the Plainfield Relief Association will be held Friday Morning, Oct. 6, at 10, in the rooms of the Y. M. C. A. All interested in the work are cordially invited.

—In Trinity Reformed church, Sunday morning, before administering the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, Pastor Schenck received five new members to his church—four by letter and one on confession.

—Milford Giles, a young man in the employ of J. W. Van Sickle, the North avenue butcher, found the valuable package of pension papers belonging to Pension Agent C. E. Jenkins of Elizabeth, and through a little cent-a-word ad. in The Press they were handed to Mr. Jenkins, who rewarded young Giles for his honesty.

TOBACCO HABIT EASILY CURED.

A FEW Testimonials from persons who have been cured by the use of Hill's Tablets.

THE OHIO CHEMICAL CO.:
DEAR SIR:—I have been using your cure for tobacco habit, and found it would do what you claim for it. I used ten cents worth of the strongest chewing tobacco a day, and from one to five cigars; or I would smoke from ten to forty pipes of tobacco. Have chewed and smoked for twenty-five years, and two packages of your Tablets cured me so I have no desire for it.
B. M. JAYLORD, Leslie, Mich.

DOBBS FERRY, N. Y.
THE OHIO CHEMICAL CO.:—GENTLEMEN:—Some time ago I sent for $1.00 worth of your Tablets for Tobacco Habit. I received them all right and, although I was both a heavy smoker and chewer, they did the work in less than three days. I am cured.
Truly yours, MATHEW JOHNSON, P. O. Box 45.

PITTSBURGH, PA.
THE OHIO CHEMICAL CO.:—GENTLEMEN:—It gives me pleasure to speak a word of praise for your Tablets. My son was strongly addicted to the use of liquor, and through a friend, I was led to try your Tablets. He was a heavy and constant drinker, but after using your Tablets but three days he quit drinking, and will not touch liquor of any kind. I have waited four month before writing you, in order to know the cure was permanent. Yours truly,
MRS. HELEN MORRISON.

CINCINNATI, OHIO.
THE OHIO CHEMICAL CO.:—GENTLEMEN:—Your Tablets have performed a miracle in my case. I have used morphine, hypodermically, for seven years, and have been cured by the use of two packages of your Tablets, and without any effort on my part.

THE NEED OF CONSIDERATION.

How Women Who Have to Work For a Living Are Made to Suffer.

Every woman who has special work of any sort to do finds the hardest part of her day is spent in a struggle with the webs of hindrances woven about her by old conditions. If she is a dressmaker or milliner, she will find her customers do not as a rule keep their engagements to the letter, and after having her time and patience frittered into fringe she, too, will break her promises and join the great army of dressmakers and milliners who have the name of "never keeping their word."

The woman teacher has the advantage of working within set limits, but even she has no such privileges of retiring from social obligations as do men. "What, not see me! Not come to my tea party or dinner!" and her chance acquaintance with a spare half hour or a place to fill at table and straightway is offended. As for women who from the nature of their work often labor at home as authors, artists and teachers of music, their afflictions are legion from their sisters who [illegible] work by women as something [illegible] pocket money without asking a male relative, but as in no way cutting off abundant leisure for waiting and visiting.

The woman whose activities have always been confined to her home knows absolutely nothing about the tyranny of order under which work done outside must go on. The article or story, the sketch or drawing, the hat or gown, must be ready at a certain time, the course of lessons must be given at a fixed date, whether the heart is worried or the head aches.

If from necessity or choice one becomes a tiny part of the world's machine, one must keep up or drop out altogether; there is no middle way. But for the woman who fights the wolf or who chooses to enter a profession or trade as a life work society has absolutely no consideration and small charity. If her domestic says, "Not at home," to save her time, she is called insincere, and if she sends word that she must be excused she is not excused. Far from it! The visitor resolves to "wait one while" before coming again. Yet this woman worker craves good fellowship far more than the woman of leisure.

The time has come when we as women must treat the woman who works with at least as much consideration as we accord to men. That an appointment with a dentist must be kept goes without saying, but his time is no more his little all and possession than is the time of the dressmaker whom we too often disappoint. We ask no excuse from the butcher or baker, the physician or lawyer, when he closes abruptly and says, "I must go," or when he declines an invitation.

The women who must earn money or starve increase in number every year. Opportunities multiply every year, but women as a class do not yet recognize the fact that the successful performance of work means helpful conditions. We need now not pioneers to open new doors and new paths, but cooperation and sympathy at home, in our neighborhood, in our set.—Elizabeth Cummings in Union Signal.

A Speech From the Guillotine.

One of the most ghastly executions of the French revolution was that of the Marquis de Marville. While standing on the scaffold awaiting the completion of the preliminary arrangements, the marquis addressed a few words to the assemblage of people.

He was proceeding to say that before he died he wished to open their eyes to the truth when he was seized by the executioner and forced under the knife. With the utmost sang froid the marquis continued: "Educated as I was among a privileged class, I voluntarily abandoned my friends to live among you, to earn my daily bread side by side with you, and I have always acted like a good patriot."

At this moment the knife fell. The guillotine was, however, in such constant requisition that it was frequently out of order. Upon this occasion the knife fell, but did not sever the vertebræ, although the flesh was horribly mangled. The executioner and his assistants raised the knife again. As soon as they had done so the marquis, still lying face downward, continued, "As I was saying, fellow citizens, when I was interrupted"— And again the knife fell, this time accomplishing its ghastly work.—San Francisco Argonaut.

Jewels That Rhimed.

The Grand Duchess Marie Fedorovna, princess of Wurtemberg, wife of the Grand Duke Paul, son and successor of Catherine the Great of Russia, at a festival given in her honor by Marie Antoinette at the Little Trianon, June 6, 1782, wore on her head a little bird of precious stones, so brilliant that it pained the eyes to look at it. It was set so as to swing and beat its wings over a rose.

Upon another occasion the duke was entertained with great pomp at Chantilly by the Prince of Condé. At a dinner given in the castle the table was covered with a most inexhaustible supply of gold and silver plate. After each course the servants, without noise or confusion, threw all the magnificent vessels out of the windows, but nothing was lost. The precious vessels, jugs and dishes fell into the water of the moat, from which they were taken out in large nets.—Jewelers' Weekly.

Counterfeiters.

One great benefit that the people of this country as a whole derive from national currency is the difficulty which counterfeiters have in imitating the paper and engraving used in its manufacture. A counterfeit bill is very seldom seen in New York city, for example, and is never willfully presented in any large store. Song of the Stars.

When the daylight fades in the evening shades
And the blue melts in the gray,
We pitch our tents in the firmaments
To guard the milky way.
And we gather the broken sunbeams up
That the day has left in its path,
To kindle and build the glow and gild
What our sparkling campfires hath.

With fond caresses we jewel the tresses
Of the moon as she mounts the skies,
And the heavens we sprinkle with many a twinkle
That leaps from our sparkling eyes.
But when the thunderclouds rolls his car
In thunder across the sky,
And the lightning flashes in fitful flashes,
We hide till the storm goes by.

The sun is our master, and no disaster
Can compass his night of rest.
[illegible]
We guard the east and the west.
We sometimes find where the comet hides,
And we frighten him out of his lair,
Till he rushes through the night, like a fox in his flight,
To hide in the great nowhere.

We sometimes pause in our journey because
We see ourselves in the glass
Of the silent lakes or the sea that takes
Our picture as we pass.
But when the daylight quivers and breaks,
And the gray melts into the blue,
The tears we shed o'er our fallen dead
Are found in the morning dew.
—Alfred Ellison.

Appearances Don't Govern.

I have just about concluded,
After figgerin quite a spell,
That appearances don't govern,
And that blood don't allus tell.

Sometimes the shaller plowin
Will raise the biggest crap,
And it ain't the tallest maple
Allus rines the sweetest sap.

It ain't the richest, rankest grass
[illegible]
'Tain't likely all the eggs we find
Are the hen's that made the nest.

The tallest stalk of corn that grows
In my twenty acre field
Ain't got a nubbin on it
Nor any sign of yield.

The likeliest apple tree that grows
In my neighbor's orchard lot
Is full of blossoms every spring,
But the fruit is sure to rot.

While the crooked, ornery seedlin
Standin outside by the road,
Comes up smilin every autumn
With a bargain wagon load.

The largest sheep of all the flock
May grow the coarsest wool
The finest horse upon the farm
May balk before he'll pull.

The scrubbiest nag upon the track
May win the longest heat,
While the one that has the backer
May be the easiest beat.

The sweetest drink I ever took
I drank from out a gourd;
The deepest water in the creek
Is just above the ford.

So I've just about concluded,
After figgerin quite a spell,
That appearances don't govern,
And that blood don't allus tell.
—Will W. Pfrimmer.

Six Words.

Six little words lay claim to me each passing day:
I ought, I must, I can, I will, I dare, I may.
I Ought—that is the law God on my heart has written,
The mark for which my soul is with strong yearning smitten.
I Must—that is the bound set either side the way
By nature and the world, so that I shall not stray.
I Can—that measures out the power intrusted me
Of action, knowledge, art, skill and dexterity.
I Will—is the higher crown on human head can rest;
The freedom's signet seal upon the soul impressed.
I Dare is the device which on the seal you read,
[illegible]
I May [illegible]
[illegible]
I ought, I must, I can, I will, I dare, I may:
The all lay claim to me each hour of every day.
Teach me, O God! and then, then shall I know each day
That which I ought to do, must, can, will, dare and may.

By virtue of an order of the Court of Chancery of New Jersey, made on the day of the date hereof, in a cause wherein John H. VanWinkle, Frederick W. McCully and Harry Marshall, executors of the last will and testament of Daniel J. Marshall, deceased, are complainants, and you and others are defendants, you are required to appear, plead, demur or answer to the bill of said complainants on or before the 3d day of November next, or that in default thereof such decree will be made against you as the Chancellor shall think equitable and just.

The said bill is filed to foreclose a mortgage made by Charles J. Noel and wife to Margaret Hoeppel on lands in the city of Plainfield, in Union county, New Jersey, dated April 1, 1887, and duly assigned to Daniel J. Marshall, and you are made defendant because you own said mortgaged lands or some part thereof.

Dated Sept. 2, 1893.

TOWNSEND'S
Marble & Granite Works,
30 SOMERSET STREET,
PLAINFIELD, N. J.

If you have not engaged your work, I should be pleased to do it for you.

I buy only first-class Marble and Granite and do not sell unless at prices that will enable me to put up the work with credit to myself and justice to the parties purchasing.

I employ no agents and therefore am enabled to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customer, of the commission generally paid to agents.

I am under a very small expense in running my shop, myself and my son doing the larger portion of the work, and we personally attend to the setting of all work, and look upon business in this light, that Good Work and Good Material, at Fair Prices, is a standing advertisement for my business, which will tend to build up trade, and I feel safe to warrant that no dealer can sell you the same work and same stock any cheaper than I can.

Hoping to be favored with your patronage, I am yours respectfully,

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR ANNIVERSARY.

The Park Avenue Baptists Entertain Their Sister Societies of the Neighborhood.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church celebrated their fifth anniversary in the church Tuesday evening.

All of the societies in the city and several from nearby towns were invited, and they were well represented.

The front part of the church was tastefully decorated. In front of the pulpit a large-sized copy of the pledge of the society rested on an easel, surrounded very prettily with autumn leaves.

On the platform were President A. D. VanSciver, the Rev. Palmer Hulburt, associate pastor of the Marble Collegiate church, New York, and Dewitt C. Skaden of the Park Avenue Christian Endeavor Society.

The services opened with a hymn from No. 6 Hymn Book: "What a Wonderful Saviour!" Mrs. B. T. Barnes presided at the organ very acceptably, and she and a chorus choir made the music a feature.

The address of welcome was made by the president, who spoke briefly and to the point.

In the absence of the pastor of the church, the Rev. Mr. Richardson, Mr. Skaden read a selection from the Scriptures and offered an impressive prayer.

Another hymn was sung by the congregation, which was followed by an exceedingly interesting report of the home society by its secretary, Miss Florence G. Hawkins, which showed that the society was decidedly active in the different branches of the work.

The president introduced the Rev. Palmer Hulburt, who delivered an address on the subject "Christian Endeavorers". The speaker was very interesting, and gave many excellent thoughts and suggestions that will be applicable to individual work. At times he became very humorous, and his occasional witticisms were much enjoyed. He paid a glowing tribute to the society's secretary by saying that the report made was the best he had ever heard.

After another hymn, the Mizpah benediction closed this part of the services.

Everyone was then invited to retire to the Sunday-school room, where an informal reception was held. Tables were neatly arranged around the room, and all were provided with cake and cream.

The society deserves much credit for its masterly effort during the past five years, and for the climax last evening.

A quartette composed of Mr. and Mrs. Rowe, Miss Runyon and Charles Case, rendered a very pretty anthem during the service.

Doctors Dine Well, But What a Subject!

The quarterly meeting and dinner of the Plainfield physicians was held Monday evening in Hotel Grenada. A paper was read by Dr. Ard, on the subject "Mastoiditis", and was afterwards discussed by the other doctors.

The dinner, which was an informal one, was highly enjoyable. Those present were: Doctors Tomlinson, Probasco, Endicott, Murray, Boone, Simpson, Hedges, Davis, Ard and Paul. Dr. Hedges who is president of the association presided at the meeting.

The following was the menu, which the doctors united in declaring unsurpassed:

MRS. VAIL WINS.

STRUCK JURY CASE SETTLED.

The Central Railroad Company Pays $2,500 Damages in the Vail Case —Craig A. Marsh the Winning Counsel.

The services of the struck jury selected to try the case of Madge E. Vail against the Central Railroad Company will not be needed, as the case has been settled. On Tuesday, Craig A. Marsh, counsel for Mrs. Vail, received the company's check for twenty-five hundred dollars in settlement of the claim. The injuries suffered by Mrs. Vail were received at the collision which happened at Greenville several months ago. They confined her to the house for about three weeks, and gave her system a severe shock, from which, however, it is believed she has nearly recovered. The case was ready for trial, which was to begin before the struck jury, Judge VanSyckel presiding, on Wednesday.

FRACTURED HER WRIST.

Serious Result of a Cottage Place Smashup.

Mrs. Healy, of 226 East Ninth street, hired a horse and wagon of Richard Day, the liveryman, on Tuesday, having several errands about the city. Frank Hunt accompanied the rig as driver.

As Mrs. Healy wanted to see a colored woman in regard to some work, she was taken to a house in Cottage place. She remained in the wagon while the driver went into the house. At that time a fast freight train came thundering along, and frightened the horse, which started to run at terrific speed towards Washington street. In turning at the corner of Cottage place and Washington street, the wagon struck a large stone, which upset it, throwing Mrs. Healy out on the embankment.

Mrs. Healy was severely hurt, receiving several cuts on the face. She was also considerably bruised, and a wrist was fractured. With assistance she was taken into the house occupied by Mr. Taynor and family at Washington and Third streets, where she was cared for. Her husband arrived soon afterwards, and remained with her.

In the meantime the horse continued his flight through Washington street to Second street, and down Second to Watchung avenue, where he was captured.

The wagon is a total wreck. The horse was not injured.

Mrs. Healy was taken to her home later in the day.

Dr. Murray attended the patient.

TO THE BORD OF GUARDIANS.

They Are Asked to Deduct from Money Passing Trugh Their Hands.

To the chief magistrate, and to the Bord of Guardians, of this City of Gentlemen

I here by petission your noble body to pay attention to the complaint of old Peter Collins (aged 78 years and half destitute), against Michael Walsh, who is frauding him out of seven $7 dollars a 25 cents hone tly due to Collins for Rent of the Barn where he Walsh kept his Horses in during the month of July 189—An for the ballance of Rent due for the rooms where Walsh and his family lived owned by Collins—Gentlemen, hopeing you will be kind enough to deduct this aforesaid amount from the cheque, or money that will pass trugh your hands for his work on the streets with his horses he kept there while working on the corporation—this Justice rests in your hands—As I understand Walsh has his effects so fixed that no Law can catch him while his wife's

Old man Collins is an old citizen and I paid $22.26 cents Taxes for him about four weeks ago—And you can understand Walsh is no tax payer, no voter, no citizen, yet he can have (4) horses working on the city work at once together—While old citizens and tax payers cannot get one dayes work on the Corporation I should think such a man as Walsh should have his work on the Streets curtailed to the work of one horse

A BRIGGS BREEZE.

Rev. Dr. Richards Tried His Sentiments on the Presbytery.

The Briggs controversy cropped up in the afternoon session of the Elizabeth Presbytery in the Crescent Avenue church, Wednesday, and enlivened the proceedings. The outcome was that the pastor, the Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards, who is a strong Briggs man, was defeated in his own church.

The question was over the approval of Delegate Hamner's conduct at the General Assembly. Mr. Hamner fought and voted for Briggs, and Dr. Richards moved that his vote be approved. This precipitated a stormy debate, and after much warm ecclesiastical argument Dr. Richards was forced to withdraw his motion. The Presbytery did, however, vote to approve Mr. Hamner's diligence in attendance.

The reason the Presbytery opposed Mr. Richard's motion was, as one divine put it, because the Presbytery had no right to fly in the face of the General Assembly in sustaining Delegate Hamner's defense of his vote for Briggs.

FIGHTING RACE-TRACKS.

DETERMINED ATTITUDE OF LEADING PLAINFIELD CITIZENS.

Executive Committee Appointed to Open the Campaign with a Sunday Mass-Meeting—The Avowed Purpose Not to Organize an Independent Party But to Secure Anti-Race-Track Candidates from the Others.

The meeting of the Plainfield Branch, Anti-Race-Track League, in the Common Council chambers Saturday night, was attended by forty-two representative men. President Mason W. Tyler filled the chair, and Wm. M. Stillman was elected secretary.

Among those present were Craig A. Marsh, W. B. Codington, S. A. Ginna, A. Vanderbeek, Henry M. Maxson, H. O. Newman, C. L. Goodrich, D. J. Yerkes, Chas. Potter, E. M. Rodman, C. Schenck, John Leal, F. B. Millington, John Ulrich.

The minutes of the meeting of March 30 were read and approved.

Counselor Marsh of the appointed committee reported a constitution modeled on that of the Union County Branch. The stated object is to suppress race-track gambling and to aid in securing the repeal of all laws protecting the same, and to prevent the passage of such laws in the future. Any legal voter willing to cooperate is eligible to membership.

This was adopted, and the following executive committee was appointed: President Tyler, S. A. Ginna, Rowland Cox, C. A. Marsh, Isaac L. Miller.

Speeches were made urging citizens to sign the roll, and the need of enthusiasm was pointed out. The executive committee was instructed to arrange for a mass-meeting to be held some Sunday soon—in Music Hall if afternoon, and in a church if evening.

Dr. Richards said that some had obtained the mistaken idea that the League aimed to organize an independent party. The present aim, he said, was to secure from the chief political parties men who could be trusted to vote for repealing the race-track legislation. If both parties nominated such men, then it was indifferent to the League which of them should be elected. If not, then another course would be taken.

The actual policy of the League was outlined in the adoption of the following resolution:

Resolved, That the present purpose and endeavor of this League is to call forth such an expression of public sentiment against race-track gambling and its legislation as shall secure from the chief existing political parties the nomination of candidates who may be pledged and trusted to do their utmost to carry out the objects of this League.

To raise necessary funds, it was carried that voluntary subscriptions of $1 be solicited from the members.

SEVERED FROM THE MAYOR.

Sergeant Lynch is Sad at Leaving Dear Friends and Scenes.

The Common Council Monday night received the following letter:

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Sept. 28, 1893.

To the Honorable Alexander Gilbert, Mayor, and the Honorable Common Council of the City of Plainfield:

GENTLEMEN:—I hereby tender my resignation from the office of regular policeman of the city of Plainfield, to take effect immediately.

In severing my connection with the Mayor and governing body of this city, after a continuous service of nearly 20 years, it is fitting that I should give expression of my sense of gratitude for the uniform kindness and courtesy that have fallen to my lot in all our official relations. In resigning my office, although prompted so to do by the opportunity to better myself, it is not without a keen sense of regret because of leaving scenes and friends that have become dear to me.

With great respect, I am
Your obedient servant,
PATRICK LYNCH.

Councilman Marsh for the Police Committee expressed high appreciation of Mr. Lynch's faithful service, and the resignation was accepted with regret.

THEY'LL ALL BE THERE.

Look at This Array of Local Talent to Take Part in the Mock Trial.

The following men will participate in the Mock Trial to be held under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. in Music Hall Monday, Oct. 16, at 8 p. m.: Rowland Cox, Charles J. Fisk, S. A. Ginna, Alexander Gilbert, E. W. Hedges, S. B. Joseph, John Leal, John W. Murray, W. D. Murray, R. F. Murray, Charles W. McCutchen, S. St. John McCutchen, Henry A. McGee, Craig A. Marsh, H. R. The prices of admission will be 50 cents, 75 cents, and $1.

A REVEREND FRAUD.

DAVID F. ROBERTSON AT LAST ON THE RACK.

New York's State Board of Charities Investigating Charges of This Familiar Plainfielder—He Raised Funds for the Juvenile Society, and Was the Chief Beneficiary.

These columns have repeatedly warned the public against the Rev. David F. Robertson, a benevolent looking old man whose home is at 302 East Second street and whose self-styled business is "Missionary, New York". At last the New York State Board of Charities is investigating the charges against him.

The Charity Organization Society charges that Robertson as Treasurer of the Juvenile Guardian Society does not properly attend to its affairs, that he has drawn a salary, contrary to law, and that while away from his office he left the discharge of his duties to others. The Charity Organization Society, on the strength of this and other charges, declares that the work of the Juvenile Society is useless in a benevolent sense.

The special investigating committee met Thursday. It consists of Oscar Craig, Stevens Smith, M. D., and Edward H. Litchfield.

The business of the day consisted in overhauling the books of the society since 1890. Expert Accountant William A. May, who had been employed to examine the books, testified that the bookkeeping was done in a slovenly manner, and that during several months there were discrepancies which were unaccounted for.

"How do you explain that?"—Peter B. Olney, the counsel for the Charity Organization Society, asked Mr. Robertson.

"The money was used for honorable purposes"—replied the witness.

"But where are the vouchers to show it?—said Mr. Olney.

"I have no idea; some of them are in the waste basket, I suppose"—was the answer.

It appears that only about thirty-five per cent. of the money and contributions sent by the benevolent were devoted to charitable purposes. According to the books Mr. Robertson was the main beneficiary.

Mr. May said there was a sum of $1,200 unaccounted for during 1892, but there was an entry for the same sum in January, 1893, as paid to Robertson for services.

The latter said that this sum was taken by himself from the contributions received from the charitable, but though the payments he made himself were thirty in all none of them could be found in the books.

The examination was adjourned unfinished.

"Hundreds of piteously worded circulars have been sent me"—said Robert W. Hebbard, superintendent of the Charity Organization Society—"clamoring for contributions which this man has sent out. I have received many complaints about him, and his success in deceiving the charitable public has induced others to follow in his footsteps."

Oscar Craig of Rochester presided. Wm. C. Davis, the counsel for the Juvenile Guardian Society, defended the society against these charges. The examination of the books of the society, which were submitted to the accountant of the State Board, revealed, as alleged, several small discrepancies. In reply to a question from Mr. Davis, Mr. May, the expert accountant, expressed the opinion that the system of keeping the accounts of the society did not necessarily show dishonesty, but showed extreme carelessness. Mr. Craig requested the matron, Miss E. Gallagher, to give the accountant all books that she had not already given to him.

The Board's accountant further stated that for September, 1890, there was a discrepancy of $124.26 between the deposits withdrawn by the Superintendent and the Society's check books. In his opinion as an expert, he said, this discrepancy was enough to warrant a special inquiry. The result of these discrepancies at the end of the year, he said, caused a false balance.

The Rev. Dr. Robertson was then called to testify under oath. He was examined by counsel of the Charity Organization, Mr. Olney. He said: "I did not know that it was incumbent upon me to keep our own cash account in exact balance with the bank account. What money I did not deposit in the bank, I spent for the Society honestly and honorably." Some of the irregularities he could not explain.

The World's Fair a Success, But It Will Soon Close Its Gates Forever.

The grandest exhibition of our time and possibly for many generations to come will soon be brought to an end.

There remains but one month in which to visit this marvelous gathering of all the World's Productions, and everybody should strain a point to go to Chicago.

The railroad fare heretofore has been considered a hindrance to all classes, but this has all been changed, and on the following days in October the West Shore Railroad will run high-class excursions on its fast express trains in through cars at one-half its lowest fare, i. e., $17, from New York to Chicago and return, and proportionately lower rates from points along its line. These magnificent excursion trains will be in charge of an agent whose duty it is to care for the interests of the company's patrons en route, to furnish detailed information as to accommodations obtainable in Chicago, and to point out the historic points along the

THE IDEAL PARENT.

PASTOR RICHARDSON TELLS WHAT THAT IS.

Sharp Scoring of People Who Lose Their Temper and Strike Their Children.—What the Home-Life Sometimes Is, and What It Should Be.

The sermon of the Rev. J. W. Richardson on "The Ideal Parent", in the Park Avenue Baptist church Sunday, was received by a large congregation. The text was Proverbs XXII: 6—

Train up a child in the way that he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it.

The speaker said in part:

The influence of the parents will have very much to do with the character of the child. The father by passion or selfishness, or the mother by over-indulgence, may so inculcate habits that when come to years the child may be worldly-minded and unreasonable. Biographers when writing about great men, always mention the early life, and how its surroundings and training went toward shaping the man. The Ideal Parent will therefore make the home-life cheerful. If you wish your children to have sunshiny dispositions, give them sunshine at home to grow up in. Do not close the blinds to the parlor, and say to the children, "I will whip you if you play in there". If they happen to make a little noise when they come in from play, do not snarl out, "Stop your noise or go to bed without your supper". Let me tell you, East side, New York, is not the only place where such parental brutality reigns. Such things are the screws and bolts in the [illegible] of their character. If you love your children take a little trouble, make a few sacrifices to bring sunshine into the home. A prominent gentleman said, "I was sent out into the world at an early age; and in twenty families where at various times I made my home, there were only three that could be designated as happy families. The trouble was not so much the lack of love, as the lack of care to manifest it". That is why so many homes are in sack-cloth and ashes. I say to you father, lay aside your evening paper and have a romp with your children. I say to you mother, throw your novel into the fire, and get a book with something sublime in it for the inspiration of your children. If you wish to ruin your boys and girls, compel them to tie down the safety-valve when they come into the house. If you compel the children to believe that all laughter and enjoyment must be left outside the house when they come home at night, you will suddenly realize that they are seeking amusement outside which may result in immorality and degradation. The Ideal Parent will make the home more than a place in which merely to eat, sleep and dress for the street. Home will be made the divinest place on earth to the child; a shelter for escape from school-day troubles; a palace where papa is king and mama queen; a fairy's bower full of innocent mirth and glad surprises; yes, the Ideal Parent will make home the very vestibule of heaven, where the children are taught how to wear [illegible] robes! The parent [illegible] with the child. The parent must strive to be moderate in tone and deliberate of decision, in dealing with the child. It produces a demoralizing effect to say "No you can't—yes you may" in the same breath. It has a dangerous tendency to box their ears, and jerk them by the arms every time you are irritated. It undermines the child's character for the parent to whip him in a fit of temper, and then bribe the sobbing urchin back into good nature by the gift of a little candy, or a one cent piece. Be even with your children. Cultivate evenness of temper more assiduously, than the latest step in dancing. Avoid spasms in your home-government; don't be all honey one minute and all vinegar the next; be even! Let parents reverse their common conduct, and begin to think first, and act afterward. A little girl said, "Papa, may I go over and play with Carrie?" Just then she discovered dissent in his face, and kissing him she quickly added, "Please don't say no—think first". That was a child's protest against a hasty and inconsiderate answer. Parents are too ready to thoughtlessly deny requests which seem trifling, but which to the child is all important. They are prone to allow the quick harsh reply, without stopping to think what it means to them. There is the Ideal, parents think first, act in cold blood! The Ideal Parent will not magnify the faults of a child. Some parents are a perfect terror to their children. Little faults are magnified. Physical defects are often mimicked in the presence of the child. And "Stupid", "Dolt", are epithets frequently applied. Some of these little ones go about feeling like criminals in striped jackets. The germs of manhood and womanhood are passing through a terrible process in such cases. Some of these children, when they fall into mischief, are simply appalled and dread to face their parents—their little hearts beat against their ribs—and they wish they were "twenty-one", because they anticipate the angry words, and already feel the tingle of the brush or strap mercilessly laid on. Wait a few years, and these children will defy the Nero of their home-life. "What, Mr. Preacher, not use the rod?" "Yes it has its legitimate use." "When?" I do not know—but, I do know that parents should not whip the child except as a very very very last resort. If parents are not willing to pay the price of a successful parenthood; if they are not willing to exercise patience, forbearance; if they are not gentle and loving in their home government, then all heaven knows that they have no right to have children! I believe it makes God indignant, when a parent punishes his child in a passion.

A NEW MARKET GROOM.

His Brilliant Wedding to a Boonton Bride.

(From The Boonton Bulletin.)

There was a brilliant gathering at the residence of Samuel Hammond, in this city, yesterday, the event being the marriage of his cousin, Miss Eliza Hammond, to William V. Dunham, Esq., of New Market, the marriage ceremony being performed by the Rev. Charles W. McCormick, of the Methodist church, in the spacious parlor, which was elegantly decorated with plants, cut flowers and vines for the occasion, and presented a beautiful appearance. The bride looked lovely, being attired in a handsome silk of old-rose color, gracefully trimmed with heavy silk lace, and carried a handsome bouquet of Marechal Niel roses and lilies of the valley. She was attended by the Misses Louisa and Mamie Fitzpatrick and Clarence Hammond, cousins of the bride, and Clarence Hall. The wedding march was finely rendered on the piano by Miss Laura Hammond. After the ceremony had been performed and the bridal couple had received the congratulations of their friends, they repaired to the dining room, where the wedding luncheon was partaken of, which was simply a marvel of the caterers' art. Mr. and Mrs. Dunham received many elegant and costly presents among which were a handsome rocking chair, gold and onyx table lamp, mantle clocks, bronzes, silverware and bric-a-brac. The happy couple left Boonton on the 6:26 train, followed by the congratulations and best wishes of their many friends, for a long and happy life, intending, after a brief bridal tour, to settle down in the beautiful home of the groom, who is a retired gentleman, at New Market, N. J. The many friends of the bride think Mr. Dunham may congratulate himself on winning so desirable a lady for his partner in life, it being a fact not generally known that Miss Hammond has gained quite an extensive reputation as a poet, the productions of her pen being eagerly sought after wherever they are known. Among the many guests present were the following: Mr. and Mrs. Geo. H. Dunham and daughter, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. H. V. Dunham, of New Market; Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Dunham, Bound Brook; Mrs. Ann G. Dunham and Mrs. Elizabeth Dunham, Dunellen; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hastings, Tremont, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. James Parker, Miss Libbie Baker, the Misses Fannie and Maria Coombs, Paterson; Mr. and Mrs. Enoch Hammond, William Hammond, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Hammond, Mrs. Mary Hammond, Mrs. Frank Pierce, Thomas Hammond, Mrs. Joseph Hammond, Mrs. William Hammond, Mrs. Joseph Fitzpatrick, Mrs. Frank Coe, Miss Cora Hammond and Miss Hannah Coe, of Boonton.

FREE MANUAL TRAINING.

The Long-Contemplated Boys Club Branch at Last Under Way.

The Boys Club has decided to enter on its course in manual training next Monday evening, and is now fitting up two rooms in the Central building with benches and tools for this purpose.

Olaf Rangstad, who has been secured as the teacher, is instructor in manual training in the public schools of Union Hill, and has had the benefit of a long course of special study and training for this work. Two classes will be held each Monday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings, one in sloyd or knife work for the younger boys, from 6:45 to 7:45, and one in carpenter work for the older boys from 7:45 to 9:15. The tool work will alternate with mechanical drawing and clay modeling.

The instruction will be free and the members of the Boys Club have a grand opportunity opened before them. Mr. Bond is now enrolling names for the classes. In a response to a desire expressed by many friends of the club a private class for boys will be opened from 4 to 5 two afternoons each week, and a class in sloyd and clay-modelling for girls on two other afternoons, should there be a demand for one. In Boys' Clothing.

Only a few more days of play and the school bell will ring.

Are your children ready?

We are just now offering great inducements to parents by closing out many lines of Boys' Clothing, both in short and long pant suits, at reduced prices.

We've several lots of medium weights and dark colors, but of which the sizes are broken, are now being offered at prices that are a picnic to parents.

Our thoughts about the boys have anticipated your need and you'll save both trouble and expense by fitting them out at our store.

We're the acknowledged great state headquarters for fashionable and serviceable Boys' Clothing. Our constant aim is to see how firm we can make a suit for little money, so we

NATHAN HARPER AT REST.

HE WAS ONE OF PLAINFIELD'S CITY FOUNDERS.

Secured the Passage of the Charter, Was a First Councilman and Subsequently Mayor—A Leader of the Democracy and Good Citizenship—An Esteemed Business Man and a Revered Friend.

Nathan Harper passed quietly away at his home, 314 Central avenue, at 6:30 Friday morning. He had been stricken suddenly ill in New York, during the latter part of August, with a violent attack of acute indigestion. He came home, and has been under treatment, but was recovering. Then heart disease developed, and in spite of the best medical skill fatal effects could not be warded off.

Nathan Harper was one of the best known and best liked citizens of Plainfield. He was one of the founders of the city government, having been instrumental by his earnest efforts in securing the passage of the City Charter. He was rewarded for his public-spirited labors by being made one of the first Councilmen, and subsequently was elected Mayor. He was a leading Democrat, and one of the most honorable of men.

Mr. Harper was a leader of the Friends, having been superintendent of the First-Day School from the date of its organization, 16 years ago, to his death. He was for years a lay judge of Union county, a director and Vice-President of the Dime Savings Institution, and Secretary of the Plainfield Building and Loan Association. He was born in Frankfort, Pa., Oct. 5, 1817. He moved to Plainfield in 1862. He once edited a paper in Mt. Holly, and named The Constitutionalist of Plainfield, which he was instrumental in founding. He wrote its first editorial, and was its leading editorial writer up to his illness. The publishers looked up to him as to a godfather, and depended on his excellent advice and good judgment. Judge Harper was at one time in the insurance business in New York, and at his death and for several years was in the transfer department of the Long Island Railroad. He leaves a son, Joseph M. Harper, the stationer, and an unmarried daughter.

FLOODED OUT.

Sad Drowning Accident, in Which The Victim Was a Small Fire.

An alarm of fire was rung by Chief of Police Grant at 10 on Friday from box 12. Fire had been seen in the second story of the wooden dwelling back of the stores 211 and 213 West Front street.

The fire originated in or under a bed or in the floor under the bed on the second floor, and crept through the floor into the stores occupied by A. Losardi & Co., and by David Modewinck, barber.

The firemen responded promptly, and deluged the stores with water from five streams. The water flowing from the fruit store doorway into the street resembled a mill race in volume and force. The fire was speedily drowned out, the damage resulting mostly from water.

The stock in Patterson's tobacco store was also damaged by water, though some was protected by salvage blankets. The stock of Losardi was insured for $600 in the Philadelphia Fire Insurance Co., J. C. Pope & Co., agents. The dwelling back of the stores in which the fire originated was insured for $1,000 in the same company.

An electric funeral-car is a California innovation. About nine miles distant from San Francisco are four large cemeteries and a crematory, and it was to bring them near the city that an electric railroad company introduced the new hearse. Its first patron was a benevolent organization, one of whose members had died. When the Plainfield Street Railway gets up Netherwood way, it should extend to Hillside Cemetery, and might profitably arrange a funeral-car on a similar plan.

The female barber having become an institution in Chicago, Plainfield, to keep up the times, must follow suit. In Chicago there are no less than twenty women who earn from $12 to $18 a week in public shops in that city. They say that at other occupations they could command only meagre wages, and as at this business they make themselves independent of family assistance, there is no reason but a dread of criticism why they should not follow it. One shop in Chicago belongs to a woman who employs six of her sex to cut hair and shave, and although she got very little patronage at first she now makes a comfortable living. This woman has been a barber for ten years. Her shop is said to be neater than those of her male competitors, and the women she employs attract custom, because they are spruce in their dress and person, and are just as handy with a razor as a man.

The car-fender is a success, and as a matter of precaution should be adopted by the Plainfield Street Railway Company. Since its adoption by a Buffalo electric railroad company, fifteen lives have been saved. The fender or life-guard resembles a large wire door-mat, with the outer corners rounded off, the edges bound with piping, and sticking out from the front end of the car about two inches from the ground. It is made of 1½-inch gas-pipe, bent in circular form, cushioned with two-inch rubber hose and interlaced with tarred rope; has two spiral springs at the back that act as a cushion in conjunction with the hose on the front. The guard is fastened to the car with two large hooks, one at each corner, and at the end of each trip can be easily lifted off by the conductor and motorman or gripman and put in position at the other end of the car. Of the fifteen people that have been struck by the cars since the life-guard was attached, fourteen escaped injury. The fifteenth was a small boy who was injured under rather peculiar circumstances. Not noticing where he was going, he ran into a rapidly moving car. Even then the guard picked him up, but the boy was partly unconscious, either from fright or from striking his head against the dasher. He soon recovered, and is now as well as ever. Before the invention of the fender, the company was frequently in court defending actions for damages, but it seldom figures in such suits now.

"HOLY CITY" AND "ELIJAH".

Plans and Prospects of the Choral Society's Work.

C. W. McCutchen, Chairman of the Music Committee of the Plainfield Choral Society, announces that for the season of 1893-94 the society will pursue a course of musical study similar to that of last year. It is proposed to give for the first concert Gaul's "Holy City", and for the third "Elijah", or perhaps a new work not heretofore produced in Plainfield. The programme for the second concert will contain selections or part songs, unaccompanied choruses, and short numbers of a lighter class of music.

Riding Club Reorganized.

The Riding Club has been reorganized, and has rented the rink for eight months. The members will have drills every Wednesday night, beginning next week. The club has adopted a sound financial basis, and has an excellent membership. Mr. Kelly is president, Mr. Glenn vice-president, and Mr. [illegible] secretary.

THE MAN ON THE CARS.

HAVING BEEN THERE HIMSELF, HE WAXES EARNEST.

He Dives Into the Elopement Question, and as Usual Seems to Know What He Is Talking About.

"I overheard a most interesting dialogue on the ferryboat tonight,"—said The Man on the Cars one evening recently as the train left Elizabeth behind and put in for higher ground.—"Two obviously respectable business men were the participants and this was the drift of the story that one of them told: His daughter, supposedly a beautiful girl—girls in such narratives are generally attractive and it is right to give this one the benefit of the doubt—his daughter, he said, had eloped a month or so back with a hard-working, honest fellow, a painter, for whom she had conceived a violent affection in defiance of parental opposition. He, the father, had repeatedly refused consent to the marriage and had finally forbidden the girl receiving calls from her lover. This action was prompted by no particular reasons other than the dictation of an obtuse nature and a desire not to lose a daughter in the home. Result—clandestine meetings and elopement. The father is sorry now, so he said, the young people having gone away down South, whereas had consent been given to the union they might very probably have settled here and the girl still been able to be at home often. He had written to her his tardy forgiveness but she answered that her husband had secured a paying job somewhere in Florida, that they were very happy and preferred to remain so. I wonder how many parents there are who might profit amazingly by this little episode? Love usually laughs just as merrily at fatherly selfishness as he has been reputed to do at blacksmiths, and even had the 'beau been discouraged by too much opposition, it might have been a very disheartened daughter who was left home. That misguided father stood in his own light, shadowed everyone else, and he has lived to regret it. Don't understand me as an advocate of indiscriminate eloping, but be assured that the children are not always wrong. I have known mothers, carrying out the ancient idea that old heads are wisest, persistently working untold injury to dutiful daughters by ill-considered, though well-meant, interference in small matters until the girls became afraid to have minds of their own, and the girl without original notions and the courage to assert them is not the one for me. However, I suppose, it is all an affair of opinion like everything else, and those most intimately concerned can do their own guessing. They tell me that there are at present quantities of young people in Plainfield engaged to be married, and I hope that none of them will find elopement necessary, but if they do, and the parents are of the sort of my ferry boat friend, the runaways may be sure of my blessing, and I 'll go around and give the folks they leave behind a little lecture of small consolation.

"Plainfield, eh? Well, I 've barely let you say a word for twenty minutes! Good-night—oh, by-the-way, did anyone ever tell you that my wife and I eloped to get married? No? I'll tell you about it someday." And he disappeared beyond the freight-house.

A PLEA FOR THE VOICE.

Miss Bronson Believes in Educating Children to Speak and Sing by Method.

Herewith is published a portion of a lecture on "The Child-Voice", delivered recently by Miss Annie J. Bronson, of East Ninth street, at Round Lake, N. Y., an educational resort on the Chautauqua plan. It is an admirable setting-forth of the views of this teacher of voice culture, who has been induced to settle in Plainfield because of the city's reputation abroad for being progressive and music-loving. Miss Bronson says:

The adult-voice is literally the offspring of the child-voice, and inherits its good and bad qualities. Strain the child-voice and you cripple the adult-voice; or leave it untrained, and like the spoiled child it grows unmanageable, and even with much after care hardly ever becomes as charming as might have been, had its early education not been neglected. * * * Parents, we are not asking you to send your children around the world on concert tours, or to make them elocutionists; but we do urge that you give them the same advantages in voice culture that you do in other educational branches. If you prepare your children for college work or a business career, by giving them a common school education, why do you begin as early to have them taught the rudiments of correct speaking and singing? * * * We plead most earnestly for the early training which will endow America's youths and maidens with beautifully colored speaking voices, correct articulation and pronunciation in speech and song, musical laughs which will make our hearts merry, instead of grating sounds which cause us to shudder, and wish that people would not laugh aloud. * * * Ye parents, who aspire to make your children kings, and queens in the realm of fashionable society, why do you ignore such a fascinating art? Yet you send them to dancing masters, you employ nursery governesses, begin their education in the languages, before they can hardly lisp their native tongue, you place them on the piano stool when their feet cannot touch the floor, or their little fingers stretch an octave, and instruct them in table etiquette as soon as they can hold a spoon. * * * A careful development of the voice should date from a child's first attempts to speak or sing; therefore if parents' tones are nasal, harsh, high pitched, or breathy, their articulation and pronunciation defective, it is only natural that their children should fall into similar errors. * * * By a co-operative movement on the part of mothers especially, and voice teachers, not only can the possibilities of the child-voice be revealed in a race of naturally artistic speakers and singers, but weak lungs and throats, narrow chests and round shoulders be avoided. Not only will the physique of men be better developed, but women will no longer be so ready to sacrifice their bodies, minds and souls on the altars of fashion. * * *

"The birds must know. Who wisely sings will sing as they."

Let us begin to teach the children of America to sing as the birds sing, if we desire to rear a race of speakers and singers who can raise the standard of the English language in speech and song, and establish national opera. The musical beauties of our native tongue are locked up in the undeveloped child-voice.

Purely a Supposed Case.

Their love had reached that stage where she didn't care whether he mussed her hair or not, such was her trust in him.

Her sun kissed tresses stood out in bold relief against his pink shirt, in spite of which he had a not unintellectual countenance.

"Wouldn't it be lovely"——

It was the sweet voice of the maiden that broke the stillness.

——"if pa should lose all his money? Then"——

She was gazing at his collar button, fortunately, and she did not see him turn pale.

——"my lovey-dovey would adore his tootsey-wootsey for her own sake, wouldn't he?"

He cleared his throat.

"Dearest," he said, "I should like to inquire, before I make answer to you, whether or not that is a purely hypothetical question?"

She assured him that it was, whereupon he said yes, he would certainly love her for her own sake under the circumstances she had outlined.—Detroit Tribune.

Von Blumer—To my mind this racing business is one of the greatest evils of the day. It's especially bad for the young men. Old man, you have no idea how many a promising fellow has been ruined on the race track. For instance, take a nephew of mine. He's only 22, and yesterday he was down on the track betting right and left.

Witherby—How do you know so much about him?

Von Blumer—Why, I met him there.—Cloak and Furnisher.

SOME ODD STORIES.

INTERESTING TALES OF ADVENTURE ON SEA AND LAND.

The Golden Ranch—How Franz Loeb Became a Prosperous Hotel Keeper—A Sudden Fortune—The Cloud With a Golden Lining—Bricks and Nuggets.

[Copyright, 1893, by American Press Association.]

As the name implies, Franz Loeb was a German, at least by birth and descent, yet he felt not a little proud of being an American by adoption. He had shown his loyalty to the United States by serving gallantly during the civil war. Being of an adventuresome disposition, he drifted out west in 1866, with a dim notion in his by no means active brain that he would reach California and make his fortune in the gold mines of that state, as others had done before him. "But," he said to the friends who came down to the Pacific Mail steamer to see him off for Colon, "ef so pe I gount tig dem gelt de rocks oud, den meppe so pe I dakes a vrow unt ocops a pear saloon already."

There was a general but unexpressed opinion among Franz's friends that in the event of his starting a saloon he would prove to be his own best customer. But they toasted him and cheered him off with Teutonic camaraderie, and in due time the ex-soldier found himself in that Mecca of the world's adventurers, San Francisco.

Although convivial in his nature, Franz had in him much of the race thrift, so that when he reached the mines in Placer county he had still on hand a few hundred dollars of the back pay received when he left the service. He found board with a widow, a country woman, whom he married before he had been a week at the diggings. There were five children by a former husband, but Franz regarded a ready made family as rather an advantage.

Soon after his marriage the diggings were practically abandoned for the want of water, but while single men could make up their packs and start off on short orders Franz found the wife and children impediments requiring more capital and preparation.

After demoralization with his wife, who had a little money, it was decided to turn the boarding house into a hotel for the accommodation of prospectors going into the mountains with fortunes in their hearts or coming back about broke.

Mrs. Loeb's first husband was a Mexican, and he had a Mexican's fondness for the adobes or sun dried bricks of his native land. There were the house, a one story structure, the stable and a half dozen little outhouses clustered about, all constructed of adobe, the clay for which the builder found in a pocket along the bank of the creek, in the bed of which, by the way, water flowed for only six weeks in the year.

As soon as the white miners and their attendant camp followers, in the shape of gamblers and dance hall women, shook the dust of Grouse Gulch from their feet and hied them to some more promising diggings, the inevitable heathen Chinese showed up in mysterious swarms and settled down to make fortunes in the abandoned camp.

With the first advent of the Mongols Franz Loeb was inclined to regard them favorably, but as they never ordered a meal or a beer at his house he soon found himself treating them with more than the hate born of race prejudice.

During the three months following the advent of the Chinese, Franz Loeb's business as hotel keeper amounted to next to nothing, and as beer, at least so he thought, would not keep forever, he soon became his own best customer, and his wife followed a close second. Suddenly, and to his great surprise, the Chinese began flocking into the bar of the Imperial Nevada hotel every night. They filled all the chairs and squatted on the floor, and they developed an inordinate liking for vile cigars and bottled beer, while they generously insisted that the landlord and Mrs. Loeb should join them, which, with an eye to profit and pleasure, they invariably did.

This went on for a month, and Franz was in high spirits, but a cloud came over the sunshine of his prosperity when his wife came into the bar one day and cried out:

"Gott im himmel, Franz! De valls oaf dem outhouses is all gooed, unt de sthable! Unt some one, so help me kruzinm, peen diggin into de valls oaf de Imberial Nifada hotel!"

Franz broadly hinted that the last bottle of beer had unduly excited his wife's imagination, but to be sure of this he went out and looked over the ground for himself. Mrs. Loeb was right. All the adobe outbuildings were carried away, and the marauders evidently intended treating the hotel in the same way.

"Id's dem cussed Shinese!" cried Franz. "Bud vot for shall dey stheal unt garry off dem mud valls already?"

He could not answer the question, neither could Mrs. Loeb. So they stood and looked at each other with the awed expression of people about to become homeless.

That night the Chinese, now regular visitors, put in an appearance again, but instead of the amiable landlord ready to draw the corks and fill their glasses they were confronted by a woman with a carving knife, a bulldog with one eye and that a bad one, and an angry man with a double barrel shotgun raised to his shoulder.

Franz Loeb charged the men with the theft of the outbuildings and with the intention of treating the hotel in the same way, and they smiled knowingly for reply, but made no denial.

A man whose eyes were inserted with more bias than that of his companions, and who appeared to be the leader, instead of going out, as he was ordered, produced from a little bag $800 in gold, and pointing to it said:

"You ally same belly good man, Misse Loeb. You sorry me. You take money; I take hotel. Wat you say, Misse Loeb?"

"Coom back tomorrow, unt ve talk mit ourselves," replied Franz as he motioned the men to the door with his gun and followed him out.

On getting into the moonlight outside Franz Loeb's anger exceeded all bounds, for he discovered that the Chinamen, who had left in obedience to his first command, were actually razing the hotel walls not three feet from the head of his own bed. He shouted to the dog to follow the flying thieves, which the creature did, and he accelerated their flight with two charges of buckshot.

Puzzled to know why the wretches should indulge in this kind of wanton and unheard of robbery, Franz and his wife gathered up the bricks that had been dropped by the fugitives and carried them in and laid them for dissection on the bar.

With Mrs. Loeb's knife Franz opened and broke up one of the bricks, but found nothing unusual. He tried others with the same result and was about to give up in disgust when, picking up a brick that had fallen to the floor, he gave a shout that might have been heard in the Mongol camp. The inside of that particular brick was as full of yellow nuggets as a Christmas pudding is of plums, and the secret of the Chinese raid was Franz Loeb's property.

The following morning, with the aid of his wife, the five children and the dog, Franz forced the Chinese to seek other quarters. Then the family erected an old tent for an abode and went to mining in the walls of the Imperial Nevada hotel.

It is said Franz took $100,000 from the bricks, but be that as it may certain it is that he is now one of the most prosperous hotel keepers in San Francisco, and his private residence in the suburbs is known as the "Golden Ranch."

Just the Opposite.

Molasses Catches Flies.

My Uncle Ephraim was a man who did not live in vain,
And yet why he succeeded so I never could explain;
By nature he was not endowed with wit to a degree,
But folks allowed there nowhere lived a better man than he;
He started poor, but soon got rich; he went to congress, then,
And held that post of honor long against much brainier men;
He never made a famous speech nor did a thing of note,
And yet the praise of Uncle Eph welled up from every throat.

Kindness to Animals.

A man may be harsh to his own wife, but he will not permit another to take such a liberty, nor is he inclined to stand by while another woman is being abused.

A man may be in the habit of flogging his own child brutally, but he is ready to fight if he sees another man striking a boy on the streets. This was recently illustrated in Justice Walsh's court in Brooklyn.

An officer had found a German driver of an express wagon thrashing a boy of 9, and as the boy was not the driver's son he arrested the man after calling him a coward.

The officer made the complaint, and on being called on to plead in his own defense the German said:

"Shudge, I pin one of dem men vats very font oaf all dumb animals. I likes all dem dings, unt I likes dem vot likes dem dings.

"Vell, shudge, als I vos sayin, I vos sittin oup on de seat at de gorner oaf Coort unt Remsen streets vaitin for a shob, ven dose leetle poy he gome ound to de horse's head, unt I see ain he haf in his hant a pig shunk oaf bret vot he has peen eatin.

"Bimepy he give de horse some oaf dot bret, unt dot horse he ead id unt like it.

"'Dot's all ride, sonny,' I say to dot leedle poy; 'you geep ride on bein kind to dem animals vot is dumb, unt bimepy mebbe you vos already de bresident oaf dot society for not doin gruelty to animals.'

"Vell, dot poy he laught unt geep ride on feedin dot horse. Den I say, 'Sonny, vot for your mudder gif you so much bret?' But he said: 'Oh come off, Dutchy! My mudder she don'd gif me dot bret.'

"Vell, shudge, ven I hear dot leedle poy talk like dot I pegins to mispect someddings. Den I looks pack in mine wagon, vere mine free loaf mine dinner under de seat dot mornin, unt, so help me Krashons, id vos gone!

"Dot poy, shudge, he stole mine dinner, unt ven he gan't eat no more he gome roundt ride pefore mine eyes, unt he feet de rest to mine horse.

"I charge him for a tief. Den he laugh unt put his finger up to his nose shust like dot. Den I get mat, unt I shump down unt gatch dot poy unt vollop him. Dot's all."

And the German looked round with an air of injured innocence.

The court and the spectators laughed, and the German was at once discharged. The judge read the boy a lecture, but as the youngster still grinned over his joke it is doubtful if he benefited by this experience.

One on the King.

The Atlantic cable a few months ago—April 15, 1893, to be more exact—brought to America the news that the 17-year-old son of the deposed Milan, once king of Servia, had, with the help of the army, seized and held the throne which that royal profligate, his father, so long disgraced.

This reminds me of a story recently heard in Paris which recent events must have revived there.

Ex-King Milan succeeded in making himself talked about in Paris, as he does wherever he goes. The stories of his passion for women, wine and gambling are as numerous as they are disgraceful.

Last year the ex-king was a guest at the house of a wealthy banker. One evening, to please Milan, a game of baccarat was started, and an American lady was an interested observer of the play.

Milan's luck, as was usual with him, was very bad. He is an exceedingly superstitious man and an ill bred one, as this story shows. Glancing around after he had lost heavily on one hand, he saw the fair American and at once associated her presence with his ill fortune.

In a voice brutal and passion laden he said to the lady:

"Would you have the kindness to change your place, madam?"

"Why should I?" she asked.

"Because you are making me lose."

"How do you know?"

"It is so because I say so," he growled, then turned to his cards.

The lady smiled in a well bred way, but persisted in retaining her place, to Milan's great annoyance.

The game went on, but with the same luck. The ex-king steadily lost, and he became so excited that the cards trembled in his hands.

At length, blinded by anger, Milan sprang to his feet, and facing the still imperturbable lady he fairly shrieked:

"Did you hear what I said before?"

"I did," she said very calmly.

"It is you who are making me lose!"

"So you said."

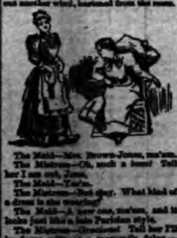
"You can see that I am losing because you are behind me, yet you will not change!"

"You lost still heavier, monsieur," she replied, with a cutting little laugh, "when I was not behind you."

"What do you mean?" he demanded.

"I mean," she said, with another little laugh that attracted the attention of all present, "that I was not behind monsieur when he lost his throne."

This reply floored the ex-king, who, without another word, hastened from the room.



The Maid—Mrs. Brown-Jones, ma'am.

The Mistress—Oh, such a bore! Tell her I am out, Jane.

The Maid—Yes'm.

The Mistress—But stay. What kind of a dress is she wearing?

The Maid—A new one, ma'am, and it looks just like a late Parisian style.

The Mistress—Gracious! Tell her I'll be down without a moment's delay.—

The Ultimate Question.

The tramps were trudging along the dusty roads on a hot afternoon, because the harvest hands wouldn't let them stop in the shade to rest, and they had had nothing to eat or drink since the night before.

"Hungry?" asked one.

"Yes, but I'm dry," was the gloomy response.

"What would you give for a nice, cold glass of beer?"

"Willie," responded the other earnestly, "I'd almost work for it."—Detroit Free Press.

The Tricks of Time.

When I go to get on a horse, I see
I ain't so young as I used to be.
I can't vault into the saddle quite
As easy as one that is spryer might.
I'm as stiff as one that has rheumatiz.
This is the trick of old Time—it is!

When I look into the glass, I see
I ain't so young as I used to be,
For at my eyes there are lines that meet,
By some I have heard 'em called "crow feet."
But how did I get 'em? I'll bet a dime
It's another of them old tricks of Time.

When I try to read in a book, I see
I ain't so young as I used to be.
If I want to know what it's all about,
I vow, I must take my glasses out!
It amazes me that I'm in this fix,
But Time is a "terror" for playing us tricks.

When I go to brush my pate, I see
I ain't so young as I used to be.
I declare, it makes me feel appalled
To find that I'm getting very bald!
Now, what did the trickster Time want with
The hair of a fellow like old John Smith?

There's a heap of things that make me see
I ain't so young as I used to be,
But after awhile I'll hit by hit
Get to be sorter resigned to it.
Anyhow, 'tain't no use to howl—
Time plays the same old tricks on all!

CASTORIA
for Infants and Children.

THIRTY years' observation of Castoria with the patronage of millions of persons, permit us to speak of it without guessing. It is unquestionably the best remedy for Infants and Children the world has ever known. It is harmless. Children like it. It gives them health. It will save their lives. In it Mothers have something which is absolutely safe and practically perfect as a child's medicine.

Castoria destroys Worms.
Castoria allays Feverishness.
Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd.
Castoria cures Diarrhoea and Wind Colic.
Castoria relieves Teething Troubles.
Castoria cures Constipation and Flatulency.

Castoria neutralizes the effects of carbonic acid gas or poisonous air.
Castoria does not contain morphine, opium, or other narcotic property.
Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep.
Castoria is put up in one-size bottles only. It is not sold in bulk.
Don't allow any one to sell you anything else on the plea or promise that it is "just as good" and "will answer every purpose."
See that you get C-A-S-T-O-R-I-A.

Experimenting.

A German friend recently told me this story to illustrate the fondness of the professors in his country for experimenting. It may be as well to add that I do not vouch for its truth:

Herr Grun is a famous naturalist, and he lives at Stettin, on the Baltic. He is fond of making experiments to prove that the environment of animals affect their habits.

One day he captured a live herring, carried it home and put it in a vat of salt water. Every morning the professor dipped out of this vat a half teaspoonful of salt water and replaced it with the same amount of fresh, his purpose being gradually to accustom the fish to live in fresh water instead of salt.

The herring lived on apparently in the best of spirits. In course of time the water in the tank was perfectly fresh, and the herring still flourished.

Next the professor began to deprive the fish, little by little, of the fresh water element in which he lived. In this also he was successful, and after a time the herring gamboled around in a perfectly dry tank. The herr professor congratulated himself that another transformation had been accomplished. He had at last a land herring.

Next the professor put the herring into a birdcage, and the intelligent creature began to utter chirps of satisfaction and to manifest unmistakable signs of affection for his master. His food was gradually changed, and his mouth grew into resemblance to a canary's.

One day the professor noticed that his pet was ailing. The poor thing was molting its scales, and it seemed to yearn for something not present in its cage. The professor meditated.

"Ah!" he exclaimed at length, "I have it! I have forgotten for two days to give the poor little fellow anything to drink. I shall remedy that oversight at once."

He brought a large dish of water and put it in the cage so that the fish might drink at his leisure.

Next morning when the herr professor came to look at his fish a sad sight met his gaze. The herring had fallen head first into the dish of water and had been drowned.

Printers' Errors.

When very much younger than I am at present, I, like Silas Wegg, was addicted to "dropping into poetry." Although my opinion of this poetry has undergone a radical though by no means a violent change, I recall the time when I thought it equal to the best.

One of my early poems was called "Two Brothers." My purpose was to show how two brothers, brought up alike and subjected to precisely the same influences, took opposite sides in our civil war, each dying for the cause he thought to be right.

I still think the idea a good one. One of my lines read:

"And these brothers were like as the stars in the books." Imagine my horror on getting the paper in which the poem appeared to find the line butchered in this way:

"And these brothers were like as the stares on the hooks." In correcting proofs the author or proofreader writes on the margin what is to take the place of the words erased. A friend of mine who is an editorial writer had even a more curious experience. In his copy appeared the sentence:

"Tomorrow is the anniversary of the death of Louis Philippe." When the proof came back, the editor was surprised to find the phrase:

"Tomorrow is the anniversary of the death of Sam Phillips." Angered and at the same time amused at the blunder, the editor wrote on the margin for the benefit of the proofreader in the composing room:

"Who the dickens is Sam Phillips? See copy!"

Satisfied that all would now be right, the editor went home, but when he looked over the article next morning he fairly foamed with anger. It read:

"Tomorrow is the anniversary of the death of Sam Phillips. Who the dickens is Sam Phillips? See copy!"

The Ingredients For a Newspaper Man.

My son, I don't know if your youthful conception
Hath breadth in the scope of its nebulous plan
To wield comprehension of that one exception
To workaday mortals, the newspaper man.
But if you'll agree to a feeble description
From one of their number, I'll do what I can
To blend in the way of a little prescription
The mixture that's known as a newspaper man!

Take a brain that is steeped in solution of knowledge,
Most varied and picturesque under the sun;
Then add just a pinch of the salt of the college,
A flavor of wit and a soupcon of fun—
For a relish Bohemian sauce is the caper—
And a mind that will stretch from Beersheba to Dan;
In fancy or fact, when it comes to the "paper,"
Or touches the heart of the newspaper man!

To a memory that clutches the veriest trifle,
And a hand that is tireless when work's to be done,
Add an eye that is quick as the flash of a rifle
And keen as the eagle that flies to the sun.
Take strength and endurance and loyal devotion
And add all the grit and the courage you can
To the heart that's as big and as deep as the ocean,
A hundred to one on the newspaper man!

With a brow of bliss that, seething and boiling,
Run out into molds that are models for men.
Add a conscience encounter with planning and toiling
For the world of today that is ruled by the pen.
Add the beauty of friendship, the dew of affection
And the esprit de corps that gets down to hard pan,
And guide in your hat the whole mortal collection

Judge Rowland Cox and a Notable Jury to Hear Alexander Gilbert's Charge Against W. L. Saunders—Craig Marsh the Prosecuting Attorney, and Councilman Marsh Foreman of the Jury.

The following is the make-up of the Mock Court trial to be given under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. in Reimann Music Hall, Monday evening, Oct. 16:

JUDGE.
Rowland Cox.
Complainant—Hon. Alexander Gilbert.
Defendant—Hon. W. L. Saunders.
Prosecuting Attorney—Craig A. Marsh, Esq.
Defendant's Attorney—Capt. A. V. Newton, of Worcester, Mass.
Clerk—S. R. Joseph.
Officer—Jasper F. Murray.
Crier—H. Otis Newman.

WITNESSES.

Chas. W. McCutchen,	S. St. J. McCutchen,
Henry A. McGee,	Wm. D. Murray,
E. W. Hedges, M. D.

JURY.

Frank H. Marsh,	L. V. F. Randolph,
Charles J. Fisk,	O. T. Waring,
S. A. Ginna,	John Leal,
J. R. Tracy,	E. R. Pope,
John M. Whiton,	H. S. Munger,
E. P. Reynolds,	J. W. Murray.

With the exception of Capt. Newton, all of the above are well-known citizens of Plainfield, whose names alone are a guarantee of the high character of the entertainment. Capt. Newton is well known throughout New England as an able platform speaker, and his address to the jury will be one of the features of the occasion. And you may be sure Craig Marsh won't be one bit behind.

THEIR EIGHTH.

Trinity C. E. Society Made Another Prosperous Year.

The eighth anniversary of the Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church was happily observed Wednesday.

The attendance was good, there being a large number of visitors. The new President, Fred Smith, made an address of welcome. Miss Phoebe Mills sang, accompanied by Miss Fannie Mattison. Banjo duets were given by Mrs. Buckley and Miss Boice of Dunellen, accompanied by Mrs. Charles Carpenter of Dunellen. Miss Bessie Blair sang. Other good music was rendered by the Male Quartette, Robert Clark, Ed Clark, Fred Cutter and Mr. Holmes. The room was prettily decorated with flags, bunting, autumn leaves holly berries and golden rod. The report of Miss Ella Fetner, treasurer, showed a good financial balance. Miss Fannie Mattison, secretary, made the following excellent report:

On this, the eighth anniversary of our society, it is appropriate that we review the work of the year in order that we may glean encouragement from our successes, and wisdom from our mistakes and failures. Through the efficiency of our Lookout Committee new members have been added to our list at every business meeting during the year, save one. We now number 122 active members and 14 associate.

The Prayer-meeting Committee has faithfully performed a duty which sometimes requires both patience and perseverance, in providing leaders for the regular Monday evening meetings. The average attendance at each of the 52 meetings held during the year is 60.

The Sunday-school Committee has rendered assistance to our good superintendent, in providing substitute teachers, and in entertaining the teachers at the quarterly meeting. The proceeds of a peach festival, amounting to $21, held recently under the auspices of this committee, has been donated to the school.

The Temperance Committee has provided for but two meetings during the year—one addressed by Miss Yates, the other by Mr. Mattison of New Brunswick.

The Social Committee has held a number of pleasant gatherings which aid in making our members better acquainted with each other.

The Flower Committee has taken a share in furnishing the decorations for the church.

Through the efforts of our Missionary Committee, $72.50 have been contributed to the Boards of Foreign and Domestic Missions, and $8.45 to the building fund of a Christian Endeavor church. In May a box of clothing was sent to the pupils of a colored school in Hillsboro, N. C.

If we sometimes feel that our numbers are small, and that our efforts are not crowned with the success which we could desire, let us remember for our encouragement, that, scattered over our own broad land and in other lands as well, are a million and a half of Christian Endeavorers; that we form a part of this army, and as drops make the ocean, so every earnest effort that we put forth helps to swell the tide of influence "for Christ and the church", which it is the aim of our organization to promote. Let us work for great results and expect great results.

If once all the lamps that are lighted
Should steadily blaze in a line,
Wide over the land and the ocean,
What a girdle of glory would shine!
How all the dark places would brighten,
How the mists would roll up and away,
How the earth would laugh out in her gladness,
To hail the millennial day!

Respectfully submitted,
FANNIE E. MATTISON,
Recording Secretary.

An abundance of ice-cream and cake was furnished to all.

Charley's Aunt.

"Charley's Aunt", Brandon Thomas's comedy which scored such an immense hit in London, was produced at the Standard Monday night. If a first night's verdict goes for anything, it will repeat its English success on this side of the water. No play half as funny has been produced here in years. The audience sat back in its seats and laughed as houses have not laughed at an English farce since the days of "The Private Secretary".

"Charley's Aunt" must be seen to be laughed at. It is a rollicking bit of fun without one objectionable line or action from start to finish. Etienne Girardot, the young English actor who played the part of Lord Fancourt Babberley, scored a triumph. After the second act he received six curtain calls. Mr. Girardot's performance of the bogus aunt is a genuine bit of comedy work. He makes the most gentlemanly lady New York has ever seen. In appearance Mr. Girardot reminds one of Weedon Grossmith, who played here seven or eight years ago. There are dull spots in the action here and there, but these, after the extreme hilarity, are rather a relief. They give one a chance to rest one's sides. Beyond all question "Charley's Aunt" is an immense success, and will have a big run. All Plainfield theatre-goers should hasten to see it.

A LIVELY AFTERNOON.

BUTCHER VOEGLER HAS A TUSSLE WITH HIS HORSE.

From Stony Hill to Dunellen and Back Again in Two Days—[illegible] Tug of War, with the Equine Several Lengths Ahead at the Finish.

August C. Voegler, the Front street butcher, had an adventurous time, Friday afternoon, and ran the gauntlet of a series of accidents from which he was lucky to escape with a whole skin.

Voegler started early in the afternoon to attend an auction sale at W. H. Riley's, Stony Hill.

When he was hitched up, his horse in the stable the harness became fractious, and was unmanageable till Voegler subdued him by whipping. Having at last reduced the horse to a state of apparent subjection, he started on the road to Stony Hill, accompanied by a friend. In due time they arrived at their destination, and attended the auction, at which Voegler bought a set of harness. On the way home, the horse, like the Pope's mule, which treasured a kick for seven years, saw his opportunity to be revenged, and started to run so that in spite of all the efforts of the driver the beast ran into the road bank against a rock, throwing himself and breaking the harness to bits. The men got the horse up and put on the new harness and started off again. But the horse was not to be pacified and soon ran again, with the bit in his teeth, this time with disastrous results. The wagon was upset and smashed, the men were thrown out, and parts of the new harness were broken. The men picked themselves up and made their way back towards Stony Hill, where they hired a rig and returned to the scene of the disaster. Here they put the two sets of harness in the hired rig, and, tying the refractory animal at the back of the wagon, they again started for home. Arriving at the Notch, they found that the tail-board had dropped, so that fragments of the harness were strewn along on the road to Stony Hill. With deep disgust they went once more over the road and picked up the pieces of harness. Both men are sore, metaphorically and literally, today, and are not anxious to repeat the experience.

ALL SORTS OF SUBJECTS.

Reading, Gambling and Sunday Observance Among the Things to Be Discussed.

The first series of a proposed course of ten lectures given under the auspices of the Woman's Branch Alliance of All Souls church will be published in a few days. These lectures will be given Tuesday afternoons and Thursday evenings beginning the middle of October and closing at holiday time. The range of subjects includes "Books and Reading", "Ethics of Gambling", "A Few Days Out of a Roman Winter", "Political Position of Woman in England", "Wesley" and "Sunday Observance".

The following names are secured for the course: Hon. Chas. H. Ham, of New York, will give his lecture on "Woman", which he read at Chicago before the World's Congress Auxiliary early in October. Chas. T. Catlin of Brooklyn, whose impersonations were enjoyed last winter by all who were so fortunate to see him, will take part in an original play by Mrs. Irving, called "A Wooden Wedding". This has been given with great success in Brooklyn. Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, the Rev. James M. Whiton, (brother of John Whiton and Mrs. H. B. Opdyke), Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, Mrs. Walker, of Yonkers, Miss Clarkson, of Wilmington, who has been heard at the Seminary and M. A. C., the Rev. Edward Hale and others, will make this course of lectures a pleasant feature of what promises to be on account of financial depression a dull winter in Plainfield. Due notice will be given of the sale of course tickets, the low price as in the past not being any indication of the value of the lectures.

FINE LIST OF OFFICERS.

The Y's Enter on a Strong Renewal of Work.

The first regular meeting of the Y's for the season was held in their rooms on Watchung avenue, Thursday afternoon.

In spite of the inclement weather, there was a good attendance, and much enthusiasm was manifested for the work of the ensuing year. It was decided to hold the usual Thanksgiving sale of cake, candy and pies, and Miss May French was appointed to take charge of the affair. The following officers were elected:

President—Miss Amy Green.
Vice-President—Miss Eleanor Morrison.
Corresponding-Secretary—Miss Bessie Titsworth.
Recording-Secretary—Miss S. Lena Ross.
Treasurer—Miss M. Brown.
Chairman of the Hospital Committee—Miss Mabel Maxson.
Chairman of the Literature Committee—Miss Josie VanArsdale.
Chairman of the Devotional Committee—Miss Lulu Lewis.
Superintendent of the Loyal Legion—Miss Adelaide Winter.
Charge of the Flower Mission—The Misses Ida and Kizzie Ross.
Press Reporter—Miss Lewis.

REVOLT IN MONMOUTH.

Freehold's Leading Newspaper Bolts the Party Ticket.

The Monmouth Democrat, the oldest and most prominent Democratic paper in the county, has come out against Senator Henry Stafford Terhune and Assemblyman Reuben G. Bunker, its party's candidates for State Senator and Sheriff respectively. It is because of their votes for the race-track bills that it has taken this action. Editorially The Democrat says:

Loyalty to the Democratic party as well as loyalty to the record of The Democrat demands that in the present emergency the effort to degrade the party to the level of the blackleg and the gambler should be rebuked. The party's organization in the county and State has been degraded by the agents of the worst elements in the community, who demand that because they carry the party the party shall submit to their rule. The Democrat repudiates their leadership, as it would frown upon the pirate ship although it carried the Stars and Stripes at its mast-head.

The race-track gamblers, by bribes and devices that are well understood in the community, obtained the control of the Legislature last year, and under the flag of the Democratic party which they had stolen, while the people slept, by pernicious acts of legislation brought shame and disgrace to the people of the State.

Now the Game Spoil.

The Park Club will bowl against the Elizabeth Athletic Club on the Park Club alleys, Tuesday evening, Oct. 17. The Parks will bowl a return game on the Elizabeth Club alleys the following Thursday evening.

THE CLUB CAR.

A Grand Opera in One Act by the Author of "Oh, Promise Me", "After the Ball", "Home, Sweet Home" and "Pop's Pants Will Soon Fit Johnny".

SCENE—The Tobacco Section of the "Howard". It is a summer evening. The number of the car is 600 and so is the temperature. A steaming group of mosquito commuters lounge upon the leather couches and the shaky chairs, in desperation and shirt-sleeves. At a little table four men are playing a game called "whist", and each is discussing in a loud voice the uselessness of his partner's play. The train flies through Elizabeth and ten thousand Machiavellian mosquitoes enter the car and get busy.

CHORUS OF MOSQUITOES.
Ho! ho! ha! ha! you must agree
That we are little-scalers!
Ha! ha! ho! ho! 'tis plain to see,
We're most despotic rulers!
We draw the blood, the crimson blood,
From all who would refuse us;
You bet your life his name is Mud
Who thinks that he can lose us!

(The Commuters rise and belabor the atmosphere with newspapers, but the mosquito is nothing if not an artful dodger.)

RECITATIVE—THE HEAD SKEET.
Now heed ye all who would seek to efface us;
Remember 'tis folly of follies to chase us;
When in a fatal grasp you would embrace us;
It's ten to one that you'll only deface us!

AIR.
Oh, the Brooklyn skeet is a wonderful thing,
And the Boston skeet is all in the ring,
And a skeet that flies a very good wing
Is the one that is called a New Yorker;
But when you are out for the skeet that is king,
The original, genuine, orthodox thing,
That'll give cards and spades to the best you can bring,
The Elizabeth skeet is a corker!

(A Tall Commuter rises and opens a window; two others begin to shiver, and, rising, close said window. The Train passes out of the Mosquito Belt and the insects retire with a parting

CHORUS OF MOSQUITOES.
Farewell, bon voyage, both friends and foes,
New victims we must seek;
We leave you to your sweet repose,
To meet another week;
Tra-la, tra-la, turn on the hose,
We now must take our sneak.
(Exit Skeets)

CHORUS OF COMMUTERS.
Farewell, farewell, begone, begone,
Your bites are highly piercing,
We've had enough, dog-gone, dog-gone,
And you will find no flies on us.

(The group at cards wrangle over some obscure technicality and the other passengers breathe heavily until the occult business is satisfactorily arbitrated. The Tall Commuter rises and wipes the perspiration from his shirt-front.)

SONG—THE TALL COMMUTER.
I submit with resignation
To whatever designation
Fate springs on me;
But I hate to have this wrangling,
And this scrapping, and this jangling,
Thrust upon me.
Now I find my respirations
Have decreased, and perspiration's
On my shirt [illegible].
All because of what I've seen, oh!
Men who cannot play casino,
Talking whist, whist!
If the Spanish Inquisition
Could be brought in requisition
To surprise them,
On the whist gang I would free it,
And I'd hope and pray to see it
Paralyze them.

(The train slides over the Richmond street bridge and the commuters rise and embrace each other.)

CHORUS OF COMMUTERS.
"Home again! Home again! from a foreign shore—"

(An able-bodied brick floats in through the Pittsburg French glass window, and the air becomes so heavy that the air-brakes break. The train is stalled by the gas-house and the commuters get out and walk home.) THE CHUMP.

DELIGHTFUL GOOD FELLOWSHIP

Handsome Presentation, and Supper, Given by Plainfield Engine Co., No. 2, to Gazelle, No. 1.

At the regular session of Gazelle Engine Co., No. 1, Wednesday, Foreman W. T. Newman opened the meeting with a few remarks. After the meeting the Gazelles were surprised by a visit from Engine Co., No. 2, who marched in a body from their house to the parlors of the Gazelle house. Foreman Rogers introduced Willett Marsh, who on behalf of No. 2's company presented a handsome clock to No. 1. The presentation speech was ably rendered, and responded to by Messrs. W. T. Newman and A. H. Martin. After a few remarks from members of Company No. 1, both companies repaired to Jacob's restaurant, where a sumptuous collation was served, with the Board of Engineers as guests of honor.

The honor of the opening speech was conferred on W. T. Newman, Foreman of Gazelle Engine Co., No. 1, followed by Chief Doane and Assistant Chiefs J. A. Martin and J. W. Murray. R. B. Rogers and Willett Marsh also spoke, and a song was given by Frank Shock. Ex-Chief Jennings favored the companies with another speech.

Messrs. Addis and Flannery entertained the gathering with songs, which were well sung. Speeches were given by A. Love, Sr., L. M. Donovan, and Chas. Graves, Jr. Charles Johnson entertained with some of his good and comical songs. Jos. Frisby gave an illustration of a Central Railroad train, which was well executed. Willett Marsh favored the guests with a few old favorite songs.

The sentiment of the evening, from the Chief Engineer down, was delight that there was such good fellowship and unanimity among the members. There is absolutely no rivalry; and instead, as in the army it was one flag and one country, so among the members it is one city and one department.

No. 2's presentation was in gratitude to No. 1 for the use of Gazelle's meeting rooms while No. 2 has been in cramped temporary quarters.

A Newspaper Man and His Bride.

WESTFIELD, Oct. 5.—John L. Collins, publisher of The Standard, and his bride, took possession of their newly-furnished house on Park street last week, and were surprised Tuesday evening by a stage-load of friends and relatives from Millburn and Springfield. The evening was spent most enjoyably. Music and dancing hastened the flight of time; and many were the good wishes showered on Mr. and Mrs. Collins. Among those who contributed to the success of this happy house-warming were: Mr. and Mrs. Roger Marshall, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Hand, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Marshall, Oliver Collins, William Chaffee, William Marshall, Mr. Fagan and John Dixon. At [illegible] the good-nights were said and the merry party set out for home well satisfied.

AFTER THE RAILWAY.

Borough Councilmen Think the Cars Run Too Fast and that the Company Violates its Contract.

The Borough Council session on Friday was presided over by Councilman Needham, Mayor Saunders being away.

Rock avenue residents renewed their petition of a year ago, for lights; referred to committee.

A petition asking that Summit avenue be repaired was also referred.

The Edison Electric Light Company, through Secretary Cooley, demanded protection against the breaking of street lamps; referred to Committee on Fire, Water and Lamps.

Grandview avenue residents petitioned for a paved sidewalk on Grandview avenue from Somerset street a distance of 150 feet; referred to Committee on Streets.

The Borough Magistrate reported $65 fines received for three months.

The clerk reported a deficit of $66.89 on the road account and $200.41 on the Somerset street account.

The matter of compelling the laying of flagged sidewalks in certain portions, was discussed, and an ordinance will be submitted next meeting.

A communication was received asking that the existing grade of Girard avenue be made the official grade, to save a cut of 11 inches. The matter was referred to committee.

Councilman Edwards called attention to the dangerous condition of P. M. French's sidewalks at Duer street and Craig place.

Councilman Needham criticised the street railway for not living up to its contract. He said it made a special marshal on duty pay fare, and was unfair in its transfer system. The Committee on Streets promised to investigate.

Councilman Edwards said he thought the cars ran too fast and too recklessly for personal safety. An ordinance to regulate speed will probably be introduced.

$1,000 was ordered borrowed for the general road fund, to make up the deficiency and pay for other necessary work.

CRACK ARLINGTONS.

They Are the Coming Great Players of the Town.

The Arlingtons of this city have just closed a very successful base-ball season, winning 14 out of 17 games played. They have defeated every nine they have played, one or more times. The Gorhams were the only team to defeat them, they winning the three games which the Arlington's lost. Following are the games which the Arlingtons have won and lost:

IT WAS NOT THE WATER PIPES.

It Was Only a Large Green Bull-frog that Sang from Gilded Morn Till Dewy Eve.

A good deal of speculation has been caused this week among the employes of Sherwin's shoe store by a strange noise that seemed to come from the wall in the rear area of the building. Patrick Marron, Sherwin's cobbler, who is a jolly Scotchman and not fond of being puzzled, was more immediately concerned than the other employes as the noise was very near the place in which he sat when he was at work. After long thought Patrick concluded that the noise was caused by the pipes of the water company and every one agreed with him, but they thought that a search for the pipes might lead to a solution of the difficulty. Accordingly they began looking and tracing the sound to its source.

Patrick found a hole in the stone wall and on looking in he saw a huge green bull-frog that greeted him with a noise so similar to the one that they had been accustomed to that Patrick nearly fell over backwards. All gathered around and his lordship performed to the delight of all and croaked constantly for five minutes. Now the bull-frog has a pail of water poured in his retreat every day and flounders and swims to his heart's content. It is needless to say he is the pet of the whole establishment.

For Missions Home and Foreign.

The Presbyterian women of Plainfield will be glad to know that an interesting programme has been prepared for the sixteenth anniversary of their Synodical Society of Home and Foreign Missions to be held in the Second Presbyterian church of Rahway, Thursday, Oct. 12, at 9:30 a. m. The general exercises will be preceded by a union prayer meeting at 9.

Mrs. Stephenson, Principal of the Industrial School at Asheville, N. C., and the Rev. Dr. John Hall, New York city, will address the Home Mission Society.

The Foreign Society will convene at 1:30 p. m., and addresses will be made by Miss Charlotte Brown of Sidon, Syria, and the Rev. Wm. Knox of Japan.

A special invitation is extended to young people. The 8:15 train from Plainfield will enable delegates to participate in the devotional meeting.

Grand Rally.

Bethel A. M. E. mission will hold a grand rally at the Seventh-day Baptist church, Oct. 15, for the benefit of Bethel church. There will be preaching at 10:45 a. m. and 3 and 7:45 p. m. Mrs. Mary E. Holt, pastor of the Metuchen A. M. E. church, will preach at 7:45 p. m.

T. A. V. BERRY, Pastor.

—The owner of the Dr. Carman property, Somerset street and Craig place, is laying a substantial stone sidewalk on the Craig place side.

THE HIGH SCHOOL SHAKY

ITS UNSAFE CONDITION OFFICIALLY REPORTED.

Pupils Must Not March in Step on its Floors in the Future—The Schools' Creditor Increases Its Rate of Interest.

The Board of Education met Thursday afternoon at 4. The Rev. Dr. Richards, Dr. Probasco, F. C. Lounsbury, and E. L. Finch were present. Dr. Probasco was elected chairman pro tem.

John Johnston, tax collector, made a report showing the school tax collections for August to be $904.26; back tax collected $127.38, all of which had been deposited in the Bank.

Dr. Probasco, of the Committee on Teachers, reported the resignation of Fred. C. Harman and Miss Scudder, and the appointment of Ira H. Blawell and Miss Louise H. Billings.

Principal Maxson reported that the fall term began with good attendance, 1,720 scholars being enrolled, an increase of 116 from last year.

The report of Mr. Maxson was as follows:

The fall term opened with every teacher in place, and there has been hardly any absence from sickness during the month.

The attendance has increased considerably in all the schools, but particularly in the Bryant school. There have been enrolled during the month in all the schools 1,720 pupils, which is an increase of 116 over the number enrolled at this time last year.

This increased attendance has necessitated much changing of pupils in order to furnish adequate accommodations, and several rooms are still crowded.

In the Bryant school, where one room had over seventy pupils, it was necessary to take the children from two other rooms and unite them in one school, in order to give room to divide this large school. In school rooms that are the size of ours, 48 pupils are as many as can be properly accommodated, but in the Bryant school there are now six rooms that have more than this number, and in other buildings there are four more, the numbers in some cases being nearly sixty.

The entering class in the high school numbers 67. The one-session plan from 8:30 a. m. to 1 p. m., has been continued this term and seems to give general satisfaction.

In accordance with the plan suggested last term, I have arranged for the science teacher, Mr. Hoick, to give instructions in elementary science in the grammar grade. He is now giving two lessons per week in each of the five rooms of the 8th and 9th grade. The pupils observe the experiments, and are led by the teacher to draw their own deductions, and the next day write an account of the lesson, and draw illustrations of the apparatus used.

The work thus serves not only to give them information, but also to train in observing closely in making careful deduction in drawing from nature, and in expressing what they see and think concisely in good English. It also affords a pleasant variety to the monotone of school work. I hope gradually to introduce work of a similar nature into all the lower grades.

H. M. MAXSON,
Superintendent of Schools.

Mr. Maxson said that the music teacher had complained of the singing books, they not being fit to use. It was decided to buy new books, returning the old for the usual reduction.

It was also reported that $452 had been received from tuition pupils living outside of the city. Janitors were reappointed with the following salaries: W. V. Mundy, $50 per month; T. J. Clarkson, $100 per month; Stevenson Hope, $70 per month; Robert Walker, $50 per month.

Dr. Probasco said that he had noticed that when the pupils marched in the High School together the building was shaken considerably. He advised that they break step in the future.

Messrs. Finch and Lounsbury were appointed Auditing Committee.

John P. Emmons was given the contract to build higher the chimney on the Franklin building, to secure better draught.

The Mutual Life Insurance Company, from which $73,000 was borrowed, and on which the Board has been paying 5 per cent., sent word that they wanted 6 per cent. in the future. Mr. Finch was appointed to look into the matter and report back to the Board.

The meeting then adjourned.

ANOTHER NARROW ESCAPE.

Carelessness That Might Have Resulted Seriously.

Train No. 504 going east arrived at the North Avenue station Wednesday about on time at 10:09; and as usual passengers awaiting the arrival of the 10:04 which was late, on hearing the call "Elizabeth, Newark and New York, only", supposed they were taking the 10:04.

The trainman of the 10:09 was politely assisting lady passengers onto the train, the gentlemen standing back, when the conductor after looking to see that the baggage for Plainfield was off his train and with no apparent concern for the passengers in waiting, signalled to start, which signal was obeyed and in consequence one lady was thrown backward from the lower step and would undoubtedly have been thrown under the wheels had it not been for the trainman's alacrity, who with great presence of mind relieved her hand from the rail, and left her on the station platform in the arms of her friends.

Another one had her dress caught in the next platform of the next car, and but for the timely rush of several gentlemen to her rescue would have gone under without a word.

If the company insist on having but one brakeman on a train to do the duty of two, more serious accidents will occur than that of this morning, as it was by a miraculous exhibit of presence of mind that the one brakeman saved a life and would-be passengers another.

If a train stops at Plainfield at the hour that ladies are in the habit of going to New York, either for shopping or a matinee, and the company do not want them to ride—then let them place gates to keep off all or admit all in waiting; otherwise look out for damage suits through false economy.

Ladies who were rescued fervently thanked Wallace Vail and Judge Moore for their promptness in saving life.

Plainfielders at the Fair.

The following is a list of some Plainfielders whose names were noticed on the register at the New Jersey Building, World's Fair, as having registered since Sept. 29: Mrs. Willard, W. O. Anderson, Ed. Lowe, E. B. Ackerman, H. Taylor, Malford Hatt, D. B. Taylor, Stephen A. Vail (formerly of Plainfield), S. Gove, the Misses M. E. and Helen Cooley, H. H. Moore, wife and son, Mrs. O. B. Nightingale, H. O. Nightingale, Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Runyon.

One of the sightseers writes: "It has been rainy, muggy and sloppy since Saturday afternoon, but still the people flock here by the thousands. The State Buildings seem to be the centre of focus for the majority. Those who have yet a desire to visit the Fair must do so soon, for the fogs and winds from Lake Michigan are even now starting to make it far from a pleasure."

THE ABDUCTION CASE.

ADAM STUTTS ON TRIAL FOR ABETTING.

Farmer Kilner's Daughter Tells the Story of Her Wrongs—Marshal Pangborn on the Stand When the Court Adjourned.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

SOMERVILLE, Oct. 6.—In the Somerset Court of Special Sessions this morning Adam Stutts, of South Plainfield, formerly of Plainfield, was put on trial for aiding and abetting the fiend Randolph in abducting Farmer Kilner's thirteen-year-old daughter some weeks ago.

Last Tuesday Randolph retracted his plea of not guilty, and entered one of non vult. Stutts would not do this. Lawyer James J. Meehan is defending him. The court room was crowded to the doors with the riff-raff and gentlemen loafers of the town, who expected that testimony of a most savory description would be brought out in the case. Before the case was moved, a motion was made to quash the indictment on the ground that the indictment was defective in not charging Stutts as principal to the crime, and that the counts in the indictment were bad. After a long argument on both sides, the court decided that the motion could not be granted. The court said "We may be wrong, but we must do something". An exception was taken by the defense. The case was then moved by the State and the jury drawn. Joseph L. M. DeFour of North Plainfield was excused by the defense.

In his opening speech, Prosecutor Steele said that this was "a case of more aggravation than is ordinarily the case. Here a little girl is taken away by two men for the purpose of seducing her. The two men, Randolph and Stutts, went to Kilner's house several times to get the girl away. On the Monday night in question they went there with a wagon. She came down stairs at 11, to get a drink of water. Randolph induced her to go with him, and thirty feet from the house Stutts joined them. They got into the wagon and drove to White House, which they reached about 4 in the morning. All three remained in the wagon until near noon, when they drove to Glen Gardner, where Stutts left them. The next night they remained as man and wife at a hotel in Asbury, and from there went to Phillipsburg, where they were found by Marshal Pangborn."

The first witness called for the State was Annie Kilner, the wronged child. She said she was thirteen years old and had known the defendant five months. Randolph had asked her to go away with him the Sunday night before the 28th of August, and she said she she did not know if she would. On the 28th of August she went to the well to get a cup of water for her sisters. Randolph was waiting on the back porch for her, and told her to get ready as soon as she could. "I did so"—she continued—"and went with them to the wagon. I got in, and Stutts drove down the valley road through North Plainfield, through Washington Park, and up Somerset street, and so on through Dunellen and to White House, where the horse was tied under the church shed and we remained there until daylight, when we went on to High Bridge. We all slept in the wagon that night, then drove to Glen Gardner, where Stutts left us. Randolph told Stutts not to tell anyone where we were, and Stutts said 'Oh, yes: I will put on a Sunday face.' The next day we walked to Asbury, and returned to Glen Gardner that night, and occupied a room together in a hotel there. The next day we walked to West Portal and stayed together in a hotel there that night. The next day we went on to Phillipsburg, and then went to Mr. Hughes's hotel, where we took a room. That night Mr. Pangborn and Mr. Coleman came into the room at 2. [Here a little tiff between counsel occurred as to what evidence should be admitted.] "I came back with Mr. Pangborn to West Portal, and then went home with my father to Washingtonville."

On the cross-examination, Annie admitted having talked with Randolph many times. Mr. Meehan said "You did not want any water those nights?"

The record of Randolph's pleading guilty was then offered in evidence, and was objected to by the defense on the grounds that Randolph had not been sentenced and therefore the minutes were incomplete.

The next witness was Marshal Pangborn, who in a careful and methodical manner described how the girl's father had come and begged his assistance; and how he the marshal had given his time and attention to finding out what had become of the young girl. While he was testifying, the court adjourned for lunch.

SOMERVILLE, Oct. 6.—The fame of the Stutts case had spread during the dinner hour, and when the bell tolled at 2 every seat in the Court House was filled. Every chair within the rail was occupied and the aisles were packed full. The space around the doors was filled to suffocation, and a constable stationed there prevented many from entering.

After court convened the father and mother of the unfortunate girl took the stand, in turn, and testified to the girl's leaving home and of going after her and finding her with Randolph in Hawes's Hotel at Phillipsburg. The mother was much affected while testifying, and the father's eyes burned fiercely whenever he gleamed toward the prisoner.

The testimony was concluded, the counsel summed up, and at 4:20 the Court announced that owing to the lateness of the hour he would not charge the jury until Monday morning, and would excuse them until that time.

A JUST COMPLAINT.

If a New High School is Needed, It's Needed Right on the Old Site, Instead of the Extravagant New One.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—It has been rumored for months past that the High School building is unsafe, and I saw in your issue of the 5th this heading: "High School Building Shaking".

If the building is unsafe then every parent who sends their sons and daughters there should know it at once. Let the proper authorities have this building examined without delay, by an expert, and let the result of such investigation be known.

I believe this to be the expression of many anxious parents. If we are sending our children to a death-trap I think that we should know it immediately. If our fears are groundless and the rumors false, then set us right in the matter.

Let the building be inspected without delay, and a plain statement of facts concerning its condition be given. Nothing short of this will satisfy

ANXIOUS PARENTS.

DEMOCRATIC PRIMARIES.

Legal Democratic voters of North Plainfield Township will meet at the School House in North Plainfield, Friday, Oct. 13, at 8 o'clock, to elect delegates to attend the convention at Somerville, Monday, Oct. 16.

By order of

CO. EX. COM.

They are talking of Councilman Frazee for Assembly. Well, why not?

With papa out of the pulpit, McAllister will have a chance to spread his wings.

Men of honor, don't miss your primaries. Vote for no candidate who is not pledged against legislation in favor of licensing race-track gambling.

Recent events demonstrate that a good policy for a clergyman and his family is to leave worldliness to others, if they wish to keep peace with the church.

He who said life wasn't worth living, surely never revealed in autumnal glories such as those which this October is so lavish of. If Plainfield isn't a paradise just now, then there's no such thing.

The Hon. James E. Martine will make a most excellent Senator, but his acceptance of the nomination is only at the most urgent and continuous solicitation of the leaders of the Democratic party. His choice is to be not a candidate, but he is too good a Democrat to refuse his party's call.

For a moral city of homes, Plainfield isn't making a very magnificent showing in the anti-race-track fight. In cities where the question has come home, the good men of the town are out on the streets and in the highways and byways hustling for votes. Talk is cheap, and resolutions are windy. Ballots count.

The anti-race-track meeting of Sunday was not as large and energetic as had been hoped. Many seats were vacant on the stage and in the house, and a large number of people left before the meeting was nearly over. Talk and resolutions are all right, but work is what is needed, if any effect is to be produced.

Blessings on the man who invented the bicycle. How else would the natty Plainfield maidens cover so many glorious miles these lovely brown October days? To see the merry girls wheel to Fellville, and to hear the music of their chatter amid Nature's beauties, is to know the full depth of poetry. To get out among the trees and the fields and hills, in such magnificent sunshine, and in such exhilarating atmosphere, is to fill the heart with the gladness that doeth good more than medicine.

The Press is particularly requested to state that the latest phase of the Murphy trouble is not because of the choirmaster question, but that the dissatisfaction is of long standing and is traceable to the family fondness for aping local fashions and leading the dances and other social functions, in preference to laboring among the parishioners for the cause of charity and religion. The good church people feel that it is time for the injunction about serving both God and Mammon to be observed.

To add to the terrors of railway travel, the Jersey Central printer has issued the new time-tables for station-walls in dark blue. He must have had on his yacht-race goggles.

But that isn't all! Having framed these bilious-looking eyesight-strainers, the company's workmen hung them so high up that the frantic traveler has to stand on the waiting-room seats to scan them, at the imminent danger of being hauled down by some brawny station-master or his aide. Won't the Central please pick out a printer who isn't color-blind, and hire a Tom Thumb dwarf to hang the tables?

In Eric H. Erickson the people have a representative in the Common Council who is worthy of all praise for his fearless aggressiveness. Ever since his appointment as Chairman of the Committee on Fire and Buildings, Mr. Erickson has shown that there is at least one man in Council who is not afraid to insist on the city's rights at the hands of the Water Company. That corporation has not shown any too fond regard for its contract with Plainfield, and Mr. Erickson has had to keep his prodding stick whittled to a point all the time. Just now the Water Company is particularly offensive in slighting the city's demands, and it has waked up Mr. Erickson's most belligerent cranial bump. He's going to make the Water Company do just as the contract demands, or he'll enlist the valued aid of the Corporation Counsel in getting the Courts to back him up in the fight.

Water-works companies, by the way, would have cause for jubilation were the local company able to break with the city. The price at which Plainfield is getting fire-hydrant service is the lowest in the country, where a private corporation provides the supply. Cities far and near pay from $22 to $40 a year, for each hydrant in service, while Plainfield has an iron-clad bargain at $13. Plainfield is therefore being cited the world over, as an argument in favor of reduction of the price. When the contract was made, water-works contractors and investors looked at its figure aghast, and ever since they have been bringing their influence to bear in an effort to break the contract.

Plainfield's monumental water-works mistake was made years ago, when wealthy and public-spirited citizens offered to build water-works complete and sell to the city at actual cost, with a public committee on the inside track to keep run of the exact figures. A Council was elected pledged to vote for such water-works, but such pressure was brought to bear, and public feeling ran so strong against the scheme, that none of the councilmen had the moral courage to mention it in open breath. It was the old bugbear of bonds.

Today Plainfield, though paying far less than other cities for fire-hydrant service, is still putting a snug annual profit into the pockets of a private corporation, while such cities as New Brunswick, owning their own works, are earning annually a net gain of $30,000 and above.

How those high tax bills might tumble, had some things started differently!

'81 Boys Will Then Find Out Who Pearsall Is.

Every member of the '81 Club today received a postal card bearing the following:

"THAT WAS A GOOD ONE!"

Burdette (the Inimitable), and Pearsall (who is Pearsall, anyway?), will give you several "good ones" at the Bicycle Club House, Saturday night, Oct. 21, 1893. There will be a Male Quartette (vocal), and, perhaps Charles Noe Daly of Bergen Point. Two "dark horses"—but we won't tell it all. Come and see. (As this is a Press Smoker, of course you will come.) Admission, for yourself and friends, will be by tickets, which will be sent later. Please put them "where they will do the most good". PATRIARCH.

Her Second Visit.

Mrs. Barney, of Providence, National Superintendent of Prison Work, will speak in the First Presbyterian church, Oct. 17, at 8 p. m. This is her second visit to Plainfield.

An Excellent Forewoman.

Miss Laura Warnock of the borough has given up her position in Macy's, New York, and is now forewoman in the bottle-stopper factory on East Fourth street.

THE HOME.

A Fraud Exposed, and a Need Stated.

To the friends of the Children's Home—Several times during the past summer a young woman has been dishonestly making collections for the Home. At one time she stated her collections were to buy a standing desk for the Matron, and later were for our family needs. The same person made early in the season an appeal for the Yose family in their sickness and distress.

To a lady on Seventh street she gave her address as Miss Mosher, of Raymond avenue, in this city.

At the monthly meeting of the officers Oct. 5, it was voted that we should make at this time an exact statement of our financial needs.

We closed our year ending May 1 with an with an unusual balance of $1,[illegible]. Out of that sum we have paid our household bills for five months; they average about $200 a month. Our September bill was much larger—$372.[illegible], as it included the printing of our annual reports, and $200 for necessary repairs to our buildings, including the piazza and some grading in the yard. We begin October with $[illegible] in our treasury.

We have twenty-20 children in our Home, having received eight during September.

The amount on hand will only carry us through November.

We make this statement relying on the unfailing generosity of our friends, whose faithfulness we have tested for sixteen years. Under no circumstances do our officers send anyone to beg from door to door.

Any donations for the Home may be sent to Miss Ella Sorrell, Treasurer, 425 West Front street, or to Mrs. Horace Kimball, 319 East Fifth street.

By order Home Association.
N. R. KIMBALL.

CONGREGATIONAL CHANGES.

New Dates Set for the Annual Meeting and the Week of Prayer.

The Congregational church and society held special meetings on Tuesday to consider a proposed amendment to change the time of the annual meeting. It was voted to change the date of the annual meeting for both church and society from the last Tuesday in September to the third Wednesday in April. It was also unanimously voted to change the time of the annual week of prayer from the first week in January to the week before Easter. This change was made because it was thought that the week directly after the holidays was an inopportune time to secure serious spiritual meditation, while before Easter the hearts of the people naturally turned towards spiritual themes.

A Great Entertainment.

The sale of seats for the Mock Trial to be given in Music Hall next Monday evening, under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. began at Leggett's Pharmacy yesterday morning at 7. Those desirous of obtaining good seats should not delay in securing them, as the entertainment will be largely attended.

The trial will be given under the personal direction of A. V. Newton, of Worcester, Mass., who has conducted similar trials 150 times in Massachusetts alone. The universal testimony is that the entertainment is a great success and the probability is it will be a long time before the walls of Music Hall will re-echo with as much laughter as will be heard on this occasion.

Mr. Newton will act as lawyer for the defense, and the other twenty-four parts will be taken by Plainfield gentlemen. Further particulars appear in the advertising columns.

Who for Assembly?

(From The Sunday Herald.)

In the Second district Rahway and Plainfield are engaged in a hand-to-hand encounter for the distinction of naming the Assembly candidate. It is scarcely worth the while for the Democrats to fight over the Democratic nomination. Because the district is overwhelmingly Republican. But for the Republican nomination William Chamberlain is pushed by the Rahway folks and Councilman Farrell by the Plainfield folks. Westfield comes in as a pacificator with an offer of lawyer Coding.

Next Time They'll Suffer.

George Killoran and Peter Wine, age about 17, were arrested last night for disturbing the masons in their hall on Front street. The boys have been in the habit of running up the stairs that led to the hall, and knocking at the door. They were warned to desist, but continued their annoyance, and accordingly were locked up. Judge Coddington suspended sentence in the City Court this morning, but warned them that the next time they would be punished to the full extent of the law.

The Exempts Will Go There Too.

At the regular monthly meeting of Zephyr Hook and Ladder Company, No. 1, held Monday evening, it was unanimously decided to attend the services in the First Presbyterian church the evening of Oct. 22, at which time the Rev. Charles E. Herring will preach a sermon to the Plainfield firemen.

Card of Thanks.

To the Editor of The Press:—Permit me through your columns to thank the Plainfield Fire Department and my good neighbors for the efforts they made in trying to save my property from fire the morning of Sunday, Oct. 8.

RECTOR MURPHY ASKED TO RESIGN.

FIVE BIG MEN OF HIS CHURCH MAKE THE DEMAND.

Representing the Majority of the Congregation, and the Working Force of the Parish, They Urge Him to Vacate the Pulpit as Being in the Best Interests of the Church.

Timothy Logue Murphy, rector of the Church of the Holy Cross, had an unpleasant surprise party last night, when a committee of five of his most influential parishioners waited on him and requested his resignation from the rectorship for the best interests of the church.

The committee was composed of Charles Matthews, George F. Dupee, Samuel Townsend, E. B. Phillips and F. S. Brown. They went in a body to Mr. Murphy's residence, and told him that they represented a majority of the congregation who desired his resignation. Mr. Murphy received them courteously and said he would send them a written reply. The committee then withdrew.

Besides representing a majority of the church members, the committee may be considered the chief workers of the parish.

That such action was to be taken, The Press has known ever since the latest revolt against the rector was begun. Two days ago report was made that the committee had waited on the rector the previous night and had asked for his resignation. Mr. Murphy was asked about the rumor. He indignantly repudiated the possibility of such a thing, but said that the leaders of any rebellion against him would find that he could get along without the church much better than the church could get along without him.

One of the good men of the church said to a Press representative this morning that the congregation was determined to get rid of the clergyman who has become so obnoxious. If he decline for a time to resign, his position will probably be made so unpleasant that he will be forced to, finally.

Among the charges made against the Rev. Murphy is that his godliness is not of too pronounced a type, and that his church work is hampered by his family devotion to fashion and folly. A less worldly rector, and a less worldly rector's family, are what the people of the church demand.

AGAIN TRAIN NO. 504.

Not the Fault of the Trainmen This Time.

Tuesday morning train No. 504 again preceded the 10:24 to New York. Again the ladies flocked to board it, but alas—the conductor and solitary brakeman permitted none of the fair sex to set tiny foot even upon the lower step.

However, the other platforms being unguarded, men flocked thereon to their imminent peril; as when the passengers for Plainfield had alighted, off went the train with those of the sterner sex clinging to the hand-rails and clamoring for admittance to the tightly-closed side doors of the vestibuled Pullman which the stolid negro attendant had closed in their faces. It seemed a marvelous dispensation of Providence that legs were not torn from the bodies of the hangers-on by the Watchung avenue bridge as the speed of the train accelerated.

Joseph E. Morse was noticed on the rear steps, with another gentleman, as one of those locked out.

One more brakeman to notify passengers not to step on this train would prevent this daily occurrence of agony when No. 6 is late.

False economy will some day cause a loss greatly in excess of the wages of the ordinary train crews.

The conductor endeavored to prevent all passengers from boarding the train, but can a man be expected to be in two places at once, particularly if those places are sixty feet apart?

The Gratitude Does Him Credit.

The stage between Fanwood and Scotch Plains attracted considerable attention Tuesday, as Mr. Collins appeared with a very handsome new harness.

This, with a fine pair of woolen blankets, completes the magnificent present which the citizens of the two villages so liberally subscribed for and presented to Mr. Collins as an evidence of their sympathy and regard.

With evident emotion the old gentleman told The Press man that he desired to express his sincere thanks through the medium of The Press, for this most munificent expression of regard from his friends and neighbors.

A Large Family Mourns Him.

The funeral of the late William Giddis, of Regent street, took place this morning at 9 at the house, and at 11 at the Springdale church. The pall-bearers were John H. Kitchen, Wm. Stites, Adam Herlich, Henry Weiss, John Huff and Cornelius Taylor. The interment was in the family plot at Springdale. Mr. Giddis leaves a wife and five children.

Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Oct. 2, 1893.

Pursuant to adjournment the Board of Chosen Freeholders met on Monday, Oct. 2, 1893.

Present—Director Sauer and Freeholders Badgeley, Donahue, Ehrlich, Hubbard, Howard, Halliday, Kyte, Boll, Swain, Trahon, Vanderbeek, Woodruff.

Absent—Freeholders Hunt, Moore, Boudder, Winans.

The minutes of last meeting were read and on motion approved.

RESOLUTIONS.

By Freeholder Woodruff:

Resolved, That the county road committee inspect the county road on North avenue, between Lorraine and Roselle, and devise some plan to drain the water off the same.

On motion of Freeholder Donahue referred to the county road committee and county engineer.

By Freeholder Trahon:

Resolved, That the maximum sum allowed by this Board for rentals for polling places hereafter shall not exceed thirty dollars; the term shall include all days required for registration of voters and election purposes; and be it further

Resolved, That the Clerk of this Board shall and is hereby ordered to notify all township and city clerks in this county of this act, and to serve a copy on each annually at least one month previous to any State or county election about to be held in this county.

On motion of Freeholder Hubbard adopted unanimously.

By Freeholder Donahue:

Resolved, That the Clerk be authorized and empowered to purchase three ballot boxes for the use of the county at elections.

On motion of Freeholder Trahon adopted unanimously.

Freeholder Boll moved that a committee of six be appointed on Springfield avenue county road, which was carried.

The Director appointed the following committee: Freeholders Boll, Woodruff, Kyte, Hunt, Vanderbeek and Halliday.

Freeholder Boll moved that the Board resolve itself into a committee of the whole to hear parties in relation to the proposed railroad on Newark avenue, which was carried.

On reassembling of the Board the committee of the whole reported progress.

Freeholder Donahue moved to adjourn, which was carried.

The Director declared the Board adjourned to Thursday, Oct. 5, 1893, at 2:30 p. m. [illegible], Clerk.

GEMS IN VERSE.

Will.

There is no chance, no destiny, no fate,
Can circumvent or hinder or control
The firm resolve of a determined soul.
Gifts count for nothing; will alone is great;
All things give way before it soon or late.
What obstacle can stay the mighty force
Of the sea-seeking river in its course,
Or cause the ascending orb of day to wait?

Each well born soul must win what it deserves.
Let the fool prate of luck. The fortunate
Is he whose earnest purpose never swerves,
Whose slightest action or inaction serves
The one great aim. Why, even Death stands still,
And waits an hour sometimes for such a will.
—Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

Woman's Age.

This is woman's age, I tell you.
She is striding to the front;
She is ready in her armor
To endure the battle's brunt.

This is woman's age, I tell you.
Where's the field she is not in?
Where's the contest where her courage
And her prowess cannot win?

This is woman's age, I tell you,
And her "nay" and "yea" have weight
In considering the crises
That decide a nation's fate.

This is woman's age, I tell you,
And the fetters fall apace
As she passes from oppression
Into Liberty today.

This is woman's age, I tell you.
She is climbing up to where
Proud Parnassus rears his summit
In the pure and perfect air.

This is woman's age, I tell you.
She has entered every work,
And if men would still be leaders
To their laurels they must look.

This is woman's age, I tell you
She will never retrograde;
Peace and Progress are her watchwords
And on Truth her feet are staid.

This is woman's age, I tell you,
And she pledges it shall be,
By the grace of God, the noblest
Age that earth shall ever see.
—Susie M. Best.

Patience.

Be patient! Easy words to speak
While plenty fills the cup of life,
While health brings roses to the cheek,
And far removed are care and strife.

Falling so glibly from the tongue
Of those—I often think of this—
Whose suffering has never wrung,
Who scarcely know what patience is.

Be patient when the suff'rer lies
Prostrate beneath some fell disease,
And longs, through torturing agonies,
Only for one short hour of ease.

Be patient when the weary brain
Is racked with thought and anxious care,
And troubles in an endless train
Seem almost more than it can bear.

To feel the throes of delay,
The agony of hope deferred;
To labor still from day to day,
The prize unwon, the prayer unheard.

And still to hope and strive and wait
The due reward of fortune's kiss—
This is to almost conquer fate,
This is to learn what patience is.

Despair not though the clouds are dark
And storm and danger veil the sky;
Let faith and courage guide thy bark,
The storm will pass the port is nigh.

Be patient! and the tide will turn,
Shadows will flee before the sun.
These are the hopes that live and burn
To light us till our work is done.
—All the Year Round.

Progress of the Peoples.

Upward, upward press the peoples to that pure, exalted plane
Where no throne shall cast a shadow and no slave shall wear a chain.
They have trampled on the fagots, broken crucifix and wheel,
Banished block and thong and hemlock, and the headsman's bloody steel;
Forced the churchhold to surrender stake and scourge and bolt and bar;
Torn the keys from off its girdle, thrown the gates of Truth ajar.
They have forced the titled tyrants human rights to recognize,
And with bayonet and saber they have slain a legion lies.
They are lighting lamps of freedom on a million altar stones
With the torches they have kindled at the blaze of burning thrones.
And this light will sweep and circle to the very ends of earth,
Touching with immortal beauty every heart and every hearth,
Thrilling every human being underneath the silent skies
And transfiguring our planet to a perfect paradise.
As we higher march and higher on into this light serene,
Every man will be a kaiser, every woman be a queen.
—Will Hubbard-Kernan.

Thank God For Friends.

Thank God for friends, the valiant and the true,
Who've stood beside us in such hard won fight,
Sharing with us our sorrow and delight.

Thank God for friends, the loyal clasp of hands,
The eloquent compassion of the eye,
Each social cheer, each fond endearing tie.

Thank God for friends who in the darkest hour
Turn not aside, but stay to help and cheer.
They are the ones within our hearts held dear.

Thank God for friends, refreshing as the showers
That bless the earth in sultry summer time,
Bringing us peace, like some old poet's rhyme.

Thank God for friends. Around each trusting heart
Their tendrils, like the ivy, cling and climb
The sturdy oak, the slender windswept vine.

Thank God for friends; but, after all, how few!
We must not lose them, be they young or false,
While we are engaged on friendship's valuation.

Thank God for friends for everything we'd hold
Will soon be spent, but where life's border ends
The stories with the sacred blood in one.
—Moses Gage Shirley.

The Reason.

Ask why I love thee, my dearest sweet
Think'st thou the reason entered my head,
Think'st thou I paused ere I chose thee apart,
Pondered and weighed ere I gave thee my heart?
Ah, knew you not that you gave but no chance!
Quick flew my heart at the sound of thy voice,
All that was best of me gave I to thee,
When first thine eyes cast their glory on me.

Ask why I love thee! Then just as well
Ask why the leaf by the brook rose doth dwell,
Ask why the deer loves to rise to the sun;
Ask why the streams to the great ocean run;
Ask why the lark sings so loud in the sky.
They cannot tell thee, love. The same why
Makes me love thee with infinite appeal—
This is the only why, love, I can tell.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

If you have not engaged your work, I should be pleased to do it for you.

I buy only first-class Marble and Granite and do not sell unless at prices that will enable me to put up the work with credit to myself and justice to the parties purchasing.

I employ no agents and therefore am enabled to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customer, of the commission generally paid to agents.

I am under a very small expense in running my shop, myself and my son doing the larger portion of the work, and we personally attend to the setting of all work, and look upon business in this light, that Good Work and Good Material, at Fair Prices, is a standing advertisement for my business, which will tend to build up trade, and I feel safe to warrant that no dealer can sell you the same work and same stock any cheaper than I can.

Hoping to be favored with your patronage, I am yours respectfully,

CITY DEPARTMENT.

Walter Irving Clarke, City Editor.

—For a good horse, drop a line to P. O. Box 486, Westfield.

—North Plainfield Democrats will meet in the schoolhouse Friday night at 8, to elect county delegates.

—Hillier & Co. have reduced the price of laundering men's shirts from 12 cents to 9. They guarantee the best work.

—Thomas J. Dodworth will resume his class for dancing and deportment, in Seminary Hall, Wednesday, Nov. 1. The hours will be 3:30 to 5:30.

—The grading and macadamizing of Hillside avenue, from Putnam avenue to Denton's Nursery, is now completed, making it one of the finest streets in the city.

—The insurance adjusters have offered Dave, the West Front street barber, $150 for the loss he sustained by the recent fire, which amount, it is understood, was refused.

—The Jersey Central will provide the special excursion rate of $1.11 from Plainfield to Trenton and return, Oct. 18 and 19, for those desiring to attend the dedication of the Trenton battle monument.

—Charles Bock, of East Second street, has, perhaps, the best pigeon loft in the city. He has at least 250 pigeons, and many of them are tame enough to light on his arm and peck wheat from a four-quart measure.

—Any apprentices who have not yet received invitations to the reception to be given to them at the Y. M. C. A. Thursday evening are requested to apply for them at the Association rooms. There will be gymnastics, music and refreshments.

—The scum on Green brook, near the Washington avenue bridge, is something terrible to look at, and is likely to breed disease. The main part of the scum and filth rests on the Plainfield side, while on the North Plainfield side there is a channel through which the water flows unobstructed.

—That master of music, T. E. Hassell, is prepared to instruct in the art of reading music at sight and part songs. He is forming an evening class for that purpose. This is an excellent opportunity for the development of talent. Call before Sunday at Mr. Hassell's home, 68 Westervelt avenue.

—There are VanHorns and VanHorns, there is only one Amos H., and 73 Market street is his big establishment in Newark. That's the place to go for furniture, carpets and other household goods. Note his low prices in stoves at this season. Look for the door of Amos Hoagland VanHorn, and enter no other.

—Councilman Neal says What's the use of trying to make borough people lay flag sidewalks when they won't lay boards? He says of course the Council can go ahead and lay sidewalks and charge it to the taxes, but to do that to all who refuse to lay the walks themselves would take $2,000, and the borough hasn't that much money to advance.

—Parents who are boarding or who wish to place their children in the hands of competent persons, temporarily or for the year, cannot do better than to investigate the management of Rockview Home and Day School, 317 East Front street, where careful training is given in deportment and etiquette of the home circle. In the school room that personal supervision which a small number of pupils permits insures rapid advancement. All this is secured for a trifle more than the amount usually paid for board alone.

MEASURING THE MEN.

Is It for New Suits, or Purposes of Identification?

Two experts are now taking the measure of the agents at the different stations on the Central road.

As the measurements are taken at night and as no notice is given to the men in advance it seems a question whether their size is being taken for new uniforms or for purposes of identification as is done by the Paris police.

Fanwood's night operator could give no positive information when appealed to. A. H. Lack and T. F. VanHorn are the gentlemen taking the measurements, and certainly are very accurate and quick.

The White Squadron Tomorrow.

Patriotism, romance, spectacle and melodrama all find place in "The White Squadron" by James W. Harkins, the attraction announced for Music Hall to-night.

The recent "Congress of Navies" in Rio Janeiro to protest against the brigandage tolerated in Brazil, forms the basis the plot which unfolds a romantic love story.

Many and varied are the points of interest in the play, and the stage is continuously filled with exciting episodes of magnificent stage pictures. Life in South America is depicted in vivid colors, while realistic scenery and mechanical contrivances are abundant.

Among the forcible representations are those depicting slave life, in which a Moorish slave is shown yoked to an ox, like a beast of burden. Other pictures introduce a herd of genuine South American Llamas. A ruined monastery and the funeral of the monks are also brought out, while the climax of interest is reached in a scene representing the "Congress of Navies" in the public square of Rio.

A national element overspreads the entire play, and the American flag is so brought out and so glorified as to arouse to the highest pitch the enthusiasm of every American who sees it. The company is led by that clever and popular [illegible]

PERSONALIA.

Mr. and Mrs. John Abbott are home from the big Fair.

Hardy Wharton is taking in the beauties of the World's Fair.

J. B. Cleaver now preaches in Cook's Hall, Bound Brook, Sundays.

The Hon. Geo. Kyte and Mrs. Kyte left for the World's Fair Friday night.

Mrs. Charles L. Force, of 78 Grandview avenue, is visiting her aunt in Somerville.

George and Thomas VanBuskerk are in Chicago enjoying the wonders of the Fair.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander M. Rose, of Grant avenue, are at the great White City.

Chas. Schenck, of West Front street, is going to Long Island City for a few weeks recreation.

John Weir and A. W. Haviland and their families, of Rockview avenue, are at home again.

George W. Moses, of Elm place, is out again after a painful illness from erysipelas in the face.

The family of Charles W. McCutchen, of Washington Park, have returned from the Adirondacks.

Miss Maude Agnes Bowers spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. G. Harry Squires, of Watchung avenue.

Mrs. A. L. Laing and son, of Brooklyn, are visiting the family of J. P. Hedden, West Fifth street.

Mrs. John H. Kitchen, of 304 Somerset street, is visiting her cousin, Mrs. Maggie Ackerman, of Liberty Corner.

F. M. Darby and family, of 60 Westervelt avenue, have returned home after three months at Northport, L. I.

Charles Noe Daly, U. S. Consul at Guelph, Canada, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. G. P. Baill, of Netherwood.

Mr. and Mrs. Ely, of New York city, were guests Saturday and Sunday of their son at his home on Westervelt avenue.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. David Morning, of Fondville, was made happy Saturday by the arrival of a young daughter.

William Giddis, a hay carter of Regent street, died at his home Saturday night at 8:30. He leaves a family of five small children.

Mrs. H. A. West of Fanwood is enjoying the autumnal glories of Lake Hopatcong. The Van Over House is her headquarters.

Miss Josie Martin, of Chatham street, North Plainfield, is at Perth Amboy, where she will spend the winter with relatives.

The advent of a little daughter in the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Doni Miller of Ninth street has been the occasion of much rejoicing.

Mrs. Arretta Freeman, of Philadelphia, Pa., spent Sunday with her brother, Henry D. VanLew, of 529 West Fourth street, this city.

Henry Williams, Miss Katie Williams and Miss Mary Thomas, of New York, have been visiting at the home of Rudolph Kersting on Park avenue.

Mrs. Andrew McClelland and son, a former resident of North avenue, returned Saturday from abroad, and will take apartments on Watchung avenue.

Louis Howard, of Ninth street, has left for the west, where he will visit many of the large cities and arrange for the sale of agencies for his new electrical company.

Thomas H. Keller, manager of the Crescent League base-ball team, is in Detroit, shooting for himself and selling cartridges for the United States Cartridge Company.

Martin Ocunete, an old veteran of the late war, and of late a resident at Mt. Bethel, has been admitted to the Soldiers Home at Kearney, almost helpless from rheumatism.

H. B. Opdyke and family, of Farragut road, have leased their house and premises to A. D. Thompson, who will take possession Oct. 16. Mr. Opdyke will move to New York and will probably spend part of the winter in the South.

Alexander Gilbert, Mayor of Plainfield, and Vice-president of the Market and Fulton National Bank, has been elected secretary of the Clearing-House Association of the New York banks. This is a high and deserved honor.

George Wilmert Swain, who was several seasons a summer resident of Netherwood and Plainfield, was married Tuesday evening in the Rutgers Riverside church, New York. The bride was Miss Jennie Oakes, daughter of Mrs. George Oakes.

What has become of that al fresco "As You Like It" which was promised by our amateurs for this autumn, and concerning which we were told that the Rosalind and Orlando had already been selected, and that a prominent member of the Country Club would be asked to enact Charles the Wrestler? We hope that Orlando was not scared away by the contemplation of Charles, and that the cold weather and her prospective costume did not make Rosalind throw up her part. Surely there was success in the scheme. Is it to be forgotten?

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—The following facts of recent events here in Spokane may be of interest to many of my friends in Plainfield. My first recital took place last night, Sept. 28, having been postponed one week. It was a tremendous success. I can well repeat the old saying "I came, I saw, I conquered", for to-day Spokane is mine. I had an audience of 650 people, and these sat through the entire programme and ap-

WORLD, FLESH AND ——.

SOCIETY DORMANT, THESE LOVELY AUTUMN DAYS.

Chicago's Fair Still Attracting Plainfielders—The Awkwardness of a Social Custom—The Question of Chaperones—The Nursery Whistlers—Church of the Holy Flesh Pots.

Social activity has been absolutely dead for the past week, at least in its outward manifestations. Everyone has gone to Chicago, and the Fair continues to be more attractive than anything that can be cooked up at home. Those who have already been there are taking a much needed rest. In the social interregnum it may be permissible to speak of those impersonal subjects which are apt to bore people in more active times.

One of the benefits of a small social system like that of Plainfield is the privilege accorded to youths and maidens of going unchaperoned to dances of all kinds, public or private, throughout the entire year. There is very little to be said against the principle of this custom; it is provincial, but we do not care to be metropolitan, as the conditions are very different. Sometimes, however, it is productive of very awkward situations. There is nothing more painful to watch than some gallant swain who, having danced with some unattractive girl, probably because her mother was "a particular friend of mamma's", finds himself with a partner too many, and has no proper place to go and leave her. She has no chaperone, and he is engaged for the next dance; she is not, and it is extremely awkward for the man, who cannot drop her in the middle of the floor and go to meet his engagement. It is not much better for the attractive girls who are sure to be engaged two or three ahead where dance cards are not used. They must trust to the chance that their partners can stay with them until the next on the list, (probably impeded by the unattractive girl before mentioned) can come to claim the dance. There was a case at one of last year's informal dances when two young girls, neither of them "out", came absolutely unattended, and there was a sequence of situations like the above throughout the entire evening. It is needless to say they did not have a good time, as neither of them knew the two ladies who acted as patronesses for propriety's sake. The mind of man is eased greatly if he perceives, on entering the dancing room, that there are those little temporary courts with the chaperones at their heads that form a haven from which he can take his partner, and to which he can return her when duty calls him elsewhere.

We have a new musical organization in town. It is formed of whistlers from the Park avenue nursery, and may be seen bowling about the streets in the late afternoon in a four-wheeled dos-a-dos. It may be known by its preference for the Washington Post march.

The Church of the Holy Flesh Pots, over the brook, is, we hear, about to be agitated by a tempest compared to which the previous troubles are but the mutterings and grumblings of the storm. It is understood that he who presides over the aforesaid Flesh Pots has been asked to vacate for the good of the church. The preacher, however, thinks the grumblers are making a great mistake, and says that he will get along better without the church than the church will without him. And to think that the foundation of all the trouble is the silvery voice that emanates from the young hopeful of the presider! Who would believe that such a little thing could achieve such great results! THE LOUNGER.

DECAMPED WITH THE FUNDS.

A Plainfield Young Man Reported to Have Skipped With Money and Horses Belonging to His Employer.

Plainfield people will no doubt remember the entertainment given in the Riding Academy on Watchung avenue a few weeks ago by a troupe of Indians and cowboys, under the management of one who styled himself Deadwood Dick.

Among the troupe were two Plainfield young men who had spent several years on the plains in the far west.

One of the young men, Hall by name, who is known by the nickname of "Shorty", was a favorite with the manager, and was often entrusted with the funds of his employer.

The show has been traveling around the country ever since leaving Plainfield, and this week was advertised to commence an engagement at the Manhattan Field, adjoining the Polo Grounds, New York, and the manager gave $600 to Hall, it is alleged, to buy stock and to pay the advance expenses of the show.

But Hall, it is reported, could not resist the temptation, and when the manager looked for him he found that he had skipped with the $600, and had also taken two of the best horses.

The New York police were at once notified, but as yet have not succeeded in getting any trace of the dishonest Plainfielder.

THE MASS-MEETING.

ADDRESSES MADE AND RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED.

Not So Large an Attendance as Expected, and Not So Much Enthusiasm Against the Race-Tracks as Hoped For.

The empty seats in Music Hall Sunday afternoon were too numerous for a faithful chronicler to say that the house was a full one or that the meeting was over-enthusiastic.

Those seated on the stage were Col. Mason W. Tyler, the Rev. C. R. Herring, the Rev. O. Schenck, Craig A. Marsh, R. V. Lindabury, the Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards, the Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, the Rev. Robert Clark, W. M. Stillman, President of the Common Council S. A. Ginna, Isaac L. Miller, the Rev. C. E. Barnes, the Rev. Father Smyth and the Rev. Father Murphy.

Col. Tyler presided, and Dr. Barnes opened the meeting with prayer.

Col. Tyler made a speech in which the race-track managers were denounced as chartered libertines, licensed to break the laws. He held that 10 years of the present race-track laws would make New Jersey the paradise of gamblers, from which the schools and churches could not save the State.

Richard V. Lindabury made a stirring speech. He said the entire civilized world was pointing the finger of shame at New Jersey. He held that the primaries and the Legislature had been bought last year, and he urged that all honest citizens turn out at this year's primaries and secure the nomination of men pledged to fight the race-track evil. He made a glowing prediction that on next election day New Jersey would be redeemed from the gamblers, and said "with the banner of the church floating high over every other, we will be proud to say "By this banner we have conquered"".

Robert Moore of Elizabeth told of young men whom he knew had been ruined by race-track gambling, and said: "I am a Democrat, but as God lives and my soul lives I shall know no partisanship till these ruffians are swept from power".

The Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis urged an entire remodeling of State politics, holding that this was a question not of this campaign but of good government and constitutional right.

The Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards presented a long preamble and set of resolutions protesting against the legalization of race-track gambling, and urging all citizens to vote only for men pledged against race-tracks. The resolutions challenged each party to see which could produce the best anti-race-track candidates.

The resolutions were adopted with one voice, and the meeting adjourned.

A FAKE RACE.

Willis Wins the 25-Mile Crawling Match.

In spite of all the efforts of the Lyceum Wheelmen to make an interesting contest out of the Willis-Coffin race at the Gentlemen's Driving Park, Saturday afternoon, it ended in an uninteresting fizzle through the action of one of the contestants.

As readers of The Press know the race was arranged by the racing committee to decide a tie that occurred in the 25 mile road race of Aug. 19, in which Coffin and Willis came off with equal honors for the time prize.

About 200 interested spectators assembled on the grounds and were rewarded in part by seeing a very fine run for the first 7 miles. Willis set the pace nicely for the first part of the run keeping up about a three-minute gait. Coffin passed him at about the 7th mile and set a snail's pace which nothing could make him break. He was constantly challenged to spurt for a mile or so, but would not stop crawling. The two men rode for miles within a few feet of each other, Coffin refusing to set the pace. At the 15th or 16th mile the committee concluded to put in pace-setters on the track, and they succeeded in livening up the race for a little while, but Coffin would only follow Willis and paid no attention to the pace-setters. Things went on this way until the racers had only a quarter of a mile of the home-stretch before them. Then they made a fine spurt and Willis forged ahead, winning by a very few yards. His time was 2 hours and 10 minutes. This, of course, was ridiculously large, and the committee did not know what to do about giving the medal, but as no time limit had been set down in writing, they concluded to allow the race to stand.

The committee claimed that a time limit was understood, but Coffin said he knew nothing about it. It was clearly Coffin's fault that the race was spoiled and he acted in a very unsportsmanlike manner.

MARTINE IS WILLING.

PLAINFIELD'S ORATOR WILL RUN FOR SENATOR.

He Will Not [illegible], However, [illegible] to a Convention [illegible] Only Because it is Forced Upon Him.

(From The Sunday World.)

A decided change in the political situation in Union county so far as the Senatorship is concerned took place during the last few days. James E. Martine, the farmer orator of Plainfield, and about whose course so much doubt has been felt, has at last declared himself as being willing to run if he gets the unanimous call of his party to gird on his armor for the fray.

Mr. Martine, when applied to by a World reporter, said he was not looking for any political office, neither would he stand in the way of any man's ambition to be a Senator, but if his party called on him to accept the Senatorial nomination he would feel this to be a demand that he could not, as a good Democrat, refuse to obey. It was an honor for any man to be selected by his party, without a contest, to lead it in a political battle. If there was going to be any opposition then he stood ready to step aside and let some one else be the standard bearer. It would be at a considerable sacrifice to himself, from a business standpoint, if he were elected Senator, but the grand old Democratic party, in advancing whose principles he had spent so many years of his life, could cheerfully have his services in the Legislature if desired.

"It has been said," continued Mr. Martine, "that I have been holding aloof in this Senatorship matter because I wanted to run for the Congressional nomination next year against the present incumbent, Mr. Dunn. Nothing was further from my thoughts. I recognize the fact as a Democrat that Congressman Dunn, unless he makes a monumental blunder, is entitled to a renomination at the hands of his party, and had I got the Congressional nomination last year and been elected, I certainly should expect a similar recognition at the hands of my party. At present I have no political ambition and would be perfectly content to be allowed to remain an humble private in the ranks. I fully realize the fact that the battle this fall in Union county is going to be a desperate one, and that every Democrat must unite against the common enemy. It is openly asserted that trades and dickers are going to be made in the interest of certain offices, but should I be called on to lead the Democracy I hope that no bargains will be entered into, but a concerted and vigorous effort be made to elect the whole ticket. I have all my life been a consistent and straightforward Democrat and my party loyalty has never been questioned.

"I expect to work hard hard for the success of the whole ticket, no matter who the nominees may be, and I hope every true Democrat will give it his loyal and enthusiastic support. If this is done, then there can be no fear as to the outcome of the struggle."

The Democratic leaders are much pleased over the solution of this vexed question, and the knowledge that James E. Martine, of whose popularity there is no disputing, is ready to obey the behest of his party. It clears the field and leaves the Shrievalty question the only one now to be settled. It is not such an easy matter to do this, however, as the threatening attitude of the Citizens' Anti-Race-Track League is a potent factor to consider in naming a candidate for Sheriff. The league feels highly encouraged by Judge VanSyckel's vigorous charge to the Union County Grand Jury, and they are preparing for an aggressive campaign against any candidate for Sheriff who will not declare himself as being opposed to race-tracks.

It is practically conceded that the selection of Mr. Martine for Senator will mean that the Sheriff shall come from Elizabeth, but who the nominee will be is yet a perplexing question to solve.

There are five Richmonds in the field, namely: Freeholders Donohue, Moore and Sauer, ex-Assemblyman Hughes and ex-Alderman George A. Squire. Which of these will develop the most strength is something that cannot be determined except by the primaries.

Union Township has a standing candidate in Freeholder Woodruff, but the practical politicians say he won't be in it when the convention meets, although he may get the support of some of the outside townships. Freeholder Donohue's stock has gone up somewhat during the last few days, but not enough to make the other fellows despondent. In fact the race for Sheriff is an excellent free-for-all, where it's a hard job to pick a winner.

It is said that in the Second Assembly District a strong effort will be made by the Democrats of the townships to have either ex-Freeholder George Doty or Assessor D. Hobart Sayre nominated. The latter was a strong candidate when Thomas F. Lane bobbed up into public life three years ago, and he may now step into the Summit man's shoes.

The Republicans may nominate ex-Judge Cross in this district, as he would command the support of the Citizens' League.

The Republicans are keeping suspiciously quiet on the Senatorship, and as yet no candidate has been trotted out by them. It has been rumored that Mayor Alexander Gilbert, of Plainfield, may be their nominee, but Mr. Gilbert's position as cashier of a big New York bank would seriously interfere with his being a candidate, and it is not thought by those who claim to know him that he will permit his name to be used in connection with the Senatorship.

Miss Edith Leonard.

The secretary made the following report of the year's work:

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

In comparing the work of the Relief Association for the past year with that of other recent years, we do not find much that is different either in methods or in needs. There has been the same necessity for careful investigation in all cases, and careful application of relief, not only because of financial limitations but also to encourage the idea of self help to the greatest possible extent.

The plan of working in harmony with all other charitable societies in the city has been carefully adhered to so that there might be no danger [illegible] for those who would be otherwise provided for.

The various King's Daughters societies have assisted the work of relief very materially, and we have been able to work to much better advantage with them since one of their leading members has been appointed one of our Executive Committee.

There has been a slight decrease in the number of cases treated by the Executive Committee during the past year. Eighty families have received help. The number of individuals treated would be about two hundred and seventy-two. Of this number only twenty-three have been entirely new applicants.

The importance of the visitors' efforts is shown by the fact that the number of ineligible applicants has perceptibly decreased since it has been fully understood that each case is carefully investigated before help is given, except when the demand for immediate relief seems imperative. There have been only five cases where it has been necessary to refuse help, and in these instances it was found that the applicants could be cared for by relatives who were quite able to provide for them.

As nearly as we can estimate the proportion of different nationalities is as follows:

Irish	29
American	27
English	6
German	5
Colored	5
Danish	2
Scotch	1
Hungarian	1
Unknown	4

About thirty-two of the recipients have been able to do a small amount of sewing in return for the continuous help which has been afforded them. Seven have received help throughout the year without being able to do any work, while forty of our cases have needed only temporary relief.

The Employment Bureau, which forms the most important branch of our work, makes the following report:

Number of women who have received sewing	22
Number of garments made	1,196
Amount of sales from ordered work	[illegible]
Amount of sales from beneficiary work	[illegible]
Total amount of sales	$267.10
Parcels of second-hand clothing given gratuitously	[illegible]
Value of new clothing given gratuitously	[illegible]

The amount of sales has not been as large as last year, a fact very much to be regretted since the income derived therefrom is very necessary to keep this department in successful operation. This means of furnishing work to the women is of special importance since it has been impossible to provide any suitable way of employing the men. The plan of starting a wood yard, so frequently urged, seems more desirable than ever this year, in consideration of the demands which the hard times may bring upon us this coming winter.

The Mothers' Class, which has been under Mrs. Slevin's care has held twenty meetings, the members have completed forty garments, besides being very much interested in the books read to them, and very appreciative of the teas so generously furnished them by the ladies of the Board of Managers.

The Benefit Society has been in successful operation during the year, and the treasurer reports that [illegible] has been collected. Of this amount [illegible] has been deposited to the credit of 39 individual bank accounts, while [illegible] have been withdrawn from these accounts. [illegible] has been withdrawn by savers who have no bank accounts. The number of savers is now 180. The Boy's Club Branch of this Society has been re-organized this autumn and encouraging results are hoped for in this quarter.

In order to carry on this work satisfactorily a larger number of collectors is necessary. The weekly visits of these collectors are of great value, not only in aiding the savers to become more provident, but also in the personal influence that may be exerted.

Volunteers in this work will be most welcome and should give their names to either the secretary or the treasurer of the society.

There were only nine tickets for seashore excursions donated during the summer, but these were thoroughly appreciated by the fortunate recipients. The custom of distributing Thanksgiving dinners was well sustained, and about 45 families were provided for.

Since the Relief Association co-operates to a certain extent with the Poormaster, the members have a special interest in the condition of the town poor, and have made another effort during the past year to interest the community in securing a more satisfactory means of caring for those in his charge. A committee was appointed to confer with Mayor Gilbert and to have the matter of providing a Poor Farm laid before the Council. Unfortunately it was [illegible] to be a matter involving too much [illegible] receive any immediate attention. [illegible] town poor are still maintained in [illegible] most detrimental to their [illegible] and which reflects no credit [illegible] progressive city.

In [illegible] made by the World's Congress [illegible] for some exhibit from our Society for [illegible] Columbian Exposition, Miss Leonard [illegible] a bound volume of the yearly reports of the Relief Association, with a photograph of the rooms, taken by Andrew Gerall, as frontispiece. This was so satisfactory that a second copy was obtained for the

A MAD RUNAWAY.

GREAT EXCITEMENT CAUSED ALONG PARK AVENUE.

Ladies Thrown From Their Carriage and Severely Hurt—Col. King's Gallantry, Solicitude and Hospitality.

About six o'clock Saturday afternoon a horse attached to a light buggy, driven by Mrs. John J. Willis, of Westfield, suddenly and without a warning became unruly and started to run. Mrs. Willis did not lose her presence of mind, but instantly took her horse well in hand, and had him fairly under control, when of a sudden he took a fresh start.

Near the Albion he collided with a team, overturning the buggy, throwing Mrs. Willis and her daughter, Marguerite, to the ground; the horse freeing himself from the wagon dashed down the avenue.

Ready hands picked up the ladies, and they were taken into the Albion, where Col. King, the proprietor, and his estimable wife and daughter conducted them to the Colonel's private apartments. Blood was flowing freely from a severe gash in Mrs. Willis's forehead, where her head came in contact with the curbstone as she fell, and Miss Marguerite was suffering from a blow in the breast.

Dr. Fritts, who fortunately happened to be passing at the time, hastened to the Albion, and in a short time stopped the flow of blood. Taking several stitches in Mrs. Willis's forehead, and giving the necessary attention to Miss Willis, the doctor soon had his patients in condition to proceed to their home in Westfield.

Col. and Mrs. King and daughter received the grateful acknowledgment of the ladies for their kind and hospitable attention to the wayfarers in distress.

Bring Back the Absent.

The October number of Lauter's Musical and Home Journal has just been issued, and contains interesting and complete stories, poems from eminent authors, and many delightful selections of vocal and instrumental music. Among the latter list are "Bring the Absent Back to Me", by Wm. A. Huntley; "Our Gal in Tennessee", by W. T. Budds; "My Fond Desire Waltz", by Adam Geibel. The same can be obtained free upon application at the piano and organ warerooms of S. D. Lauter Company, 657 and 659 Broad street, Newark.

"Robin Hood" by the Bostonians.

Plainfield people who would delight in seeing "Robin Hood" produced by the genuine Bostonians in all their own excellence and all of "Robin Hood's" glory, will be glad to know that their engagement continues in the Columbia Theatre, Brooklyn, all this week. They are now rehearsing a new opera, also, which they will present in the Columbia early in December. The Columbia is easy of access, being about three blocks from the bridge entrance.

A Flourishing Church.

After a thorough overhauling the M. E. church at Dunellen, was reopened for worship Sunday. The Rev. W. C. Koenig, the pastor, is much pleased with the appearance of the church. Two new members united with the church at the morning service. At the three services something like $800 was subscribed towards paying off the church debt. A love feast will continue all the week.

RALLY AT THE CAPITAL.

ARMY OF ENDEAVORERS TO ASSEMBLE AT TRENTON.

Two Days of Discussion and Praise by 2,000 Delegates—Many of the Most Active Workers in the Society Will Read Papers and Deliver Addresses.

About 2,000 Christian Endeavorers will concentrate at Trenton next Wednesday. That day and the next this army of young church workers will receive instructions how best to carry on warfare in the cause of righteousness. This is the annual convention of the State Union. It will be held in Taylor's Opera House, and the foremost people of the society say it will far surpass any previous State convention of this marvellously-growing body.

It is now eight years since the first meeting of Christian Endeavor Societies in this State. At that gathering there was plenty of enthusiasm, but no thought of the colossal growth to which the union would quickly attain. Then there were only ten societies represented, and probably there were no other societies in the State. Now there are hundreds of societies and thousands of members.

The arrangements for the convention this year are as nearly perfect as a hard-working committee has been able to make them. The 2,000 delegates expected to attend will all be provided for in private houses and hotels. The three sessions each day will furnish a series of addresses and discussions which will do much toward enlightening the members on the work expected of them during the coming year. The best speakers in this part of the country on subjects pertaining to this kind of work will contribute to the programme.

The Endeavorers in the southern part of the State have been entrusted with the preparation of the programme for the convention, and up to date they have arranged the following, which, it is expected, will be carried out:

WEDNESDAY MORNING.

10:30—Invocation service, the Rev. L. D. Smith.

11—Greetings: From the churches, the Rev. S. M. Studdiford.

11:15—From the union, the Rev. Judson Conklin.

11:30—Response, the Rev. A. B. Richardson.

11:45—Announcements, appointments.

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON.

2—Devotional service, W. A. Venter, General Secretary Trenton Y. M. C. A.

2:15—Conference on committee work, Haley Hammond.

3—"True Citizenship for Endeavorers", the Rev. Dr. Scudder.

3:30—"Our Duty to Our Associate Members", socially, Miss Clara Littell, Newark; spiritually, the Rev. S. J. McDowell.

4—Temperance parliament, Willard I. Hamilton, Newark.

4:30—Free parliament, "What Our Societies Are Doing", the Rev. Judson Conklin.

WEDNESDAY EVENING.

7:30—Song service, Endeavor choir, leader, Edward W. Dunham.

7:45—Question box on junior work, J. Howard Breed.

8:15—"A Review of Our State Work", Miss Caroline H. Brookfield, Secretary and Treasurer of State Union.

8:45—Convention sermon, the Rev. J. T. Dickinson, Orange.

THURSDAY MORNING.

6:30—Early prayer and inspiration service, C. W. Shoemaker.

9:00—Devotional service, John F. Dobbs.

9:15—The mission of the Travelers' Union, F. D. Wing, president of the Travelers' Union.

9:30—Our floating society, Miss Antoinette P. Jones.

9:45—Our life-saving stations, Rev. S. Edward Young.

10:15—Call of district secretaries, Rev. Frank B. Everitt.

10:30—Call of denominational representatives, Rev. J. T. Kerr.

11:10—Montreal convention and its lessons; report of committees.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON.

2:00—Prayer for missions, Miss Ida B. Stephens.

2:15—Missionary committees; composition, "Methods of Work," Miss Alice B. Spangenberg.

2:45—"How to Educate Our Societies in Missions," Rev. F. O. Dobbins, D. D.

3:05—"The Needs of the Mission Fields," Rev. T. H. Lewis, president Western Maryland College.

3:30—"The Reflex Influence of Missionary Work on Character," Rev. Robert Speer, Secretary Foreign Mission Board, Presbyterian Church.

4:00—Junior Societies and Missions," Miss Allie Scudder.

4:15—"Methods of Junior Work," Rev. A. W. Spooner.

5—Junior rally, led by Miss Mary Walker.

THURSDAY EVENING.

7:30—Song service, Endeavor Choir; leader, Edward W. Dunham.

7:45—Address, Rev. J. Judson Pierson; address, Hon. John Wanamaker, or the Rev. Dr. Walter Marie Smith, of New York; address, Dr. F. E. Clark; consecration service.

It is stated for the benefit of those who may attend the convention that the committee on entertainment has made arrangements by which board may be secured with private families at $1 a day and at the hotels for $2 a day. Single meals can be secured for 50 cents. To secure these advantages every delegate will have to go directly to the Y. M. C. A. building on East State street, on arriving at New Jersey's capital city. All of the cars from the various depots pass the building. There the entertainment committee will be found, whose duty it will be to assign the delegates to rooms in a boarding house or hotel.

The music will be one of the features of the convention. It will be under the direction of Edward W. Dunham, of Trenton, who led the singing at the Asbury Park auditorium during the past summer. A special choir of seventy-five voices has been training faithfully. It will be accompanied by the three Park sisters, cornetists.

As stated in The Press last week, the convention at its business session will take decided action in regard to the legalized gambling carried on in the State. A strong set of resolutions are being prepared which will undoubtedly be passed. They call for the united action of the male members of all the societies this fall in the election of members of the State Legislature.

It is almost certain that John Wanamaker will not be able to address the convention on Thursday night. Word has been received from Philadelphia that Mr. Wanamaker is in very poor health and that although he will be present if possible, he will hardly be able to make an address. When the programme committee received this word they immediately wrote to the Rev. Dr. Walter Marie Smith, of New York, and they are in hopes that the doctor will accept the invitation to speak.

Each delegate visiting Trenton next Wednesday will be presented with a neat souvenir medal. The medal is about the size of a quarter dollar and is made of white metal. It will be suspended by a piece of orange ribbon, and is to be exposed to view by the wearer. No one will be allowed upon the main floor of the theatre unless wearing a badge. The badge was designed by Horace E. Fine, a member of the Trenton Union.

Miss Alice Spangenberg, of Netherwood will make a report as District Secretary, and have charge of one of the meetings.

The Plainfield Ice Company Moves.

The Plainfield Ice and Cold Storage Company moved into new quarters today. They will hereafter occupy the offices of John M. Hadfield, the coal dealer, on Park avenue. Mr. Hadfield will continue to keep his desk at the old stand as usual.

To Tell of Their New York Work.

Mrs. Sidney Whittemore, founder of The Door of Hope, New York, will speak in the Park Avenue Baptist church the evening of Tuesday, Oct. 12, at 8. [illegible] Booth, a reformed [illegible] from Albion, will address the young people at 7.30 p. m. Mrs. Whittemore and Mr. [illegible] will also speak in the First Presbyterian church at 7 in the afternoon of the same day.

THE MAN ON THE CARS.

[illegible] Pessimistic Friend, and Deals in the Gentle Art of Prophecy.

The Man on the Cars was in a cheerful mood that chilly night last week, and, as the train bowled by Loraine and the passengers wondered what Almon must look like, he mysteriously said:

"There are some people who take their view of life from the standpoint of one observing the team from the front platform of a horsecar, and the pleasanter features of things never occur to them. Take that fellow over in the corner, for instance. He told me the other day that he was about settled in his mind that life was not worth the trouble of existing, that pessimism was the proper caper, etc., etc. I argued for half-an-hour to no purpose, although I dwelt most tenderly on the joys of society and the pleasures of friendship. He said he had no use for friends; they were a bother and an inconvenience, and always in the way. I tried pleadings without success, and, at length, gave it up and told him where his notions might apply, however useless they were here. Then, when I was about to leave, he took my arm and sighed: 'You've always been a good friend to me—could you lend me five for a week?' That's ever the way with those fellows. Did he get the five? Not much!

"Speaking of oddities, have you remarked that big sign that the American Line has put up at the end of their new North River pier, just above the Pennsylvania's New York ferry-house? It looks more like a back-stop on a base-ball field than a mere bill-board, but the funny part is the deceptive wording it displays and which goes this way, if I remember rightly:

AMERICAN LINE.
NEW YORK AND SOUTHAMPTON.
ONE HOUR AND FORTY MINUTES TO LONDON.

The innocent, guileless reader is led to suppose that the new line will carry him over to England's capital in one hour and forty minutes from New York, only a little longer than it takes to get to Plainfield, and his unsuspecting mind is at once filled with ideas of taking a run to the old country some Saturday night, spending Sunday and getting back to the office Monday morning. 'One hour and forty minutes to London!' I wonder if that sort of thing will ever be done! Think of doing business in New York and residing in some quaint old suburb of 'Lunnon', commuting, of course, and squandering just three hours and twenty minutes a day in transit! Or, wondering in the afternoon whether you would go in the evening to see a play in Gotham, or run across to take in Drury Lane, or Covent Garden or Mme. Tussaud's; whether to enjoy Sunday afternoon at Coney Island or Brighton; to worship at Trinity or Westminster! Sounds like fool talk, doesn't it? And yet the American Line people either intend to deceive, mean to be prophetic or else, and this is the most likely, are unconscious of the way their sign reads. But they may be forecasting future events, and, when one recalls what unutterable improvement has been accomplished in the past century, it is not taxing imagination very much to believe that invention will soon overcome space in the transportation of matter as it already has in the carriage of sound. I want to bet that if Mr. Haggard's 'She' were just now commencing her life of 2,000 years she would see the time when she might skip from Europe to America in an hour or two, or from the antipodes here in a day, long before her span was spun. Don't want to take my wager, eh? Well, I won't blame you, because we are not likely to live long enough to win or lose. You seem to be as narrow-minded about some things as my friend in the corner is pessimistic in others.

"But, good-night! I've got to jump off before the train stops and fight for a place on the line in the station—this is the night I buy my commutation, you know."

And he slipped away as the cars rolled into Plainfield.

THE LOWEST RATE OF THE YEAR.

All Aboard for Chicago via Pennsylvania Railroad Company's Coach Excursions.

At a recent meeting the rate to Chicago via the Pennsylvania Railroad was definitely decided upon, and will hold good during the remaining excursions of the people's popular coach series: $18.00 from New York, and $17.00 from Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington, and proportionately low rates from other points on the company's division and branches. These rates are the lowest that have yet been authorized, and their ultimate legality has been brought about mainly through the efforts of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company.

The remaining dates on which this remarkable rate will apply are October 11, 17 and 21, from New York and Philadelphia, and 7, 14 and 21, from Baltimore and Washington, when trains will leave the several Eastern terminals fully and comfortably equipped with Pennsylvania standard coaches, and all taking advantage of these exceptional opportunities are assured of being amply cared for in transit. The arriving time in Chicago, early the next afternoon, is on equality with the fast express trains schedule, and affords sufficient time for a selection of accommodations for the stay in Chicago.

The immense volume of travel now directing itself toward the World's Fair, and the rapidly approaching termination of the Exposition induces the company to place every inducement possible before the public. There could be no better way devised to encourage visits to the most marvelously gorgeous exhibition the people of this generation have ever seen.

Their Faithful Brother.

At a meeting of Court Pride of New Jersey, No. 6934, A. O. F. of A. held in their rooms on Thursday evening, Oct. 5, 1893, the following resolutions were adopted on the death of their late District Deputy Brother Robert J. Powers:

Whereas, It has pleased the Almighty in His wise providence to remove from us by death our District Deputy Brother Robert J. Powers, Therefore be it,

Resolved, That while in humble submission we bow to the will of Him who doeth all things well, we deeply deplore the loss of our worthy and esteemed brother, whose ability and faithfulness was beyond question, and we extend to the family of our deceased brother our heartfelt sympathy in this their hour of sorrow and affliction, and

Resolved, That this testimonial of our appreciation of our sorrow be forwarded to the bereaved family of our departed brother, and that a copy of these resolutions be entered in full on the minutes of our Court and also published in the Plainfield press.

Consolidation Sure.

WESTFIELD, Oct. 7.—The two leading social organizations here, the Westfield Athletic and the Union League Clubs, will become one. Opposition to the consolidation came mostly from members of the Union League Club. This club at a meeting held Thursday night voted by a large majority in favor of consolidation. A third club will be incorporated, which will receive as charter members all those on the membership rolls of the two old clubs. This third organization will get possession of the new $15,000 club house of the Westfield Athletic club; and when this has been accomplished, the parent organizations will disband. This movement to consolidate the club interests of the place was set on foot by a few farsighted men who saw that the place was not large enough to support two rival clubs on such a scale as they upon which they proposed to operate.

THE Y. M. C. A. SEWER CONNECTION

Only the Overflow from the Swimming Tank to be Let Into the Sewer.

Some consternation was caused in the Common Council at its last meeting when it was learned that the new Y. M. C. A. building had made a connection to the north lateral of North avenue sewer. The matter was referred to a committee for investigation.

The committee met last night and received a communication from the Y. M. C. A. Their representations say that the connection to the sewer is only for the water that will come from the swimming tank, and that they received permission from President Rockafellow, of the Board of Health, to let their overflow run off through the sewer in question.

Mr. Rockafellow says that the admission of the water to the sewer can do nothing but good; that it will flush out the drain and keep it in much better condition than it would be in otherwise.

The committee will report to the Council at the next meeting.

No. 19 Ranks High.

The room of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., was the scene of great activity last night. Mrs. Work, the Inspector of the Woman's Relief Corps, was visiting the post, and in the course of her investigations into the state of Relief Corps, No. 19, auxiliary to the Winfield Scott Post, she said that it ranked among the very best in organization and efficiency.

Seven new members, all young ladies, were initiated, and after the ceremonies the rooms were thrown open and visitors were allowed in.

A fine spread had been provided and every one did justice to the tempting viands. The meeting ended with speeches and the expression of good wishes between the visitors and their hosts.

—The women of Relief Corps No. 19 will give a literary entertainment the evening of Thursday, Oct. 19.

GEMS IN VERSE.

A Persian Poem.

"Tell me, gentle traveler, thou
Who hast wandered far and wide,
Seen the sweetest roses blow
And the brightest rivers glide—
Say, of all thine eyes have seen,
Which the fairest land has been?"

"Lady, shall I tell thee where
Nature seems most blest and fair,
Far above all climes beside?
'Tis where those we love abide.
And that little spot is best
Which the loved one's foot hath pressed.
Though it be a fairy space,
Wide and spreading is the place;
Though 'twere but a barren mound,
'Twould become enchanted ground.
With thee, yon sandy waste would seem
The margin of Al Cawthar's stream,
And thou couldst make a dungeon's gloom
A bower where newborn roses bloom."
—Jewish Messenger.

In Bohemia.

I'd rather live in Bohemia than in any other land,
For only there are the values true,
And the laurels gathered in all men's view;
The prizes of traffic and state are won
By shrewdness of force or by deeds undone;
But fame is sweeter without the feud,
And the wise of Bohemia are never shrewd.
Here pilgrims stream, with a faith sublime,
From every class and clime and time,
Aspiring only to be enrolled
With the names that are writ in the book of gold,
And each one bears in mind or hand
A palm of the dear Bohemia land.
A scholar first with his book—a youth
Aflame with the glory of harvested truth,
A girl with a picture, a man with a play,
A boy with a wolf he has modeled in clay,
A smith with a marvelous hilt and sword,
A player, a king, a plowman, a lord—
And the player is king when the door is passed,
The plowman is crowned, and the lord is least!
I'd rather fail in Bohemia than win in another land.

There are no titles inherited there,
No hoard or hope for the brainless heir,
No gilded dullard native born
To stare at his fellow with leaden scorn.
Bohemia has none but adopted sons;
Its limits, where fancy's bright stream runs;
Its honors, not garnered for thrift or trade,
But for truth and beauty man's soul have made.
To the empty heart in a jeweled breast
There is value maybe in a purchased crest;
But the thirsty of soul soon learn to know
The moistless froth of the social show;
The vulgar sham of the pompous feast,
Where the heaviest purse is the highest priest;
The organized charity scrimped and iced,
In the name of a cautious, statistical Christ;
The smile restrained, the respectable cant,
When a friend in need is a friend in want;
Where the only aim is to keep afloat,
And a brother may drown with a cry in his throat.

Oh, I long for a glow of a kindly heart,
And the grasp of a friendly hand,
And I'd rather live in Bohemia than in any other land.
—John Boyle O'Reilly.

The Weather.

We farmers in the country, as seasons go and come,
Is purty much like other folks—we're apt to grumble some!
The spring's too back'ard for us or too for'ard—ary one—
We'll jaw about it anyhow and have our way or none!
The thaw's set in too suddent, or the frost's staid in the soil
Too long to give the wheat a chance, and crops is bound to spoil!
The weather's either most too mild, or too outrageous rough,
And altogether too much rain or not half rain enough!

Now what I'd like and what you'd like is plain enough to see;
It's jest to have old Providence drop round on you and me
And ast us what our views is first regardin' shine or rain
And post 'em when to shet it off or let her on again!
And yit I'd ruther, after all—considerin' other chores
I got on hands, a-tendin' both to my affairs and yours—
I'd ruther miss the blame I'd git a-rulin' things up there,
And spend my extry time in praise and gratitude and prayer.
—James Whitcomb Riley.

Rapid Transit.

The first train leaves at six p. m.
For the land where the poppy blows.
The mother dear is the engineer,
And the passenger laughs and crows.

The palace car is the mother's arms;
The whistle a low, sweet strain.
The passenger winks and nods and blinks
And goes to sleep on the train.

At eight p. m. the next train starts
For the poppy land afar.
The summons clear falls on the ear,
"All aboard for the sleeping car!"

But what is the fare to poppy land?
I hope it is not too dear.
The fare is this—a hug and a kiss,
And it's paid to the engineer.

So I ask of Him who children took
On His knee in kindness great,
"Take charge, I pray, of the trains each day
That leave at six and eight.

"Keep watch on the passengers," thus I pray,
"For to me they are very dear,
And special ward, O gracious Lord,
O'er the gentle engineer."
—St. Louis Star-Sayings.

Charity.

He who sits
And looks out on the palpitating world
And feels his heart swell in him large enough
To hold all men within it, he is near
His great Creator's standard, though he dwells
Outside the pale of churches and knows not
A feast day from a fast day, or a line
Of Scripture even. What God wants of us
Is that outreaching bigness that ignores
All littleness of aims or loves or creeds
And clasps all earth and heaven in its embrace.
—Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

A Recipe For a Day.

Take a little dash of water cold,
And a little leaven of prayer,
And a little bit of sunshine gold
Dissolved in the morning air.

Add to your meal some merriment,
Add a thought for kith and kin,
And then, as a prime ingredient,
A plenty of work thrown in.

But spice it all with the essence of love
And a little whiff of play.
Let a wise old book and a glance above
Complete the well made day.

ACTORS AND HOODOOS

WOE TO A PLAY WHOSE FIRST NIGHT SEES A YELLOW FLAGEOLET.

The Ill Omen Managers Understand Best—Once a Favorite Falsetto When In a Theater Orchestra—It is Never Tolerated or at the Initial Performance.

"That play was never received," said an old time manager to an up town cafe several nights ago. "It is a play, but, for it's a good play and a good company. I wish that I had not seen the dress rehearsal."

"You're getting old, colonel, and you only see success in the past," said a leading man.

"That is where you are wrong," replied the manager. "I know a good thing when I see it, and this play is a good thing, but it began with a hoodoo, and it will surely fail."

"Hoodoos are humbugs! There is no such thing as a hoodoo that can harm any play."

Around the table were half a dozen actors and men interested in theatrical affairs. For men in New York know more about the history of the American stage for the past few years than the manager who spoke. Booth, Jefferson, Barrett and Irving have all claimed him as their friend, and his reminiscences of the stage make him the center figure in any other [illegible] play gathering of actors.

"Now, colonel," said the leading man when the glasses had been filled, "you were talking about hoodoos on the stage. I don't believe in them. When a play is a failure, it is easy to explain it by saying it had a hoodoo."

"Well," said the colonel, "across the world ever was a superstitious lot. Even Henry Irving brought his hoodoos to this country when he first came here. I didn't believe in hoodoos and that sort of thing when I was young. I don't like to accept them now, but I am forced to by experience.

"Have you ever known the yellow flageolet to fail in wrecking a play? Now, you laugh at that. I think that, as a rule, there is no harm in a yellow flageolet in itself, but there is a peculiar fatality in the circumstances that bring it into a theater orchestra at a dress rehearsal or on an opening night. There was a yellow flageolet in the orchestra today, and that is why I say that the piece is doomed. Yes, that's right; laugh if you will, but my experience is a long one, and I think I am a sane man. Any old manager in this country will tell you that a yellow flageolet is sure to wreck any company. Chorus men won't have them in their bands. I could tell you many incidents to illustrate what I say. Perhaps you remember that when 'The Junior Partner' was put on, every one said it was going to be a big success. Everything pointed that way, but it opened with a yellow flageolet in the orchestra, and then Mrs. McKee Rankin's troubles began. That is a fact. I have known stage managers, and sensible ones, too, who would refuse to ring up the curtain until the yellow flageolet was driven out of the orchestra."

"That is just as absurd," said the light comedy man, "as the shoes that the Italian ballet girls in the 'Crystal Slipper' kept in their dressing rooms. I knew the effect of that amount, for I was in the company. Every time I went on the stage or near the dressing rooms I thought of Hunter's Point and the garbage district. Couldn't persuade those girls to throw away this cheese. They believed that as long as they kept it they would be sure of an engagement. The cheese had been given to them in Italy to protect them from harm. Each girl had a small piece of it—and cheese it was, too—rolled up in paper in her trunk. To be sure of protection they took it to their dressing rooms. Eddie Foy nearly choked because of the smell of that cheese. Eddie never did like comic opera, and that cheese settled him. 'I could only show them what I could do in Daly's company,' he would say, 'and escape from this horrible Italian cheese. I'm too delicate for this work any way. Just wait until I get into the "legit" and wear swallow tails and smoke cigarettes on the stage and pull my watch.' Now, colonel, speaking about the hoodoos, that is my experience with a mascot."

"For some reason," said the leading man, "actors are naturally superstitious. Perhaps it is because their life is one of many ventures, and sometimes the most insignificant thing may lead to failure or success. Probably a good deal of the superstition is assumed. Most people have a dash of that in them, whether they will admit it or not. Do you remember when Rose Coghlan made her hit at Wallack's in 'Diplomacy' as the Countess Zicka? As you remember, the plot of this play hangs on the perfume that the countess uses. Rose Coghlan used a certain perfume on that night, and she made a big hit. I have heard that she always uses this perfume now, no matter what the play may be. Of course it is only a woman's fancy, and yet I have heard that Miss Coghlan would rather lose her wardrobe than her perfume. Patti also has a similar fad. When she made her first great hit, she wore a pair of shoes of peculiar pattern. Patti wears in her concerts now shoes made on this identical last and of the same pattern. She believes they bring her luck, and apparently they have done so. Yes, stage folk are a bit superstitious. You probably have all seen would be funny men thrown off the stage at rehearsal for quoting some of the hoodoo passages in 'Macbeth.'"

"There is very little or no connection," said the colonel, "between these little foibles and spiritualism, but the conversation suggests it. You would all probably be surprised to know the number of well known actors who believe in spiritualism. Billy Florence was a spiritualist, although few people knew it. I knew him as intimately as any one, and he has often talked about his belief to me. Bartley Campbell was another, and so is McVicker of Chicago. Ada Isaacs Menken is now simply a name to you youngsters. She was a clever woman, as well as a very beautiful woman. The elder Dumas and many other men of letters were among her friends. She wrote two volumes of verse, which, she claimed, were inspired by the spirits. These verses consisted of unusual lines of varying length, and they attracted some attention. I'm not a spiritualist, but I am a firm believer in hoodoos and occasionally in mascots. Let's have a nightcap."—New York Sun.

A Well Balanced Head.

Jacob Myers delights in scaling dizzy heights and performing all kinds of foolhardy tricks. His wonderful feat on the electric light tower at Tipton, Ia., is still remembered by most of the people of Cedar county, if not by the entire state. The tower is a painted affair, 150 feet high, with an iron rod an inch in diameter extending seven feet above the platform. Myers mounted this tower and stood upright on one foot upon the rod for 21 seconds. W. R. Barber, a photographer of Fortuna, Cal., has a photograph of Myers dancing a hornpipe on the sawed off top of a redwood 125 feet from the ground.—St. Louis Republic.

COST OF LIVING IN PARIS.

Some Hints Which May Aid Visitors In Getting Along Economically and Well.

Among the meats, plain boiled beef, dry and without gravy, costs 6 cents. When garnished with a vegetable, its price is 8 cents. Here there is a curious manipulation of prices. The "garniture" of meats with vegetables costs but little extra, while the vegetables served by themselves are rather dear. Thus potatoes are 12 cents a plate, but plain boiled beef garnished with potatoes costs only 2 cents more than plain boiled beef alone. To eat cheaply it is therefore better to order garnished meats and avoid plates of vegetables sold separately. This is no great secret, and nothing is gained by it except in the line of economy. The vegetables used for garnitures are inferior in freshness or flavor, although they are perfectly good.

The French, even in their expensive restaurants, have no proper idea of roast meats. Mutton of a cut called "gigot" is pretended to be roasted and comes on tough and bleeding. Beef, on the other hand, is frequently cooked so long that it is as dry as dust. Roast lamb and veal are served unbrowned and sprawling limply in a watery gravy, with water cress around the edge of the dish, as if that could make up for it. When roast meats are stuffed, it is never with plain bread crumbs and herbs. There must be chopped ham, force meat, chopped mushrooms and grated cheese, all mixed together.

A small broiled chop costs in these restaurants 8 cents. They are thought to be expensive and small for the price. English tourists regard the Duval [illegible] and who patronize the Duval restaurants [illegible] to be for the sake of [illegible] Parisians are the chief patrons of [illegible] shops. A Parisian would prefer a large dish of sausage stew, with potatoes, peas and onions swimming in a savory sauce. This would save him the price of vegetables and give him the money for those things the Englishman does not value highly—the little radishes before the soup, the soup itself and black coffee, with brandy at the end.

Veal cutlets in the true Viennese style, even in the little eateries [illegible] are large and filling at 14 cents. A [illegible] of chicken, very small indeed, [illegible] 18 cents. [illegible]

EIDER DUCK FARMING

ICELAND'S INDUSTRY TAKES LITTLE LABOR AND INGENUITY.

Two Crops Are Gathered Each Season, Which Are Worth About $5 a Pound. How to Kill the Goose That Lays the Golden Eggs—The Harvest Time.

Now, there are pleasanter capitals to reside in than Reykjavik, the chief town of Iceland. There are cities which have reached a point somewhat nearer civic perfection than it can at present boast of, but those who take the trouble to journey thither will find much to interest them.

The city, for its unidealized authorities the use of the word, consists of a straggling collection of wooden houses, which remind the traveler of some small and desolate village on the west coast of Scotland.

A large square building, like some giant barn or mammoth county constabulary, first strikes the eye. This is the governor's house, almost the only stone building in the town.

All the available space on the shore not taken up with houses is covered with codfish drying in the sun and giving out an intolerable stench.

All the rocks, palings and even the roofs of the houses themselves are covered with these glistening testimonies of the city's chief occupation or trade.

Other products of the place are eider down, horses and hot water. One of the largest eider duck farms is situated on a small island in the bay, and, with the permission of the owner, can be visited by strangers.

The scene is not without interest. Behind, far away on the horizon line, rises the snow capped peak of the Snaefel Jokull, nearly 6,000 feet in height, which, though more than 60 miles away, glistens and shines like silver in the morning sun.

In front lies Reykjavik, the civil and ecclesiastical metropolis of Iceland. Not much agricultural labor or ingenuity is expended by the eider duck farmer upon his property. It consists for the most part of a large open field of stunted grass, which has been blown by the wind and washed by the action of the weather into round hummocks, such as may be frequently met with all over the barren and devastated country of Iceland.

In the recesses and holes and cavities between the hummocks the eider ducks may be seen sitting on their nests. Of these there are several scores, and the birds themselves when sitting are perfectly tame, some of them even allowing a stranger to stroke them with the hand.

They are not all hatched at the same time, and many are still in the egg when others are hatched and swimming about in the sea.

The drake, as is frequently the case with the female bird, is a handsome, showy creature, with much white in his plumage. He is excessively shy and wary, while the female, whose plumage is brown and glossy, is, on the contrary, tame and confiding.

The duck lays from five to six eggs at the beginning of June, and it is no unusual thing to find from 10 to 12 eggs in one nest, together with two females, who sit either at intervals or, if necessary, both together at the same time, and, strange to say, seem to agree remarkably well with one another.

The period of laying lasts some six or seven weeks, and the birds are in the habit of laying three times in different places. From the first and second of these both the down and the eggs are taken away, but from the last it is very seldom that the farmer removes either.

Should he do so with any degree of persistence the birds would desert the locality, and he is not such a fool as to destroy the duck with the golden eggs.

In some cases the owner resides on or near the farm. In this particular instance he visited the island from the mainland once a week at the least.

As soon as he and his men arrive at the nest they carefully remove the female and take away the superfluous down and eggs. The duck immediately begins to lay afresh and covers her eggs with new down which she plucks from her own breast. If the supply is inadequate, the male comes to her assistance and helps to cover the eggs with his down.

This, being white, is easily distinguished from the brown covering which the female supplies and is not so good in quality.

The nest is now, as a general rule, left until the young ones are hatched. There is not much callowness and helplessness about these youngsters. About an hour after they are out of the shell they quit the nest together, when it is once more plundered.

The best down and the greatest number of eggs are obtained during the first three weeks of the laying period, and it has in general been observed that the birds lay the greatest number of eggs in rainy weather.

The female is a close and persistent sitter, and so long as she is sitting the male, with commendable constancy, remains on the watch hard by, but as soon as the young are hatched he considers his responsibility at an end, and leaves them to their own devices and the care of their mother.

It is a curious and pretty sight to see how the latter looks after her brood. She leads them out of the nest as soon as they creep out of the eggs and precedes them to the water, while they toddle after her.

When she reaches the waterside she takes them on her back and swims with them for a few yards. She then dives, and the young ones are left floating on the water like yellow corks and henceforth are obliged to look after themselves.

Indeed the farmer seldom sees his flock again till the next breeding season, for they become comparatively wild and live out among the damp rocks in the sea, where they feed upon insects and seaweeds and other like vivers.

Some idea of the value of the crop may be gleaned from the fact that one female during the whole time of laying generally gives half a pound of down, which is, however, reduced one-half after it is cleaned.

This down is divided into tharg dunn or seaweed down, and gras dunn or grass down. The latter is generally considered to be the best in quality. The down brings from $4 to $5 a pound.—London Globe.

Malaria and Typhoid.

A few physicians in the United States now distinguish between malaria and typhoid fever in the early stages of each by what is esteemed an absolutely certain diagnosis. The blood from a pin prick upon the patient's body is smeared on a glass plate and placed under a microscope. If the characteristic bacillus of malaria is discovered, the proof is taken as conclusive.—New York Sun.

Reporting Progress.

Visitor—So your brother is taking lessons on the violin. Is he making progress?

Little Girl—Yes'm. He's got so now we can tell whether he is tuning or playing.—Good News.

Obligation.

If ever some pure hearted one should give Responsive look for gentle glance of thine,
Forget it not as long as thou shalt live,
But in thy heart of hearts enshrined

Should ever some congenial spirit say
A tender word in friendship's garden grown,
Oh, let it not as frosted flowers decay,
But be as [illegible] sown!

If ever some unselfish one should do
An act of kindness in thy time of need,
Within thy memory faithfully renew
The fragrant incense of the deed!

Should ever some angelic woman trust
The treasures of her coming years to thee,
Let not her hopes be trodden in the dust,
But loyal to thy promise be.

A Reward For an Officer.

Lucille (cuttingly)—I am so delighted to see you, Mr. Ten Broke. I always have such a delightful nap after you have called.

Ten Broke—Is that so? Why go right to sleep in your chair then. I'll be entertained just as much.—Truth.

Some Reason.

Mrs. Fadder—I have just been to see Mrs. Shapes. Such an interesting woman! She is devoted to dress reform.

Mrs. Homespun—She must be. She is always busy making over old duds.—Boston Transcript.

According to the Talmudists, Satan, whose real name is Sammael, or Eblis, was originally an angel with six wings. He is also known as the Old Serpent, the Devil, Beelzebub, the Unclean Spirit, Leviathan and Asmodeus.

Heaven furnished hoarfrost to Frank Morris' home at Worthington, W. Va. Some years ago an aerolite fell near there which contained iron, which was smelted out and made into horseshoes.

According to the method which is now adopted for reckoning leap years in England, December, January and February will be succeeded [illegible] about 120,000 years hence.

The air is constantly so full of smoke and soot at Pittsburg that women rarely appear on the street in white gowns. New buildings soon look old and black.

Twenty millions of articles of mail matter pass through United States postoffices each day, and 100,000 letters are received annually at the dead letter office.

"FOUND WANTING."

Jeanne d'Arc lacked an education;
Pompadour lacked depth of mind;
Maintenon lacked toleration;
Esther might have been more kind.

Hebrew Sarah lacked humaneness;
Good Octavia wanted wit;
Greek Xantippe lacked urbaneness;
Eliot wasn't chic a bit.

Cleopatra lacked humility;
Ruth was minus worldly wealth;
Bess of England lacked civility;
Saint Theresa lacked in health.

Marie's perfect, but, you see,
Lacks, in toto, love for me.

He Got There.

The diffident young man had wanted to propose to the girl, but for the life of him he did not know how to get about it. He read books on the subject and sought information from men who had experience, and while the theories were admirable in every instance, he found that the practice thereof was a different thing. He was walking with her one evening, thinking over these things, when her shoe became untied. She stuck out her pretty little boot with a smile, looked down at it, and he fell on his knees and tied the lace.

Then he walked on with her, and the shoe became untied again. Shoes do that with great persistency, it seems, especially these summer shoes. The third time it happened he was ready, as before.

"See if you can't tie a knot that will stick," she said as he worked away at it.

He looked up at her tenderly.

"If I can't, I know a man who can," he said.

"Do you want him to tie it?" she asked coquettishly.

"Yes," he replied.

She jerked her foot away.

He smiled to himself.

"It's the parson," he said, and he rose to his feet and finished the work.—Detroit Free Press.

JUST A LITTLE FAT.

A Vegetarian Authority Which Holds It Is Not Such a Bad Thing After All.

The too rapid growth of adipose matter is a source of serious anxiety to a large number of people, and the number of systems recommended for the reduction of fat is infinite. An English vegetarian journal now adds its own peculiar prescription for the benefit of those in whom grace is being superseded by girth. It holds that for persons to reduce obesity by living on lean beef and water is false in principle—it is merely starvation—and though they will certainly become thinner by this method, they will at the same time reduce their constitution.

On the other hand, a simple diet of brown bread and various kinds of fruits is claimed to be a far better means of reducing superfluous flesh than the use of any nostrum, and is will moreover invigorate the body and keep up the strength.

The diet should of course be accompanied with proper exercise. Walking is the most suitable for fat people because in it the whole body is exercised and not one set of muscles at the expense of another. When dishes are not unduly elaborate, people do not usually eat too much. The general diet should be plain and simple.

Rich and elaborate cookery entices people to eat more than is good for them and brings on undue obesity and many disorders. Of course all fat people insist that they are small eaters, but whatever they do eat they eat more than is necessary to keep them healthy and strong, and the excess is packed on as fat they do not want. Persons should not try to reduce themselves to emaciation; they should have sufficient fat on their bodies to round off their angles and prevent their bones showing.

Fat people have always a better time of it when they are taken ill, because if they cannot eat for a day or two their system is supported by their fat, and they will often live through an illness that would kill a thin person. So a little fat is not an altogether undesirable thing to have, and altogether people should not allow themselves to become unwieldy or indolent from excessive fat; they should not use unnatural methods to make themselves thin.

If any person finds himself getting too stout, he has only to reduce his meals, to eat less at each meal and let himself be always hungry when the time for eating comes around. If he further drinks nothing between meals except the glass of water prescribed by many of the best modern practitioners about an hour before breakfast and an hour before retiring for the night, and takes regular exercise, he ought, under normal conditions, soon to attain the proportions at which nature has decided that he shall enjoy perfect health.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

The Mohammedan Paradise.

The Mohammedan paradise is a fairyland. To enter it the believer must cross seven bridges, at each of which he must answer questions relating to his past life. Having crossed the bridges, he is at the entrance. There are 12 doors. The first act is to take a bath, which gives to the body great brilliancy. This abode of delight is built of bricks of gold and silver, held together by a mortar of musk. Spring is eternal. Four oceans confine the seasons—one of water, one of milk, one of honey, one of wine. Waves of perfume envelop them so powerful as to be noticeable 500 days' march away. [illegible]

GEMS IN VERSE.

Revolt of the Soul.

I hate to live and suffer, to know hunger, grief and shame
And see in the throngs about me men mangled, blind and lame.

I hate to see cold winter's snow bear the print of shoeless feet,
And the fleshless hand of hunger pinch faces young and sweet.

I hate to know each freezing blast blows through a cheerless hovel.
I hate to see a hoar head sweat o'er pick and spade and shovel.

I hate to think that tender flesh writhes under lash and blow,
And babes unwanted daily born for sorrow, shame and woe.

I hate to think that thousands toil in squalor, grief and pain
That one may rise above his kind and countless treasure gain.

I hate that which permits these wrongs, with a hate that cannot die,
Be it the demons 'neath the earth or a spirit that reigns on high.
—Louise Ingersoll.

Held Up.

The day of "holding up" stage coaches is passing away with the stages, and now the highwaymen have taken to holding up railroad trains. No doubt, in the coming day when our descendants will have mastered the art of flying, there will be airy highwaymen who will make them stand and deliver en route, as the fishhawk robs the gull.

There are still stages in the west, and there are still highwaymen out there. Not long since a stage from east Oregon was hurrying toward Portland, and in it were four men and a lady. The lady had been out to the mines to see a brother, and there was that in her face and manner that denoted character and breeding.

They were jolting along, those on the same seat trying to talk and the others trying in vain to sleep, when the stage came to a sudden halt and a heavily bearded man pushed a rifle into the door and called out: "Tumble out, there! First man tries to shoot I'll send daylight through!"

An elderly man sitting by the lady was seen by her to drop some gold pieces into one of his boots, which were outside his trousers.

The passengers and driver were stood up in line, their hands raised above their heads, and two men, evidently disguised, began to turn their pockets inside out.

They were swearing at their ill luck and were about to examine the woman's dress, something rarely done by these wretches, when she said, with great calmness and a sweet smile:

"I have no money about me, except a few dollars in my wallet. Here it is. But this man to my right, to my certain knowledge, has a lot of gold in his right boot."

On hearing this the highwaymen raised their hats, thanked her, and leaving her unmolested turned their attention to the man indicated.

After the mailbags had been rifled the stage was permitted to go on.

The man who had been robbed and his associates were furious at the woman, and the former said:

"When we get to Portland, madam, I'll have you arrested as an associate, an accomplice, of those thieves!"

"When we get to Portland," said the lady, with imperturbable calmness, "I want you and these other gentlemen to dine with me at my hotel, when I think I can explain my conduct to the entire satisfaction of all."

She gave them her address, and in due time they reached Portland and at the appointed time were at the lady's hotel.

They found a fine dinner prepared, and when the meal was concluded the lady took out her pocketbook and showed her company 20 one thousand dollar bills.

"I wanted to divert the attention of the robbers from myself and this prize," she said, "and on the instant it came to me to direct their attention to our friend's boot. As you knew, my ruse worked to a charm. I saved my own money and so can well afford to pay this gentleman what he lost."

And the company drank her health and declared that only a woman could have kept her head at such a time.

A Pagan's Prayer.

O Mother, I have loved thee without fear,
And looked upon the mystery of change,
Since first a child, upon the closing year,
I saw the snowflakes fall and whispered, "Strange."

Because in these pale borderlands of fate
Grief hath companioned me, I have not quailed,
And when love passed like the outer strait
I have not faltered, and thou hast not failed.

For I have lifted up my heart to thee,
And thou hast ever hearkened and drawn near,
And bowed thy shining face down over me
Till I could hear thee as the hill flowers hear.

And I have cried to thee in lonely need,
Being but a child of thine bereft and wrong,
Till all the rivers in the hills gave heed,
And the great hill winds in thy holy tongue—

That ancient incommunicable speech
The April stars and autumn sunsets know—
Soothed me and calmed with solace beyond reach
Of human ken, mysterious and low.

Then in that day when the last snow shall come
And chill the fair round world within its fold,
Leave me not friendless in the gathering gloom,
But glad thine arms about me as of old.

With sleep more sweet in thy compassionate hands,
Close me a mourner as of many rills
When I would rove the crimson valley lands
With all my vanished comrades of the hills.

When that great storm out of the dark shall drive,

PLAINFIELD N. J

MURPHY WILL FIGHT.

SO HE DECLARES THROUGH HIS NEWSPAPER SPOKESMAN.

He Denies the Committee's Claim that They Represent a Majority of the Parish—Will Place His [illegible] in their Vestry and His [illegible]—His Veracity Touched on, and He is Recommended as Better [illegible] Jersey City Politics—Running the Church on Ward Politicians' Principles.

The announcement made exclusively in The Press Thursday of the Holy Cross church scandal, brought a deluge of metropolitan reporters to Plainfield, and the New York papers are today full of the story. As was to be expected, the New York Herald, which is represented in Plainfield by the City Clerk, acts as spokesman for the rector, and says:

Mr. Murphy told me to-night that he was not prepared to state exactly what reply he would make, but that inasmuch as a request could only come from the vestry of the church he should doubtless remind the committee that they were barking up the wrong tree. He denies that the petition represented a majority of the parish, and said that in fact it represented but $[illegible] in contributions to the funds of the parish, considerably less than one-third of the members. He said the committee represented an element in the church that had long been dissatisfied with any rule but their own.

He told me he could not be deposed from his position except by the Bishop and that bishops are not in the habit of removing clergymen except for cause. The cause in this case, he said, would simply be dissatisfaction of a faction and not at all of the parish at large. Mr. Murphy has been here seventeen years. During his ministrations the church has grown largely. The congregation is a fashionable one. The dissatisfied members, it is said, claim that Mr. Murphy is too much interested in politics. He is described by them as a Mugwump and a great admirer of Cleveland. Several of the alleged "kickers" are Republicans.

The New York World, being represented by the same person as The Herald, sent out a man from the city staff. Says The World:

The causes which have led up to the committee's action are many and varied. The dissatisfaction with the rector on the part of many of the church members has existed from the very beginning of his rectorship, seventeen years ago.

It is charged that he is too much interested in local and State politics; that association with ward politicians has blunted his sense of veracity; that the really good sermons he preaches are not of his own composition; that the members of his family are too forward in following the fashions in dress, and too keen for social enjoyment; in short that, except that he reads the service impressively and is an entertaining guest at a dinner party, they think he is a flat failure as a parson.

Mr. Murphy naturally takes an opposite view of the case. Seen tonight in his study at the rectory, No. 20 Washington avenue, he said:

"You see this action on the part of the so-called committee is astonishingly irregular. According to the laws of the church, the power to make a demand for my resignation is vested in the officers of the church, the vestrymen. Now no member of that committee is a member of the vestry. Besides that, I do not believe that the committee represents a majority of the church members. It seems to me that my long term of service as rector and the very flourishing condition of the church itself should be sufficient vindication of my work."

Mr. Murphy only smiled when the subject of his children's love for dancing was mentioned. In reply to the charge that some six weeks ago he caused the discharge of Choirmaster and Organist Miner for purely personal reasons, Mr. Murphy said that the choirmaster wrote an insulting letter to the vestry and that the latter body had accepted his resignation.

Charles Matthews, the Chairman of the Committee, and a well-known corporation lawyer, of 15 Broad street, New York, has been a member of the parish for more than twenty years.

"Mr. Murphy is not"—he said—"a fit man for the place. We have realized that fact for some years, but forbore to take any action which might bring the church into unpleasant publicity until it became absolutely necessary. He has been running the church as a ward politician would run a caucus. As to the fondness of the members of his family for dress and dancing, the least said the better."

A gentleman whose liberality in subscriptions to the church is equal to that of Mr. Matthews, but who declined to have his name given, said:

"What business has a man to continue as a clergyman whose reputation for veracity is, to say the least, not what it should be? The truth is, Murphy should enter politics in Jersey City. There he could give full vent to his natural craftiness and seek social enjoyments for himself and family without hindrance."

Others among the parishioners take the rector's part. They claim that the trouble is all because Mr. Murphy refused to allow the wealthy subscribers to run the church. In case he refuses to resign it is said that charges against him will be referred to the Bishop of the diocese. Already many of the wealthier parishioners have refused further subscriptions. One of these said last night that Mr. Murphy had experienced similar troubles in parishes at Newport, R. I., and Fitchburg, Mass.

THE WRONG MAN.

Young Hall, Instead of Being the Thief, Proves to Have Been the Victim.

It seems that the report first sent out by the New York police, in regard to a young man from this city named Hall, who it was stated had skipped with money and horses, proves to have been incorrect. It now transpires that Hall, instead of being the dishonest employe, as was first reported, is one of the owners of the show and the victim of the rascality of "Dandy Dick", to whom he gave a large sum of money to pay the advance expenses of his troupe, which was to have commenced an engagement at Manhattan Field, New York, this week. In addition to the sum of money, between $600 and $900, "Dandy Dick" is also reported as having taken two of the company's best horses. He is supposed to be on the way to the far west, and the police are using every means to apprehend him.

It is to be regretted that such a mistake was made concerning Mr. Hall, as he comes of a highly respected family, and has always been above reproach as to his honesty.

The Very Man a Plainfielder.

(From The [illegible] Record.)

Doubtless it will gladden the heart of every Democrat who believes in the recognition of sterling worth, and the reward of faithful party service to learn that James E. Martine, of Plainfield, has yielded to the pleading of those who have the welfare of the Democratic party at heart and has consented to accept the nomination for State Senator from Union county if the convention determines so to honor him.

There has never been a time when all the members of the Democratic party, who were not guided by petty personal ambitions, were so unanimous in the demand, that in return for his unselfish services and innumerable sacrifices in the past and in recognition of his ability and character Mr. Martine be selected as the standard-bearer of the Democratic party in the crucial campaign on which it is about to enter.

Such a nomination would, of itself, provide a platform upon which every Democrat might stand and would lend inspiration and courage to those who have grown weary of the labor of promoting party success for the advancement of the personal ambitions of those who are in politics for individual profit.

GIRLS IN BURNT CORK.

HERE'S THE KIND OF SOCIETY SHOW THAT WILL TAKE.

Commander Ely Will Play Punch and Judy, and the Young Girls Will Give a Negro Minstrel Show, All for a New Rectory.

The Rectory Society of Grace P. E. church will give an entertainment next Wednesday and Thursday, for the benefit of the rectory fund. The event is sure to attract large numbers. It will take place in the old residence of F. O. Herring, Ninth street. Among the novel features will be a minstrel performance by young women, who will wear burnt cork and crack local jokes just as their big brothers do. A Punch and Judy show will be given by Commodore Henry M. Ely, of Westervelt avenue, for the little people. That the supper to be served will be tempting delicious, the following bill of fare will show:

Chicken salad
Lobster salad
Cold tongue
Cold ham
Baked beans
Olives
Pickles
Biscuit
Tea
Coffee
Waffles
Cake
Ice-cream.

AS BAD AS "RINGSTERS".

Dr. Scudder Tells New Jersey Endeavorers That "Stay at Home" Christians Are Public Enemies.

The sixth annual State Convention of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor, of New Jersey, opened in Taylor Opera House, Trenton, Thursday. There were more than twelve hundred delegates present, the majority of them being young women.

The opening chorus was sung by the choir of one hundred and fifty voices under E. W. Dunham, of Trenton, and the delegates were then welcomed to the city on behalf of the churches by the Rev. Samuel S. Stoddiford, and on behalf of the societies by the Rev. John Handley. The latter in his address referred to race-track gambling and predicted that within the present year the character, if not the political complexion of the Legislature would be changed. His prediction was greeted with loud applause.

The Rev. Dr. Scudder, of Jersey City, spoke in the afternoon on "True Citizenship for Endeavorers". "No weightier subject could come before us at this time than the 'Christian as a citizen'", said Dr. Scudder, "for multitudes of so-called Christians are very bad citizens, in consequence of which our country suffers and the progress of Christ's Kingdom is seriously retarded. The degraded classes value their citizenship and seldom fail to cast their ballots. Some of them vote several times. But multitudes of your society people and good people—falsely so called—either stay at home on election day or go out driving. These 'stay at homes' are the enemies of our Republic, and among them church members are conspicuously numbered."

"And what is the result of this unpardonable neglect? Politics, which is essentially a noble science and honorable pursuit, has been surrendered to the selfish and unscrupulous elements of society, and the rabble rule both our cities and State Legislature. Ex-convicts, gamblers, saloonkeepers and even murderers are allowed to hold responsible offices and administer the government. The sins of omission are as great and prolific of evil as the politicians' sins of commission."

MR. BRADLEY WILL RUN.

He Decided Yesterday to Accept the Nomination Made in Monmouth County.

James A. Bradley, who was nominated for Senator from Monmouth county, by the Republican and the Law and Order League conventions in Freehold last Monday, has accepted the nomination.

A delegation of Republicans and Law and Order League men called on him yesterday at his office in New York city and explained why he should accept. After the situation had been discussed he decided to run. The Law and Order League candidate for Clerk of Monmouth county, Mr. Forman, is a Democrat. The ordinary Democratic majority in Monmouth county is 1,200, but Mr. Bradley is confident this will be overcome because of the public sentiment against the race-track candidate who succeeded in getting on the ticket. The Prohibitionists of the county held a convention in Asbury Park yesterday and indorsed Mr. Bradley.

"The race-track bills will be repealed," said Mr. Bradley when seen last night. "The Legislature will be changed enough to secure that result, I am confident. Sports in general I approve, but betting and gambling I oppose."

THE CAPTAIN'S BIRTHDAY.

The Colonel Tells How Much He Missed Him.

A pleasant [illegible] surprise was in store for Captain L. J. Briggs on his return to Fanwood [illegible] having celebrated his [illegible] with his grandchildren in Brooklyn on the seventh.

"Well, Colonel, I am really glad to get home," and the two settled down to their game of seven-up.

"You bet I missed you, Captain, and by the way you must accept this little package sent you from Plainfield as a birthday present."

Then and there the package was undone and also apparently was the Captain as with a gasp he fell back with the exclamation "Great Scott!" as before him was displayed a box of the finest Partagas, elegantly arranged and modestly carded.

"1818—1893.
Compliments of Chas. E. Moore and
The Daily Press."

"Have one, Colonel, let's proceed with the game"—and the game went on.

Suddenly down went the lights surrounding the table and before either gentleman could recover from his surprise, in glided the ladies with a birthday cake lighted by the number of candles symbolical of the Captain's age, and one in addition for next year.

This knocked the game in the head, and with a happy smile illuminating his countenance the Captain sank back in his cushioned chair murmuring "Holy Moses! good night, Colonel!"

OLDEST INHABITANT.

HAIL TO UNCLE PETER, ENDEARED TO EVERY HEART.

He Began Life with the Century, Not Half a Mile from Where He Has Lived Ever Since—A Shining Example of Modest Citizenship and Sterling Worth—Always Satisfied to Stay at Home and Be Happy with His Household—An Hour's Railroad Trip a Novelty.

The little white cottage on Somerset street has been home to Uncle Peter Wooden as far back as any other "oldest inhabitant" can remember, and Uncle Peter himself has been a local landmark the best part of a century.

The story of Uncle Peter's life is one of quiet prosperity. He was born May 24, 1800, within half a mile of his present residence. His father was Ezra Wooden, who took wife from the Martin family of New Durham, Middlesex county, and settled on a farm at Somerset street and Greenbrook road, during the latter part of the eighteenth century.

Peter Wooden learned the blacksmith trade, and for 30 years had his shop at Chatham and Somerset streets, opposite his residence, where the Crescent Hotel now stands. He also ran a farm. The land he acquired was more than 100 acres, and the site of his farm is now a most important portion of North Plainfield.

David J. Carney, who is one of Uncle Peter's most intimate friends, relates that during school vacations in the summers of 1865 and '66, as a small boy he used to drive Uncle Peter's cows to and from pasture. The cattle grazed in those days in a meadow alongside the stretch of woodland up Somerset street, owned by Uncle Peter. Later in the season, David used to pick stone on the farm, and help gather apples from the orchard, and accompany Uncle Peter to Spooner's cider mill in the Valley.

The farm at that time extended from Green brook to present Park place, and comprised most of the area between those limits and Somerset and Grove streets. The Grove street boundary was along the north side of Grove street all the way from the bridge to Park place. Thence the line ran to Somerset street where the new school-house now stands, and down Somerset street to Uncle Peter's present residence. From there down to the brook the boundary line was irregular, but the farm included the greater part of the land in the rear of Thorn's Sale (the site of which is on the old Dr. John Craig farm); the residence of David French, father of P. M. French, now occupied by the Rev. W. E. Honeyman; the Jelliff house, now occupied by Jacob Voehl; and the property where G. Frank French today has his granary.

It was to this farm that Uncle Peter brought his bride of 1822, Rachel Randolph of South Plainfield. They had four children, but all died young, except George, who reached manhood and went to Illinois, [illegible] there aged 32, without issue.

Uncle Peter lost his wife in 1837, and in 1840 took a new helpmeet in Miss Margaret Cory of Stony Hill. She was known to Uncle Peter from her visits to the Somerset street farm adjoining the Wooden place, that being owned by Daniel Coon, whose wife was Margaret Cory's sister Harriet. Another sister of the bride was Hannah, wife of 'Squire Allen, whose brother David Allen was an old-time resident of Washington Valley. These Allen boys had a famous brother in Col. John Allen, in his day owner of the Martine farm in this city, and Colonel in the New Jersey State Militia. Uncle Peter's wife Aunt Margaret was a beloved citizen of North Plainfield. She was a devoted member of the Plainfield First Baptist church, and a woman of sunny nature and big-hearted charity. She was but two years younger than Uncle Peter, when she died in 1890, ripe in years of kindly deeds.

Uncle Peter's memory is bright, and he enjoys telling of the distant past. He is indeed a relic of old times, and is full of reminiscences of events of those early days which were alive with men now dead and forgotten. He himself clearly recounts the chronicles of the Wooden family. His father Ezra, he says, had eight children, six boys and two girls, whose names were Gideon, Peter, Ziba, Nathan, Richard, Jeptha, Sarah and Elizabeth. Ezra Wooden was in the Revolutionary War. Just before the Battle of Monmouth he gave his horse to a man named Moore, who came from over the mountain near Basking Ridge, asking him to take it to the rear. Moore threw himself astride the animal, and rode all the way from the Monmouth battlefield to his home. The neighbors, however, would not let him enter his house, but compelled him to return to the front. Four of Ezra's sons married and went to Illinois, Gideon and Uncle Peter remaining at home. Gideon, who was known as "Priest" Wooden, was a Seventh-Day preacher, and was pastor of the old historical Piscataway church. He afterwards owned the large farm below Cedar brook, on Park avenue, which he cultivated. "Priest" Wooden's son Ezra is the father of William, Ludlow and Martin Wooden; William and Ludlow are hotel-keepers in Hunterdon and Morris counties, respectively, and Martin is connected with the Royal Baking Powder Co. Ziba was married, and had two children. Nathan also married. Nathan's son George Wooden frequently spent the summer with Uncle Peter. He died a year or two ago, leaving a sister in Newark, where he formerly resided. Elizabeth Wooden married Aaron Freeman, and was the mother of two children, Sarah marrying Aaron Allen, who used to reside on Race street, where the electric-light station now is, and Mary E., marrying a former store-keeper here named John Boice. Richard was married and has a daughter named Hannah living in Illinois. Jeptha's son and daughter also reside in that State. Sarah Wooden married a man named Fields, and after his death she married Robert Morris, an Englishman, by whom she had two children one dying in childhood. They lived at the corner of Amity street and Sixth avenue, New York. The remaining child at the age of sixteen came to Plainfield and lived with the family of the late Zechariah Webster and married Peter Dickinson, a physician of Brooklyn, who was the father of Caleb Dickinson, the Park avenue jeweler, whose mother Ann Dickinson is a well-known member of the M. E. church in this city.

So much for the Wooden chronology. There have been generations continually springing up, and good old Uncle Peter has outlived many of the younger blood. He has lived a peaceful, modest, domestic life, of restful tranquility and simplicity. Always a busy worker, he still does all the odd chores about his home, and as a living relic of the old farm life up to a few months ago kept a horse. Little by little he has parted with his land, thereby adding to the snug fortune which his industry and frugality have accumulated. He has never deviated from his rule of quiet living, and a recent railroad trip to White House, with Sister Ann Dickinson, was a novel and quite exciting experience. Spectators were intensely interested in the picture of the two quaint characters going off on the holiday jaunt.

Uncle Peter has always been a faithful attendant at church, and is now a regular and devoted member of Dr. Lewis's Seventh-Day Baptist church on Central avenue. Years ago he used to listen to his brother "Priest" Wooden preach in the Piscataway church near the Half-Moon Hotel below Quibbletown, now New Market. A Mr. Laverty was a preacher there afterwards. A remarkable coincidence is that Uncle Peter's birthday anniversary and that of Timothy Morse occurred together, Mr. Morse being one year younger.

Uncle Peter's good health is undoubtedly due in part to his abstinence from liquor and tobacco. His picture, excellently given herewith, and his biography, now first published, will be treasured by his loving friends.

MORE LIGHT IN FANWOOD.

Progress Also Made in the Lock-up Enterprise.

A meeting of the Fanwood Town Committee was held Thursday evening in Excelsior Hall. All the members were in attendance, Chairman Miller presiding. The session lasted from 8 to 11:30, and much business was transacted. It was decided to extend the electric-lighting system by the addition of six lamps, which will thoroughly light the most important points. Mr. Kyte reported that the company had removed the old poles on North avenue, as ordered, so it was not necessary for him to go before the Grand Jury.

A full discussion of the jail question was proceeded with, and resulted in the Committee resolving itself into a committee of the whole to determine on the best and most economical arrangement for a lock-up and report at the next meeting, as it was unanimously agreed that the township needed a jail as well as apartments for the temporary care of the poor.

—Queen & Co's representative will again be in Plainfield Thursday, Oct. 26.

TO FINISH THE SEASON.

Dunellen Players to Go to Boston to Play Return Games.

It is probable that the bowlers of the Middlesex and Dunellen Bowling Green Clubs will have a chance to show their skill in a contest with the Boston Curling and Bowling Club some time during this month, at the fine grounds of the latter club just outside Boston.

A letter has been received from James Wempe, Jr., President of the Boston Club, stating that they will close their bowling green season about the 20th of this month, and the invitation is extended to the Middlesex and Dunellen clubs to play another game with them as near that date as it can be conveniently arranged.

It will be remembered that the Boston players were defeated by the Middlesex Club and won from the Dunellen Club when they played in Dunellen September 28. The gentlemen from the Hub are anxious to have another contest. The members of the Middlesex and Dunellen clubs regard the invitation favorably. They certainly would be well treated.

THIEVES GOT NOTHING.

SCARED AWAY FROM WATCHUNG AVENUE STORES.

Left Tomlinson's Cash Untouched, and Didn't Even Molest the Candy or Baled Hay—Charles Hand, Roused from Slumber, Looks Over the Situation and Says the Storebreakers Were Irish.

At a little past 3 Friday morning James Heath, who rooms in the Crescent building, Watchung avenue, was awakened by suspicious sounds as if some one were trying to force an entrance into one of the shops below. The noise seemed to come from a passageway or hall that runs in the rear of the shops that occupy the front of the building. After some delay, Heath reached the street just in time to see two men running off in the direction of Fifth street. He found Policemen Vanderweg and Mattox approaching, and they roused Charles Hand at his house and W. J. Tunison at the City Hotel.

On examination it was found that the doors of the Riding Academy were open, the front doors of Tunison's feed store were pushed apart, and the transom of Tomlinson's candy and notion store was broken from its fastenings and hung down over the door, so that it was impossible to open it. Strangely enough, nothing was missed from either of the shops.

In Tomlinson's cash drawer there was a considerable amount of money in small bills and change, which he had neglected to lock up last night, for the first time—he says—since he opened his shop. The pick of the entire stock was within reach, but none of it was molested.

Tomlinson was obliged to crawl into his shop through the broken transom this morning, as it was impossible to open the door from the outside.

In Tunison's feed store there was nothing in the way of stock that a burglar could take, and the cash was all locked up in the safe. Mr. Tunison says he thinks the burglars were thoroughly familiar with his store and office, as they tried first to enter it by the back window and afterwards forced the front doors, which were easily broken open, as the fastenings are very flimsy. Traces of the intruders were plainly seen in the oats on the floor. The cash drawer, which is filled during the day, was empty, so the burglars got nothing there. Mr. Hand and Mr. Tunison locked up the place again, and went home. Mrs. Ohl, who is in charge of the Riding Academy, says it was locked as usual last night. Had not the burglars been scared off they might have made a good haul and no one would have been the wiser until too late.

Mr. Hand says that there were two suspicious individuals about the place all day yesterday and late into the evening. He says one of them was about 5 feet 7 inches tall and medium build. He wore a black hat and coat and a yellow shirt. He had a black mustache. The other was shorter, with sandy hair and mustache, and wore a black hat and coat. Mr. Hand thinks they were both Irishmen.

The coming of the policemen on the scene is what scared the molesters away.

ALL THE TOWN WAS THERE.

The Young People's Entertainment at Fanwood a Grand Success.

The entertainment in aid of All Saints church, Fanwood, was held in the Watchung Club-house Wednesday evening.

The 400 as well as those of lesser social distinction were out in full force to witness one of the prettiest sights yet seen on the Fanwood stage.

The young people managed the entire entertainment which consisted of tableaux by the youngsters ranging from 6 to 16 years of age. The entire series was deservedly and heartily encored, particularly "America", which group was composed of all the children, while little Lillie Fancher sang the grand old national hymn.

After the tableaux, refreshments were served and then the floor was cleared for dancing.

Miss Ida Cook presided at the piano most gracefully.

Great credit is due Mrs. Charles Collins for her assistance in the stage management. Rev. Dr. E. H. True was everywhere at once and brightened up the assembly by his vivacious example and witticisms. From out of town were noticed Mr. and Mrs. Elderton of Plainfield.

To give the names of the Fanwood people would require a census of the town, as they were all there; the jovial veteran, Captain Briggs, being the most noteworthy. The whole affair was a gratifying success financially as well as socially, more than one remarking that it was the most really social event ever held in Fanwood.

Those who took part were: Lily Fancher, Emma Force, Marja Force, Madeline Robinson, Muriel Robinson, Miss Florence Q[illegible] and Bert Quereau, Masters Briggs, [illegible], Force and Moore.

COMMUTATION LECTURES.

New Series Arranged for, Beginning with Woman and Ending with Woman.

With the return of the appropriate season, the usual course of lectures for All Souls church has been arranged for. The list as outlined is as follows:

Oct. 26—Chas. H. Ham, "Woman".
Oct. 31—Mrs. Estelle [illegible], "Wesley".
Nov. 8, Play—"A Wooden Wedding", Mrs. M. P. Irving, (author), Chas. T. Catlin.
Nov. 14—"Books and Reading", Mrs. Lucy Gibbons Morse.
Nov. 16—Rev. James M. Whiton, "The Ethics of Gambling".
Nov. 22—Rev. Edward Hale, "A Summer in Jersey".
Nov. 28—Mrs. Julia Ward Howe.
Dec. 5—Miss Helen W. Clawson, "Sunday Observance".
Dec. 14—Prof. Wm. H. Goodyear, "Architecture at the Columbian Fair".
Dec. 19—Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, "Political Position of Women in England".

The lectures are under the direction of the Plainfield Branch Alliance of Unitarian and Other Christian Women, one of whom has hit on the happy idea of applying the commutation feature to the lectures. Each course ticket bears 10 numbers, which may be used up by one person attending all the lectures or by several persons attending one lecture or more in groups. The commutation lecture ticket has been copyrighted by the talented Plainfield originator.

Wanted, a Carrier.

Peter Sisson, the new postmaster at Dunellen, is running the office to the satisfaction of all. He now wants to appoint a good letter carrier. Since Postmaster Harrold was removed there has been no delivery for some time. The wages of the carrier is [illegible] a month.

PRISONERS SENTENCED.

THE NEGRO WHO HIT PANGBORN GETS THREE YEARS.

Abductor Randolph Goes to Prison for 5 Years—His Accessory Gets Off with 5 Months in Jail—Long List of Other Offenders.

(Special to The Press.)

SOMERVILLE, Oct. 13—Judge Bartine today sentenced the largest batch of prisoners ever sent at one time from the Somerville jail.

John McGuire, who broke into a farmer's house, was sentenced to two years in State Prison.

Augustus VanAnglen, the North Plainfield negro who assaulted Marshal Pangborn, was sentenced to 3 years in prison, the extreme penalty. He formerly served eighteen months.

Peace J. Rodgers, for larceny, was sent to jail for five months.

Adam Stutz and Arthur Randolph, the two prisoners in the North Plainfield abduction case, were brought in, Miles Fury, a tough Raritan lad, with them. Fury was convicted of assault on Constable Corcoran. Judge Bartine sentenced the offenders as follows: Adam Stutz, 5 months in county jail; Arthur Randolph, 5 years in State Prison at hard labor; Miles Fury, 3 years in State Prison at hard labor.

When Randolph had received his sentence he sat down and cried like a baby. Stutz was advised by the court to do better and was told that this chance was given him.

Chris Lovering, for stealing two ducks, was ordered confined in jail for five days.

John Lahey and Bernard McKeon, both of Raritan, for attempting to break and enter, were sent to the county jail for three months each.

Robert Wallace, for assault and battery at a North Plainfield tintype gallery, had sentence suspended.

The Hungarians who stole a bushel of coal from the Philadelphia and Reading railroad were fined $10 each.

Frank Dorn of Bound Brook, for assault, was sent to the county jail for 30 days.

Using Its Influence for the Right.

[From The Elizabeth Journal.]

Men of honor, don't miss your primaries. Vote for no candidate who is not pledged against legislation in favor of licensing race-track gambling.—Plainfield Press.

If there is a Democratic paper in Union county which has more influence than the Plainfield Press we do not know of it. To find it, therefore, among the most aggressive of the anti-race-track gambling papers is not only highly satisfactory in itself, but is an evidence of the depth and breadth of that moral sentiment which must ultimately sweep the gambling disgrace from the State. Standing as it does with such other [illegible] Democratic papers as the Trenton True American, the Monmouth Democrat, the Freehold Transcript, the Summit Record, the Somerset Democrat, and many other papers that could easily be named, the Plainfield Press is in the best of Democratic company, and indeed it takes no second place with any of the papers named in its aggressive attacks on race-tracks and race-track gambling. This is not a campaign of politics, though politics may unavoidably enter into it. It is a campaign for morality. There has never been such a unity of opinion among Democratic and Republican papers upon any one issue, as there now is upon the race-track gambling issue. And the Journal is glad to have the Plainfield Press stand with it against this monstrous evil, no matter how much we may differ upon matters of politics. This is a fight in which no paper of moral character can stand aloof. It is a fight of the people against the gamblers.

CLEAR FIELD FOR MARTINE.

Union County Politics, as Viewed from the County Seat.

(From The Newark Evening News.)

ELIZABETH, Oct. 12—The Ninth Ward Democratic Club appointed a committee at its last meeting to wait on Senator Marsh and ascertain from him if he intended to be a candidate for re-election next month. The Senator has written a reply in which he states that, holding as he does, the office of Public Prosecutor, it would be presumptuous for him to seek the Senatorship, and he desires to have it understood that he is no candidate just now for any political office. He concludes by thanking the club, which is in his own ward, for the kindly feeling which they have always manifested toward him.

This communication, which will be read at the club's next meeting, effectually disposes of the rumor that the Senator was going to enter the field at the eleventh hour, and leaves clear sailing for the unanimous nomination of James E. Martine, of Plainfield.

The contest for Sheriff on the Democratic side seems to be narrowing down to Freeholders Moore, of Elizabethport and Sauer, of Elizabeth, with the odds slightly in favor of the latter, who has a strong German following. Knowing politicians think the Union county Democratic ticket will read thus: Senator, James E. Martine; Sheriff, John S. Sauer; Assembly, First District, Timothy M. Kelley; Second District, James Brennan.

The Republican ticket is still a mystery. [illegible] Senatorial candidate is [illegible], but strong efforts are being made to get ex-Freeholder T. West, of Roselle, to take the nomination. Three men, ex-Sheriff Frederick Glasby, ex-County Collector E. M. Wood and Alderman Robert Houston, all of Elizabeth, are candidates, with the chances favoring either Glasby or Houston.

Canvassers say a large number of unemployed men in Elizabethport refuse to register this fall and say they are tired of voting and want work first.

Jersey's Big Peach Crop.

Never in the history of peach culture in Hunterdon county was the yield so large as this fall. A careful estimate made up of railroad station receipts, is as follows: The Lehigh Valley Railroad carried 536,000, Central Railroad 300,000, and ex-Congressman Pidcock's Rockaway Valley Railroad carried 293,300, baskets. The crop exceeds 1,300,000 baskets. The average net price per basket was 21 cents, the lowest ever known. Total amount paid for freight charges, $60,000; total amount received for the season's crop, net, $250,000. Yankee doodle!

You may know the jealous fellow by his snarl.

That Y. M. C. A. building must not be permitted to lag.

Dunraven had all the kinds of weather he prayed for, but he needed a centreboard to take that cup.

Oh, dear! they do say that the girls have backed out, and won't give the contemplated minstrel show.

With both James Martine and George Kyte running for the senatorship, it will be anti-race-track against anti-race-track.

To your health, Uncle Peter, Oldest Inhabitant! That you may turn the century with years to follow is the heartfelt prayer of The Press and all your friends.

It must be highly gratifying to Rector Murphy to find his friends rallying so strongly to his support. Some of the people endorsing him are mighty good friends to have.

No one deprecates more than does The Press the necessity for publishing the facts of distressing discord in an organization like Holy Cross parish; but as a newspaper The Press has its duty to fulfill.

The anti-race-track candidates will win this year. Politic politicians will see that their delegates frame a ticket strongly pledged. The foolish will make no pledges, and by such action will invite disaster.

A refreshing example of the unanimity of pastor and flock is exhibited by the Plainfield Seventh-Day Baptist people, among whom the Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis is idealized. This is as it should be in every church in town.

It makes compositors chafe and writhe to envy to see another paper [illegible]

The chances of G. N. Gosling for the Republican Assembly nomination are reported as interesting. Mr. Gosling is known to be thoroughly opposed to race-tracks, and has been an active member of the Citizens' Anti-Race-track League of Westfield, ever since its organization.

The Democrats of the Second Assembly District of Bergen county set a good example yesterday by instructing the candidate they named for the Legislature to vote for the repeal of last winter's race-track bills. A manly stand like that means success for the candidate.

It takes the Plainfield girls! They want to make big money for the Grace church rectory, and so agree on a novelty that is sure to bring a crowd. Ordinarily the idea of female minstrels is shocking to goody people, but the way Plainfield girls do it you may be sure is all right. The Press is eager to see how the dear jokers will look in their burnt-cork masquerade.

Satisfied that the existing Borough Council will protect its monopoly against the opposition of the Plainfield company, the North Plainfield electric light concern continues careless in the matter of street lighting. For instance, the past four nights the lamp at Grandview avenue and Somerset street, and two lamps on Grandview avenue, have been unlighted continuously. There is much complaint from borough residents in various sections.

Lay not your treasures in bureau drawers, but rather put your trust in banks. Mary Haff of Rahway went to look for her pension money savings of $500 in greenbacks, which she had tucked away in a corner of a drawer, and found four bright-eyed baby mice snuggled down in the remnants of her money, which the mother mouse had torn to tiny bits. It's too bad Mrs. Haff can't turn this luxurious family to account through the medium of a museum.

Let it not be misunderstood that the communication on the Murphy matter signed by clergymen is an official utterance of the Ministers' Association. The signatures were secured by personal solicitation and parsonage-to-parsonage canvass. Members of the Association who declined to sign it, express indignation that it should assume to be an official utterance of that body when no meeting has been held to consider the matter.

Westfield's anti-race-track agitators have the right idea. They work instead of talk. They are getting right down to business by appointing workers for the primaries, and by getting citizens to pledge themselves in writing. Already sixty voters have signed an agreement to bolt their party's nomination if the candidate proves to be a man who will not declare war on the race-tracks. Meanwhile, Plainfield's anti-race-track element is talking, not working.

The revolution in literature worked by the marvelous development of the printing art is given fresh evidence by the action of Frank A. Munsey. Besides being a writer of fascinating storybooks, Mr. Munsey is a successful editor and publisher, and finding that with his modern methods he can make a good profit on his beautiful Munsey's Magazine at a nominal price he has cut the retail figure down to 10 cents. As his magazine is the perfection of sumptuousness, both in style of printing and illustration and in quality of contents, this tremendous literary bargain may be considered a wonder of the age.

When so many playhouse managers are devoting their theatres to frivolity and froth, it is refreshing to be able to turn with confidence to that managerial giant, Charles Frohman, and find him providing a delightful legitimate play. Such is "Liberty Hall", the popular success now running on Mr. Frohman's stage in the Empire Theatre, that beautiful monument to the enterprise and public spirit of Frank W. Sanger and Alfred Hayman. All that has been said in favor of this charming play, The Press heartily endorses. "Liberty Hall" is pure drama. Its humor is clean-cut; its story stirs the heart. Henry Miller as "Mr. Owen" is a model of dignity and culture, a perfect lover, every inch a man. Viola Allen exquisitely acts the part of "Blanche Chilworth". "Blanche", the proud beauty, thrills; Miss Allen's native charm and sweetness captivate. The engagement scene between Miss Allen and Mr. Miller is something to tingle the blood and bring a sparkle of gladness to the eye, and a passion of happiness to the heart. This is no silly stage love-making, but an unaffected, honest expression of perfect beatitude. The midnight misunderstanding between "Blanche" and "Mr. Owen", in the little parlor back of the bookshop after the birthday party, is something to rehearse with profit in one's sober moments. "Mr. Owen's" farewell soliloquy arouses every sympathy. W. H. Crompton as "William Todman" is the kind of old man one may reasonably call perfectly lovely; and William Frank makes a most amusing and interesting "Robert". "Liberty Hall", with its most fascinating true nobility, is the sort of play that lives in the memory and in the heart. It is good literature and good morals. Its delicate vein of pathos, and its many pretty love scenes, awaken the tenderest affections and worthiest emotions. In these days when the drama is said to be degenerating, "Liberty Hall" is such a play as deserves this sincere and voluntary endorsement.

Because this paper was the first to publish the news of the Holy Cross church difficulties, it has naturally received the abuse of the two papers which would have been glad to publish the facts had they known of them. That was to be expected. But it is surprising to [illegible]

The position of Candidate Beekman against the race-tracks is unequivocal, fair and square.

Democrat George H. Cramer, for Assemblyman, will be re-elected on his record. He voted against the race-track legislation last winter.

In no uncertain words, but with all the earnestness and assurance of an honest man, H. M. T. Beekman, Democratic candidate for Senator from Somerset county, pledged himself to fight race-track legislation.

Puck's cartoon of Cleveland turning over to Harrison in 1889 the treasury with a surplus of $100,000,000 in it and bowing himself out, and of Harrison turning it over to Cleveland in 1893 with the doors off their hinges and the vault empty, eloquently tells the tale of the "change the people got".

The need of extension of police protection was again demonstrated last night. The existing lack is a hardship both to the citizens and to the taxpayers. The Crescent avenue section is entirely without police protection, day and night. No policeman ever reaches there. The number of regular policemen on duty should be increased without delay.

The panic of 1873 was the worst that ever afflicted the American people. It filled the land with tramps and beggars, and made plethoric the purses of sheriffs and the publishers who advertised their sales. Democrats were not in power then, neither were there any prospects or expectation of cutting down the tariff to "free trade". But the panic was there all the same.

The Flemington Democrat sagely remarks: "Up to this date the silver Senators have been able to prevent a vote on the Voorhees repeal bill. It is a curious spectacle that we see in the Senate of the great United States, a minority not only willing but able to defeat the will of the majority! It is time new rules were adopted by the Senate, and time also that that abused article known as 'Senatorial courtesy' be taken by the heels and flung into the Potomac river."

Not so much time is being lost in Congress as many suppose. The house is nearing a conclusion on the repeal of the Federal Election laws, and its Committee on Ways and Means is hard at work in the preparation of a Reform Tariff bill. The usual time for the meeting of Congress is nearly two months distant, and yet a vast amount of preparatory work for that session has been done. The tariff question is well advanced. The committee will probably be able to report a bill next month.

H. M. T. Beekman, who was nominated for Senator by the Somerset county Democrats yesterday, is a lawyer of ability and respectability, and since he openly and emphatically pledged himself not only for the principles of Democracy but also against race-track legislation he deserves the support and vote of every Democrat. North Plainfield did its duty in voting solidly for Mr. Keys, but since the majority went the other way the North Plainfield Democracy should swing unanimously into line for Beekman. And she will!

Borough Counselor Charles A. Reed says he is out of politics. But he wants nevertheless to thank sincerely the North Plainfield delegates, and all others who voted for him, for the high compliment they paid him in repeatedly presenting his name to the Somerset County Convention yesterday as candidate for Senator. And he asks The Press to say so. The compliment to Mr. Reed was the more noticeable because it was done in the face of the fact that Mr. Reed's great father-in-law was pulling every wire for the nomination of Beekman.

Mr. Castle, of Kansas, has presented a bill in the House to regulate immigration, which, if it becomes a law, will tend materially to restrict immigration to the United States. The bill provides that it shall be unlawful for the commanding officer of any vessel to receive any alien passenger bound for the United States if an examination discloses the fact that such person is unable to read or write; that his passage has been paid by any other person, company or corporation; who does not possess, if a single man, the sum of $300; if a single woman, $100; if head of a family, $500, or who is not mentally and physically sound; who has ever been in prison for any infamous crime or misdemeanor involving moral turpitude; who has been in almshouse or supported by charity within two years; who is a polygamist, anarchist or under contract, express or implied, to perform labor in the United States.

From the way some persons rant, one might think that it was The Press that had asked Rector Murphy to resign. Sensible people do not lose sight of the fact that the demand was made by members of his own parish, and that The Press has only reported the facts. The length of Rector Murphy's stay in Holy Cross church is a matter of supreme indifference to The Press, but so long as there is any contest over the matter and as long as the public is interested in that contest, just so long [illegible] The bluster and frenzy and personal vilification made by [illegible] that are struggling fruitlessly by threats and other desperate methods to build up some showing of a circulation, are not going to worry The Press into ceasing to be a newspaper.

The editor of The Press will not permit himself to sink to the level of those [illegible]

CLOSING DAYS OF THE FAIR.

Last Low-rate Excursion by the Pennsylvania Railroad.

This is the last month of the great Columbian Exposition, an American exhibition which eclipses the efforts of all nations, past and present—and Saturday, Oct. 21, marks the end of the popular low-rate epoch excursions of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company to the World's Fair City. The extensive patronage bestowed on all previous trips of this character and the universal verdict of former participants that the Pennsylvania Railroad Company carries by far the greatest number and the best class of people, thoroughly attest the genuine worth of the facilities to be enjoyed on this route. These facts, coupled with the fortunate and entire immunity from accident of any kind thus far, and the completeness and dispatch with which this traffic has been handled, place the standard railroad in the enviable position which it proudly claims—of being the best, safest and quickest route to the west.

All who can do so are advised to visit this stupendous show, as it is highly improbable that another of its immense magnitude will be seen by the people of this generation, and the enormous multitude of wonderful and awe-inspiring sights collected there must be seen to be appreciated.

The remarkable rate of $18 from New York and $17 from Philadelphia, Baltimore, and Washington, and correspondingly low rates from other points on the vast system, will apply for the last time on the date above mentioned. The excursion will start from New York at 9 and Philadelphia at 11:20 a. m. A section will leave Washington at 10:15 and Baltimore at 11:15 a. m., connecting with the regular sections at Harrisburg. Tickets will also be sold from principal intermediate stations, passengers from stations not located on the main line taking regular trains to nearest point of connection with the special.

THE IDEAL EMPLOYER.

Pastor Richardson's Fifth Sermon on Domestic Subjects—Crisp Suggestions For Men Who Hire Help.

The text of the Rev. J. W. Richardson, Sunday night in the Park Avenue Baptist church, was Luke vi: 31:

"As ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise."

Put yourself in his place—said the clergyman—do by him as you would like to be done by, is as good a rule for the employer as for the employe. If the employer may demand that the employe be faithful to his interests, so may the employe demand that the employer be just as considerate of his interests. The text, is in itself, a whole sermon, teaching men in authority how they should deal with their subordinates. It is God's voice to the employer warning him against that grasping, [illegible], overbearing disposition, which oppresses his subordinates, and leads them into harsh and sinful thoughts. To a large extent the employer is his brother's keeper. His manner towards his help will do very much towards making the employe a good citizen, accessible to Christian influences, or the reverse. All the [illegible] are not imported; some are made such by the attitude of their employers. The Ideal Employer will set an example of honesty. I tell you business men, some of your subordinates are copying your example. If they think you shrewd, naturally they will copy your ways, in order to gain the same success. If in after years, some of those clerks, or shop hands, have been led into ruin by the start which they got in your store or factory, at the Judgment God will ask why you tripped up their character. I tell you gentlemen, you violate the rule of my text if you transmit moral small-pox to the hearts of your subordinates, when you should have given them the elixir of life. The ideal employer will never over-estimate the value of his goods, or use chicanery in selling, or juggle his pay-roll. Thousands of young men and women are being molded by the habits and customs which prevail in your stores and shops. Contact with their employers will increase their love of integrity and honor, or they will form the idea that sharpness and trickery are not so very bad. O business men, upon which track are you switching the express train of your employes' lives? These men and women in the store, shop and office, are going to hate dishonest ways and regard high principles, just in proportion as they see your rank and influence thrown on the side of right. It is a burning shame for merchants and manufacturers to educate such multitudes to false ideas of honesty, and as to what constitutes sound morals. Some employers teach their help, by their own unworthy examples, that it is not necessary to respect either the laws of God or man. In New York city, a young man after several years service with a business house, was arrested for embezzlement. On the day of his trial, his former employers with much bitterness and vehemence testified against their former employe, and how he had wronged them. By and by the former clerk took the stand in his own defense. Turning to those men for whom he had worked, he said, "I have wronged you, you say. I have stolen money from you—who taught me to steal? Did you not tell me it was right to get the best of a man if it could be done? You say I have squandered your money gambling and visiting brothels; well who taught me to go to such places? Didn't you tell me to go there and show our out-of-town customers the sights? You you—you, taught me all the steps of sin and said it was business. My character is ruined, but it is you who have wronged me." I say it is a shame for employers to ask any employe to do that which will despoil his character. It is a burning [illegible]

SECOND-STORY THIEF.

A TRAMP WITH SOILED HANDS ROBS PLAINFIELD HOUSES.

Plunders the Residences of Mrs. Hull on Norwood Avenue and Counselor McClure on Crescent Avenue—Escaped Without Detection.

While the family of Mrs. William L. Hull of Norwood avenue were at dinner, Tuesday at 6:30, they heard a strange noise upstairs. They pushed back their chairs from the table, and the noise made by the chairs scraping over the hardwood floor frightened away an intruder who was heard to scamper.

It was found that a thief had climbed by a piazza post into the second story front room. He got a pocketbook containing $4 and some old coins. The noise that had alarmed the Hull family was the snapping of the window shade. The robber had pulled the cord to raise it, the cord had broken, and the shade flew up with a whirr. Then they heard his footsteps.

The same thief, probably, got into Counselor W. K. McClure's house on Crescent avenue, the same way. He got $10, a pocketbook, Mrs. McClure's gold watch, and Miss McClure's silver watch.

From the black finger-marks left on piazza posts and window sills, it is judged the thief was a coal train tramp.

There are no police ever on Crescent avenue, and none on Norwood avenue till 8 p. m., so the thief got away.

EXCITING RUNAWAY.

Mr. Thompson's Private Team Gallops Down Second Street.

A team belonging to A. D. Thompson ran away Wednesday, and at one time in the course of its career it looked as if the inmates of the carriage might be spilled. The team was Mr. Thompson's private one, and consisted of two black horses. The trouble was caused by the team being hitched too close to the rig. One of the horses became frightened by hitting her hoofs against the wheel. They started to run down Second street, bumping the rig at the Park avenue gutters, and shaking up the passengers. The driver succeeded in stopping the team by the time it reached Plainfield avenue.

Boroughites Helped Run It.

W. W. Rowland, a North Plainfield delegate, made a most efficient chairman for the Somerset county Democratic convention Tuesday. He was very witty, and delighted the delegates from the mountain districts, as well as his fellow-boroughites. L. B. Woolston was one of the tellers. Dr. Cooley was Chairman of the Committee on Resolutions. C. E. Beall notified and introduced Candidate Thompson. H. K. Spencer and B. A. Hegeman were elected members of the County Executive Committee.

If you have not engaged your work, I should be pleased to do it for you.

I buy only first-class Marble and Granite and do not sell unless at prices that will enable me to put up the work with credit to myself and justice to the parties purchasing.

I employ no agents and therefore am enabled to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customer, of the commission generally paid to agents.

I am under a very small expense in running my shop, myself and my son doing the larger portion of the work, and we personally attend to the setting of all work, and look upon business in this light, that Good Work and Good Material, at Fair Prices, is a standing advertisement for my business, which will tend to build up trade, and I feel safe to warrant that no dealer can sell you the same work and same stock any cheaper than I can.

—Mr. Honeyman has had so many applications for another $49 trip to the World's Fair, including closing day, that he announces it for October 25 if enough apply at once.

—Attorney General Stockton advertises the National Labyrinth Company, of which Noel Verrier of this city is secretary and treasurer, for the non-payment of its $100 license.

—The First Church of Christ, Grove street, is anticipating a grand time on and after Nov. 5. All the ministers of the six Churches of Christ in New York city are expected to participate.

—The old T. A. B. hall on West Fourth street is undergoing a thorough overhauling and repairing, including the laying of a new floor. On Hallow E'en the St. Mary's T. A. B. Society intends giving a dance to their many friends.

—M. Quinn, of East Fourth street, next to Hedden's livery, has engaged the services of an expert clipper, and persons desiring their horses clipped should avail themselves of this opportunity of having the work done by an experienced man.

—A gentleman impressed with the value of Manual Training teaching, and interested in its success, has paid for the tuition of two scholars at the Plainfield Manual Training school. John Dalziel has the privilege of selecting the pupils.

—A buggy containing eight young men, drawn by only one horse, was driven from Scotch Plains to Plainfield Sunday evening. On East Front street one of the wheels collapsed, throwing the occupants out, but not injuring the young men who were overloading and overdriving the animal.

PATTON AT LIBERTY.

Bail Bond of $15,000 Furnished for the Plainfield Broker.

(From The Press, of October 18.)

William L. Patton, of Plainfield, who, as stated in The Press of yesterday, was lodged in Ludlow Street Jail, New York, on a charge of hypothecating certain bonds and securities, was set at liberty yesterday afternoon.

The Lawyers' Surety Company furnished the bail bond of $15,000 necessary for his release.

It appears from the schedule of assets and liabilities of the firm of William L. Patton & Co., filed in the Court of Common Pleas by Mr. Barclay E. V. McCarty, the assignee, that the firm had 160 creditors on their books whose accounts ranged from $100 to $6,000 each.

Besides this William L. Patton, as executor, was liable for $18,500. Then there were other special creditors, as mentioned yesterday, who had deposited stocks and bonds valued at nearly $100,000 with the firm for safe keeping. The loans received from the Bank of the Manhattan Company were $347,500, secured by collaterals valued at only $905,-532. The Holland Trust Company appears to have advanced $35,000 on but $11,000 security.

Mr. Patton as an individual appears to have borrowed from the firm $307,102. This loan was secured by something like $900 security. Mr. Saltonstall in like manner borrowed $77,136 on the strength of $4,500 security.

Attorney Honeyman refused to discuss the case except to say that he was simply trying to recover some of the lost moneys in the best and only way he knew of. He would not say whether criminal proceedings would be instituted.

Attorney Ralph Oakley, of 45 Broadway, who represents Mr. Patton, was equally reserved. He did say, however, that his client's arrest had been brought about, in his opinion, in the hope that Mr. Patton's wealthy relatives would be coerced thereby into making good some of the brokerage firm's losses.

Patton is said to have plunged heavily in Cordage during the last "slump" of that mercurial stock. The case will probably be brought to trial in the Supreme Court some time during the present month.

Patton's partner was Henry L. Saltonstall, a son of ex-Governor Saltonstall of Connecticut. There appears to be no intention of causing Saltonstall's arrest, although an order is out for him too. He was in Mr. Honeyman's office twice yesterday. Saltonstall is a young man and an enthusiastic patron of bicycling. At the World's Fair meet he presented a $1,000 trophy called the Saltonstall international challenge trophy.

Mr. Patton is the son of a Congregational minister, the Rev. William L. Patton, who at the time of his death was President of the Columbia University in Washington. He married a sister of his partner, Saltonstall. His wife and her children, two little girls, have been visiting her sister in Hyde Park, London, since the failure. The Craigs are a well-to-do family living in Hunterdon county. Mr. Patton formerly lived on Ninth street, Plainfield, but after his failure went to live with his brother-in-law at Westfield.

Good Positions for Young Men.

Among the advantages which the Y. M. C. A. offers to the young men of Plainfield in its educational department, and to which it would call particular attention, is the shorthand class. The Association has been so successful in placing young men in good positions who have qualified themselves in this class, that it will take pleasure in organizing it again.

The advantages to be derived from the study of this art are inestimable, and those who expect to enter business or any of the professions or want to improve their minds should seriously consider the opportunity. For particulars see the advertising columns.

High-Grade Portraits.

One of the best of portrait artists is N. E. King, of 485 Lexington avenue, Brooklyn, who has been doing some excellent and highly satisfactory work for Plainfield people. Mr. King excels in crayon, pastel and water colors, and anyone wanting a faithful portrait at a reasonable price would do well to write to him. He refers to various good citizens of Plainfield, as may be seen by consulting his advertisement.

Educational Enterprise.

All the knowledge of the world is within the easy grasp of Plainfield people, through the enterprise of the New York Recorder. That wide-awake and thoroughly up-to-date newspaper wants to give away 75 sets of the Encyclopedia Britannica, revised to 1893, and 75 copies of the Great Imperial Dictionary. The special representatives in Reitz's book-store will tell all callers how it is done. Those who get there first get the books.

A telegram was received Monday evening announcing the safe arrival of Mr. and Mrs. James C. Keegan at the World's Fair, after a stay of several days at Niagara Falls.

Harry Clifford VanEmburgh, in the employ of F. A. Dunham at Hornellsville, N. Y., has been granted leave of absence to attend the World's Fair. He left Saturday evening.

Miss Alice Woodland, of Duer street, has returned from a prolonged vacation in Pennsylvania. Last Wednesday she attended the wedding of an uncle in Philadelphia.

A Park resident says: "How would it be for a committee of interested citizens to be formed to help 'The Deacon' select the new colors for his charming villa on Myrtle avenue?"

Dr. D. C. Adams and Charles Lee are home from Shallow Lake Canyon, Adirondacks. They are well bronzed, and in the best of health. They killed ten deer, and brought back two.

Joseph Ballantine White, of Newark, who met with such success last season with the Park Club dancing classes, will resume these classes Nov. 2, with what promises to be an increased membership.

Miss Alice B. Spangenberg, always in demand in Christian Endeavor work, has been invited to address the Westfield Congregationalists, and has prepared one of her most delightful talks, entitled "Wholly Thine".

Misses Josie and Lucy Kissam, of Oxford place, are to sail for Savannah Oct. 28, and thence they go by rail to Augusta, Georgia, to spend the winter with their brother Bernard, who is in the carpenter business in Augusta.

The Rev. John H. Prescott, rector of St. Ann's Episcopal church, Sayville, L. I., on his way to the World's Fair stopped over in Plainfield and spent a pleasant day with his sister, Mrs. Samuel W. Baxter, 736 West Third street.

A brother of Robert H. and A. D. Cook of this city, who is a successful business man in Trenton, accompanied by his wife drove over from Trenton Saturday and spent Sunday with Mrs. Cook's father, Lewis E. Clark, 328 Central avenue.

The condition of C. Schermerhorn, Jr., of North avenue, is but slightly improved, he being rendered almost helpless by muscular rheumatism in his lower limbs. The attending physician, however, has hopes of bringing him around all right.

Henry Lindsley, formerly of Plainfield, died at Newton, Tuesday. He was in the seventy-fourth year of his age. Mr. Lindsley will be remembered as a Plainfield councilman and as one of the elders concerned in the formation of Trinity Reformed church. His wife, now deceased, was a sister of R. A. Hegeman of Sycamore avenue, North Plainfield. The funeral services will be at Newton, Friday at 12:30 noon.

Mr. and Mrs. James H. Force, of Bound Brook, have issued cards for the marriage of their daughter, Minnie Louise, to Will F. Williams, who for years has been a popular attache of Reitz's book store. The ceremony will take place Tuesday afternoon, October 31, at 4, in Bound Brook. The bride is the eldest daughter of the family. On account of recent death in the family, the wedding will be as nearly private as possible, and only relatives will be invited. The happy couple will take a trip to Washington.

ST. MARY'S BIG PROFIT.

MORE THAN $1,000 REALIZED FROM THE FAIR JUST ENDED.

Fathers Smyth and Murphy Well Pleased with the Successful Efforts of the Committee—Close Contests Decided Saturday Evening—Names of the Lucky Ones—A Woman Gets a Pipe.

One of the most successful fairs ever held in this city was that of St. Mary's church, which ended Saturday evening in the C. T. M. L. hall at Sixth and Liberty streets.

The profit, which amounted to between $1,000 and $1,500, was the result of the untiring efforts of the committee having the fair in charge, who spared no pains in their endeavor to entertain the people who crowded the hall nightly. The committee had a choice programme prepared for each evening. It was no easy matter to secure different attractions for each night's entertainment, but by continued exertion they succeeded admirably. Among those who contributed their talent were: St. Mary's church choir, Miss May Flanagan, J. T. Vogiard, John Carney, Chas. Ward, Karl Rudolph, and the Martin Brothers Quartette. Dancing was another feature.

The results of the several voting contests were announced by Father Murphy as follows:

The handsome doll was found to have been won by Lizzie O'Keefe, she having collected $14.05, against $13.30 turned in by Katie Whelan.

Katie Kelly had secured $23.10 for votes on the china tea-set, and as Susie Goff had realized only $12.42 the prize was awarded to Miss Kelly.

The gold ring will be worn by F. Humphreys of Netherwood.

The meerschaum pipe was carried off by Mrs. Kline; the silk umbrella by Andrew F. Wahl of Liberty street; and a beautiful hanging lamp will grace the parlor, at her home in Scotch Plains, of Miss Grace Lowe.

There was great applause when it was announced that the silver watch would be worn by the Rev. Father F. E. Smyth.

The lace fan went to Mrs. Powell, Eighth street; pair of vases, John O'Keefe, West Sixth street; gold watch, Mrs. A. Smith, West Second street; book, Mr. Kearnan; silver water-pitcher, Kate Moran; and $5 in gold to A. B. Lennark.

After the awards had been made, the auction was begun, and some rare bargains were offered the patrons. Nearly all the articles were disposed of at the several booths.

The committee in charge deserve great credit for their success at a time when business is so dull and money so scarce. The amount realized is far above the expectations of Fathers Smyth and Murphy.

The proceeds will be devoted to one of the several worthy funds of St. Mary's church.

HYMENEAL.

(From The Press of October 18.)

White—Beardslee.

George White, of this city, will be married this evening to Miss Ella Beardslee, of Millstone. The ceremony will take place at the home of the bride, and Dr. Yerkes, assisted by the Millstone clergyman, will officiate. The happy pair will spend their honeymoon at Chicago viewing the wonders of the Fair. On their return they will start housekeeping at 24 Sycamore avenue, North Plainfield.

Smalley—Williams.

At high noon today the wedding of Frederick Smalley and Miss Ida Williams, eldest daughter of W. H. Williams, took place at the residence of the bride, 417 Madison avenue. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Yerkes. The young couple left this afternoon for a short bridal trip, and on their return will take up their residence at 21 Craig place, North Plainfield.

Forrestel—O'Neill.

The wedding of Harry Forrestel, the genial landscape gardener, to Miss O'Neill, took place at Trenton this morning. While Mr. Forrestel is enjoying the wedding reception at Trenton the members of the Catholic Young Men's Lyceum in this city will be indulging in a collation at his expense.

Trust—Allison.

The wedding of August Trust and Miss Nettie Allison took place this morning at 11:30 at the residence of the bride's aunt, Brooklyn. John McLaughlin and George DeMeza attended the ceremony.

HOW TO GET THERE.

The World's Fair a Success, But It Will Soon Close Its Gates Forever.

The grandest exhibition of our time and possibly for many generations to come will soon be brought to an end. There remains but one month in which to visit this marvelous gathering of the world's productions, and everybody should strain a point to go to Chicago.

The railroad fare heretofore has been considered a hindrance to all classes, but this has all been changed, and on the following days in October the West Shore railroad will run high-class excursions on its fast express trains in through cars at one-half its lowest fare, i. e., $17, from New York to Chicago and return, and proportionately lower rates from points along its lines. These magnificent excursion trains will be in charge of an agent whose duty it is to care for the interests of the company's patrons en route, to furnish detailed information as to accommodations obtainable in Chicago and to point out the historic points along the grand old Hudson and through the picturesque Mohawk Valley.

These trains will leave Franklin street, New York, at 10 a. m., and West 42d st., at 10:30 as follows: Saturday, October 14; Thursday, October 19, and the last, Monday, October 23.

If readers will just take trouble to call at any West Shore office they will be received with the usual courtesy that characterizes the employes of this superb route, (over which a journey of the kind referred to can be made with considerable ease, owing to the fact that the management of the West Shore railroad has spared no expense to make it the easiest running and safest road in the world), and furnish any information desired appertaining to this trip.

No Ticket No Washee.

Fine Yeiman, a driver for Bolce, Runyon & Co., left a shirt, one collar and a pair of cuffs in the Chinese laundry on North avenue, three weeks ago. Since then he lost his ticket and when he went for his wash Monday evening it could not be found. Yeiman was angry and called in an officer, but the goods were not recovered.

The Class of '95 scored 5 points; '94 scored 41; '96, 45 points; '97, 3 points; and '98, 11 points.

WORK STOPPED.

More Funds Needed for the Y. M. C. A. Building Fund.

To the Editor of The Press:—After careful consideration, and having in mind our obligations to those with whom we have made contracts, the Building Committee of the Young Men's Christian Association have been compelled to stop the work on our new building. We do this reluctantly, knowing that it means injury to the building, and only because we have no money with which to proceed. We address you as a friend of our work, and enclose for your information and guidance a financial statement. From this you will see that we need to raise for use about $17,000, and to anticipate in some way the $9,200 not yet available.

We were encouraged to begin our building after the vexatious delay caused by the Peace Street extension, and were led to believe that we could raise the balance needed while the construction was going on. In ordinary times there would have been no doubt of this.

But we believe that with a little sacrifice on the part of those who have the welfare of our young men at heart, we can raise the money in these extraordinary times, and that the work can be resumed and carried to a finish.

Relief For Rheumatism.

"This information," said a well-known physician to a correspondent of the Telegram, "may save many lives; at any rate it will prove an invaluable boon to people suffering from rheumatism in any form."

"Rheumatism is caused by acidity of the blood. It should never be neglected. This remedy, as I know by long practice, is very efficacious and it is as simple as it is powerful."

"Here it is," he added, "when a rheumatic twinge is experienced, the patient should buy a bottle of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy and take one teaspoonful in one-half glass of hot or cold water [illegible] three times a day, and continue the same daily until the last vestige of the malady has disappeared. THE VESTRY SAYS DON'T.

RECTOR MURPHY EXHORTED NOT TO RESIGN.

For the Future Good of the Church, They Want Him to Stay—They Find his Character Irreproachable, and Believe They Represent the Sentiments of a Majority of his Parishioners.

The Vestry of the Church of the Holy Cross met Saturday and unanimously adopted the following:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Vestry be instructed to write to the committee which called on Mr. Murphy and requested his resignation, that Mr. Murphy has laid before us, the Vestry, the substance of their call, and that, after very careful thought, and in consideration of his past services, present usefulness and irreproachable character, we deem it for the future good of the parish that he should not resign, and have requested him to act in accordance with our wishes. And in doing this, the Vestry believe they are expressing the sentiments of the majority of the parishioners.

SURPRISED THAT THE NEWS IS PUBLISHED.

PLAINFIELD, Oct. 16, 1893.

To the Editor of The Press:—Dear Sir—As Secretary of the Ministers' Association, I have been requested to send a copy of this communication to each of the daily papers. Discharging what is to me an exceedingly unwelcome and painful duty,

I am truly yours,
W. R. Richards.

A COMMUNICATION.

In view of recent statements in one of the newspapers of this city, reflecting on one of our number, and evidently designed to injure his ministry here, we as members of the Plainfield Ministers' Association desire to express our cordial regard for the Rev. T. Logan Murphy, rector of Holy Cross church. We do also express our great regret and our surprise that any newspaper of this city, invading the sanctities of the domestic circle, should open its columns to such unwarrantable and insulting attack on the family and private character of a gentleman.

Sincere Tribute to the Rector's Wife.

To the Editor of The Press:—In view of the many misrepresentations and cruel criticisms lately circulated regarding the family of the Rev. Mr. Murphy, it is with sincere pleasure that I bear testimony from personal experience to Mrs. Murphy's faithful and efficient performance of her duties as a clergyman's wife, both in her parish and in the missionary work of the diocese. Those who have been privileged to attend the missionary meetings of the Woman's Auxiliary in the Church of the Holy Cross, will always remember her cordial welcome, graceful hospitality and untiring efforts to unite all in Christian work.

Such qualities ought to elicit praise rather than censure.

Autumn Festival at Grace.

Grace M. E. church, of which the Rev. S. F. Randolph is pastor, was crowded Sunday with interested spectators who had come to enjoy the annual autumn festival of the Sunday-school classes. The church was prettily decorated with autumn leaves, grain and fruit. Superintendent John Valiant presided at the exercises, and a long programme of recitations and songs by the children was enjoyed by all present. One of the features of the evening was the singing by the male quartette.

Mrs. Wm. H. Griffin and A. A. Taft are to be congratulated for the artistic scene the chapel presented. At the close of the services everyone present was presented with an autumnal souvenir. Superintendent John Valiant is untiring in his efforts to please all, and under his guidance the school is rapidly growing. The evening exercises began with singing by the male quartette, and the following programme was rendered:

OPPOSED TO RACE-TRACKS.

North Plainfield Republicans Follow the Democrats' Example in Electing Anti-Race-Track Delegates.

Many Republicans of the Borough turned out Saturday night at a meeting held in Spencer's Hall to elect delegates to the County Convention.

Ex-Mayor Place was elected Chairman and Charles S. Greer Secretary. The following delegates were elected:

W. W. Hedges, Charles E. Beall,
L. B. Woolston, R. A. Hegeman,
Jacob Long.

A resolution was offered by Dr. H. K. Carroll recommending that no candidate be nominated who was in favor of race-track gambling. The hat was passed around and the meeting adjourned.

Of Interest to Athletes.

James Robinson, the athletic trainer at Princeton College, Princeton, N. J., says: "I have found it imperative to have sure and simple remedies on hand in case of cuts, bruises, strains, sprains, colds, rheumatism, etc. Shortly after entering upon my profession, I discovered such a remedy in ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS. I tried other plasters, but found them too harsh and irritating. ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS give almost instantaneous relief, and their strengthening power is remarkable. In cases of weak back put two plasters on the small of the back and in a short time you will be capable of quite severe exercise. In "sprint" and "distance" races and jumping, the muscles or tendons in the legs and feet sometimes weaken. This can invariably be relieved by cutting the plaster in narrow strips, so as to give free motion, and applying on muscles affected."

A GRAND ARMY FROST.

IT HAS BLIGHTED THE CONSOLIDATION MOVEMENT.

Comrade Collier Explains What Has Been Done and Why the Major Anderson Members Will Not Submit to Winfield Scott's Dictation—Not Able to Effect Even a Compromise.

At a meeting of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., held July 11, 1893, the following preamble and resolutions were adopted:

WHEREAS, It has been for a long time apparent that it would be for the best interest of the G. A. R. in this city that the two Posts be united; and

WHEREAS, The differences which have existed between the two Posts in times past has been a source of regret to a large number of citizens of this city, as well as to a great many of the members of the respective posts; and

WHEREAS, The members of the G. A. R. should do all in their power to preserve the respect and merit the support of the community at large; and

WHEREAS, The fraternal spirit now existing between the two Posts has paved the way to a closer union in the bonds of fraternity, charity and loyalty; and

WHEREAS, Post 73 being the senior Post and numerically the strongest, deem it proper to take the initiative step in furtherance of this object; now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the officers and members of Post 73 do cordially and fraternally invite the officers and members of Post 109 to unite with them; and be it further

Resolved, That the form of such union be decided by a committee to be appointed from Posts 73 and 109 respectively.

William Hand,
Chas. H. Stephens,
Wm. C. Smith.

At a regular meeting of Major Anderson Post, No. 109, G. A. R. held at the headquarters of the Post Thursday evening, August 3, 1893, the following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, We are in receipt of a communication from Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, expressing in the warmest terms their desire to effect a consolidation with this Post and thus bringing about that perfect spirit of fraternization which alone bespeaks true comradeship; and

WHEREAS, It has always been the sentiment of the members of this Post that it is only in a close bond of unity unendangered by the rivalries which separate organizations might engender that the undivided maintenance of our fellowship can be assured; and

WHEREAS, Realizing as we do that the Grand Army cause in this city has about reached that point where recruiting is at the high water mark, and that the certain diminution of our numbers with the growth of years makes still more wise and imperative the blending of all our forces and the abolition of every barrier that stands in the way of our complete unity, therefore be it

Resolved, That Major Anderson Post, No. 109, cordially endorse the sentiment of the resolutions passed by Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, and heartily joins with said Post in the movement to close ranks and march in solid phalanx to the attainment of the thorough and enduring harmony of our soldier brotherhood.

Resolved, That the better insuring of such result, and the certain obliteration of every element that could possibly tend to weaken the consolidation so earnestly desired, it is the sense of Post No. 109 that the union thus sought would be more thoroughly insured by the abolition of the rival names and numbers and the merging of the two organizations under an entirely new name and number, to be chosen by the committee of conference.

Resolved, That in pursuance of the spirit herein expressed, a committee of five be appointed to confer with a like committee from Post 73 to perfect the conditions of the consolidation proposed.

Asa Collier,
C. H. Randolph,
J. P. Allis,
Joseph T. Dunham,
Committee.

The movement in furtherance of the consolidation of the two Grand Army Posts of Plainfield seems to have been blighted by an early frost, so to speak. The preliminaries to the accomplishment of this desirable result gave promise of a harmonious outcome, and it was confidently hoped that the obliteration of all rivalry and the concentration of fraternal pride and interest which the blending of the two organizations would effect would redound to the welfare of the old veterans and strengthen their usefulness in the promotion of the interests to which they are allied.

It appears, however, from the result of the conference of the committee appointed to conclude arrangements for the end in view, that some of the parties to the proposed union are not as cordially inclined toward closing ranks and marching on to greater achievements under one banner as they are to the preservation of a separate local organization. A report of the conference quite enforces the conclusion that the credit of blocking the hoped-for consummation by the barrier of Post pride must be charged to the Winfield Scott members of the conference. It was maintained by the representatives of Major Anderson Post that a thorough unification would be more perfectly insured by the obliteration of the old titles and the merging of all interests under a new one to be agreed upon by the consulting committees.

In furtherance of this view they were willing to renounce the name by which they had been known and in addition to make such concessions to 73 Post as would reconcile its members to the rendering useless such of their belongings as would not be available in the organization proposed. They were ready to guarantee a fund for the purchase of such material, which fund the present members of Post 73 could divide as they saw fit. The committee of the latter body, however, were indisposed to give up their name and number and insisted that the union could only be brought about by the members of Major Anderson Post coming in under that designation. This insistence was coupled with the condition that this "coming in" would not be permitted as a body, but through a separate ballot on each name. This ultimatum left the Major Anderson Committee but one alternative. They had not been commissioned to knock at the door of Winfield Scott Post and beg admission; much less to submit the worthiness of their comradeship to inspection, and having failed to awaken a response to all reasonable measures of compromise their only recourse was to report a failure of their efforts and await further developments.

An Open Letter to Women.
Laurel Ave., San Francisco,
May 18, 1892.
"Dear friend of women:
"When my baby was born five years ago, I got up in six days. Far too soon. Result: falling of the womb. Ever since I've been miserable.
"I tried everything: doctors, medicines, apparatus; but grew worse.
"I could hardly stand; and walking without support was impossible.
"At last I saw an advertisement of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and decided to try it. The effect was astonishing. Since I took the first bottle my womb has not troubled me, and, thanks only to you, I am now well. Every suffering woman should know how reliable your compound is. It is a sure cure."—*Mrs. A. MARTINE DELEGATES.

PLAINFIELD DEMOCRATS NAMED FOR THE COUNTY CONVENTION.

In the Former Orator's Ward His Representatives Are Pledged to Vote Against Race-Track Candidates—Martine Will Get the United Support of the City's Entire Delegation.

The Democratic primaries in the several wards of the city were held Tuesday evening, and resulted as follows:

FIRST WARD.

The primary of the First ward, at Hoagland's office on North avenue, was called to order by Louis F. Wadsworth, who was chosen Chairman, and John J. Kenney was elected Secretary. No Judge or Inspector was elected, and the business was speedily concluded, as the attendance was very small. The delegates elected were L. F. Wadsworth, John Rafferty, John F. McIntyre, John J. Kenney and Stephen A. Davis, who were empowered to fill vacancies if any should occur.

SECOND WARD.

The voters of the Second ward assembled at the Bryant school building on East Sixth street. James E. Martine called the meeting to order, and also acted as Chairman. L. M. Stover was elected Secretary, J. C. Ellman Judge, and Fred Yates Inspector. The following nominations for delegates were made: Joseph W. Yates, R. O. Bowers, William E. McClure, Edward G. Searing, John Carney, Jeremiah Cash, William W. Robinson, Frank Vosseller. A recess of five minutes was then taken, in which to prepare ballots. After reconvening the voting proceeded and resulted in the election of Vosseller, Searing, Robinson, Carney and Cash. They were empowered to fill vacancies.

At this stage of the meeting a resolution was presented by Joseph W. Yates to the effect that the delegates support only such men as were opposed to race-tracks, which was unanimously adopted.

The next business was nominations for member of the County Executive Committee. The first name put before the primary was Frank Vosseller, and then Rowland M. Stover. A motion was made and carried that five minutes be allowed in which to prepare ballots. At the expiration of that time the chairman declared the polls closed. A number of those present protested, and insisted that a motion to that effect should have been put before the meeting. On counting the votes it was found that Rowland M. Stover had received 16 votes and Frank Vosseller 11. Mr. Stover was therefore declared elected for another year.

A collection was then taken for faithful Janitor Hope of the Bryant school, for his trouble in preparing the room for the meeting, and the primary was declared adjourned.

THIRD WARD.

The Third ward primary was held in Blair's livery stable office on West Sixth street. F. M. Bacon occupied the chair. Augustus Saltzman was made Secretary, and William O'Connor and C. F. Glasmier served as Judge and Inspector respectively. The delegates elected were A. Saltzman, John Helfield and E. VanBuren.

FOURTH WARD.

Councilman Franse called the Fourth Ward Democrats to order and was honored by the position of Chairman. Ira G. Hurlburt was chosen Secretary, E. J. Harding was Judge, and John L. Bowman and Wm. H. Brokaw acted as Inspectors. The following delegates were elected: James Connealy, J. J. Goff, M. E. Flynn, V. L. Franse, Moses Quass, Wm. Sullivan, P. Reville and David White.

V. L. Franse was re-elected to the County Executive Committee, and the meeting adjourned.

Plainfield's entire delegation will vote for James E. Martine for Senator.

Sunday evening, while the family were at church, burglars entered the house of Andrew Wilson and ransacked bureau drawers, trunks, etc. They were evidently frightened away, as nothing was taken but a pair of pants.

PLOUGHSHARE.

Petty Thievery in Dunellen.

For some time past petty thievery has been going on in and near Dunellen. A few nights ago Joseph Laing's barn was broken into by prying open the back door, and thence the thieves got through a side door into the wagon room and candy manufactory. Next morning Mr. Laing found that one of his delivery wagons had been broken into and a large quantity of candy taken. Chewing gum, caramels and other sweetmeats were strewn about the floor in great profusion. His watermelon patch was also raided and fully a dozen melons were ripped open as though by the heel of a man.

On the opposite side of the street only a night or two before some mean thief broke into A. Giles's cellar and carried away about half a bushel of new potatoes from each of four barrels which Mr. Giles had gathered the day before. The same night Dr. Nelson's house at New Market was broken into, but nothing of value was missed. Dr. Nelson was in Chicago at the time. Suspicion is directed to a well-known rendezvous in Dunellen.

JUNIORS JUBILANT.

THEY CELEBRATE THEIR SIXTH ANNIVERSARY APPROPRIATELY.

Franklin Council Commemorate the Date of Their Organization by Singing, Speechmaking, Feasting and a General Big Time.

A large number of members and friends, including wives and sweethearts, of Franklin Council, No. 41, Junior Order of United American Mechanics, gathered in their rooms on West Second street, on Thursday, to enjoy the festivities that had been prepared by the Good and Welfare Committee in celebration of their sixth anniversary. The committee, J. V. Beekman, Chairman, S. C. Terry, Jr., G. W. Seams, H. Lance and J. Snyder, had spared no effort to make the event a pleasant one, and those present will long remember the happy evening that was passed in listening to singing and speeches, and partaking of the grand collation that had been prepared in the banquet room. The following was the programme:

Singing—"America" .... Council
Banjo Solo .... W. C. Force
Recitation—"All is Quiet Along the Potomac" H. R. Thorn
Cornet Solo .... D. Frasse
Banjo Duet .... W. C. Force and J. Newman
Cornet Solo .... D. Frasse
Address .... State Council Warden David Bodine
Banjo Solo .... W. C. Force
Recitation—"Keep the Flag Over the School" H. R. Thorn

The different numbers were all well rendered and hearty applause was accorded each and every one. The talent consisted of members of the order.

George B. Rogers was the accomplished organist who accompanied the different selections in a most competent manner.

Brothers were present from Friendship, No. 51, of New Market; Somerset, No. 104, of North Plainfield; William G. Holton, No. 55, Dunellen; and others.

Among the guests present was the little seven-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Long, of Summit avenue, North Plainfield.

The festivities were not concluded until nearly midnight, and then all departed for their homes vowing that as entertainers the members of Franklin Council could not be beaten.

HYMENEAL.

Stone—Riley.

At St. Joseph's church, Highbridge, occurred one of the prettiest weddings that has ever taken place there. The bride and bridegroom were Miss Mary E. Stone of Annandale and J. Edward Riley of Springfield, Mass. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father Gammel, pastor of the church. The music was in charge of Bernard Kerr, Jr., of Round Valley.

The bride wore a beautiful gown of white silk, entraine, trimmed with point lace and white silk roses. The tulle veil, which became her well, was fastened with orange blossoms. Miss Elizabeth Stone, the bride's youngest sister and maid of honor, wore a gown of white albatross and silk embroidery, a large white hat trimmed with silk lace and white plumes. The best man was T. R. Riley of Harrisburg, Pa.

After the ceremony the wedding party were driven to the home of the bride's mother at Annandale. After receiving the congratulations of about fifty relatives and friends, they proceeded to the dining room where an elaborate wedding breakfast was served. The floral decorations, which were very effective, were roses, goldenrod and honeysuckle vine. The sweet notes of the piano came floating in and lent music to a scene which will cause the happy bride and bridegroom to look back with pleasure on their wedding day. Soon after the bride appeared in a becoming traveling dress of mauve camelshair, and amid showers of rice and adieus Mr. and Mrs. Riley departed on a short wedding journey. Their first stop will be Albany, and their destination Springfield, where the groom has been connected with the National Armory, and procured his discharge from Washington for this happy day. Among those present from Plainfield were Mrs. Jacob Coss, John Coss, the Misses Kathryn and Mary Konoly, Miss Currid, Miss M. Higgins and the Misses Ella and Lizzie Connolly.

THE SCHEDULE COMPLETE.

DISCUSSING FUSION.

Progress Being Made for the Union of Crescent Wheelmen and Board of Trade.

A committee from the Board of Trade met a committee from the Crescent Wheelmen last night to discuss the proposed fusion of the interests of the two organizations. The Board committee will report to the Governors of the Board tonight, and will then wait on the Wheelmen to let them know the results.

The Crescent Wheelmen feel that their membership is representative of the best element of the old Crescent League from which they grew, and as many are members of both organizations it would be more convenient to them both to be united.

The question now is as to the financial terms on which the Wheelmen will be admitted.

THE MAN ON THE CARS.

WHAT HE THINKS OF THE RECTOR QUESTION.

He Vents His Spleen on Ferryboat Bootblacks, and Says His Say About Local Church Unrighteousness.

"I wish"—said The Man on the Cars the other night as the 5:30 alleged express from New York dallied at Elizabethport—"I devoutly wish that someone in authority would abolish the bootblacks on our ferryboats, or, if they are inevitable, at least oblige them to keep their mouths closed. The continual slipshod perambulation of these young desperadoes through the cabins of the boats is bad enough, but the eternal din of their voices crying 'sh-shine' and 'polish-sh' is infinitely worse. I don't mind having these things thrust upon me when my footwear needs emblazoning, but I'll be shot if I want it rung in every time, whether I require a shine or not. Your ferryboat bootblack always marks as his legitimate prey the man whose shoes are tolerably clean, and assails such an individual with a torrent of appeals for a permit to work upon him. The chap with russet shoes is also regarded with envy and attacked with especial venom. I don't want to be understood as objecting to any bootblack plying his trade, but I will maintain that it is unnecessary for him to go about foisting his art upon people who do not desire to see it operated or hear it exploited. When a man needs a shine he knows it as well as and perhaps better than any young Italian ever may, and if he wants to call into requisition the prowess of the hopeful dago he will do so unsolicited. Beyond all this it may as well be said that those ferryboat shines are among the most ephemeral things on earth and will scarcely ever last till you get home.

"You were asking me if I had posted myself on that rather lively little church row that is in progress over in Washington Park. Well, I have inquired a bit, learned enough, and my interest is waning. The pretty, cosy Episcopalian church over the brook has had the honor of my attendance upon several occasions; I know some of its real people familiarly, and the publication of the names of that 'representative' committee, deputed to the dreadful mission of beseeching their rector to go away, made me smile. What was it they called themselves? 'Chief workers of the parish'? Well, well! I wonder whom they have have got to invent all the hundreds of quaint, original and foundationless whole-cloth stories that have filled our ears for weeks. And then the talk they gave the New York reporters was utter drivel. Their case, as I get it, is based on the following very excellent propositions: Their rector should exhibit a greater spirituality; his family should be denied the common pleasures of society, and he should not be a horrid Democrat. The indiscriminate confusion of Church and State is always admittedly bad, and in this instance, of course, absurd; but one has to pause and smirk when he considers how far Republicans will go in their funny political paresis. A clergyman has, I believe, as much right to his political views as I to mine, and I do not recall that the Constitution or any State law seeks to deny him this right. By no social ban that has afflicted me, moreover, shall his family be debarred from society, and when that committee talks about society—but keep me off the subject of that committee. Then as to spirituality permit me to drop a tear. I remember very well the man who preceded the present rector of Holy Cross church. A soulful looking fellow, studious, earnest, conscientious, devout—a very personification of the spirituelle. I remember also his words to me when he came to say good-bye. 'It is better that I should go before they ask me to do so'—said he.—'I have been forced away, unwilling though I am to leave, because I know I can never please them.' And those words have a wonderfully direct application to the present case, so far as I can find out, and I have faith to believe that the present rector will not bow down to the bogie men as his predecessor did, especially as he has his entire vestry and all the real people of the church heartily with him. Almost anybody can wave a little red flag and jump up and down, but it takes a gentleman to ignore such a performance.

"And when I look over that committee there comes to me, too, the remembrance of something in the Good Book concerning what the man ought to be who wants to throw the first stone."

GRAND ENTERTAINMENT.

The Attendance at the Fair Friday Evening Was Small, but Those Present Were Delighted With the Programme.

The threatening weather Friday night had the effect of keeping a large number of people indoors, and this was especially noticeable at the fair of St. Mary's church, now drawing to a close in the C. Y. M. L. hall, corner of Sixth and Liberty streets.

The committee in charge had made great preparations for the entertainment of their many friends and patrons, and would no doubt have been greeted by a full house but for the disagreeable storm that had set in early in the evening.

The entertainment opened with a selection by the Martin Brothers Quartette, entitled "We're Marching", which was well rendered and so enthusiastically encored that they were obliged to respond by singing "Come Where the Lilies".

The next number on the programme was by the inimitable John Carney, the German comedian, which was a recitation about the Front street merchants in which he spoke well of the different business men on that thoroughfare and wound up by giving a good send-off to John J. Kenney, whom he alluded to as Plainfield's coming Postmaster. Mr. Carney was well received and given hearty applause, and for an encore gave a very difficult imitation of an Italian, in a piece entitled "Bella de Banan".

Then came a vocal selection by Karl Rudolph, the famous Philadelphia tenor, entitled "Mollie O", which was rendered in a very pleasing manner. Mr. Rudolph was greeted with such an ovation that he was obliged to favor with a song entitled "Afterwards". Miss St. Ledger, the accomplished organist of St. Mary's church, accompanied Mr. Rudolph on the piano.

Mr. Ward, of Bronx, then gave several recitations in a manner which proved that he is no mean artist at the business.

The evening's entertainment concluded with the singing by the quartette of the song entitled "The Lost Chord". In response to encores they rendered "Hushe, Lady, Husho", and a medley.

Tonight an auction sale will be held to dispose of the articles on hand, and the different voting contests will also be decided.

Great credit is due the young women who compose the committee for their successful efforts in making the fair one of the most enjoyable and profitable ever held under the auspices of the church.

HARMONIOUS PRIMARY.

ANTI-RACE-TRACK DELEGATES.

Success of the Seamless Ticket in North Plainfield.

The North Plainfield Democratic primary held on Friday, was large and interesting. Levi Kline, a member of the County Executive Committee, called the meeting to order. There was a large attendance of voters.

J. H. Vetterlein and E. H. McCullough were nominated for chairman of the meeting. Mr. McCullough declined, and the Hon. J. H. Vetterlein was unanimously chosen by acclamation. Mr. Vetterlein thanked those present for the honor, and asked for nominations for secretary.

Two candidates were nominated, Louis Brown and Ira F. Ellker. A motion was made that both men be elected. The motion prevailed, and both were elected. Two tickets were then nominated.

Messrs. E. C. Morse and Levi Kline were chosen as tellers by acclamation. A line was then formed, and every person given ample time to pass the tellers, give his name, and deposit the ballot of his choice in a hat on the chairman's table. The tickets and the votes were as follows:

W. L. Saunders ...... 115 | *E. H. McCullough
Andrew Love, Sr. ... 139 | Benjamin Clark 78
*E. H. McCullough .. 139 | Joseph A. Blaze 77
D. J. Carney .... 104 | L. E. Blackford 76
E. H. French .... 136 | W. H. Ludlow 79

*On both tickets.

The best of order prevailed, and complete harmony was noted. The delegates chosen are unpledged, and the character of the men chosen are such that The Press assures its readers that race-track legislation will receive no support at the hands of North Plainfield's delegates.

SOME ODD STORIES.

INTERESTING TALES OF ADVENTURE ON SEA AND LAND.

The End of a Selfish Life—A Story That Points a Plain Moral—Saved at a Woman's Grave—The Wane of Whalebone Industry.

[Copyright, 1898, by American Press Association.]

There are men—and women, too—whom fate would seem to be one unbroken record of selfishness, and yet who manage to get on in the world and to win where others much better than themselves fail.

Dick Follingsby was a man of this kind. Dick and I were distant cousins and playmates and schoolmates in our boyhood. I recall as distinctly as if it were yesterday that Dick had a great habit of breaking tops, letting kites get loose, losing books and bursting the barrels of shotguns, but the things lost or injured were never his own—they always belonged to myself or to some other boy.

Whenever it came down to the division of an apple, an orange or a piece of cake—always the property of some other boy, for Dick never divided his things—he invariably managed to do the cutting and always got what we called "the biggest half."

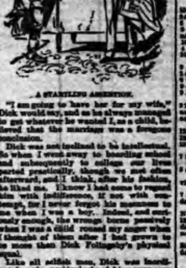
He grew up to be a fine looking fellow, though with rather a cynical expression. I remember my father, with the privilege of a kinsman, pointed out to Dick's parents on one occasion what he thought were the defects in the boy's character, but they thought his peculiarities would the better qualify him for the calling of a [illegible], which it was decided he should be.

Soon after Dick Follingsby came of age, his father and mother died, leaving him an estate that brought in about $6,000 a year. If Dick had been left poor, I am quite sure that he would have won his way, like many men of the same disposition, and achieved a fortune, but a competency was a death blow to his ambition. It seemed to enervate all his nobler impulses, while it intensified his selfishness.

From first to last I do not recall having heard of Dick's giving away one cent in charity or helping a man who was down from that impulse of sympathy which we often find associated with natures that are far from noble.

And yet as I look back upon his career I cannot help thinking that with proper influences about him, when his character was in process of formation, that Dick Follingsby might have been a most useful man, who in dying could look back upon a well spent life.

I recall that when we were boys of 8 or 9 years in Kentucky, that one of our chums of the same age had a pretty baby sister of about 3. Even unto this day I never see a baby with golden hair and laughing blue eyes without being reminded of Edna Davis.



A STARTLING ASSERTION.

"I am going to have her for my wife," Dick would say, and as he always managed to get whatever he wanted I, as a child, believed that the marriage was a foregone conclusion.

Dick was not inclined to be intellectual. So when I went away to boarding school and subsequently to college our lives parted practically, though we met often afterward, and I think, after his fashion, he liked me. I know I had come to regard him with indifference, if not with contempt, for I never forgot his meanness to me when I was a boy. Indeed, and curiously enough, the wrongs borne passively when I was a child roused my anger when I thought of them after I had grown to be more than Dick Follingsby's physical equal.

Like all selfish men, Dick was inordinately vain, particularly of his power over women.

He had many love affairs before he reached the age of 25, yet from first to last he always clung to Edna Davis, the only person in the world who seemed to have any influence over him.

Edna had grown up in fulfillment of all the promise of her childhood. I saw her last when she was but little more than 18, and, although her friends assured me that the doctors could not find any organic disease, her lilylike beauty and the evident lack of physical strength convinced me that she was not long for this world.

Little did I then think that the poor girl was dying of a broken heart and that Dick Follingsby was the cause. He had asked her to marry him, that is certain, but she refused, though she loved him from first to last, and him only.

One day when I was visiting a friend in Lexington, Ky., Dick came into my room, and pointing to the death notices in a newspaper he said hoarsely:

"Read that."

I glanced at the notice, but was not surprised, for two days before this I had attended the funeral of Edna Davis and wondered that Dick was not there.

"It's awful!" he gasped.

"Yes; very sad," I replied.

He sprang to his feet, his face the color of the ashes on the hearth, and whispered:

"She was murdered! I tell you, Edna Davis was murdered!"

"Nonsense," I said.

"But it's true. And I know the murderer!"

I told him a rest would do him good and begged him to lie down.

"Yes, old fellow, I need a rest mighty bad, and I'll soon take a long one. But, I repeat, she was murdered, and I know the murderer!"

Hoping to quiet him, for I could see he had been drinking, I asked:

"Well, who is the fellow?"

"Can't you think?"

"No, and I don't propose to try."

"Look at me!"

I did so.

"I am the guilty man, and I must pay the penalty!" he cried. "Had I done right Edna would be living and my happy wife today, but I did wrong, and she knew it. That's why she would not marry me, though she never loved a man but me."

Signs of Youth.

When your mind is on the future,
And the wondrous things you'll do,
And you think the world revolves around
For no one else but you,
Although you may not know it,
Yet all the same it's true,
It's a sign—you're rather young.

When you will not even listen
To suggestions or advice
From those who've stumbled o'er the road
And slipped upon the ice,
And you've bound to buy experience
At the highest market price,
It's a sign—you're rather young.

When you brag about your smartness,
And how sharp you've always been
In getting best of every trade
With all the boys and men,
And how you've beat most other folks
In muscle and with pen,
It's a sign—you're rather young.

When you think a man at thirty
Is going fast to seed,
And one who reaches forty
Is very old indeed,
And a man who's really fifty
Is a withered, broken reed,
It's a fact—you're rather young.

Love's Glasses.

WHAT HE SAID.

He said: "How beautiful, my love,
From earth beneath to heaven above!
There's not a rock with lichens browned,
And not a field with sunshine crowned,
And not a note all nature through,
From whispering pines to ocean blue—
Not even a mote which swings in air
Up toward the bending heavens fair
That is not beautiful."

WHAT SHE SAID.

"There's not a thing the landscape through,
From sands we hear
Beneath our feet
To where the mountains loom in view,
That is not beautiful,
And all for you."

WHAT I SAW.

A scene almost made up of blanks.
Nothing but rocks and sands.
A dull brown waste,
O'er which the crow himself makes haste.
And yet, I mused, "Perhaps 'tis wise
To look abroad through lovers' eyes,
If they only show that round us lies
Beauty like that of paradise."

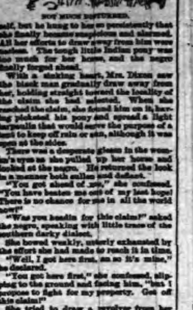
The Rush Into Oklahoma and the Struggle For a Valuable Claim—A Burly Negro Gets Ahead of a Woman and Then Defends Her Rights.

[Copyright, 1898, by American Press Association.]

Settlers who were in the Oklahoma rushes relate many interesting stories of their adventures which were pathetic, tragic or humorous, as the case might be. Many women were among the daring ones who raced for lots and claims, and they took their chances with the men.

Among those who sought claims in the Sac and Fox country was a poor widow named Dixon. She had previously spotted a valuable claim, and she made for it in the very van of the boomers. Having a good horse, she felt confident of arriving at the desired locality before any one else.

As the settlers spread out, the widow found herself racing neck and neck with a burly negro, who was mounted on a wiry Indian pony and seemed to be heading in the same direction as the woman. At first she thought little of this, as it was not likely he had chosen the same claim as herself, but he hung to her so persistently that she finally became suspicious and alarmed. All her efforts to draw away from him were useless. The tough little Indian pony was too much for her horse, and the negro finally forged ahead.



NOT MUCH DISTURBED.

With a sinking heart, Mrs. Dixon saw the black man gradually draw away from her, holding straight toward the locality of the claim she had selected. When she reached the claim, she found him on it, having picketed his pony and spread a light tarpaulin that would serve the purpose of a tent to keep off rain or sun, although it was open at the sides.

There was a desperate gleam in the woman's eyes as she pulled up her horse and looked at the negro. He returned the look in a manner both sullen and defiant.

"You got ahead of me," she confessed. "You have beaten me out of my last hope! There is no chance for me in all the world now!"

"Was you headin for this claim?" asked the negro, speaking with little trace of the southern darky dialect.

She bowed weakly, utterly exhausted by the effort she had made to reach it in time.

"Well, I got here first, an so it's mine," he declared.

"You got here first," she confessed, slipping to the ground and facing him, "but I propose to fight for my property. Get off this claim!"

She tried to draw a revolver from her pocket, but the hammer caught in her dress, and before she could release it the negro leaped forward, caught her wrist and wrenched the weapon from her hand.

"I'll take this," said the burly black man. "It makes me a good pair, an a man is likely to need two guns in this country."

Overcome by disappointment and fatigue, Mrs. Dixon sank in a half fainting condition. The negro looked at her, as if wondering how he was going to get rid of her without further trouble, but did not offer to touch her again.

After a time, feeling ill and suffering from the terrible heat of the sun, she asked if she might rest in the shade of the tarpaulin. He consented, and she crept there, while he picketed her horse not far from his own.

Within half an hour a big, ruffianly looking man galloped up. About his waist was a belt that held a small arsenal of weapons. Throwing his foaming horse back with a strong pull, the fierce appearing stranger glared at the negro.

"How'd you git here, you black whelp?" he snarled.

"I rode here on that horse," was the reply, "an I don't care about bein called a black whelp either!"

"The blazes you don't! That don't count with me none whatever. You're on my claim, an you've gotter git up and mosey!"

"How does this happen to be your claim?"

"'Cause I picked it out first."

"Well, you didn't get here first after the reservation was opened, an so ye can't hold it."

"Can't! Whoop! Do you know me?"

"No."

"Well, I'm Jake Harte, an I've got a record. I'll give you three minutes to git started off this claim. If you don't, you'll be planted right here, an I'll act as sexton, undertaker, mourner an the whole blamed outfit."

"There is a woman under that tarpaulin, an she has a right to this claim if you don't recognize my right."

Jake Harte, one of the most notorious of western ruffians, glanced at the woman, who was watching the whole affair.

"I don't care a darn for her!" he cried. "She'll have to git too!"

"Well, she won't git! She stays right here!"

Harte reached for a revolver. He could draw and shoot with remarkable swiftness, but the negro had been watching for just such a move, and he succeeded in firing first. With a single shot the black man broke the ruffian's right arm.

"Now, you git!" commanded the darky, ready to shoot again. "Next time I will put a bullet through your heart!"

Cowed, baffled and wounded, the desperado rode away and was soon lost to view.

All day long the negro squatted on the claim and defended it from those who tried to take possession. Near night he went to the woman and said:

"There won't be any more after this lead, I reckon. Here's your revolver. The claim's yours, an I'll be a witness for ye."

Without another word he mounted his horse and rode away. And the widow held the claim.

"Left."

There were five of us passengers in the battered Conestoga coach that was making its regular trip from Custer to Deadwood, in the Black Hills. It was in those days when every road leading into the metropolis of the hills was a toll road, and toll was often collected at the mouth of a winchester.

There were four men. The fifth passenger was a woman, and we took a great interest in her, as she was in deep mourning and extremely pretty. At first her face was concealed by a veil, but she finally lifted this and fastened it back, and there was not a man of us who did not feel his blood stirring more swiftly in his veins. She had a sweetly innocent face and the gentlest brown eyes imaginable. Those eyes caught us.

I don't exactly know how it came about, but Jim Bronson, the gallant man of the party, succeeded in getting into conversation with her. She seemed utterly artless, and her teeth were as white as milk. They dazzled one when she smiled, which she did twice in a mournful way, as if she could not entirely banish the great sorrow that oppressed her.

We learned she had just buried her father and was going into the hills to search for her husband, whom she called Jack, and who was trying to make a fortune in the goldfields. She said there was no one left in all the wide world to care for her now but Jack, and she must find him. I am certain she might have thrown herself on the mercy of any one of our party and received the tenderest treatment and consideration.

At length the driver pulled up his horses and turned to call:

"Hello, you critters in there! Ef you've got any dust or vallybuls you need in your business, you'd better put 'em whar they'll be hard to find. This next strip of trail is Hank Bradshaw's stamping ground, an he's pretty sure to collect toll this trip."

Hank Bradshaw had a reputation. He was a bad man with a record of several first out shots by his guns before he turned road agent, and none of us felt like taking any chances in trying to down him with a bullet. We held a council of war and came to the conclusion it would be a good scheme to pool our wealth and intrust it to the care of the little woman with the brown eyes. It was said Hank never molested ladies, priding himself on his gallantry.

She agreed to accept the charge of our money, and hastily had she hidden it in her clothes when the driver was ordered to halt, which he promptly did.

"Ye needn't trouble to hold up yer hands, gents," called a cold and steady voice. "I have the [illegible], and I am pretty handy with a [illegible]." [illegible]

[illegible] great surprise at her appearance, but still keeping us menaced with his weapon he ordered the John to drive on, which command was obeyed.

It was at least 15 minutes before one of us spoke. We simply sat and looked at each other and felt foolish. The driver broke the silence. Leaning to one side he looked down at us and called:

"Hanged of that thar female wasn't Denver Kate, Bradshaw's pard. They used to run a skin game in Omaha. Didn't know she was round these parts, but I'd recognize her ef she hadn't had that thar veil over her face when she boarded."

There were four very disgusted men in that Conestoga.

"I wonder what we have left!" I observed.

"Why, we're all left!" blurted Jim Bronson as he clinched his fist and punched himself behind the ear.

He Felt the Electricity.

I was riding up Fulton street, Brooklyn, on a surface trolley car when a fresh arrival in this country, who carried the map of Ireland on his face, made a frantic rush from the sidewalk and climbed aboard. He took a seat opposite me that had just been vacated by a mischievous looking boy. The moment he was seated I noticed he gave a start of surprise and astonishment, seeming on the point of rising again, but seeing me regarding him settled back with a look of resignation.

It soon became evident the Irishman did not sit at all comfortably, for he hitched about and looked around at the other passengers in an inquiring manner. Finally he leaned over toward me, put his hand to his mouth and observed in a hoarse whisper:

"Begobs, this elictricity is mighty quare failing stoof!"

I could not repress a smile as I asked:

"Do you feel the electricity?"

"Oi should say Oi did!" he answered, with emphasis, as he wiped the perspiration from his face with the back of his hand. "An don't you fale it at all at all?"

"Not a bit."

"That's quare, but Oi think it's because it's me first roide on wan av these things. Oi'll git used to it in toime."

Still he actually seemed to be suffering intense torture, but he had paid his fare, and he held on as long as he could. When I stopped the car to get off, he decided to follow my example. On reaching the ground he stood for a moment as if doubting his senses, and then he reached around beneath the tail of his coat and extracted a flat headed carpet tack from his person. A look of the most intense disgust came over his face when he saw the cause of his torture.

"An was it that Oi was settin on?" he cried, with a twist of his Irish mug. "Begorra, Oi thought it was the electricity all the toime!"

"Come Home, Papa!"

The haggard looking prisoner stood up to hear sentence from the lips of the stern faced judge. Evidence had been brought to show he stole food for his starving family, being out of work and having no money. A short distance away was the weeping wife holding a thin faced little girl in her arms. The prisoner looked about him in a sullen and defiant manner, as if he hated all the world, until his eyes rested on his wife and his child. Then his face softened, and for a moment it seemed that tears would spring from his eyes.

"John Lewis," said the hard, unrelenting voice of the judge, causing the prisoner to straighten up and look sullen once more, "you have been found guilty of the charge against you, and it is my duty to pronounce sentence upon you. I wish to show my utter abhorrence of such petty thievery, and I shall make you an example. Therefore I sentence you to the penitentiary for the term of two years."

The wife cried out as if she had been struck to the heart, and the prisoner looked dazed as two officers placed their hands on his shoulders and started to lead him away. Then the little girl in her mother's arms stretched out her thin arms and cried:

"Come home, papa!"

"Go home with mamma," he said hoarsely. "Papa will come by and by." Great tears started from his eyes and ran down his face as he was led away to jail, and the weeping woman staggered from the courtroom with the wondering child clutched convulsively to her breast.

Mollie's Problems.

There's lots of things I cannot understand,
It really makes no matter how I try.
One's why the brown comes on my little hand
Because the sun is hot up in the sky.

I never understood why birds eat worms
Instead of pie and puddings full of plums.
I can't see why a baby always squirms
Or why big boys are 'fraid of little sums.

I cannot understand why doggies bark
Instead of talking sense like you and me,
And why the sun don't shine when it is dark
Instead of when it's light, I cannot see.

I wonder what it is makes children grow,
And why they have no wings like little flies.
But puzzlingest of all the things I know
Is why grandma wears windows on her eyes.

A Transmigration of Souls.

It was whispered by the sages
Of the prehistoric ages,
When all newspapers and telegrams and letters were unknown,
That the heathen gods felt jealous—
So the ancient legends tell us—
When the happiness of mortals was more perfect than their own.

In the days that I have quoted
You and I, dear, were devoted
To each other with a fervor that we never, never see
In this age of shams and shoddies,
For our souls were Grecian bodies
And found life a very pleasant thing in sunny Arcady.

So the heathen gods grew spiteful,
As our lot was so delightful,
And they said: "These twain shall live again when worldliness is rife,
And when we are out of fashion
They shall nurse a hopeless passion
And shall learn that 'Love' counts 'nothing' in the game of human life."

Yet we love again today, dear,
In the old ecstatic way, dear,
Though we see each other rarely and our paths lie far apart.
Ancient gods and modern London
Have been overthrown and undone
When they tried alike their utmost to expel you from my heart.

And my people ask politely
How a friend I know so lightly
Can be more to me than others I have liked a year or so?
But they cannot solve the mystery
Of our transmigration's history,
And they've no idea I loved you three millenniums ago.
—Ellen Thorneycroft Fowler.

The Usual Way.

Didst ever observe when a pig in the fence
Sends forth his most pitiful shout
How all of his neighbors betake themselves thence
To punish him ere he gets out?
And the hubbub they raise, so that others afar
May know his condition and hence
Come running to join them in adding a scar
To the pig that is fast in the fence.

Well, swine are not all of the creatures that be
Who find themselves sticking between
The rails of the fence, and who try to get free
While the world is still shoving them in;
Who find that the favor they meet with depends
Not on words, but on dollars and cents,
And that 'tis but few who will prove themselves friends
To the pig that is fast in the fence.
—Philadelphia Ledger.

"Not to Be."

The rose said, "Let but this long rain be past,
And I shall feel my sweetness in the sun
And pour its fullness into life at last."
But when the rain was done,
But when dawn sparkled through unclouded air,
She was not there.

The lark said, "Let but winter be away,
And blossoms come and light, and I will soar
And lose the earth and be the voice of day."
But when the snows were o'er,
But when spring broke in blossoms overhead,
The lark was dead.

And myriad roses made the garden glow,
And skylarks caroled all the summer long—
What lack of birds to sing and flowers to blow!
Yet, ah, lost scent, lost song!
Poor empty rose, poor lark that never trilled!
Dead unfulfilled!
—Augusta Webster.

The Day's Demand.

God give us men. A time like this demands
Strong minds, great hearts, true faith and ready hands;
Men whom the lust of office does not kill;
Men whom the spoils of office cannot buy;
Men who possess opinions and a will;
Men who have honor; men who will not lie;
Men who can stand before a demagogue
And damn his treacherous flatteries without winking;
Tall men, sun crowned, who live above the fog,
In public duty and in private thinking.
For while the rabble, with their thumbworn creeds,
Their large professions and their little deeds,
Mingle in selfish strife, lo! Freedom weeps,
Wrong rules the land, and waiting Justice sleeps.
—Dr. J. G. Holland.

I would not sail the mighty deep.
Nay, nay!
Where tempests wild the billows sweep,
And ocean's monsters roll and leap;
Obscurity's safe shores I'll keep,
Nor farther stray.
—New Orleans Picayune.

Love Above All.

Whether climbing life's hill by a stony path
Or calmly treading the vale below,
With cheerful support she will meet her lot
If a true heart loves her and tells her so.

You may give her your houses, your lands, your gold,
Failing the jewel of love to bestow,
She'll envy the poorest woman she knows
Who has some one to love her and tells her so.

CHARLES HYDE IS IN IT.

C. G. COKEFAIR TALKS ABOUT HIS MILLIONS.

Details of a Big Scheme in Which Plainfield Capitalists Invested—But Mr. Hyde Says He Loses Only a Trifling $5,000.

(From The Press of October 19.)

The World devoted considerable space yesterday and today to telling the story of what it called a "Huge Fraud" in connection with a concern known as the Standard Coal and Timber Company of West Virginia. This concern, according to the World, has issued bonds for $1,000,000 against 200,000 acres of land in West Virginia. The company is said to have a capital stock (on paper) of $5,000,000. The bonds were issued through the Commonwealth Title Insurance and Trust Company of Philadelphia, which acted as trustee for the bonds so far as regards the payment of two years' interest thereon. Of this $1,000,000 of bonds it is alleged that more than $[illegible],000 have been sold and are now held by banks and private capitalists in New York, Philadelphia, Brooklyn, and Plainfield. It is alleged that a deed to the property against which these bonds were issued was forged and that the bonds are therefore valueless.

Yesterday Charles G. Cokefair of this city was represented as losing his entire fortune in the company's scheme. Mr. Cokefair is Chairman of the Executive Committee of the company.

Today Mr. Cokefair defends the concern. He writes:

Responding the sensational article which appeared in one of the morning papers reflecting upon the titles to the lands of this company in West Virginia, we desire to state that the title to this property was carefully examined and favorably passed upon by the most competent, reputable and efficient attorneys we could employ in that State. One of them, W. F. Payne, was then clerk of the County Court in which the lands are located, and later became Republican candidate for State Treasurer. The lands were carefully examined and favorably reported upon for us by competent experts, and our ownership has been recognized and certified to by every official of any prominence in McDowell county. We have never had any intimation of any defect in our title except from recent rumors, which we have not as yet been able to verify, but should we learn upon further examination that irregularity exists in reality it will be our duty and pleasure to remedy the same.

After giving this out—says The World of today—Mr. Cokefair made a veritable Mulberry Sellers statement to the assembled reporters.

"There is $150,000,000 back of our company,"—he said—"and you may be sure that we will spare no efforts to set this thing."

This was very impressive until one of the reporters asked how he figured up that vast backing.

HERE'S THE "BACKING".

"Well,"—said Mr. Cokefair—"to begin with, there is John I. Blair, of Blairsville, N. J. He is worth $75,000,000."

"How is he connected with the Company?"

"Why he holds five of our bonds as collateral,"—said Mr. Cokefair, without the shadow of a smile.

"Who are the other backers?"

"Well, there is Charles Hyde, of Plainfield, the President of the City National Bank there and President of the Second National Bank of Titusville, Pa. He is worth $15,000,000."

"How is he connected with the Standard Company?"

"He holds $40,000 of our bonds as collateral."

THESE MEN NOT VICTIMS.

On June 28 last Mr. Cokefair was at Pocahontas, W. Va., with James Smith of Easton, Pa., and Mr. Liebman of New York. He was trying to sell some of the property claimed by the Standard Company. They only saw the edge of the tract, as they were told that the river was too high to allow them to cross and penetrate the priceless territory beyond. This deal failed to go through.

About six weeks ago Cokefair and Benjamin Franklin Rowland, whom Cokefair now disowns, approached a prominent attorney in New York, who represents English capitalists and tried to dispose of their holdings through him. He demanded their papers, showing title, etc., and when he got them discovered irregularities enough to make him drop the matter forthwith. He saved his English clients from giving a lot of good money for a parcel of bogus land deeds.

MR. COKEFAIR IN PLAINFIELD.

(From the New York World.)

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Oct. 18.—C. G. Cokefair is a prominent member of the Methodist Episcopal church here. He lives in handsome style on Crescent avenue, the most fashionable street in this city of well streets, and his family stands high in local society. He has had business dealings with the First National Bank, in which bank he kept a deposit. How the bank happens to have one of the bonds of the company cannot be learned. The officers declined to talk. Charles L. Hyde, President of the City National Bank here, has about $20,000 of the bonds of the Lumber Company. He says they came into his possession as security for a mortgage with its interest in a piece of mill property situated in Flemington, which he sold to Mr. Cokefair.

The interest on the mortgage was not kept up, and to secure him further he took the bonds and a further mortgage on 15,000 acres of land, said to belong to the company, in Kentucky. Mr. Hyde expects to lose only $5,000.

The Plainfield Friends' First-Day School and Ex-Judge Harper.

The Plainfield Friends' First-Day School has adopted the following concerning the late ex-Judge Nathan Harper for many years its superintendent:

The Plainfield Friends' First-Day School hereby records, with a deep feeling of sorrow and regret, its great loss in the death of its beloved Superintendent Harper. For twenty-one years he had rendered in this capacity most faithful, consecrated service, interpreting to many the simple lessons of fundamental Christian truth, and by wise and loving counsel guidance in the right pathway the footsteps of the young. Many there are who will indeed call his memory blessed.

We express to his sorrowing family our heartfelt sympathy in their great bereavement, and invoke for them, as for ourselves, the support of the unfailing Divine Arm.

Holy Cross Choir Boys Entertained.

The boys of Holy Cross Choir Guild were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Taggart at their residence, Sycamore avenue, last evening, and were delightfully entertained with games, refreshments and the like. Before the fun began the Guild elected the following officers:

TRINITY'S PINK TEA.

It Was One Most Enjoyed—Richly Decorated Street by the [illegible].

So many people were eager to enjoy the good graces of the Ladies' [illegible] Work Society of Trinity Reformed church Friday night that the residence of Mrs. Bird and Mrs. Van Winkle, 21 Elm place, was overcrowded with members of the church and outside friends.

The scene indoors was beautiful, the pink decorations being very effective. Festoons of English ivy and pink roses hung from the open doorways to the different rooms, mantels, and other available places. Banks and vases of pink chrysanthemums and white roses were tastefully arranged. The tables were charmingly decorated with pink ribbons and flowers.

All this delightful picture added to the happiness which the genial hospitality of Consistoman Bird and Deacon-Chorister Van Winkle and their families provided.

The ladies and gentlemen also wore tasteful decorations of pink. The enjoyment of the good things was hearty, and the contributions were generous, between $30 and $40 being realized for the new Sunday-school fund.

The admirable committee consisted of Mrs. E. H. Bird, Mrs. F. E. Demarest, Mrs. F. A. Church, Mrs. M. Desborough, Mrs. E. T. Van Winkle, Mrs. J. F. MacDonald, Mrs. C. P. Leggett and Mrs. A. L. Force, ably assisted by Miss Mamie Carey and Miss Susie Van Winkle.

The following entertaining programme was rendered:

Piano solo—Mazurka .... Leschetizky
Miss L. Force.
Quartette—The King of Love My Shepherd Is .... Shelley
Miss Grant, Mrs. Bird,
Mr. Bond, Mr. Chester.
Soprano solo—Sleep on, My Heart, ... DeKoven
Miss P. Mills.
Vocal Duet—Soft Fall the Dew of Summer Night .... Glover
Miss Grant, Mrs. Bird.
Tenor solo—A Touch of Humanity ...... Jordan
Mr. Bond.
Soprano solo—Lizie S.gnori .... Meyerbeer
Miss Grant.
Quartette—The Lord Is My Shepherd .. Emerson
Miss Grant, Mrs. Bird,
Mr. Bond, Mr. Chester.
Soprano solo—O Promise Me .... DeKoven
Miss Mills.
All—Home, Sweet Home .... C. P. Leggett

Mr. Bond's solo was so superior that an encore was demanded. Miss Grant delighted all with "Answered" as an encore. Miss Phebe Mills was obliged to repeat "Oh promise me".

Miss Lillian Force was accompanist to all who sang.

The pink programmes were printed in purple ink by artist J. F. MacDonald.

The happy event came to a close by all joining in "Home, Sweet Home", C. P. Leggett playing the accompaniment.

THE WHITE WEDDING.

Reported by a Newspaper on the Spot.

(From The New Brunswick Home News.)

There is nothing more cheerful and gay than a home wedding in the country, and such an event took place at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Beardslee, Millstone, last evening.

The bride, and a most popular one, was their daughter, Miss Ella F. Beardslee, and the man of her choice was George F. White, of Plainfield, who is connected with the Mutual Life Insurance Company in New York.

In the presence of a large company they stood together under a huge horseshoe of smilax and lilies of the valley, and there the Rev. Theodore Shaffer, of Millstone, tied the nuptial knot, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Yerkes, of Plainfield. The bride, looking lovely in a becoming costume of pearl satin with duchesse lace and pearl ornaments, and without a veil, was unattended. There was no groomsman. The ushers were Frank Beardslee, brother of the bride, Runyon Field, David Lenox and Mr. Serrell, of Plainfield. Garland played the familiar Mendelssohn wedding march, and afterwards the music for the dancing.

The reception which followed was a lively affair, and after everyone had congratulated the young couple the latter left via Bound Brook for the World's Fair. They will live in Plainfield on their return. The presents, it need hardly be added, were unusually numerous and costly. Among those present were the following from Plainfield: Rev. Dr. Yerkes, Mr. White, wife and daughters, and Messrs. McLaughlin, Serrell and Lenox.

HONORABLE CANDIDATES.

Hearty Endorsement by Editor Mahaffy of the Anti-Race-Track Ticket.

(From The Somerville Messenger.)

Monday's convention presented the name of Henry M. T. Beekman for State Senator. He is no stranger to our people, having been born and reared in the township of Branchburg, and comes of an old and highly-esteemed family. After graduating at Rutgers College he began the study of law, and has for some years practiced that profession, being a member of the well-known firm of Traphagen & Beekman, in Jersey City.

Of his abilities and fitness for the position, all who know him can vouch. In his speech of acceptance he pledged himself to do his utmost, when elected, for the interests of his county.

The convention adopted a platform which admits of no uncertainty as to the party's position on the race-track issue—such is the disgust, no doubt, of our Republican friends, and Mr. Beekman's ready endorsement of that resolution was so complete that J. Vred Voorhees, Esq., this county's representative in the Citizens' League, after listening to the speech arose and said that he was so fully satisfied with Mr. Beekman's pledge that he did not deem it necessary to propound the formal questions prescribed by the league for candidates for legislative honors.

The renomination, by acclamation, of Hon. George H. Cramer for Assemblyman was a deserved recognition of that gentleman's worth and an evidence of the appreciation by our citizens of his services at the last session of the Legislature.

The nominees for the office of Coroner—John F. Brady, E. F. Farrow, M. D., and Fred. C. Sutphen, M. D.—are all good men, who will discharge their duty to the satisfaction of the people, if elected.

The Messenger, in pledging the nominees its cordial support, does so in the belief that success will be achieved by the people of the county, at the polls, by the triumphant election of the candidates.

To Develop the Ball-Field.

Negotiations are on foot between the Allen estate and A. D. Thompson and William Kelly for the purchase by the latter two of the valuable piece of property on Somerset street, now known as the base-ball field. It is understood that the intention of the prospective purchasers is to open up the property for building purposes. The location is good, and the lots would probably not stay on the market a long time.

MADE NO DEFENSE.

ISAAC LEDERER PERMITS A VERDICT AGAINST HIM.

Preferred Having the Common Pleas Court in Elizabeth Pass on the Case, Rather Than Submit to a Jury of His Fellow-Townsmen.

Justice Mosher's court-room was crowded to suffocation Thursday afternoon and the stairs leading up to it were filled with people trying to get an idea of the proceeding going on within in the trial of the much talked of case of Miss Elizabeth Smith against Isaac Lederer for salary alleged by the plaintiff to be due her for a term of three weeks.

This case that has created so much interest has been set down for trial several times but has been postponed each time until yesterday. City Judge W. A. Coddington represented the plaintiff in the suit, and Counsellor McClure appeared for the defense. The jury called for this case consisted of C. E. Ball, Chas. K. Moore, W. H. Clum, Joseph Battelle, Oscar Terry and Noel Verrier.

Counsel for the prosecution opened the case by stating the story of Miss Smith's engagement as milliner by Lederer and of her subsequent discharge by him for insufficient reasons. The entire story was confirmed by the plaintiff in the witness chair and by the other witnesses called. Cross questioning by the opposition failed to shake their evidence. In substance it is as follows:

Miss Smith was engaged by Lederer in New York last March to come to Plainfield and take charge of the millinery department in his store on West Front street. An agreement was entered into at the time between the parties that Miss Smith should come to Plainfield and take the position; that she should receive $15 per week from March 20 to April 1, and from the latter date until July 2 she was to receive $16 per week for her services.

The plaintiff took the position and gave apparent satisfaction in her work until June 10, when she suddenly received her discharge in writing. The excuses given for her discharge failed to be proved by the facts. Miss Smith put herself under legal advice immediately and continued to present herself every morning at the store at the usual time, Lederer always sending her away or telling her he did not know her. Each Saturday night she asked for her salary and each time it was refused. The amount of salary due amounted to $48.

The defense put in no case at all. Their witnesses were sworn and dismissed. The jury were not out five minutes and brought in a verdict for the plaintiff of the full amount claimed and costs.

The counsel for the defense says: "The defendant made no defense before Justice of the Peace Mosher and the jury. Notice of appeal was promptly given, and the case will be tried on its merits in the Court of Common Pleas, before three judges and a jury not selected for the occasion."

IN RED MEN'S HALL.

Iona Council Committee Entertains Members and Friends in Glorious Style.

Red Men's Hall contained nearly 200 happy hearts Thursday. Iona Council was at the helm, and the entertainment and dance they gave was a decided success. The programme was well arranged and perfectly executed.

Miss Estelle Pierson gave a piano solo that brought forth well-merited applause.

"I live and love thee", a beautiful vocal duet by Messrs. W. and B. Tallamy, was warmly appreciated.

Miss Cora Sheppard proved herself a favorite and was heartily received. Her recitation was "Whistling in Heaven".

A masterpiece was the piano duet of Mrs. Canfield and Miss Mamie Grannatt.

Mrs. Westphal and William Tallamy rendered in excellent style "I know a bank whereon the wild thyme grows".

In the solo "The Girl I Left Behind Me" Mrs. Purser, of Brooklyn, proved herself an accomplished artist. By her recitals she kept the audience in roars of laughter. She was accompanied by Mrs. William Baldwin.

Airs from Martha were given as violin solos by Miss Ida Weigmann, evincing careful training.

Alternate tears and laughter were aroused by J. T. Vogland, the man of a thousand faces. This favorite artist was at his best.

The conclusion of the entertainment was the character song "Mortgage the Farm", by Mrs. Wm. A. Westphal, Miss Dottie Sears, Miss Lizzie Duvoir, W. Tallamy, B. Tallamy, and Bert Littell. This was exceptionally well rendered, and all deserve great credit for their admirable rendition of their parts.

The programme finished, the floor was cleared for dancing, and to the strains of Frazee's incomparable orchestra all tripped blithely till long past midnight.

The committee, which was highly praised for its efficiency and good management, consisted of Mrs. W. A. Westphal, Mrs. Fred Canfield, Mrs. Weigman, Mrs. Radin, Mrs. Geo. Vosti and Joseph E. Wyckoff.

Fresh from the Academy of Music.

The Black Crook is coming to Music Hall Oct. 28, in all its regal splendor, embracing a wealth of superb scenery, gorgeous costumes and glittering armor, together with a large number of little ones dancers and European specialty artists. The dramatic cast is unexceptionally strong, and in fact nothing has been overlooked. Over 100 people are engaged in this superb production, and scenic artists have been for months preparing for its tour.

RECTORY SOCIETY TEA.

Charming Scene, with Charming Women Presiding.

The tea and fair opened by the Rectory Society of Grace church Thursday was a delightful success. The scene presented by the tables, at which each presiding genius had vied with her sisters to produce the most beautiful effects, was superb. The attendance was large, the patronage excellent, and the crowd could n't all get in to supper as fast as they wanted. These are the people who are making the event such a brilliant social and financial triumph:

Candy Table—Miss Harriet, Miss Barkell.
Cake Table—Miss Brickbam, the Misses Holly, Miss Lowrie.
Lemonade Table—The Misses Currie.
Fancy Table—Mrs. J. T. Scott, Mrs. E. L. Finch, Mrs. H. M. Stockton, Mrs. Samuel Huntington.
Preserves—Mrs. J. B. Dumont, Mrs. Fred K. Willis, Mrs. Woodruff, Miss Allen.
Punch and Judy Show—Henry B. Ely.
Magic Lantern—Masters Jack Dumont and Jack Bartindale.

REFRESHMENTS.

Red and Gold Table—Mrs. R. S. Burnett, Miss Anthony and Miss Travers.
Olive Green—Mrs. L. G. Timpson, Mrs. Howard Tracy, the Misses Edith Taylor, May Waring and Florence Waring.
Yellow—Mrs. Augusta Kietzocks, Mrs. Henry Depew.
Pink—Mrs. G. Henry Squires, Mrs. Marion S. Ackerman.
Red—Mrs. Pollock, Miss Maltby.
White—Miss Morgan, Mrs. H. B. Ely, Mrs. Miller.

Kitchen Department—Mrs. VanBuren, Mrs. Ames, Mrs. Cox.
General Superintendent—Mrs. Charles S. Brooks.

Tonight the young ladies will give a musical and literary entertainment, at which Will Runyon will sing. The fair is open from 3 to 11.

SHE IS INSANE.

So Decides the Commission in the Case of Josephine Pound.

The commission appointed by the State Chancellor to inquire into the sanity of Mrs. Josephine E. Pound, of East Third street, near Washington, Friday morning in the common council chamber and submitted the expert testimony from the physicians to the sheriff's jury.

The Commissioners consisted of Craig A. Marsh, Elias R. Pope,
Dr. George W. Endicott.

The jury to which the evidence was submitted was as follows:

Vincent W. Nash,	W. C. Ayres,
Wm. M. Sandford,	Joel Randolph,
F. R. Marvin,	Randolph Dunham,
William Addis,	C. H. Lyman,
W. E. Mattox,	W. H. Clum,
John Neighbor,	Charles K. Moore.

The inquisition was made at the request of the heirs at law to determine whether Mrs. Pound, who is the widow of the late Geo. E. Pound, was able to take care of her estate. The jury was required by the Chancellor to answer a number of questions the substance of which is given in their verdict. The case for the heirs was conducted by Wm. D. Tyndall, of 170 Broadway, New York, and of Passaic. J. E. Coward represented Mrs. Pound.

Dr. Tomlinson, who has been the Pounds' family physician for many years, was the first witness. He testified that at the time of George E. Pound's death in June last Mrs. Pound showed signs of mental debility caused by the shock. About a week after her husband's funeral she broke down, mentally, entirely, and the doctor advised her removal to the New Jersey State Hospital at Trenton where she has been ever since.

Dr. William H. Murray, who was called in consultation by Dr. Tomlinson, testified as to the patient's insanity, and Dr. Ward, Medical Director of the N. J. S. Hospital, testified that the patient had not improved mentally since she had been in his care, and gave his opinion that she was incurable. Mr. Coward put in no case as he was only there to see that the proceedings were properly carried out. Mrs. Pound has suffered from temporary attacks of lunacy previous to this final one.

The jury brought in a verdict which was in substance as follows:

Mrs. Pound is of unsound mind and has been so since July 7. She has an interest in real property to the amount of $3,500 the rental value of which is $270. She has alienated none of the property. Her personal property in the aggregate amounts to $3,300. She has no children, and her direct heirs are a sister and some nephews and nieces.

PROFITS OF $400.

Social and Financial Triumph of the Grace P. E. Church Fair.

The second and last afternoon and evening of the Grace P. E. church tea and fair brought more shekels into the coffers of the Rectory Society than did the previous day. The rooms of the Herring house were so crowded that one could only with difficulty move from table to table.

As usual the supper room took in more money than any other department, although the numerous "side show" features helped to swell the grand total. A room was provided on the second floor where cigars and cigarettes were provided for a consideration and this retreat proved popular as a respite from the noise and bustle down stairs. Across the hall from the smoking room, Masters Jack Dumont and Jack Bartindale held a magic lantern show that attracted a large number of the little people.

The attraction of the evening was the concert that was hastily arranged to take the place of the tabooed minstrel show. This concert was given twice during the evening with the same programme. The performance was extremely creditable, especially so when the short time which the players had to prepare their pieces, is taken into consideration. The programme opened with a violin solo, by Miss Nella Whiton, accompanied by Miss Maud VanBoskerck. The selection was a Landler, by Bohm, and received prolonged applause. Will Runyon followed with a number of songs which were loudly applauded and he ended with the classic story of "Romeo and Juliet". Laurens VanBoren sang "Daisy" Bell and "The Bicycle Built for Two" to the delight of all. The last number on the bill was a piano duet by Miss Marion Dumont and Miss Josephine Harris. It was a selection from the "Roman de Pierrot et Pierrette" and was very prettily rendered. The room in which the concerts were given was crowded for both performances.

The cake, candy and fancy goods tables all did well. Late in the evening the candy that remained unsold was auctioned off by Louis G. Timpson.

The whole affair was well managed and went off with snap and spontaneity. The proceeds of the two-days entertainment amounted to something over $400 to add to the fund of the society.

WHERE THEY STAND.

RACE-TRACK LEGISLATION EMPHATICALLY OPPOSED.

Here is the Stirring Declaration of the Somerset County Democrats and Their Candidates Against Vicious and Immoral Laws—Manly and Courageous Stand of Nominee Beekman—The Citizens' Anti-Race-Track League Satisfied.

By one voice the Democrats of Somerset county in convention assembled, Monday, adopted as their campaign standard the following

PLATFORM.

The Democratic party, in convention assembled, reaffirms the principles in the platform of the Democratic National Convention which nominated the President and Vice-president of the United States.

We have confidence in the wisdom of the President and believe that if the United States Senate will follow the House of Representatives in the repeal of the "Silver law", confidence will be restored and business resume its natural course.

We reaffirm our confidence in Gov. George T. Werts and his Administration.

It is the sense of this convention that the people of the county of Somerset are in favor of law and order and opposed to gambling of every nature; therefore

Resolved, That the candidates this day nominated pledge themselves to favor all legislation repealing all laws of an immoral and vicious character, especially what is known as "race-track" legislation.

Resolved, That we pledge ourselves to the support of the candidates this day nominated.

The stirring speech which the Hon. Henry M. T. Beekman, nominee for Senator, made after the adoption of this platform is faithfully reported by The Messenger of Somerville, in part as follows:

It is no empty honor to represent a county that has given to the State and to the nation as many great and accomplished men as Somerset county has—men whose fame has not been circumscribed by the narrow limits of the State of New Jersey, but has been as broad as the whole country. I have only to mention the names of Dayton, Frelinghuysen, Pennington, Vroom and Southard, and many others. Like them, if it should be my privilege, I would strive, to the best of my humble ability, to secure such legislation as will tend to relieve you of all unnecessary burdens, and best promote your welfare and prosperity. With the increasing growth of our State and its varied interests, new subjects for legislation are constantly arising which should challenge the best thought of all intelligent citizens, and whoever is chosen to represent this county in the Senate should not forget the words of Grover Cleveland: that "public office is simply a public trust".

Mr. Beekman read aloud the resolutions adopted, and further said that he was opposed to race-track legislation, and that he would vote, if elected, against such legislation. He went on to say that he had never owned a share in any race-track company; that he had never been at a race-track in the State of New Jersey, unless the county fair could be called such; that he was not a breeder of fast or race-track horses, and that his family was not a race-track family.

Here some one in the rear of the hall inquired if Mr. Beekman would vote for the repeal of the race-track bill. He thanked the gentleman for his question and stated that he would certainly do so, if elected.

Mr. Beekman further said, turning to the delegation from Bernards township, that he understood that they were in some difficulty with respect to the bonded debt of the township, and he pledged them that if elected it would be a pleasure to aid them in securing such legislation as they needed.

He further said that in a time like this men should lay aside jealousies, rivalry and all animosities and let nothing stand between their party and their party's success; that no man was as big as his party; that no man should be considered when the welfare of his party was in question; that the Hon. George H. Cramer, Somerset's Member of Assembly, had served the county faithfully, conscientiously and well, had manfully withstood all of the temptations which a legislator encountered, and had done credit not only to himself but to the county as well, and that he should be re-elected.

Believing that the Democratic party would triumphantly ratify the nominations made by the convention at the polls on the 7th of November next, Mr. Beekman again thanked the convention and retired amid enthusiastic applause for his creditable sentiments so eloquently expressed.

J. Vred Voorhees, who was present as a representative of the Citizens' League, stated that he had come to ascertain the views of the candidates on the race-track issue, and that he was entirely satisfied with Mr. Beekman's statement.

Latest Success at Daly's.

One of the most attractive performances now being given in New York is in Daly's Theatre, where Sol Smith Russell, the popular and quaintest of quaint comedians, is appearing in Edward E. Kidder's new play "Peaceful Valley", to large and fashionable audiences. The scenes of the play are laid in the peaceful valleys of Vermont, where there is a summer resort, and the hero in the first act is acting as a waiter in order to pay his way through college. As Hosea Howe, Mr. Russell has a part that just fits his personality and affords him many opportunities to display his known ability. He possesses the rare accomplishment of calling forth tears and provoking laughter, and there are no dull moments while he is upon the stage. The play tells an interesting story of New England life, and is full of strong scenes and incidents. It is capitally acted by Mr. Russell and an excellent company, and is handsomely staged with entirely new scenery and accessories. Matinees are given every Wednesday and Saturday, and end in time for suburban residents to return to their homes for dinner.

A Plainfield Favorite Hurt.

Elsie Leslie, the young actress, who became famous as "Little Lord Fauntleroy" and who has many warm friends in this city, and her sister Dora, who appeared with her in "Prince and Pauper", had a narrow escape in a runaway accident at Lake St. Catharine, Vt., last Thursday. The young ladies were driving from Poultney to their summer home near the lake when their horse took fright and ran away. Fortunately, both of them were thrown out of the carriage, for the horse went over a high ledge into the lake, at the bottom of which he now lies with the carriage on top of him.

Miss Dora's arm was broken and Miss Elsie's was sprained and both were badly bruised. News of the accident was received here yesterday by private letter.

THE UNION COUNTY TICKET.

Harmony and Enthusiasm of the Convention in Elizabeth.

For Senator, James E. Martine, of Plainfield; for Sheriff, John S. Sauer, of Elizabeth; for Coroner, Edward B. Kelly, of Summit. This was the ticket placed in nomination by the Union County Democrats Thursday at one of the most enthusiastic and harmonious conventions ever held in the county.

The convention was called to order at 2:30 by Thomas B. Budd, Chairman of the County Executive Committee. There were two candidates for Temporary Chairman—Thomas F. Lane, of Summit, and Alderman John T. Brady, of Elizabeth. Mr. Lane won. Wm. McCloud, Elizabeth; Vincent L. Frazee, Plainfield, and Thomas F. Sheridan, Elizabeth, were made Secretaries.

Every ward and township named James E. Martine for Senator. He was nominated by acclamation. John S. Sauer and Charles H. Moore, of Elizabeth, and Noah Woodruff, of Union, were put in nomination for Sheriff. The first ballot resulted: Sauer, 100; Moore, 51; Woodruff, 10; blank, 7; scattering, 12. Mr. Sauer's nomination was made unanimous.

The struggle for Coroner lay between James Mitchel, of Elizabeth; Dr. McConnell, of Cranford, and Edward B. Kelly, of Summit. Mr. Mitchel received 75 votes on the first ballot, or within 11 of a nomination. He waved his claims in favor of Summit, as the northern part of the county has no Coroner. Kelly's nomination then was made unanimous.

A committee was appointed to bring Senator Marsh before the convention to address it. He could not be found, being out of town. James E. Martine, the Senatorial candidate, made a strong speech, in which he blamed the Republican party for the present business troubles and financial depression. He closed with an appeal for the candidate for Sheriff, and hoped every Democrat would stand by the whole ticket. Candidate Sauer made a brief speech.

Congressman Dunn showed the fallacy of the Republican argument that the present condition of affairs is due to the Democratic Administration.

The resolutions passed indorse President Cleveland's policy, call for the repeal of the Silver-Purchasing act, and commend the course of the two New Jersey Senators in Washington and of Congressman Dunn. They also indorse the Governor.

John S. Sauer is the Director of the Union County Board of Freeholders. Edward B. Kelly, selected for Coroner, is Chief of Police of Summit.

Tanis the Sand-Digger.

The central figure of the new novel, "Tanis, the Sand-Digger", by Amelie Rives, is another of those strange, high-strung and passionate females that the author is so fond of representing as heroines, and after a reader has followed Tanis through her love adventures, the verdict must be that this low-born and wretched "poor white", this long-limbed, handsome digger of ginseng root, is a creature of intense fascination and remarkable characteristics. Tanis is a big, fresh and lusty young savage of the Virginia mountains, with the figure of a goddess, which when we first meet her, is screened from the breezes and the gaze of man by a single garment. Her long hair sweeps about her like a veil, and she roams the woods in the wild and vigorous manner of the antelope. She is beloved by a young giant of her own class, a mammoth brute, possessing a splendid physical beauty, and who exercises an almost irresistible spell over her. Her battle against the passion and tyranny of this man is the motive of the story. She knows him to be fickle and heartless, and the one shining quality of her character is her virtue, which sustains her at all times, which teaches her to despise the character of men like him, and to demand from a lover deep respect and constancy as well as passion. The big brute that worships her is mentally and morally unable to comprehend this part of Tanis's nature, and we find them opposed to each other in a most strange and interesting battle. Sam, the reckless lover, is bound to gain full control of Tanis without going into any argument over the matter, while Tanis, although on fire with love for him, sees him in all his weakness and wickedness, and knows that if he gets her he will love her for a day and a night, and afterward loathe her. And it is only by a wretched scheme on the part of Sam that Tanis is driven into marrying him. She becomes a martyr to save the friends that have been kind to her, and at the end she bows to fate and yields herself up to Sam because she is powerless to fight him longer. The story is told in the sharp, aggressive and often dazzling style peculiar to Miss Rives. She describes the scenes in which her characters move with her customary poetic facility, and probably the most dramatic dialogue that she has ever written is that which passes between her hero and heroine in this book. A large element of the public will not accept Miss Rives as representative of that which is healthy and excellent in literature, but the number is small that will argue against her ability to attract and hold the attention by investing strong characters and putting them through an absorbing series of emotions and adventures. "Tanis, the Sand-Digger" will surely be regarded with interest by the reading public. Town Topics Publishing Company, 21 West 23d street, New York. Cloth, $1 50.

Those Fanwood Lights.

Much dissatisfaction is expressed among the residents of Fanwood with the electric-light service in the village. Three nights ago the town was in complete darkness, and the lights have been few and far between ever since. Last night again the main street was without lights. Complaint has been made to the company by those in authority in the village, but no beneficial results have been noticed from calling the attention of the company to the state of affairs. There can be nothing more annoying than the constant failure of the street lights, and Fanwood's residents are justly incensed.

Mr. Emery's Misfortune.

James Emery, of 905 West Front street, had a pair of full-blooded Alderney cows, valued at $300, stolen from his place at 5 yesterday afternoon. He traced them as being driven by an unknown man on the road to Pluckamin, and is following up the chase. He will reward liberally anyone giving positive information. His neighbor Mr. Murphy lost a cow by theft this summer.

The New Brunswick Fredonian, than which no newspaper is more stalwartly Republican, frankly admits that James E. Martine, the Union county Democratic candidate for Senator, is a stanch anti-race-track man.

With the Democratic candidates of Somerset county so firmly pledged against all vicious and immoral legislation, and especially against that legalizing race-track gambling, no good citizen of North Plainfield need feel any hesitancy about voting for Henry M. T. Beekman for Senator and George H. Cramer for Assembly. The Press takes pride in endorsing and championing such a ticket as worthy of the fullest support.

Great is the Jersey Central, and President Maxwell is its intellect. While others have cried hard times, that shrewd and enterprising official has been quietly getting control of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western, and it is now announced that the Central will provide the Lackawanna with its exceptional terminal facilities and make it a big trunk line to the West. Then may a branch be built uniting Plainfield and Morristown.

Republican organs can't find a thing to say against James E. Martine but that he did not make any pledges when nominated, and for that they upbraid him unmercifully. They forget the campaign when Republican John C. Rankin ran for Senator. At that time Mr. Rankin emphatically refused to pledge himself for or against any measure, and for his "noble manliness" the Republican papers lauded him to the skies.

However, James Martine is all right on the race-track question, which is the only one bothering the clamorous organs. Mr. Martine is ready to satisfy all inquirers whenever they choose to present the question to him, and he will meet it most positively and satisfactorily. He doesn't consider it necessary to go about proclaiming the virtues which are attested to by his personal record of a lifetime. If a man's life, open as a book, won't vouch for his integrity and moral rectitude, then all the professions and protestations in the world won't.

A PRESSING NEED.

A hard winter, with thousands out of work, means that men in their extremity will be driven to desperate deeds, and the crime of plundering the fortunate will vastly increase. That Plainfield is a city of wealth will not escape covetous eyes, and greedy fingers may pluck at the treasures of any home. The existing police force of Plainfield cannot cope with the emergencies of the day: how then can it handle those in prospect? The need of an increased staff of reliable officers is urgent, emphatic, immediate. Many portions of the city are already entirely unprotected; some populous streets go unvisited by policemen, day and night; each officer has altogether too much territory to cover. As conditions now exist, robberies may be and are committed with impunity, and the chance of detection and capture is small. The time has come when Plainfield must be more liberal in this matter of self-protection; she has been too long extravagant in other departments and too long niggardly in this. It is all very fine to have an elegant Fire Department Headquarters, a water-tower ladder truck that makes a pretty picture on parade, a model road-scraper for people to ask questions about, and a gang of men to cut down trees and keep street grades going up and down like the tides of the ocean: but isn't it just as necessary to protect the dining families from the stealthy second-story thief, and the slumbering families from midnight desperadoes? For what are the property-owners paying $2.40 on every $100 of assessed valuation, and $3 on every dog, if not that when they are engaged in the occupations and pleasures of their daily life they may feel secure from Coal-Train Pete and Ragged Dick and Weary Willy and the rest of the choice gang who find it so easy to appropriate money and jewelry? Goodness knows the taxes are high enough to guarantee such protection. If need be, the amount expended in felling shade trees and changing grades can be lessened without vexation to the residents whose property-fronts are thus left alone; a good many people never did understand the necessity of tipping streets first this way and then that just to accommodate the dictation and vagaries of a puzzling map, or of lopping off trees by wholesale so that sidewalks may be lowered. In some way funds must be spared to give the people the police-protection they demand and deserve. Besides more men on the force there should be an open and convenient headquarters with a sergeant always in charge ready to answer the personal or telephone calls of citizens, and there should be a system of signal boxes to be used by patrolmen in making their rounds. These and other improvements to perfect the efficiency of the force will doubtless come in time; the increase in the number of men should come without delay.

But if the need in Plainfield city is painful, the need in North Plainfield borough is pitiful. In that municipality one man is expected to cover the entire territory, night and day. No wonder a murderous burglar finds it easy to beat brutally without interference a woman in her own bed room! And North Plainfield cannot plead high taxes as an excuse against increased appropriation for police purposes. Her rate is only $1.44 on $100.

It will be to Plainfield's shame and to North Plainfield's disgrace if the police service be not speedily and adequately extended.

James E. Martine will be a most popular candidate. His life record in this community is open to the world, and from such an honest man of so honorable a career nothing but the best representation can be expect. He will conduct a clean campaign, and can be safely trusted to look after Union county's best interests in the Senate. He has repeatedly and emphatically assured The Press that he is the foe of gambling of every description, as pernicious to mankind at large and debauching to its devotees, so he's all right on the race-track question.

REPUBLICAN DEFECTION.

Each day brings additions to the ranks of those free-thinking Republicans who avow a determination to aid in the election of James E. Martine for Senator. To the host The Press is proud to add the name of Hezekiah Hand, ex-Postmaster of Scotch Plains, and who so long has been a leader in the public affairs of his township.

Mr. Hand visited The Press office today and said:

"I have all my life been a Republican. But I'm going to vote and work for Jim Martine, and I don't care who knows it."

FOR MARTINE AND VICTORY!

(From The Summit Record.)

The Democratic convention on Thursday presented to the voters of this county, a ticket that should awaken the zeal and arouse the enthusiasm of every honest Democrat in Union county and command the support of every good citizen who believes in the election to public office of men of character, courage and independence.

The name of the standard bearer of the Democracy in this contest, James E. Martine, is one that is known and respected in every part of New Jersey, where unwavering allegiance to the cause of the people and cheerful selfsacrifice when his aspirations conflicted with the ambitions of other Democrats, are regarded as honorable and commendable in a party leader.

His uniform refusal to bow to the yoke of political bossism or to take part in the frequent combinations designed to build up a machine that would register the will of self-seeking politicians, rather than reflect the views of the people, has hitherto prevented his election to public office.

Notwithstanding his frequent disappointments he has remained firm in the faith and loyal to the principles and candidates of the Democratic party both in adversity and prosperity. No candidate for public office has ever been nominated whose record is more free from the taint of personal and political corruption, and whose labor for the cause to which he is committed has been so little rewarded.

Mr. Martine will carry to the office to which he will be elected on November 7 a mental and moral equipment that will make him easily the peer of any of his associates in the State Senate. His ability and force of character will go far to revive the recollections of the days when the Senate of New Jersey was the abiding place of the best intellects in the Commonwealth, and his ability will aid in elevating the tone of that body to a level from which it has unfortunately descended in these politically degenerate days.

VOTE FOR WINANS.

This Excellent Master of Laws Should Be Made a Maker of Them.

John Herbert Winans, Democratic candidate for the Assembly in this district, was born in Rahway in 1868, and received his early education in the Third Ward school in that city. He afterwards read law in the office of the Hon. Abram Wakeman, ex-Surveyor of the Port of New York, and in the office of Isaac C. Kennedy in Asbury Park. Mr. Winans removed to Asbury Park and resided there for a number of years, commencing the practice of law at that place. He attended the law lectures at Columbia College Law School, being graduated therefrom in 1889 with the degree LL.B. For a year after his graduation from the law school, he occupied the position of law instructor in the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor, and that institution conferred on him the degree of LL.M. Mr. Winans was admitted to the bar of New Jersey in 1890, and afterward became a member of the bar of New York and Michigan, removing his office in 1891 to New York city, where he is at present practicing, with offices in the Union Trust Building, 80 Broadway. During his residence in Asbury Park, Mr. Winans engaged for a time in newspaper work, being for a time connected with the New York Times and Morning Journal.

He has been a resident of Rahway for some time, and has always been a consistent Democrat, having appeared on the stump in aid of his party during several recent campaigns. He is a church member, and an avowed opponent of race-tracks.

THE TOOL OF NO CLIQUE.

Senator Martine Would Labor for the Masses.

It is evident that the laboring men will make themselves heard in the election next month. That worthy standard bearer, the Hon. James E. Martine, candidate for Senator from this county, has already been communicated with on this important question. The following is his frank and manly reply. It proves to be eminently satisfactory to all the labor organizations in Union county, and for that matter in the State. The laborer is truly worthy of his hire, and, knowing this, they will vote for Martine and the straight Democratic ticket on election day. Let no man be seduced into the camp of the enemy under any kind of special pleading. Read this letter of Martine:

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Oct. 23, 1893.

Mr. Bert Agree:

MY DEAR SIR—Your kind note received. In response I would say that I have always been the friend of labor, and have repeatedly insisted that it was not only the right but the duty of laboring men to organize for their mutual protection, such organization not only advancing their pecuniary welfare but promoting the social and intellectual interests of its members. Great aggregation of wealth and the organization of capital are the menace of our time. To resist such a force organized labor is the only salvation of the Republic.

In the event of my election as Senator, I would ever be an earnest advocate of all honest measures to aid the toiling masses.

Very respectfully,

J. E. MARTINE.

Occasionally I have a bad cold or severe attack of rheumatism, indigestion or biliousness, but four or five doses of BRANDRETH'S PILLS always cure me. Whenever my children have been sick with scarlet fever, measles, sore stomach, dyspeptic [illegible] a few doses of BRANDRETH'S PILLS restored their health at once."

ON THE OTHER FOOT.

REPUBLICANS WERE PROUD OF MAYOR RANKIN'S STAND.

But Now that James E. Martine Adopts the Same Platform They Set up an [illegible] Howl.

The cry of the Republican organs against Senatorial candidate James E. Martine is that because he declined to tie his hands with pledges he is not a safe man to elect. The Press yesterday said that these organs seemed to forget the Rankin episode, and now it reproduces some of the Republicans' own argument of the Rankin campaign.

Mr. Rankin, it will be remembered, was running for Senator, just as Mr. Martine is now. And it was in response to several letters of inquiry regarding his position on the race-track question, that Mayor Rankin in a letter to the editor of the Elizabeth Journal, dated Oct. 24, expressed himself as follows:

Dear Sir—I am in receipt of several letters from clergymen in different parts of the county asking me for an expression of my views about race-track legislation. The active interest recently taken by the clergymen of the community in matters of public concern, and their efforts to promote good order and respect for law are sure to create a wholesome influence on the electors.

With regard to this matter, there seems to be a somewhat persistent effort on the part of my political adversaries to misrepresent and injure me in my candidacy.

The report that I have been identified with those favoring legislation legalizing gambling on the race tracks is utterly false. It comes from political enemies whose sole object in circulating the same is to obtain their own selfish end in the election of their candidates.

It is my settled conviction that no candidate for legislative office should, in advance, tie his hands by any pledges with respect to his action upon any particular measure. And however unfavorably impressed with any bill that may come up for his action, I think his duty is to listen to debate, to hear the bill read, as provided by the constitution, and then give his decision.

I have been eight times elected to public office in the city of Elizabeth, and I have yet to make the first pledge or promise to any individual as to what my official action would be. So in the present contest, I am absolutely without engagements, either expressed or implied, with any individual or corporation, as to what my action shall be with respect to the race courses or any other matter.

The only pledge I will make is that I will, on every measure, act conscientiously, without fear or favor, and will give my vote in the manner that will seem to me best calculated to promote the moral and material advancement of the people of the county.

Very respectfully,

JOHN C. RANKIN, JR.

All that is just about Mr. Martine's position today, and in The Central Times of Wednesday, Oct. 29, 1890, we find that stand enthusiastically endorsed as follows:

In another column the Times readers will find printed in full the letter of Mayor Rankin to the editor of the Elizabeth Journal, explaining his position regarding possible race-track legislation. With the properly dignified spirit, Mr. Rankin calls up his record as the only pledge necessary regarding his stand upon this subject. If his past life is not a pledge of faithfulness, of conscientiousness and an earnest determination to do what is right then no words can add any weight. Mr. Rankin's stand is a noble one. He can be trusted because he has never proved recreant to any trust. He is willing to stand by his record as the pledge of his future action.

And from The Times of the following week this editorial is quoted:

John H. Rankin can look back upon his conduct of the campaign with much satisfaction. The letter in which he declined to pledge his vote beforehand to particular legislation was a manly and forcible letter. He declined to have his hands tied. In spite of his defeat, his courage and manliness have won him friends and admirers.

What was good for Candidate Rankin ought to be good for Candidate Martine.

Jerseymen of Property, Ponder on This

(From The Elizabeth Herald.)

The Committee on Resolutions of the Republican Convention Monday declared "that for the past five years the vicious and criminal classes have been engaged in acquiring power and controlling legislation until citizenship in New Jersey has become a reproach and our State made infamous throughout Christendom".

Of course the natural inference of all this, assuming that all this is true, is that Democrats, the wretched Democrats, who grow in vice as the Republicans grow in virtue, are responsible for the conditions alleged to prevail by the latter. Why have not the Republicans done something to avert the deplorable state of affairs they affect to believe exists? Why do they at this late day, to the manifest injury of New Jersey, proclaim that "citizenship in New Jersey has become a reproach"? How do you like such a proceeding, men with houses and lands and businesses here? What think you of a body that declares that "our State has been made infamous throughout Christendom"?

It seems to us that the Committee on Resolutions labored with more zeal than judgment. High-sounding periods mean as much and the same as "the loud laugh that speaks the vacant mind". The statement that New Jersey has been made infamous throughout Christendom is simply absurd. Christendom has no geographical boundaries, but the impression prevails that it is quite a large place. Look out for flights of fancy when Republican Committees on Resolutions take up their little pens.

That Beautiful Children's Ballet.

It has often been said that he who thoroughly succeeds in pleasing little children, has surely the keynote to success. Nothing amuses the little tots better than to see children of their own size doing something clever, and in the children's quadrille there is displayed a quaintness that is exceedingly catchy. A production of "The Black Crook" without its children's ballet, would be like a wedding without a bride and groom. In the forthcoming presentation of this paragon of spectacles, in Music Hall Saturday night, the most beautiful effects are highly colored by the presence of the little folks. The ballets are highly entrancing, and the large number of coryphees employed, clad in the most beautiful of dazzling costumes, makes it a veritable mardi-gras transferred to the stage. The massive scenic effects are wonders of the artist's brush. The European specialties are worthy of especial note. The Brothers Rixford, in acrobatic feats, from the Circus Cisinelli, St. Petersburg, Russia, and the French Quadrille Dancers from the Folies Bergeres, Paris, are among the most prominent of foreign importations.

The Matter of Pledges.

(From The Elizabeth Herald.)

Honest men should not be required to pledge themselves and the pledges of dishonest men are worthless. Ask a man who can look back upon a life of honesty and honor to pledge himself to be honorable and honest in the future and he will spurn you as one who has offered him a gratuitous insult. Democrats in Union county do not require candidates to declare that they will be upright and conscientious.

The Republicans appear unable to trust one another. They want pledges! pledges! pledges! Not so the Democrats. They nominate men from whom pledges are unnecessary. They know their men when they place them before the people for the votes of the latter. It seems to us that every Republican looks upon every other Republican as a possible rogue. Under such conditions no honest, honorable man can, with self-respect, aspire to a nomination from that party.

Allies of the Corporations.

(From The [illegible])

With both Houses Democratic this winter and his excellency Gov. George T. Werts at the helm of State, good results we the people will follow. Don't let any Democrat contribute to an [illegible] the hands of Gov. Werts. The Republicans are very anxious to get control of the Legislature in order that they may [illegible] and corporation tax law from the statute books, and so relieve the rich corporations from paying a just share of the taxes.

NO REFLECTION ON THE JURORS.

JUDGE VANSYCKEL DID NOT MEAN AN IMPUTATION.

He Felt that the Grand Inquest Had Not Been Acquainted With All the Evidence, and that is Why He Sent Them Back—Some of the Jurymen Blamed, for They Made as Strong a Presentment as Their Knowledge of the Facts Would Warrant.

(From The Press, of October 25.)

A full understanding of the facts concerning the Grand Jury presentment against the Linden Township Committee, as briefly reported in The Press of yesterday, shows that when Judge Vansyckel sent the jury back for further consideration he had no intent or desire to cast any reflection whatever on them.

The presentment was as follows:

The Grand Inquest of the State of New Jersey, in and for the county of Union, for the October term, 1893, most respectfully present that they have diligently, conscientiously, and upon their oaths, inquired into and fully investigated the charges referred by His Honor Bennet Vansyckel upon the opening day of this term concerning the action of the Township Committee of Linden township in granting a license to maintain and operate a race-track in the said township. We believe that every constituent is entitled to the unbiased judgment of representatives [illegible] ever capacity they may hold, strictly upon the merits or demerits of the matters coming before them in their official capacity for action, and while we believe that public morals can only be maintained and advanced by holding representatives of the people, whose servants they are, to a strict accountability for their acts, yet in the particular case under consideration, the grand inquest have been unable to find or attach any criminal intent to have existed in minds of any of the committee who voted for said license, nor do we find that either personally or collectively the said committee profited in any way by the transaction. We find, however, that the granting of the license is in direct opposition to the expressed wishes of the majority of the people of Linden township as expressed by them at the town meeting when the committeemen were elected, and that, under the circumstances, the granting of the license has called forth public indignation.

Fully conscious of the manifold evils and influences that are surrounding our legislators and officials to sway their judgment, and appreciating the honest motive and purity of purpose of his honor, Judge Vansyckel, in bringing this matter to the notice of the Grand Inquest, we do herewith unanimously present the members of the Linden Township Committee who voted in favor of the granting of the said license as having pursued a course in dealing with a public question that is liable to much abuse, fraught with the most dangerous consequences and cannot be too severely condemned. We unanimously present the said members of the said committee for granting said license without consulting with their constituents and because without proper publicity they voted contrary to the views of the majority of the voters of Linden township as expressed at the polls when these said committeemen were elected. Purity of motive and honest and unbiased expression of the voters through the ballot can alone keep our community safe, hence it particularly becomes the duty of all who may be entrusted with the people's welfare in the official capacity, to guard carefully their acts and so keep aloof from any and all influences, however remote, that may in any way influence their actions in opposition to their convictions.

As soon as the reading of the presentments ceased, Judge Vansyckel turned to the Grand Jurors, and in an earnest tone addressed them.

GENTLEMEN—I called your attention at the beginning of the term, as you have stated in your presentment to a charge of bribery against the Committee of Linden township. The law on the subject it is your duty to accept as given by the court. No indictment has been returned by you. The court is creditably informed that there are sufficient facts that can be adduced on which to find a bill, and the presumption is that the evidence produced before you was not satisfactory, to your judgment, to justify you in presenting the offenders for trial before the court.

If it has reached that crisis in the administration of the law in this county that crime cannot be punished, the public should know it, and shall know who have been derelict in duty.

I am resolved that no censure shall justly attach to me, and I feel it to be due to the public, and to each one of you, to give you full opportunity to show that you have discharged your duty.

You may retire for the further consideration of this case.

The Court will exercise its utmost power to lay before you evidence which cannot be doubted.

Foreman Martine stepped several feet in advance of the line of jurors and said:

May it please your Honor, to compel the jurors to go back for further deliberation would be a grievous reflection on this Grand Inquest. I feel it my duty to defend the course of the body of my fellow citizens——

Judge Vansyckel rapped with his gavel, and Mr. Martine ceased talking.

Judge Vansyckel then said:

The Court will not hear you. It is no reflection on the Grand Jury, and the Court has been careful not to cast a reflection. It is assumed, on the information the Court had, that you did not have the satisfactory evidence before you, otherwise you would have found indictments. It is for your defense that you should return, and the Court will do its utmost to present to you all the evidence possible for you to discharge the public duty imposed on you. You will retire, gentlemen.

The jurors passed back to their rooms, and a short time afterwards adjourned for the day.

On Friday the jurors will expect the Court to produce the additional evidence, if it has any to submit.

Judge Van Syckel may be personally besought before then to tell where he got the information alluded to in his remarks.

Want to Send Back the Same Old Member

(From The Flemington Democrat.)

In Atlantic county, the other day, the Republican convention met and renominated the member who sat last winter in the Assembly. This representative made himself notorious as one of the Republicans who voted for the race-track bills in the House, and his renomination at this time proves what we have maintained from the start, that the Republicans are only playing "possum" in their pretended opposition to race-track and legalized gambling. It is a Republican majority in the Legislature for which they are striving—not pure and clean legislation.

William Mushey, of Terrill road, has been missing fowls from his hennery of late, but they were taken one by one. A few mornings ago he got up to find that fifty of his finest spring chickens had been stolen from two coops during the night. The fowls were about half grown, and were being fattened for market.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

If you have not engaged your work, I should be pleased to do it for you.

I buy only first-class Marble and Granite and do not sell unless at prices that will enable me to put up the work with credit to myself and justice to the parties purchasing.

I employ no agents and therefore am enabled to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customer, of the commission generally paid to agents.

I am under a very small expense in running my shop, myself and my son doing the larger portion of the work, and we personally attend to the setting of all work, and look upon business in this light, that Good Work and Good Material, at Fair Prices, is a standing advertisement for my business, which will tend to build up trade, and I feel safe to warrant that no dealer can sell you the same work and same stock any cheaper than I can.

Hoping to be favored with your patronage, I am yours respectfully,

—The story that has been current in one of the daily papers in town that the Scott Press Works were about to "lay off" a number of men this coming week is denied. Between 40 and 50 men are working on half time at present and have been for some time. No change is contemplated in the number of men employed.

A Way They Have in the Royal A.

The regular semi-monthly meeting of the Plainfield Council, Royal Arcanum, was held in the council rooms in the Coward building last Monday evening. Every chair in the room had an occupant when the Regent of the Council rapped for order at exactly 8:10. Something strange, evidently, and potent was on the tapis, judging by the sign of repressed excitement which each man seemed to be charged with as the regular order of business was hastily gone through with. Furtive glances were cast at the orator, that "Mighty man of eloquence", from time to time, in the hope of securing some indication of what was coming next from the Sphinx like, mobile countenance of that officer of the Council. Nothing could be gleaned, however, from that that source, though lines of hard, cruel care were seen to ruthlessly corrugate that erstwhile placid brow as the sound of the Regent's gavel gave warning that the regular meeting had been brought to an end. The Royal Arcanum, especially Plainfield Council, do not like to deal in too much mystery though they revel in surprises of a substantial character, and in the present instance no one who had the good fortune to attend were kept long in suspense, for the expected had happened in the form of an entertainment, gotten up by the Council for the benefit of its members and friends. After refreshments were served and cigars lighted, a most enjoyable programme was served to an appreciative audience and jollity and sociability duly reigned until a late hour. An address of welcome by Regent Fred. Greene to visiting brothers was followed by a harmonious and meritorious rendering of the popular "Washington Post March" by an orchestra composed of the following well-known Plainfield artists, Messrs. M. A. Korff, J. Sattois, J. Moore, and F. Carpenter. In the course of the evening among several numbers, executed in a manner that caused gratifying approval and continued applause, was the High School Cadets Symposia Waltz, Serenata Waltz, Plantation Echoes and Martha Washington Gavotte.

Mr. H. B. Ely was called on for a few remarks and kept his hearers in convulsions of laughter by his bright sallies of wit and mirth-provoking parody on the "Lay of the Last Minstrel. J. R. Phillips gave several character songs that were rendered with expression and much feeling, and captured his audience with the finesse and refinement of his impersonations. Remarks were indulged in by Past Regent Rand, Messrs. Rea and Leggett, that were lively and happy in effect; and a topical song by brother T. H. Bartindale depicting the adventures and vicissitudes of a fisherman in hard luck, brought to a successful termination that which promises to be the beginning of a series of entertainments the Plainfield Council propose extending to their members and friends during the winter months.

Pastor Warnick Going Away.

Pastor F. G. Warnick will close his labors with the Mt. Olive Baptist church, Nov. 20. He will preach his farewell sermon Sunday evening, Nov. 19, and a farewell reception will be given Thursday, Nov. 23.

In his church paper, The Mystic Mirror, Mr. Warnick says:

> The closing days bring sadness and it is painful to say farewell.
>
> God has blessed us, in our pastorate of about three years. We now leave the work to other hands.

To All King's Daughters.

Mr. and Mrs. D. Craig have been entertained for several days by Mr. and Mrs. L. M. French of Craig place.

The oldest child of Mr. and Mrs. Theo. VanNess is very ill with diphtheria at their home on West Front street.

Mr. and Mrs. August Trust, who are spending their honeymoon at the World's Fair, are stopping at the Omaha House.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Winckler, of Asbury Park, are visiting Mr. Winckler's parents, 22 Park place, North Plainfield.

Mrs. Elmore D. Moffett is home from a three-weeks visit to the home of her daughter, Mrs. Wm. H. Tams, Trenton.

C. William Kramer, of Vine street, North Plainfield, returned to his home after spending ten days at the World's Fair.

Miss Lulu Piker of Arlington, formerly of Plainfield, has been spending a few days with her parents on West Front street.

Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Worth returned to their home on Park place, North Plainfield, after a two weeks stay at the World's Fair.

The Rev. John W. Richardson will lecture on "Lights and Shadows of Ministerial Life", in the Park Avenue Baptist church next Tuesday night.

Mrs. J. S. King and son Walter S. Gibson, of West Second street, have gone to Boston for about two weeks, to visit among the relatives of their native place.

Mrs. Major Ferry, who with her husband organized Salvation Army work in Denmark, will be one of the speakers in the First Baptist church next Monday evening.

The Plainfield Building Loan Association has appointed B. Frank Coriell secretary pro tem, in place of Nathan Harper, deceased. Mr. Coriell would make a first-rate permanent secretary.

Joseph Thompson, for many years Judge on the Somerset bench, died Oct. 23, in his eighty-fifth year. The funeral will be in the Readington Reformed church, Friday, Oct. 27. Carriages will meet Jersey Central trains at 10:21 a. m.

H. Clifford VanEmburgh paid a flying visit to Plainfield to-day on his way back to Poughkeepsie from Chicago. He looks as "fine as silk". He left this afternoon for Poughkeepsie, where he goes to take charge of a contract under F. A. Dunham.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Murphy, of Waycross, Ga., are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Whitlock of Watchung avenue, on their return from the World's Fair. Mrs. Murphy is a sister to Mrs. Whitlock, and Mr. Murphy was at one time a resident of Plainfield and a large contractor here.

Mr. and Mrs. William C. Startup, who have been boarding all summer with Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong of Duer street, have become so attached to Plainfield as a place of residence that they have decided to make it their home. They have rented a house on Westervelt avenue, and will begin housekeeping Nov. 1.

The funeral of Mary A. Randolph, of Randolphville, yesterday, was very large, and required most of the available carriages of Plainfield and vicinity. The services were very pretty, and the floral tributes were beautiful. Miss A. R. Lincoln of this city supplied most of the flowers, of which there was a tremendous quantity, and attended to all the draping and arranging. The interment was in Plainfield.

Mrs. P. M. French and Miss French, of Somerset street, North Plainfield, gave a delightful tea at their home yesterday afternoon in honor of Mrs. William Drummond Craig, of Texas. The house was crowded by the many friends of Mrs. French and of Mr. Craig, who were anxious to meet his charming bride. Many pretty maidens presided in the dining room, which was gay with pretty gowns and flowers. Mr. and Mrs. Craig will return to Texas the latter part of next week.

A Rich and Costly Production.

A spectacular production of great magnificence and gigantic proportions, will be the attraction in Music Hall Saturday night, when the famous "Black Crook" company will visit this city. Replete with all the many characteristics of the successful twelve-months run of the play, at the Academy of Music, New York, the engagement promises in every way to be a red-letter event of the theatrical season. The performance will introduce many clever entertainers from the metropolis, the gorgeous ballets calling for the services of three premiere danseuses of European reputation, and an army of beautiful coryphees. Striking features of the production will be the grand marches and tableaux, in which a company of tall and stately Amazons, arrayed cap-a-pie in glittering silver armor, are attended by the entire company, in superb costumes of the richest and costliest fabrics.

High-class specialties will be presented by artists of international reputation, among these being the Rixford Brothers, from the Circus Ciniselli, St. Petersburg, and the famous quartette of French Quadrille Dancers, from the Paris Folies Bergere. The visit of "The Black Crook" to this city will, in all likelihood, result in an overflowing audience, as it is seldom that an opportunity is afforded for seeing so magnificent a production.

THE OLD BATTLE-FLAGS.

Winfield Scott Post Petitions the Jersey Legislature.

Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., met in regular session Wednesday, and besides the regular routine of business, the Post accepted an invitation to pay a fraternal visit to Berry Post, No. 27, of Rahway, tomorrow evening, and passed the following resolutions:

> To the Honorable the Legislature of the State of New Jersey.
>
> Gentlemen:—At the regular encampment of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, Department of New Jersey, the following preamble and resolutions were adopted by a unanimous rising vote:
>
> Whereas, The welcome news has reached this Post that an organized effort is to be made to the end that the battle-flags of the various New Jersey organizations may be prominently and permanently placed in the State House at the Capitol of the State in the city of Trenton; and
>
> Whereas, Further information reaching us that Post Commander R. A. Donnelly and staff have visited the State House, and decided the rotunda of said building as the most suitable position for placing the same, Therefore be it
>
> Resolved, That the Honorable the Legislature of the State of New Jersey be most respectfully petitioned to cause said flags to be placed in the rotunda of the State House, under glass, hermetically sealed, colors unfurled with the numbers of the organization to which they belonged prominently placed upon them. And for the consummation your petitioners will ever pray.
>
> N. C. Dobbins, Commander.
> W. R. Alpaugh, Adjutant.

The set of resolutions were framed by Geo. W. Moore, and he was given a vote of thanks by the Post for his efficiency in response to orders from the Department Commander.

COUNSELOR REED'S NEW BROTHER-IN-LAW.

Ex-Congressman Clark's Daughter Becomes the Wife of Mr. Mack.

(Special to The Press.)

Somerville, Oct. 25.—At high noon today the marriage of Madeline, youngest daughter of the Hon. Alvah A. Clark, to Alexander Wolfgang Mack, the eldest son of Adolph Mack, was celebrated at the beautiful home of the bride's father with a great deal of ceremony and pomp. The ceremony was performed by Supreme Court Justice William J. Magie. The bridal pair were married under a bower of palms, ferns and roses in the large drawing-room of the mansion. The bride wore a superb gown of white satin trimmed with pearls and duchess point lace, with veil and orange blossoms. The maid of honor, little Madeline Reed, of North Plainfield, wore a gown of white silk and carried a bouquet of marguerites. The best man was Lewis C. Mack, and the ushers George L. Loomis, Eugene E. Clark, John B. Parmelee and Bogart T. Conkling. Sherry of New York, served a wedding breakfast immediately following the ceremony. The wedding was very private, none but the immediate families being invited. The happy pair were the recipients of numerous costly gifts, including a house and lot, the house full furnished, a baby grand piano, beautiful gold and silver tableware, and cut-glass, besides a large block of stock.

THEY WILL NOT FUSE.

Crescent Wheelmen Decline to Join the Board of Trade.

At a meeting of the Crescent Wheelmen Monday the much discussed question of whether that body should combine interests with the Board of Trade, was decided. After the pros and cons of the situation had been discussed it was decided that it was not feasible to fuse the two organizations. The reason for the proposed combination of the two clubs was given some time ago and was substantially as follows.

When the Crescent League went by the board, the solid members, those who had stood by the league in its last extremity and only left when it was absolutely necessary, formed themselves into the Crescent Wheelmen. Many of these men were also Board of Trade members and consolidation of interests seemed natural especially as the Wheelmen had been so identified with the present Board of Trade club-house. But when the matter came to be discussed, and ways and means considered, it was shown that the present interests of the two clubs were so different that fusion was impracticable, so the wheelmen will keep to themselves in the future.

Strayed But Secured.

Miss Boutcher's cow strayed out of bounds at The Homestead, Fanwood, Sunday morning, and tramped around the lawns of her neighbors.

Mr. Fancher lassoed the animal just as she was taking a header down into the railroad cut ahead of a B. and O. flier.

By means of a rope furnished by D. B. Darke the animal was secured and afterward sustained by Hans Lambertson until released by an order from the justice of the peace.

From the free and easy manner in which the animal performed it was suspected to belong to Col. Hamlin, but Miss Boutcher's man of the dairy fully identified the bovine.

Congregational Juniors.

The pastor of the Congregational church last week organized his class of boys and girls into a Junior Society of Christian Endeavor. Following were elected officers:

President—Nellie Rockfellow.
Vice-president—Clara VanFleet.
Secretary—May Parmele.
Treasurer—Harold Nomer.
Prayer meeting Committee—Emma LaBoyteaux.
Lookout Committee—Lulu Fuller.
Music Committee—Clarence Brokaw.
Sunday-school Committee—Edwin Wiseman.
Birthday Committee—Herbert Rockfellow.
Scrapbook Committee—Amy Emmons.
Social Committee—Bessie Martin.
The pastor will act as Superintendent, and Miss Nellie Winckler as Assistant Superintendent.

Much interest is manifested by the young people, and a flourishing society is assured. The next meeting will be held tomorrow afternoon at 3:45.

Voorhees and Kyte.

The Union County Republican Convention, held in Elizabeth Monday, nominated Foster M. Voorhees of that city for State Senator, George W. Kyte of Fanwood for Sheriff, and Dr. Holmes of Rahway for Coroner.

The Convention was presided over by Mayor Alexander Gilbert of Plainfield. John Ulrich of Plainfield, was temporary secretary.

Candidate Kyte made a short speech in which he gracefully praised his Democratic opponent, Mr. Sauer, as a young man of integrity and ability. Mr. Kyte was heartily applauded.

For Assembly J. Herbert Wimans.

The Democratic Convention of the Third Assembly district assembled Monday afternoon in Rahway and nominated J. Herbert Wimans. He received Plainfield's solid vote. The candidate is thirty-five years old, a church worker and a member of the Anti-Race-Track League. Mr. Wimans has been for years a resident of Asbury Park. He lately moved to Rahway, his former home. He is a successful New York and New Jersey lawyer, and a credit to his ticket.

MR. BROCK IS PRESIDENT.

And He Holds 10,000 Shares of Stock.

William R. Brock, of 15 Mountain avenue, reports that the statement made Monday on information from the County Clerk's office, concerning the Brock Veneered Lumber Company, is incomplete. He says he has been working on this scheme for 10 years, and adds:

The Brock Veneered Lumber Company was organized in Plainfield last Saturday under the laws of the State of New Jersey with a capital of $250,000 or 25,000 shares of stock of $10 each. Stock is full paid and unassessable. The company's affairs will be managed by a board of nine directors. One of them is William R. Brock, of Plainfield, who is the inventor of veneered lumber. The other eight directors is composed of a syndicate of New York and Brooklyn capitalists, who control between them 15,000 shares of the stock, Mr. Brock controlling the balance of 10,000 shares of the stock, or $100,000.

The syndicate paid into the treasury of the company a large sum of money to establish plants for the manufacture and introduction of veneered lumber and for the organization of subsidiary companies in the United States and foreign countries. The officers of the company are as follows:

President—William R. Brock, of Plainfield.
Vice-president—Henry C. Smith, of Brooklyn.
Secretary—W. C. Tepelhoff, of Brooklyn.
Treasurer—Wm. H. Robinson, of Brooklyn.
General Manager—William H. Miller, of Brooklyn.
Manager of Sales Department—Olin B. Pendleton, of Brooklyn.

BOWLING GREEN CONTEST.

The Solid Silver Candelabra Won by Robert Pettit.

The final bowling green games of the season were played on Christian Schepflin's lawn at Dunellen, Saturday. The contest was for a beautiful solid silver candelabra, offered by the club. Twelve members were entered and so each one had to play eleven games, of eleven points each.

The playing was started at two o'clock and was finished by lantern light in the evening. The fortunate winner was Robert Pettit, whose score was 10 out of 11 games. Fred J. Richter won 9, H. B. Willis won 8 and Peter W. Fick, W. S. Willis, Alfred Evans and Dr. W. E. Linstedt each won 7. The other players, whose scores were less and not more than seven, were Christian Schepflin, Charles Russell, H. B. Haffner, Ed. Christian and Prof. Ryan.

The club was generously entertained by Mrs. Schepflin. The game closes a remarkably successful season.

TO MAKE VENEER HERE.

Only $10 Stock for Mr. Brock, But the Use of His Name Will Bring Him Fame.

A big lumber firm filed articles of incorporation in Elizabeth Saturday. It is to be known as the Brock Veneered Lumber Company, although William Brock, of Plainfield, after whom it is called, owns only one share of stock, or $10 worth. The company is composed of Brooklyn capitalists and will begin business with $250,000. It will have branches in Newark, Jersey City, Paterson, Hoboken and Plainfield. The plant is to be located in Plainfield. The stockholders and incorporators are Wm. H. Robinson, Olen B. Pendleton, Wm. H. Miller, Harry C. Sweet, all of whom control 4,000 shares, and William C. Logethoff, who controls 6,000 shares.

Yes, Indeed; Well Done.

(From The Somerville Unionist.)

There came to our neighborhood a few years since a quiet gentleman of large means, who purchased a farm near by and built upon and improved it and made it a delightful retreat. He loved a fine horse and indulged his fancy, buying and breeding fine stock until his stud became quite noted. Three years since, when there was a considerable difference among Democrats as to who should be named as their standard bearer for Senator, the name of William J. Keys was brought forward and he was triumphantly elected. Some questioned the wisdom of the choice as Mr. Keys was not well known. He was not an orator but only a plain man of the people, but he was faithful to his duty. He was always at his post during the session of the Legislature. He did not vote for the coal combine. He voted against the race-track bills of last winter. The people had come to like his quiet manner and trusted his good sense. He has now laid aside politics and becomes one of the people, and as the representative of the people, The Democrat says well done faithful servant.

Floral Bloom in the Borough.

The grounds surrounding the home of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Pangborn, 57 Chatham street, North Plainfield, are an attractive sight just now to lovers of blooming chrysanthemums. Thirty-seven varieties are to be seen, many of them of rare and exquisite shades and tints. Mr. and Mrs. Pangborn are always glad to show them to visitors and to give the names of the different varieties. The blossoms will reach their height this week.

MID JEST AND SONG

AND WREATHS OF SMOKE, MAN'S HEAD AGAINST THE CHAIR IS CROSS.

The Bicycle Smoker Applauds and Sat, and So Did Pownall and Burdett.

The attractive house of the Plainfield Bicycle Club was thronged Saturday night with lovers of the soothing weed and admirers of the manly art. The programme offered the 100 guests of the club was long and varied, and consisted of songs by the Columbia Quartette of Elizabeth, stories by James S. Burdett and Alfred E. Pownall, and an exciting sparring match.

This last number, which was billed as "a sparring match of six rounds between two descendants of Ham", though spirited and amusing, was stopped at the fifth round on account of an accidental collision between the solid head of one of the participants and the equally solid rung of a chair. Save for this trifling disappointment, which was caused by the boxer slipping on the hard wood floor, the programme was carried out with the greatest success to the satisfaction of all.

The quartette, which was composed of Clarence A. Gree, Spencer P. Smith, Arthur T. Pendleton and Thomas A. Dee, was particularly pleasing, and just as neither Mr. Burdett nor Editor Pownall could have been spared from the programme. A cheerful wood fire burned in the huge fireplace of the gymnasium where the entertainment was given, and the men sat about in comfortable positions enjoying their cigars and taking their fill of mirth, music and jollity.

The solos sung by Mr. Gree proved one of the pleasantest features of the programme.

It is sufficient to say that everyone had a good time and was "glad he come". The club has arranged for another smoker to be given Nov. 11, and has secured some fine talent for the occasion.

A CHILDREN'S FAIR.

About $50 Raised for the German Lutheran Church.

The home of Mrs. Hugo Weigmann on East Front street was the scene of much gaiety Saturday afternoon and evening, the occasion being a children's fair for the benefit of the new German Lutheran church, corner of Grove street and Mercer avenue, North Plainfield.

The fair was arranged by four little girls, Mamie Mohl, Annie Weigmann, Pauline Smith and Lena Myers, and they had fitted up one of the largest rooms in the house with decorations, booths, etc., which presented a very pleasing appearance.

A candy booth had been fitted up on one side of the room where one could get all kinds of sweets. Miss Lillie Weigmann was in charge and was kept very busy in disposing of her goods to the large crowd which filled the room.

On the opposite side was the fancy table, presided over by Katie Ratterlin and Lena Weber, where articles of almost every description were offered for sale, some of them being the handiwork of the young misses on the committee.

The fair was well patronized by the children and parents, who were all anxious to have it a success, and the result was that about $50 was netted for the church. The little girls deserve much credit for their efforts in behalf of the church.

PLEASURE DRIVERS SPILLED.

Carriage Broken, Occupants Bruised—Ex-Mayor Rockfellow a Good Samaritan.

A runaway accident occurred Sunday on Park avenue that was fortunately productive of only a broken carriage and a few bruises for the passengers. George H. Renaud of Westfield, with his wife and sister and two children, was taking a drive. As they were going down Park avenue, a fence paling that was lying in the road was thrown by one of the wheels into the fifth wheel of the rig. Its sharp end stuck out so that the horse struck it with his hind leg every time he took a step. This frightened the animal, and he ran. He turned into Prospect avenue, and collided with a tree, throwing out the occupants of the carriage. The horse continued down the street with the shafts and front wheels of the rig. Geo. W. Rockfellow, in front of whose house the accident occurred, was on the scene immediately, and took the victims into his house. He sent for Dr. Endicott, who pronounced the Renauds unhurt save for a few severe bruises and considerable nervous shock. In the course of half an hour Mr. Renaud and family were able to drive home in a hack. Some one caught the runaway before it had gone far, and the horse was driven home.

She was formerly in charge of slum work in Boston and Philadelphia. She will appear in her slum dress.

Church Music in Netherwood.

The new vocalion in the Church of Our Saviour, Netherwood, is giving great satisfaction, and a noticeable improvement has taken place in the musical part of the service since it was put in place a little over a week ago.

It will be interesting to many young persons who contemplate going to housekeeping as well as to older folks, who may want to refurnish, to know that their homes can now be fitted up with all that is required for comfort or for luxury at less cost than the goods were manufactured for three months ago.

During the dull season just gone by, any retail furniture dealer with plenty of money in his pocket could purchase goods for the fall trade at half their actual value and might thereby secure endless bargains for his customers from the needy manufacturers. John Mullins & Co., 218 and 220 Market street, Newark, having more money than the demands of ordinary business or the late financial panic would affect, took advantage of the depression existing among the manufacturing trades and laid in the largest stock of furniture and carpets that has ever been seen in Newark.

The low prices at which some of these goods are now offered and the easy terms of payment required of installment customers, induce thousands to take advantage of a chance to dress their homes. [illegible] The richness and beauty of the higher class of goods handled by this firm is proved by their winning all the first premium silver medals offered at the State Fair for the past [illegible] years.

A call at their establishment and a close inspection of the styles and superior quality of the goods displayed there will be a source of benefit and instruction to would-be purchasers.

JACK-O'-LANTERNS GRINNED.

Autumnal Products Made Gay the Trinity Chapel Sociable.

The Harvest Home entertainment, given in Trinity chapel Friday night under the auspices of the Epworth League, was a great success. Invitations were extended to members of the League from the Grace M. E. church, Monroe Avenue chapel and Dunellen M. E. church.

The programme of the entertainment was long and varied, and opened with a series of tableaux representing Jean Ingelow's "Seven Ages". A number of clever charades were done, including "The Lay of the Last Minstrel" and the words "Metaphor" and "Conundrum". These were acted out with much spirit, and were greatly appreciated by the audience. One of the best numbers was "Lord Ullin's Daughter", which was read by President Joy of the League. The embarkation of the daughter and lover on the lake, which was composed of a large sheet violently agitated by "waves" placed about its edge, was productive of much mirth. The storm was realistic in the extreme, the thunder and lightning being produced by a sheet of tin and an electric light. The decorations of the chapel were appropriate to the season. A large panel of autumn branches was back of the platform, and pumpkin Jack-'o-lanterns, corn and wheat sheaves abounded. After the programme, the guests indulged in popcorn and apples. Everyone declared that the affair was a great success.

BROKE THE RECORD.

A. G. Vail Makes the Fastest Time Ever Driven On the Plainfield Track.

A race was run Saturday at the Gentlemen's Driving Park, between A. G. Vail's two fast pacers, Bud Onward and Dorcas. The first mile was won by Bud Onward in 2:26, driven by A. G. Vail. Dorcas was driven by G. G. Brower. The second mile also was won by Bud Onward in 2:26. Mr. Vail distinguished himself by driving the fastest mile ever made on this track. He also has the track mark for a road wagon made by Betsy Rabbet in 2:36½, about two years ago.

Nathan Robbins showed a speedy pair of Lambert colts.

Peter G. Osborne drove a good two-year-old filly, owned by Philip Jenner of New Market, some fast quarters.

Robert Fairbairne also showed a nice two-year-old.

Mr. Hayes had his fast horse Andy, and John Chandler his black colt Altus.

G. G. Brower showed a handsome, speedy young stallion, owned by M. Quinn, and also his fast young brood mare Vanity.

Next Saturday there will be regular match races.

The Clergy Saw It in the City.

Saturday afternoon, Sam M. Dawson, agent of "The Black Crook" was quietly strolling down the street, when a leading citizen approached him and asked if ladies could attend his show. Mr. Dawson said that to his mind ballet dancing was an art, and the many terpsichorean movements executed by the nimble-limbed girls was a beautiful sight to feast the eyes. When a gentleman suggested that ballet dancing was improper, Mr. Dawson quietly said "Honi soit qui mal y pense". "Do you not know"—continued Mr. Dawson—"that schools for ballet dancing are subsidized in nearly all European countries by their several governments? Another thing, does a person ever ask is 'Camille' fit for a lady to see? and yet it is a story depicting the life of a courtesan. So is 'Article 47', and I might mention others. 'The Black Crook' is a legendary romance, and the author (the late Charles Barras) was a refined gentleman of a retiring disposition, whose sensibilities would have been rudely shocked had he heard a person class his work as improper. He intended that the ballets should represent mortals. We all know that the queen of the fairies, Stalacta, rewarded the good and punished the wicked; how she at all times baffled the trickery of Hertzog (The Black Crook). It teaches us a beautiful lesson, and I fail to see how it can be placed in any other class except what is claimed for it, a high-class legendary romance of real dramatic worth, embellished with sumptuous scenery, and bewitchingly lovely costumes. Many clergymen attended the performance in the Academy of Music, New York city."

A Friend of the Workingmen.

(From The New Brunswick Daily Times.)

The Union county Democratic Convention which met in Elizabeth on Thursday, was in full accord with all other Democratic county conventions held in the several counties of this State, enthusiastic and harmonious, the nominee for State Senator, James E. Martine, receiving every vote in the several wards and townships on the first ballot. Mr. Martine is a farmer, and resides near Plainfield. He is a Democrat from conviction, and, being a laboring man himself, will in the future, as in the past, always be found laboring for the interests and advancement of the industrial people. In a word, if the people of Union county want a good, faithful, honest, intelligent representative, Mr. Martine is just the man they should elect, and we have no doubt they will. The nomination of Director John S. Sauer for Sheriff was also made with great unanimity, and the convention adjourned just wild with enthusiasm for the whole Democratic ticket. With the same zeal and unanimity at the polls, Union county will roll up her usual large Democratic majority.

John S. Thatcher Improving.

Mrs. Bateman Thatcher, of 122 East Fourth street, who returned a few days ago from Chicago, reports that her nephew, John S. Thatcher, is doing nicely. John was injured Oct. 14 by a deadly Chicago horse car. He was on his way home, and facing himself on the wrong car he jumped. He landed in front of a horse car, and had an ankle crushed, besides sustaining other bodily injuries. He was taken to the home of his brother Elmer, where he now is. John was for years with E. W. THIS BURGLAR GOT NOTHING.

YOUNG MR. SIMMONDS COMES HOME JUST IN TIME.

He Proves the Value of Staying Out Late, and Routs a Thief from His Father's Dining Room—The Housebreaking Was in the Unprotected Neighborhood.

Some time after 12 yesterday morning, a burglar entered the handsome residence of Herman Simmonds, police inspector, at the corner of Watchung avenue and Ninth street. The entrance was effected through a window on the ground floor, and exit was made through the back door.

A son of Mr. Simmonds arrived home on the 12:32 midnight train, and, entering the house, discovered a man in the dining room. Thinking he was his brother, he called to him, but received no response, and before assistance could be rendered the stranger had fled. The entire household was aroused, and a search was made for the intruder, but he had gone. Policeman Frederickson and Glass were hastily summoned by telephone from Dr. Murray's residence, but when they arrived on the scene nothing unusual was found except a thoroughly alarmed household. At an early hour this morning Captain Grant was notified, and he will investigate the case. Little or nothing of value was missing.

A PLAINFIELD PASTOR'S LIFE.

The Rev. J. W. Richardson Lectures Interestingly.

The Park Avenue Baptist church was well filled last night by an audience whose interest was held for over an hour by the Rev. John W. Richardson, who lectured on the "Lights and Shadows of Ministerial Life". The lecture was for the benefit of the Christian Endeavor Society, and a neat sum was netted to swell its funds. Mr. Richardson outlined the ministerial life from the time that the young candidate leaves the seminary, through his career, checkered by many vicissitudes, until, like "other ordinary mortals", the grave claims him for his own. The Rev. Mr. Richardson said that some people imagine that any material is good enough to make a minister, and if a boy is good and "angelic", that it is proper to make a parson of him no matter what his mental qualifications may be. This he thinks is a great mistake as no profession requires so many different mental attainments as that of the ministry. To hold the interest of a congregation at two sermons every Sunday for a number of years, besides the services of the week, to say nothing of the calls upon a minister for social duties and other things too numerous to mention, is a task that taxes the most versatile mind and most robust body.

Besides the routine work of a minister he is called upon to participate in the joys and sorrows of his congregation. These latter are often very painful but his experiences are not all sad. Many mirth provoking occurrences brighten up the every-day life of the parson and make pleasant remembrances.

Mr. Richardson expressed himself as opposed to laudatory orations at funerals and told an amusing story of a young minister who made a fearful mistake in one of his funeral "praise services".

His whole discourse was enlivened by wit, wisdom, eloquence and pathos, and his audience followed him throughout with intense interest.

Milkman Moore was Honest.

George Moore, a West Fourth street milkman, was tried Tuesday afternoon before Justice Nash for alleged selling of adulterated milk in this city. The complainant was the State Dairy Commissioner, George W. McGuire, who was represented by Leon Abbett, Jr. Moore's counsel was Judge W. A. Coddington. The testimony showed that Moore bought his milk from a dealer, and that the milk stood every morning for over an hour at the corner of Somerset street and Greenbrook road before it was taken and delivered by Moore. The letter of the law makes it an offence for any milkman to have in his possession adulterated milk. The milk found in Moore's possession and examined by the State Commissioner was found to be under the standard of purity and Moore was brought up for trial. He proved himself an honest man to the satisfaction of the jury and they brought in a verdict of not guilty.

Dutchy Smith as Lord Dunraven.

Private Classes in Manual Training.

The Executive Committee of the Boys Club, desiring to offer the benefits of their Manual Training rooms to as wide a circle as possible, are now forming private classes in the afternoon for girls and boys. The rooms are well fitted up, and the tools are of the finest. Those interested are invited to see the classes at work. The hours for students are stated in the advertisement in another column.

Boy Bitten By Brown's Dog.

As little Richard Fawson was passing Peter Brown's house on Stone street, North Plainfield, Mr. Brown's dog jumped at the child and bit him in the leg. The dog was subsequently shot by Marshal Pangborn.

Mishap on a Pleasure Trip.

While Gustave Guttarlin and family of Greenbrook road, were returning from a pleasant drive to New Market, a wheel of their carriage caught in the railroad track, thereby upsetting the occupants. None of them was seriously hurt, but they were compelled to return by train as their carriage was wrecked.

THE MAN ON THE CARS.

WHAT HE THINKS OF TUBS AFLOAT AND ASHORE.

He Kicks About the Names of Ferryboats, and Is Amused by the Humor of Our Street Cleaning Department.

"Did it ever occur to you"—said The Man on the Cars that midwinter evening which was somehow mislaid and sprung this week, as we fought our way through the Jersey City station and climbed upon the train—"Did it ever strike you what a queer impression of our country a foreigner must get when he first sails up New York harbor and encounters our ferryboats? Setting aside their absurd contours, which are no worse than those of most European vessels of like usage, just think how the names of our river craft must appear to any intelligent tourist. Imagine yourself a well-bred, discriminating Englishman, for instance, making your initial visit to the metropolis. You pass one or two Staten Island boats on the trip up the bay, and get rather a favorable notion of our ability to christen such things, but coming a bit nearer, ye gods! You observe plying between Ellis Island and the so-called Barge office a strange craft which rejoices in the name of Shackamaxon, and this were enough to precipitate mal-de-mer though your stomach had withstood every horror of the ocean voyage. Then you bump up against the Central's Communipaw, and that, too, must grate upon your British senses. Following this comes a select gallery of remarkable nomenclature: Orange (you look for Lemons or possibly Bananas), Pavonia, Susquehanna, Weehawken, Secaucus, Bergen, and, crowning effort of a master intellect, Moonachie. Pretty tough list when you put it together; isn't it? I should say so. When I read a foreigner's 'first impressions' of our great and glorious country, I always make allowance for those ridiculous ferry-boats and their nightmare names.

"Speaking of this sort of thing, though, I think the best example of quiet, grim humor I ever saw is to be found right in Plainfield. Of course, you have noticed those unspeakable big red tubs, each mounted on two wheels, which are propelled about our streets and filled with dirt, leaves, cigar stumps and other debris at the inspiration of the Street Cleaning Department. But have you remarked the inscription which stands out in bold white lettering upon each vermilion tub? No? Well, that's what is funny. 'Eureka' it says in the most triumphant way, and, when you come to think of it, 'I have found it' is both apropos and felicitous: is it not?"

ANOTHER YEAR'S SUCCESS.

Whatsoever This Circle Could Do in His Name, That It Has Done.

The annual meeting of the Whatsoever Circle, King's Daughters, of Trinity Reformed church, was held Friday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. Charles P. Leggett 822 Madison avenue. Mrs. Leggett was re-elected directress, Miss Mabel A. Woodruff vice-directress, Miss Lillian A. Force secretary, and Emma Gillem treasurer. The retiring secretary, Miss Woodruff, read the following very interesting report of a year's labors "In His Name":

Another year with its opportunities and responsibilities has passed, and as we stand on the threshold of the new let us take a backward glance over the old, and though many of the opportunities that have come to us as individuals have been unimproved, and so perhaps passed over from our memory, we have listened to many of the calls that we as a Circle have received, and have the consciousness that many homes and hearts have been brightened by our work. In the true missionary spirit we have given our time to both home and foreign work, if we reckon all outside our own church's domain in the foreign field. It has been with very willing hands we have in any way aided in lifting the burden from our pastor's heart and this we are assured we have done in contributing $20.50 towards lifting the burden of debt from our loved church, and more willingly, too, as we gave it in memory of one of our circle, the first to whom the call has come to exchange earth's pain and weariness for Heaven's rest and happiness. Faithful in active service, as long as her strength permitted, to the end of her life as faithful to the interests of the Circle, and her church, we know we could have done nothing to please her more than to thus promote its welfare by helping to make it free from debt. Jennie has left us, but we are glad that another sister has been enrolled in our Circle, and one who is equally interested in its workings.

At Christmas many of our poor members were remembered by dinners or individual gifts. Outside of our church we have met all [illegible]

FROM GOOD OLD STOCK.

Candidate Beekman Was Born in Somerset, and Left College to Stump for Tilden the Great.

(From The Somerset Democrat.)

The primaries have been held, the Convention has discharged its duty, and the outcome brings before the people the choice of the representative Democracy of the county of Somerset for Senator, Assemblyman and Coroners. We give in our news columns the proceedings of the Convention, together with the speech of Mr. Beekman, the candidate of the Convention for Senator. The latter is not unknown to the people of Somerset, for he was born and has always made his home in Branchburg township. But, because he has never until now stood before the people asking their votes or held political office of any kind, The Democrat will present its readers with a brief sketch of his life.

Mr. Beekman was born at North Branch on the old Beekman homestead, which has been in possession of the family for generations. He is of the same family as the New York Beekmans, whose ancestor came to this country from Holland in 1647 with Peter Stuyvesant, and from whom Beekman street in New York city is named.

Mr. Beekman is a bachelor, is thirty-seven years of age, and was graduated from Rutgers College in 1877, having taken a full share of the prizes and honors of his class. He was also elected a member of the Phi-Beta-Kappa, a literary society to whose membership only graduates of the best scholarship are admitted. Immediately after leaving college he commenced the study of law in the office of Hon. Charles H. Winfield, Prosecutor of Hudson county, and was admitted to the bar in June, 1880. He at once formed a copartnership with Hon. Henry Traphagen, ex-Mayor of Jersey City, under the firm name of Traphagen & Beekman, and has continued in the practice of his profession at Jersey City ever since. During this period Mr. Beekman has been counsel for one of the Jersey City Savings Banks and has been so active in his profession that Mr. McGee, of the firm of Bedle, Muirhead & McGee, said a few months since that he had tried and argued more cases in the circuit of the Supreme Court and Court of Errors than any other person of his age at the Bar.

But Mr. Beekman's activities have not been confined to his law practice. He is one of the owners of the flour mill property at North Branch, and with his partner, ex-Sheriff Tunison, engaged in the milling business at that place. His political associations also have always been with the county of Somerset. He left college for a time in 1876 to engage in campaign work in Somerset on behalf of that grand old Democrat, Samuel J. Tilden, and, from that time, no campaign has passed in which he has not in some way contributed to the success of his party and in most of them has been a leading speaker.

George H. Cramer, the candidate of the Convention for Assembly, is known to the people of the county. His record as member of the last Assembly has been of the best, and upon the important issue of race-track legislation he has been influenced only by the demand of his constituents and has turned a deaf ear to the temptations of the race-track advocates. Mr. Cramer deserves and will receive the united vote of the Democracy and of many others who approve his course in opposing the race-track legislation.

The candidates for Coroners, John F. Brady, E. F. Farrow and F. C. Sutphen, are men who will discharge their duties faithfully and to the satisfaction of the people.

Martine's Record Above Reproach.

(From The Elizabeth Herald.)

James E. Martine's record in political and private life is above reproach. He is a man whom all Democrats will support and whom not a few Republicans may. He is as sincere and straightforward as he is eloquent. There is no doubt that at Trenton he would honor his constituents and his State. He is a stanch Cleveland man and that is not his least recommendation.

Our candidate for Sheriff, John S. Sauer, is receiving from all quarters assurances of enthusiastic support. His records in business and in politics are records of which he has no reason to be ashamed. As Freeholder he has served the county well and faithfully. We may be sure that as sheriff his course will commend him to the people. He deserves the promotion he is about to receive.

The next Senate of the State of New Jersey will elect an United States Senator. As that body will have far-reaching influence it is of the first importance that it should be Democratic. By no chance should New Jersey, a Democratic State, send others than Democrats to represent it at Washington. The vote of [illegible]

A GENUINE SURPRISE.

The Whole Night Spent in Happy Birthday Revelry.

Donald McInnes was given a birthday surprise party last Friday, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Jackson, on West Fourth street. Mr. McInnes was taken by surprise at his home, when the party broke in on him while he was enjoying a good smoke. After congratulations, all adjourned to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jackson, where the house was thrown open for dancing, which continued until 4 a. m. The night's pleasure was enhanced by games, and songs from a quartette. Mr. McInnes was presented with a handsome initial ring. Fred Wharton made the presentation speech, to which Mr. McInnes responded fittingly. At midnight lunch was served by Mrs. Lee and Mrs. Jackson. The affair proved a success, through the efficiency of the Floor Committee, who were Alfred Jackson, Thos. Reid, Wm. Peebles and David Thompson.

The following were present: Mr. and Mrs. Donald McInnes, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lee, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wharton, Mr. and Mrs. C. Eagan, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Magee, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Leland, Mrs. Wallace, the Misses Jane and Agnes Reid, Fanny and Lucy Westphal, Ada Nash, Katie Higgins, Fanny Hayden, Maggie Thompson, Rose Pearson, Lena Coes, Alice Leland, Mary Bowden, Mamie McCarthy, Katie Jack, Nora and Delia Flannery, Florence Marsh, and Messrs. Wm. Peebles, Wm. and Bertram Tallamy, Thomas Reid, Wm. and Arthur Leland, John Coes, Alex. Muir, Geo. Fitzbrook, Arthur Moore, Thos. McNeil, Geo. Peebles, David Thompson, Chas. Graves, James Penny, Wm. Nicholson, John Thompson, Geo. Jackson, E. Marsh, Jr., and others.

The music was by Nicholson.

SOME ODD STORIES.

INTERESTING TALES OF ADVENTURE ON SEA AND LAND.

The Search For the Man Eating Tree of Ceylon and Its Fatal Termination—The Deadly Valley and Its Mystery—An English Army Officer's Story.

[Copyright, 1893, by American Press Association.]

"It was something more than the love of sport and adventure that took me back to Ceylon for a second visit," said Major Carter of her majesty's service. "I had resolved to solve the mystery of Lieutenant Gordon's most unaccountable disappearance on that wild island five years before. Gordon was a fine fellow, young, dashing and enthusiastic, with a promising future before him, and the uncertainty of his fate played upon my mind.

"I had often heard weird stories of the man killing tree of Ceylon, but I did not believe there was the least foundation for them. To my mind the story was a myth, for I had found a man might rest in security beneath the so called deadly upas, and yet the story of the upas was never so improbable as that of the fiendish tree said to live on flesh and blood.

"Lieutenant Gordon had shared my skepticism to a certain extent, and yet he was inclined to search for the demon tree in dark depths of the wildest jungles. He had a daring and dangerous way of rambling far into the forests, his only companions being a native guide and his dark skinned servant. More than once I told him he would provide a square meal for a tiger or some other wild animal, but he only laughed at my fears.

"One night he did not return. The guide and the servant came back, both frightened nearly to death, and they told a story that aroused our party to a high pitch of excitement. They declared Lieutenant Gordon had fallen a victim to the man eating tree, saying it was near midafternoon when they came to the mouth of a deep and dark valley, into which the venturesome young man insisted on penetrating. At the mouth of the valley the natives found a small stone idol, before which were scattered human skulls and bones. This served to warn them against entering the forbidding place, and they refused to accompany the lieutenant.

"Gordon was not daunted, and he bade them await his return, after which he boldly went down into the gloom of the place, leaving the natives mumbling and prostrating themselves before the idol.

"In about 20 minutes the guide and the servant heard a terrible shriek of fear and agony that came up from the mysterious and dismal valley. The cry was that of a human being in the greatest agony, and so frightened were the natives that they instantly took to their heels and fled from the spot.

"We rebuked them for their cowardice, and all of us believed Gordon had been attacked by a wild animal or a serpent. We even entertained hope that he might put in an appearance, but the night passed and morning came without any sign of him. Then nearly the entire party set out to find the dismal valley and solve the mystery of our comrade's fate.

"The guide was very reluctant about leading us, but we forced him to do so. For hours we tramped about in the jungle without finding the valley, and the guide finally declared he did not know how to lead us to it. This made us very angry, and we nearly scared the fellow to death, asserting we would flay him alive if he did not take us to the place. He started on again, and we followed, but night found us unrewarded for our pains. In returning to the camp, both the guide and Gordon's servant slipped away and disappeared in the forest, and neither was seen afterward.

"This mysterious affair threw a damper on our spirits, and the hunt was far from a success. The most of the party were inclined to believe the lieutenant had been murdered by the two natives, and I thought it not improbable.

"During the five years that elapsed before I again visited Ceylon, I often thought of Jack Gordon and longed to know the truth concerning his fate. When I found myself once more in the vicinity of our former adventures, I resolved to search for the fatal valley. Captain Starbuck, a loyal friend and a man with plenty of courage, agreed to accompany me, poor fellow! I [illegible]

[illegible] Gordon, was in the grasp of this demon tree, the limbs of which were twined about him like serpents. Some had twined themselves about his neck, and I saw he was already dead, having been strangled. And over the body the snaky arms of the accursed tree fought and squirmed.

"Sick and shivering with terror, I slid down to the foot of the wall and ran from that infernal spot as fast as my legs would carry me. I did not stop when I reached the mouth of the deadly valley, and the two natives, reading the truth on my face, kept me company.

"When I told the story at camp, it was received with mingled doubt and credulity. Some of the men could not bring themselves to believe such a thing possible, while others, knowing me better, did not doubt my word.

"We spent three days searching for that valley, and, singular as it may seem, it could not be found again. I do not know that it has been found to this day. But were I able to go direct to it," concluded Major Carter, "the wealth of England would not tempt me into its horrid confines."

INTERESTING TALES OF ADVENTURE ON SEA AND LAND.

A Thrilling Adventure In the Devil's Mountains, Arizona—Buried Alive by a Fall of Rock and Released by an Earthquake—Sam Yool's Wonderful Yarn.

[Copyright, 1893, by American Press Association.]

Three years ago, when I was in Yuma, A. T., I met and made the acquaintance of Sam Yool, a tough, grizzled, weather beaten veteran of the mountains and plains, a miner, prospector, cowboy, scout and adventurer in general. Yool, to my surprise, proved to be a little man, with a restless hand and eye, despite which signs of nervousness I was told he was cool as ice in moments of danger. Being in a good natured mood, he told me several stories of narrow escapes through which he had passed, one of which I consider sufficiently "odd" to bear retelling.

"Do you know anything about the Devil's mountains?" asked Sam abruptly, and when I shook my head he declared: "You're in luck. You don't want to know anything about them. They're part of the Mogollon range, and certain the most ornery portion of this yere country. A good part of them are bare, baked deformities on the face of the earth, and a man has to scrummage round right smart to find wood or water anywhere.

"For a long time I had been hearing stories to the effect that there were rich gold placers and pockets in the Devil's mountains, and I finally resolved to investigate. The section had a bad reputation, for it was said many prospectors who had ventured among the barren mountains never returned to tell what they discovered. But that did not faze me a hair, and as I could not get any one to go with me I started off all by my lonesome self, having a tough little Indian pony for riding, while my outfit was packed on a burro.

"Well, I don't propose to tire you with the account of my search for yaller. I didn't find a sign, and I had decided to get out shortly when one night a band of wandering 'Paches dropped down on me. It was just before dark, and I had settled down for the night close by the mouth of a cave that opened black and ugly in the face of a barren bluff. The reds came on me by accident, and I'll allow they were as much surprised as I was—mebbe a little more so, for my rifle was within reach, and I opened on 'em instanter.

"I bored two of the whelps and drove 'em back, but I knew they'd come whooping down on me in about two shakes, so it was high time to hit the best locality for fighting. In sweeping my eyes round I saw the mouth of the cave.

"'That's the ticket!' I cried in delight, and then yanking up the picket pins of my critters I made a run for it. I didn't stop to gather up my outfit, for I knew I didn't have any time to waste.

"I got into the cave all right. I didn't know how large the place was or anything about it, but I made up my mind to lead the pony and the mule back where they wouldn't be so apt to get hit with bullets or arrows. All at once something happened. There was a jarring sound and then a rumbling roar. I was flung forward on my face, blinded and nearly choked with dust, and then I found myself in utter darkness.

BURIED ALIVE.

"When I recovered enough to sit up, I struck a match and looked around. What I saw wrung a groan from my lips, and I reckoned I was done for sure. A big mass of rock and earth had fallen from the roof of the cave near the mouth, blocking the entire entrance. There were tons upon tons of the stuff, and with neither pick nor spade I could not tunnel out in two months. It looked as if I was doomed to perish of hunger and thirst.

"Both my pony and the burro had been caught beneath the falling mass and crushed to death. It seemed a miracle I had escaped.

"I can't describe my feelings just then, but I decided to explore the cave for another outlet. That seemed to be my only hope, and it was a pretty slim one. All the same, when I had recovered from the dazed condition into which the affair had thrown me, I set out, lighting a match now and then.

"The cave proved to be a monster. There were dozens of passages that branched off in all directions, and I was forced to trust to luck in choosing. I don't know how long I prowled round, all the time scared of falling into some deathtrap hole, but I finally lost my nerve and tried to get back to the blocked entrance.

"Then I made a discovery that lifted my hair. I was lost. I couldn't find my way back. I have a rather hazy recollection of [illegible]

She leaned her head back against a cracker box, a tired sigh coming from her lips, her weary eyes drooping. It was warm and comfortable there by the stove, and she soon seemed to be sleeping.

"Poor woman!" muttered more than one of the rough men as they thought of her sad lot—an outcast from the home she had labored so hard to obtain. They spoke in whispers, so she would not awaken, and one by one they slipped out and went home to their own firesides until the storekeeper, myself and two others alone remained.

"I hate to wake her up," declared Judson as he blew out one of the lights. "She must be completely tuckered."

He went round the stove and touched her on the shoulder, saying gently:

"Come, come, wake up now!" She did not stir, and he shook her a bit, adding, "It's time to close." Then all at once he fell back, gasping:

"She is dead!"

It was true. She had gone "home."

I was walking along a narrow street in a slum section of New York city when I noticed three ragged and dirty urchins who were tying a rope about the neck of a mongrel pup, while a short distance away another ragged and dirty urchin sat on some steps rubbing his soiled fists into his eyes and weeping as if his heart were breaking. I paused near the wailing boy and asked him what was the matter.

"Dey're go-go-goin ter kill me dog!" he sobbed.

"What are they going to kill him for?"

"Nuthin. He never hurt dem fellers, but he's all der friend I has, now dat mom is dead an dad's in der jug, and dem mugs is down on me, so dey're goin ter kill him. I just don't want ter live if dey kills me dog!"

His grief touched me, and I approached the three lads with the intention of rescuing the imperiled pup. I knew better than to use force, so I asked:

During the second period, when the painful symptoms have diminished, iodide of potash is most advantageous. It should be given in increasing daily doses of 0.50, 0.75 or 1.00 grams at the most, in water or sirup of sarsaparilla.

Finally, in the third stage of the malady, when all pain has ceased and the patient needs to be strengthened and recuperated, iodide of iron is commonly indicated as a proper tonic.—New York Herald.

The Light That Gilds Our Sorrow.

There is no heart but hath its inner anguish,
There is no eye but hath with tears been wet,
There is no voice but hath been heard to languish
O'er hours of darkness it can ne'er forget.

There is no cheek, however bright its roses,
But perished buds beneath its hues are hid;
No eye that in its dewy light reposes
But broken starbeams tremble 'neath its lid.

There is no lip, howe'er with laughter ringing,
However light and gay its words may be,
But it hath trembled at some dark upspringing
Of storm affliction and deep misery.

We are all brothers in this land of dreaming,
Yet hand meets hand, and eye to eye replies;
Nor deem we that beneath a brow all beaming
The flower of life in broken beauty lies.

Oh! blessed light that gilds our night of sorrow,
Oh! balm of Gilead for our healing found,
We know that peace will come with thee tomorrow,
And that afflictions spring not from the ground.

Power of Short Words.

Think not that strength lies in the big round word,
Or that the brief and plain must needs be weak.
To whom can this be true who once has heard
The cry for help, the tongue that all men speak
When want or woe or fear is in the throat,
So that each word gasped out is like a shriek
Pressed from the sore heart or a strange, wild note

vate watchmen stay in the house nights to look after the costly furniture which belongs to the house, as it is rented already furnished.

Three attempts have been made within the last three or four weeks by some out-of-town truckmen, supposed to be from New York, to get possession of the furniture, but they have been frightened away each time.

Twice the truckmen drove their wagons up to the front of the house but were met by the alert watchman. The last time they came on foot and tried to enter the house but were scared off by the watchman, who fired his revolver at them. The would-be thieves escaped and will no doubt keep away from that neighborhood now, but the watchmen is still looking for them and if they should make another attempt they will no doubt meet with a warm reception.

WAS IT CLARK'S CARELESSNESS?

Two Boys Upset and a Close Call for Their Lives.

At the noon recess of the Fanwood Public School Thursday the scholars were on their way home for the midday meal.

Those living south of the school house had been accustomed to ride with the hackmen as they happened to drive past and had no passengers and the hackmen have, until yesterday, stopped and taken in the youngsters on their way to the station to receive passengers from the 12:38 train.

All the hacks of Daniel L. Allen picked up full complements of children and conveyed them on their way homeward, and when those of Fred K. Clark appeared the other children naturally expected the same treatment, and hailed their approach with joy; but as Ned Quernan and little Bartlett were about to enter the first of Clark's wagons the driver whipped up his horse and tumbled the two boys into the road, the rear wheel just scraping the Bartlett child's head and would have crushed Ned's legs had he not instinctively squirmed to one side.

The other children jumped back and scampered for home without awaiting the result. One of them after regaining his breath cried out "Mama Ned Quernan had his legs broken by a hack wheel". The parents say that if the hack owners or their drivers invite children to ride they should not resort to the tactics of Mr. Clark's driver as evidenced yesterday, and criminal prosecutions may follow.

HER END WAS PERFECT REST.

Body of Ella V. Thorn Brought to Plainfield for Burial.

The remains of Miss Ella V. Thorn arrived on the Philadelphia train about 10:15 Wednesday, from Mt. Pleasant, Ohio, in charge of David S. Brooks of that city, who very kindly offered his services. It transpires that Miss Thorn's death was caused by valvular disease of the heart. She was ill when she left Chicago; and when she reached the home of her aunt, Mrs. Phoebe G. Thomas, Mt. Pleasant, she told her aunt that she was very sick and did not expect to get well. A physician stayed with her all night and all day, and a Quakeress preacher administered to her spiritual comfort. She was conscious all the time, and perfectly resigned. Of her future she had no fear. A few hours before her death she asked for the 23d Psalm, and took comfort from its tender messages. At 5 Sunday morning she passed away from earth, calm and trustful.

The funeral will be from the home of aunt, Mrs. M. F. Marsley, 121 New street, tomorrow afternoon at 2. Friends and relatives are invited. The interment will be private in the Friends Cemetery, Watchung avenue.

Scamps Who Break Bulbs.

Clarence Brokaw, the faithful young inspector of the North Plainfield electric lights, has had his hands full lately replacing the bulbs that he finds broken every night on his rounds. He has kept a record of the number and locality of the broken lights to submit to the council.

The record for the past three weeks shows that 65 lamps have been broken. It is safe to predict that it will go hard with the evil doers when they are found out. The detailed record of the lamps broken is as follows: On Greenbrook road 14, Mountain avenue 9, Summit avenue 6, Farragut avenue 4, Somerset street 13, Harrison street 7, Brookview avenue 3, Magnolia avenue 2, Grove street 2, Wilson avenue 5, and Sycamore avenue 1.

Wanted, an Electric Road.

(From The New Brunswick Home News.)

What we now require is a rapid and reliable means of travel. The line of electric railway that is at present contemplated of stretching a continuous one of this kind from Paterson to this city, and perhaps further, taking in Plainfield, running through New Brunswick, and looping in all other towns, cities and villages on its route, is one of the grandest designs to develop the resources, growth and prosperity of our State that has ever been thought of. If the citizens of New Jersey do not take hold of this enterprise with vigor and push it to completion with all possible dispatch they will show themselves blind to their own interests, and prove that they are too stupid to know a good thing when they see it.

The Army Will Stay.

It has been rumored of late that the Salvation Army was going to leave the city for good, and give up the local work entirely.

Inquiries proved the story to be false. The army has leased its present quarters for another year. In a few days the new officers will be present and the fight against sin will be continued with renewed zeal. The army is meeting its expenses, though they are quite heavy. In case they are not able to maintain the present barracks, smaller quarters will be secured.

The Water-Works Monopoly.

Citizens:—John Kean has already in grasp a franchise controlling the water supply of Plainfield, [illegible] and all intervening towns. In order that the united grasp of this octopus may be tightened, it is necessary for him to have a friend and advocate in the Legislature. PLAINFIELD TAXPAYER.

The standing committees for the year were appointed and a special committee was appointed to take charge of the interests of the Board in the proposed building of a home in Plainfield by the Knights of Pythias.

The special committee is composed of J. F. Buckle, W. R. Codington and A. Andrews.

The Committee on Railroads, Telegraph and Telephone was instructed to investigate the extension of the electric street railway to the eastern part of the town. They will confer with the street railway company in the near future.

The sewerage question was referred to the Committee on Sanitation and this committee will consider the advisability of calling a public meeting to act on the speedy construction of a sewer.

The Committee on Statistics and Publication was authorized to have the constitutions and by-laws of the Board of Trade printed for distribution. Several other matters pertaining to the welfare of the city were discussed, but no action was taken upon them.

The following is a list of the standing committees for the ensuing year:

Municipal Improvements—E. R. Pope, Chairman; Charles J. Fisk, Robert A. Meeker.

Transportation, Railroads, Telegraphs and Telephones—John Ulrich, Chairman; Hon. Alexander Gilbert, A. D. Thompson.

Streets, Roads and Bridges—J. F. Hubbard, Chairman; F. A. Dunham, J. P. Runyon.

Sanitation—D. C. Adams, M. D., Chairman; L. R. Woolston, J. T. Vail.

Education and Library—E. R. Ackerman, Chairman; F. W. Runyon, J. H. Tilsworth.

Commerce and Rural Industries—C. M. Ulrich, Chairman; J. A. Smith, W. A. Woodruff.

Addresses and Publication—W. R. Codington, Chairman; J. R. Cowsed, George M. Griffin.

Statistics and Publication—F. H. Martin, Chairman; W. F. Arnold, E. J. Shaw.

HYMENEAL.

TenEyck—Osborn.

Before a large gathering of people in Trinity Reformed church, the marriage of Miss Hattie D. Osborn to Fred. TenEyck took place Thursday evening at 6.

A few minutes before the appointed hour the couple entered the church, attended by Dr. Osborn, a brother of the bride, who gave his sister away, and Nicholas Linder, of New York.

The bride was dressed in a golden brown traveling dress.

While they proceeded up the centre aisle, A. G. Carpenter played the wedding march from Lohengrin.

On reaching the front of the church, the bride and groom were met by the Rev. Cornelius Schenck, who performed the ceremony.

The bridal party then left the church, while Mendelssohn's familiar wedding march was being played.

Later in the evening a reception was given at the groom's home, 73 Westervelt avenue, where many persons called and enjoyed the generous hospitality bestowed.

During the evening A. G. Carpenter rendered several selections on the piano. Robert Blumberg, of New York, gave two excellent recitations. Alva TenEyck also favored those present with a number of humorous recitations.

College songs were indulged in, and a general good time was enjoyed. Supper was then served, which was excellent, and all were bountifully supplied with the good things provided. The ushers at the church were: Robert Blumberg, Nicholas Linder, of New York; G. W. Honeyman and A. W. TenEyck. The newly-married couple received many very handsome presents from their friends. Their future home will be in Garwood, where the groom is employed.

Those present at the reception were Mrs. VanEps, Miss VanEps, Miss Hattie Powelson, Miss Annie Vroom, Miss Miller, Mrs. Newton Honeyman, and Miss Horn, of Plainfield; Mr. and Mrs. E. Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. David Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. M. McGuire and Mr. and Mrs. E. VanBook, of Brooklyn; Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Thompson and Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Thompson, of Southampton, L. I.; J. H. Drake, of New York; Class No. 12 of Trinity church; Mr. and Mrs. E. Ryder, of Plainfield, S. Ryder, of Bergen Point, Silas Miller and family of Newark, Mr. Bevis, of New York, the Misses Abbott, John Abbott, Will Abbott, Bert Honeyman, and many others.

The Glories of These Days.

It rarely occurs that frost holds off so late in the season as it has this year. Frost usually comes to kill vegetation by the fifteenth of October at the latest, but at this time the grass is green and the autumn flowers are glorious in their rich colorings. Who can look unmoved on the russet brown of the fields and the red and purple dye of the blossoms decking them. The leaves have colored up from the lapse of time, and the woods are resplendent with beauty.

These perfect October days have been the crowning glory of the year. The flowery days of May, or the lovely dreamy days of June, do not compare for real beauty and inspiration with the typical October day, when the air, almost like wine, can be felt sparkling and bubbling through one's veins. October crowns the year in fruition, in realization of springtime promise, and in real unalloyed beauty.

They Know and Love Him.

(From The New Brunswick Times.)

The Plainfield Press, alluding to Union's senatorship, says: "James E. Martine is a most popular candidate. His life record in that section is open to the world, and from such an honest man of so hospitable a career nothing but the best representation can be expected. He will conduct a clean campaign, and can be safely trusted to look after Union county's best interests." We have known Mr. Martine for years, and the people of Union could not have made a more popular nor better nomination. His occupation is that of a farmer, and if elected, and we have no doubt but what he will be, he will make a capable, honest, faithful representative of the people. Voters of Union, rally to the support of farmer James E. Martine.

the reception at 419 First place Thursday afternoon and evening to view the excellent examples of china painting that are the work of Mrs. Albert S. Roe and her pupils. A large number of pieces were on exhibition, and presented a great variety of design and treatment. Plates, cups and saucers, tea sets, smoking sets, lamps, flower bowls, butter plates and those nondescript little dishes that women like to litter their dressing tables with, were in great profusion. One of the most interesting pieces of porcelain shown was a reproduction of an old teapot which was broken, and whose old-fashioned coloring and design were so faithfully copied that it would have been hard to distinguish one from the other had they both been entire. A set of orchid plates, no two of which were alike, attracted much attention. They were painted for Mrs. Herring of Park avenue. Mrs. Roe's figure drawing is remarkably good, and many of her pieces are decorated with little cherubs that are extremely well done. One of the best figure pieces is a table lamp, which is exquisite in design and coloring.

The work of Mrs. Roe's pupils is surprisingly good, as some of them have been studying this kind of painting but a short time. Special mention of the work of anyone of the pupils would be unjust to the others. The following had examples of their work on exhibition: Miss Beatrice Craig, Miss Alice Hayes, Mrs. Philip MacIntyre, Miss Mary James, Miss Laura Sandford, Miss Gertrude Page and Miss Kittie Manning.

Another Republican Who Would Not Pledge.

(From The New Brunswick Times.)

As was anticipated, the Republicans of Rahway had a lively fight over the race-track question at their primary to elect delegates to their Assembly District Convention. A resolution was adopted at the primary requiring all delegates to pledge themselves not to vote for a candidate who was not opposed to the race-track laws. Ex-Senator Vail refused to pledge himself, saying he never did anything like that in his life, and certainly would not now; and furthermore, he "never heard of such outrageous proceedings in a primary". A. E. Woodruff replied to Mr. Vail, saying that "the people of this good Republican ward ought not even to think of nominating a delegate who would not pledge himself against these infamous laws". His remarks were greeted with cries of "put him out"; and a free fight, according to the press dispatch, seemed imminent. The row ended with the election of Mr. Vail without pledging himself.

The Housewife's Success.

It is a pleasure to note that The Housewife, the ladies' home monthly published at 81 Warren street, New York city, has been greatly improved by its new owners. It is the best 5 cent monthly that comes to the exchange table. It is devoted to the household and all its details. Fashions and housekeeping, home improvements and the garden are all well and carefully treated. Subscription price for this magazine is but 50 cents a year. Agents and subscribers receive elegant premiums. Christmas is coming, and many Plainfield women will have a good chance of procuring some valuable presents with very little work. The publishers, The Housewife Corporation, will be pleased to send sample copies to any one asking for them. Send them a postal card.

Wants Something to Grab at.

A gentleman who has been watching Plainfield's fast trolley cars remarked that the question of proper fenders was one of grave importance, but that another point which had been lost sight of was the entire absence of anything for a man to clutch when struck by one of the cars. He said: "Everybody, in falling, stretches out his hands to grasp something. If he is struck and knocked down by a trolley car his fingers slide from a perfectly smooth iron dash. If I had my way the front of all electric cars would be covered with coarse wire netting to provide a handhold for a stricken pedestrian".

A Note of Warning.

The Emmanuel Baptist church of this city, having purchased a building suitable for worship, are now soliciting means from the public to aid them in moving the same to their lot on Richmond street, and hope that the people of Plainfield will help them in preference to the many agents who at present infest our city claiming to be raising means to help some out-of-town church. Help the neighbors next to you.

Real Independence.

(From Brooklyn Life.)

One day last summer a gentleman at Plainfield, N. J., had notice served on him by his cook.

"Why do you leave?"—he asked.

"It's too hot here for a Christian in summer."

"It's no hotter for you than it is for me,"—observed her employer.—"Yet I have to stay."

"That's the difference between you and me,"—returned the cook.—"I haven't."

high kick is still something to be spoken of with a shudder, have been at high tension for a fortnight past because of a threatened invasion of their erstwhile peaceful town by kickers in skirts.

The high kicking has been indefinitely postponed, the wayward husbands and sons have bowed before the storm which the mere mention of that amusement raised, and they hope that now the ordinary kicking by which the women of Westfield have wearied them for a fortnight is over at last.

It all arose from a clever ruse on the part of Chairman G. W. Peck, who is the head of the Entertainment Committee of the Westfield Athletic Club. The clubmen decided a few weeks ago to hold a "smoker", and it was set down for Friday night. The Entertainment Committee—G. W. Peck, A. A. Drake and L. M. Whittaker—were told to get up something elaborate. Mr. Peck did not tell what the Entertainment Committee had in store, but the cards announced that "attractions not naughty, but nice, neat, new and novel"—so it ran—would be offered.

WOMEN BEGIN TO WONDER.

That was a trifle mysterious, and just as the women folk at home began to grapple with it some one started the story that "nice" and "neat" attraction meant the highest of high kickers and skirt dancers of the unencumbered sort from New York. That story followed the invitation cards into every house in town. Clubmen who wondered what "not naughty, but nice", might mean, went home to discover that their wives and sisters had interpreted the words for themselves.

Chairman Peck held his peace and allowed the stories to go uncontradicted.

It rained in Westfield last night, but there was a sound of revelry all over the club-house. The men turned out in force, though it was common talk that a few of the weak kneed were at home under guard of strong minded women.

There was no formal programme, and so the poor excited clubmen were kept guessing to the last. Finally they heard the unmistakable swish of feminine drapery. Long pipe stems snapped and men emptied hot ashes inside other men's collars in the excitement which followed.

AT LAST SHE COMES.

She had come. She smiled, and they roared applause. She bowed, and they held their breath and waited.

But it was only Mlle. Ottilie, of Eden Musee fame, and though she sang like a bird, the chandelier hung undamaged and a man might have held a high hat anywhere with safety.

She was not a kicker, and the clubmen feebly pulled themselves together and went home to tell their wives, with mingled feelings of uprightness and regret, that all these stories about skirt dancing and high kicking were blanked lies.

IT WASN'T A BRUISE.

William Grattin Works Two Weeks After an Accident Before He Discovers that His Wrist is Broken.

William Grattin, a truckman in the employ of Expressman VanWinkle, met with an accident about three weeks ago which will deprive him of the use of his right arm for several weeks.

While unloading some goods from a truck in the rear of the Central Hotel on East Front street, Grattin and a fellow-workman endeavored to throw a barrel filled with coal into a high coal-bin, the barrel in some manner slipped from their hands and fell, striking Grattin on the right arm and fracturing one of the small bones of the wrist.

Grattin thought it was merely a bruise and kept at work for over two weeks. He bathed the wounded arm night and morning with some sort of liniment, but it seemed to get worse instead of better, and at last, when he could stand the pain no longer, he consulted a physician and had an examination made. The doctor discovered that one of the wrist bones was broken, and not having been attended to at once it had become inflamed and very sore. He set the broken bone Tuesday, but Grattin, as a result of not having it attended to at once, will carry his arm in a sling for some time

Much Joy for the Young Men's Club.

The Young Men's Club of Monroe Avenue chapel were invited to the home of James McGee, in Washington Park, Friday night. The time was pleasantly spent in a social way.

James McGee made a speech of welcome, in which he said that his house was always open to the young men, and he desired all to feel perfect freedom. He also stated the objects of the club, which were to make better men of each member and increase their usefulness in Christian work.

Harry Winters, Bert King and Blanchard Randolph, as a trio, rendered several excellent selections on harmonicas. James E. Joy gave a recitation. Refreshments were served later in the evening.

The officers of the club and those present were:

President—D. P. Hisbe.
Vice-president—Charles Randolph.
Secretary—Charles Hayes.
Treasurer—Chauncey Burt.

Messrs. Brouard, Blanchard Randolph, Harry Winters, Charles Blackford, Bert King, Frank Beeson, Fred Phillips, Clarence Brouard, Wm. Ackerman, Wm. Kinney, Walter Manning, Adam Neuman, Wilson Millington, John Pruod, James B. Martin, James E. Joy, Harry Pound, Henry Apgar, Samuel Beekman.

And They Will.

(From The Somerville Messenger.)

Our Democrat friends over in Union county gave the "orator farmer"—James E. Martine—a unanimous nomination for Senator last week. There was not a vote against him. Mr. Martine is a staunch Democrat and comes from the ranks of the people. Every Democrat in the county should vote for him, and in that case he will be elected.

A New Colored Church.

The Rev. F. G. Warnick of this city was Moderator of the Afro-American council in Westfield yesterday, and the Rev. J. W. Mitchell of Plainfield was Clerk.

The association held all-day services in recognition of the new Baptist church in Westfield, and formally welcomed its pastor, the Rev. Mr. Dyer. The committee arranging the programme included [illegible] streets through it and develop it into a handsome residence section. Two of the prospective streets will run north from Somerset, and the Peace street extension will be opened as it is laid out on the extension map. All the heirs have signed off, and the property has been actually purchased by Mr. Thompson. He is now striving to get the Plainfield Amusement Company to cancel their lease on the grounds, and as soon as agreement with them is reached the development will be begun.

When cut up, the land will produce about 100 lots 50x125, which will be offered for sale at prices ranging from $600 to $1,000. Mr. Thompson will himself erect several fine houses for rent and sale. The lots will be sold only to those who agree to build good and satisfactory houses. No cheap buildings will be tolerated.

The people of the borough will congratulate themselves that so honorable a man as Mr. Thompson should become the owner of this desirable land and protect the neighborhood from undesirable intrusion.

ATE WHAT THEY COOKED!

At This Great Dinner, Miss Bessie Ginna Was First Prize Winner—If They Recover, They'll Give Another.

The exhibition of the Cooking Club at the home of the Misses VanBoskerck, 540 West Seventh street, Wednesday, was an elaborate and very successful affair. It was a decided novelty, from the fact that this was the young ladies, first experience of the kind.

There were four tables neatly arranged and decorated with green, yellow, red and pink flowers, while the rooms were beautified with choice chrysanthemums and tropical plants.

The favors were decorated photograph holders for the ladies and dinner cards for the gentlemen.

The dinner was served at 7:30. Six persons were seated at each table, which made a decidedly attractive scene.

The menu was prepared entirely by the young ladies of the club, and was enjoyed all the more from this fact.

Here is the menu:

Oysters.
Consomme.
Fish.
Sweetbread Patties.
Filet de Boeuf.
Roman Punch.
Game and Salad.
Meringue Glace.

Bon-Bons.

Miss Bessie Ginna won first prize for the fish course and received a handsome bouquet of pink roses from the hostess.

There are eleven members of the club, and all were present but one, Elizabeth Stewart.

Others forming the club are: The Misses Streuli, Corliss, Florence Huntington, Kathryn Yates, Minnie Wood, Bessie Ginna, Jessamy Harte, Marion Dumont, Elizabeth VanBoskerck, Maud VanBoskerck. Miss Tompkins of New York, and Miss Adams of Brooklyn, were also present.

The men present were: Messrs. Alfred Streuli, Howard Huntington De Zeregs, Irving West, Harry V. Baldwin, Percy Stewart, John Munn, Fred Yates, Orville Waring, Edward Bloodgood of Elizabeth; George Van Boskerck, Thomas Van Boskerck.

The next dinner will be given in November at the home of Mrs. Corliss.

PLEASANT PASTIME.

Plainfield Seventh-Day Baptist Christian Endeavorers Have a Sociable at Mt. Pleasant.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, and a few of its friends, filled two big stages Wednesday evening and held a sociable at the residence of Reune Randolph, near Mt Pleasant. The house was crowded with young folks. Charades and other pastimes and general sociability made the hours fly by delightfully, and the night was filled with music, and the cares that infested the day folded their tents like the Arabs and as silently stole away. Song after song went floating away under the soft rays of a full moon, banishing the stillness of the night with sweet melodies, and the spires of the city loomed into view only too soon. Many thanks are due Mr. and Mrs. Randolph for their generous hospitality.

HYMENEAL.

Miller—Day.

The marriage of Miss Kittie Day of East Fourth street to William Miller of Somerville, took place Thursday afternoon at 4, in St. Mary's church. The Rev Father Smyth performed the ceremony, before a large gathering of friends.

Miss Julia Day, a sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, and Frank McManus of Jersey City was best man.

The bride and bridesmaid each carried a beautiful bouquet of yellow roses, and the bride wore a handsome gown of brown cloth and velvet.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride, where a few friends and relatives gathered to congratulate Mr. and Mrs. Miller.

The happy couple left on the 6:30 train for Washington, where they will spend one week. On their return they will reside in Somerville.

The Dunellen Road Sure.

President Adlaman, of the street railway, John Kriney, and Lawyer McStea, have about secured the requisite number of signers for the Dunellen extension of the road. Wednesday evening the three visited several property-owners along the line, and secured their consent. There remain a few yet to be seen

The extension now appears to be a sure thing, and it is promised that it will not be long before the work of building is commenced.

Passenger Station Improvements.

The Central Railroad of New Jersey is extending its passenger sheds in Elizabeth 100 feet east on both sides of the tracks to conform with the sheds already up. The stairways on both sides of the station leading to the passenger tunnel have been cut down to the new grade of the street.

bowl of tobacco. Just as we pulled out of Elizabeth, however, in he came, and occupied the seat beside me.

"I suppose you have wondered where I was"—he said.—"Well, a friend led me into the women's car, but I was glad to get out of it when he left me at Elizabeth.

"There were a couple of young women in the seat behind, who made me tired. I like young women as a general thing, you know, and these were very pretty ones, but it was their conversation which wearied me. They were confiding in each other (and every one else within earshot, for that matter) how everlastingly they did wish they were men. I know many girls who are addicted to this sort of speculation, and it always produces the same effect upon yours truly.

"Of course, to begin with, the proposition is as absurd as it is impracticable; and then secondly, what's the use? I am acquainted with a host of young women with ideal homes, doting parents, plenty to eat, and nothing on earth to do all day long but practice upon the piano for half an hour, read Laura Jean Libbey, and look pretty. This is everything they are expected to do, and yet one of them confided to me a few days ago that she was dreadfully unhappy, and always would be, just because she was not a man!

"'You men'—sighed she—'do have such lots of fun that we girls cannot have: you smoke, and drink, and stay out of nights, and do just whatever you please. But we have to stop at home and be nice to a raft of callers that we wish were dead, and even when we do really go out people think it horrid if we don't take a stupid chaperone along'.

"I felt it my duty to arise to the occasion, and accordingly arose, and in a few well-chosen words, as the reporters say, proceeded to make her contented with the lot to which it has pleased Fate to call her. At last she admitted that perhaps I was right (of course, I was—I always am), but that I seemed much more liberal in some matters than some people. She referred to my remarks upon her complaints. I had said that so far as I was concerned she might smoke as much as she chose—you remember what I told you about our cigarette girls a few weeks ago; and it was easy enough to convince her that drinking and staying out late were utterly superfluous, even to a man's happiness. I made it plain also that men have to meet and associate with a whole mob of persons incalculably more insufferable than the few chance bores who afflict their calls upon our young women, although what I said on this score was, I confess, insincere. Do you know that it is wonderful to me how the aggregation of paretic idiocy which spends all its little time at our receptions, our parties, our teas and in calling upon our girls, has the nerve to do so. I think if I knew absolutely nothing, could talk of naught, excepting, perhaps, the weather, and had it made plain to me every day what others thought of me, I would stay home or go and die. And yet this absurd contingent is always serenely on deck, and I am averse to going out any more than I can help, simply because one cannot avoid meeting one or more of these vacuums whenever he makes a call.

"I do pity the girls on this point, with all my heart, but I should lose caste if I admitted it in public. Gracious sakes! here's Plainfield, and I haven't half unfolded my story. Well, good-night—I'll tell you the rest some time, and give you an idea about our 'gay' young men, too—will you remind me?"

I said I would.

SUCCESSFUL ENDEAVOR.

Dunellen Presbyterians Celebrate Another Year of Good Work.

The seventh anniversary of the Christian Endeavor Society of the First Presbyterian church, Dunellen, was celebrated Thursday evening in the church.

President Benjamin Carpenter presided, and introduced the Rev. Mr. Martine, who conducted the fifteen-minute song service, also the devotional part of the service.

The treasurer and secretary gave five-minute reports of their work, which showed advancement among the members.

President Carpenter gave a short address of welcome, extending to all present a most hearty greeting.

It was then announced that the delegate to the late State Convention from that society would make a report. This proved to be exceedingly interesting, and gave many helpful suggestions and thoughts.

The excellent choir present followed with a very pretty anthem, Miss Maud Benton taking the solo part, with her usual grace and skill.

The Rev. Mr. Cadwell, the speaker of the evening, was introduced, and gave a stirring Christian Endeavor talk. His talk was full of enthusiasm, and it seemed to be the right thing in the right place.

His remarks along the lines of temperance were particularly strong, and his appeal to the young men was very earnest. He gave some startling statistics.

At the conclusion of the address President Carpenter, who is the retiring officer, introduced Miss Boise, the recently elected president, who made a few appropriate remarks, after which the closing hymn was sung and the benediction pronounced.

Everybody was invited to adjourn to the Sunday-school room, where lemonade and cake were served, and a social time indulged in.

A good representation of the societies of this city was present.

The home society deserves credit for the excellent entertainment provided.

A True Patriot and a Sincere Friend.

At a regular encampment of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., held Oct. 24, the following resolutions was adopted:

WHEREAS, It has pleased our Heavenly Father to remove from our comrades Comrade William E. Northup, be it

Resolved, That in the death of Comrade Northup, Winfield Scott Post loses one of its most highly esteemed members; one who was ever ready to respond to the call of duty; a true patriot and a sincere friend. Be it

Resolved, That the officers and members of Winfield Scott Post do hereby extend their heartfelt sympathy to the family of their late comrade in their great affliction and commend them to the care of Him who doeth all things well. Be it

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to the family of our departed comrade and also published in the papers of this city.

The Asbury Park King's Daughters are beginning a crusade against stray critters, and are chloroforming all the vagrant cats and dogs. One King's Daughter beats a hundred Jim Frisbies.

How does Councilman Marsh like the gratuitous insult offered by one of the local Republican organs? In telling of a City Court prisoner of the same name, the paper went out of its way to explain that the vulgar and vicious offender was not the Councilman!

Frederick Heller, a Caldwell plumber, says he will revolutionize cycling by his new invention, which is a twin screw attachment at the rear, working on the propeller principle. Mr. Heller may be a good plumber, but his bicycle scheme will surely end in wind.

The eager retreat beaten by the Anti-Rector Committee leaves Mr. Murphy without a foe in sight. It is to be sincerely hoped that now that the ringleaders in the insurrection have drawn in their horns, complete harmony and prosperity will be restored to the Church of the Holy Cross.

The campaign in Somerset seems going all one way—and that way Democratic. Steady harmony in the ranks alone is needed to insure success. It will be Senator Beekman and Assemblyman Cramer if the vote turns out. See to it, Democrats and anti-race-track men, that this ticket is elected.

The Republican party says there is no politics in this campaign, and that the way to demonstrate this is to vote for Foster Voorhees. Now will Foster Voorhees pledge the people that if he should be elected he would vote for a Democratic United States Senator, and thereby prove his non-partisanship?

If Founder Bradley doesn't win the Monmouth County Senatorial fight, it won't be because he isn't original in his methods everlastingly at it. He is personally stumping the entire county, and making himself solid with everyone capable of influencing a vote. Besides that he's using printer's ink most lavishly. And that's the way to win.

Poor benighted Madison Eagle! It cites as further proof that Plainfield is an abominably wicked city the fact that some of the dear girls were planning to give a minstrel performance to raise money for a church rectory. Editor Bardon, secluded in his cobwebbed sanctum, shut in by the hills, hasn't heard how the modern girl and the modern times have progressed. He's in the Puritanic age, and going backwards all the time.

The Plainfield Republicans were proud of John C. Rankin when he declined to tie his hands with promises in the Senatorial race; such action was noble and manly! Today they are taunting James E. Martine with being a dangerous man, just because like Mr. Rankin he chooses to let his past life speak of itself for his future! Consistency is a jewel not known to partisanship, and the campaign of the Plainfield Republicans is rankly partisan.

When troubles come to a man, how they do pile upon him! A short time ago Thomas J. Smith, one of the prime factors in the control of the Plainfield electric railway, was wealthy and honored. Now the Directors of the Orange National Bank find that through private transactions he has lost his money, and so they take away from him the presidency of the bank and reduce him to the rank of discount clerk. The moral is that if you want to control the capital of others you must have some of your own.

Everyone who knows James E. Martine, knows that he is a foe to the licensing of gambling, in any form. He doesn't have to proclaim his virtues from the housetops. The Press is satisfied that Mr. Martine can be trusted to vote for the repeal of the infamous laws now on the statute books, and to oppose all other laws that defy morality and public decency. Mr. Martine has freely and repeatedly avowed his disgust at the debauching influences of race-tracks, and is proud of his independence of any ring, clique or combination.

According to the Chicago Evening Post, the fire losses in the United States during the first nine months of this year were nearly $27,000,000 greater than for the corresponding period of last year, and a number of strong fire insurance companies are preparing to go out of business before the close of the year for the reason that they can find more profitable fields for the employment of their capital. The Post says the active companies have paid out over $9,000,000 from their surplus funds thus far this year, and that the January statement will show an enormous shrinkage in the securities held by the companies.

It doesn't look much like hard times nor as if there was any fear that tariff revision will have anything but a desirable effect upon manufacturing industries, when men like Andrew Carnegie are preparing to enter more than ever into the manufacturing business. The telegraph brings the report from Scranton that Mr. Carnegie is negotiating for the purchase at $15,000,000 of the two immense iron and steel mills of the Lackawanna Iron and Steel Company at that place, and that there is a likelihood of the sale being made. Mr. Carnegie, notwithstanding his theories about protection, is a shrewd and far-sighted business man, and in this effort to extend his operations evidently understands what he is about.

The doctrine of Unity is about to receive a new impetus by Clergyman Goodrich's good example.

It is pleasant to note the coming of a Montclair bride to a Plainfield household, and that a handsome, eloquent and gifted young clergyman's. The Montclair girls are queens of the State, and Pastor Goodrich can be trusted to choose the empress of them all.

That was a pow'ful good suggestion made by a correspondent a few days ago—to systematize almsgiving by a Charity Organization Society. The plan works elsewhere with tremendous success, and nowhere is it more needed than right here in Plainfield.

The worriment revealed in the talk of the Republican organs is evidence that they recognize their candidates' chances as growing beautifully less. And the way they attack the editor of The Press shows their pitiful lack of argument against the Democratic candidates, as well as the lack of it in favor of their own. It isn't The Press that is running for office, and it is a compliment to the Democratic candidates that the Republican organs are forced to resort to bluffing.

So pressed are the Republican organs that they hold up as a reason against voting for James Martine that The Press declined to infold in its pages circulars advertising anti-race-track meetings! This is certainly desperate. Because The Press refuses to violate one of its fixed business rules, never to give the value of its circulation to persons who are not willing to rest content with its regular columns or to pay for the advertising space it has for sale—because of that, forsooth, a man should vote the Republican ticket! Don't the Republican organs credit their readers with common sense?

An inspiring spectacle is the noble manhood of Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes. His intellect is as logical and discerning, in spite of the passage of more than fourscore years, as it was when he penned the Breakfast-Table Series and charmed the nations. His poetry is as pure, his wisdom as golden. It is a rare delight to see such faculties stay unabated. To the youth of the day there is no more noble example of mankind. America may well and proudly point to Dr. Holmes, and say There indeed is a manhood most sublime! White though his locks with the passage of so near a century, creased though the plump flesh of his kindly face—he is not old, but just as young and vigorous as when he wrote that poem of the heart "The Boys". All America—yea: all the world—loves him, and cherishes the sentiments which bubble so briskly and daintily from his pen.

That pen has lost none of its virile cunning, and now it is writing about the helpful wife. The greater the man, the more keen is his appreciation of woman. And Dr. Holmes was never so happy and felicitous as when the gentler sex was on his heart. Have we not his description of the Frogpond Courtship in the Boston Common to attest this? What more delightful romance ever stirred the soul of man than his story of the astronomical lesson as studied by those sweethearts! But that was in the Doctor's early lover days. The present finds him soberly thoughtful on the virtues of the faithful helpmeet. And so he says:

> Ofttimes, as I have laid swinging on the water in the swell of the Chelsea ferryboats, in that long, sharp-pointed, black cradle in which I love to let the great mother rock me, I have seen a tall ship glide by against the tide, as if drawn by some invisible towline, with a hundred strong arms pulling it.
>
> Her sails hung unfilled, her streamers were drooping. She had neither sidewheel nor sternwheel; still she moved on, stately, in serene triumph, as if with her own life.
>
> But I knew that on the other side of the ship, hidden beneath the great bulk that swam so majestically, there was a little toiling steam tug with heart of fire and arms of iron, that was hugging it close and dragging it bravely on, and I knew that if the little steam tug untwined her arms and left the tall ship it would wallow and roll about and drift hither and thither, and go off with the refluent tide, no man knows whither.
>
> And so I have known more than one genius, high-decked, full-freighted, wide-sailed, gay-pennoned, that, but for the bare toiling arms and brave, warm, beating heart of the faithful little wife that nestled in his shadow and clung to him, so that no wind or wave could part them, and dragged him on against all the tide of circumstance, would soon have gone down the stream and been heard of no more.

Rare old Doctor Holmes! All men should arise and call thee blessed, for this valiant tribute to that overworked and unappreciated gentler sex which robs life of desolation and bathes in perpetual sunshine the weary heart of the toiling world.

A long head had Benjamin Franklin. In 1791 he left $5,000 to the city of Boston. He directed that the money should be invested, and that at the end of 100 years the principal and interest to the extent of $500,000 should be expended for public improvements and the balance be placed at interest for another 100 years, and then be divided between the city of Boston and the State of Massachusetts. Dr. Franklin figured that at the end of the first hundred years the amount available would be $655,000, and at the end of the second hundred there would be $20,000,000 on hand. The fund has been well handled, but at the present time amounts to only $425,000. It has been decided that the provisions of the will shall be conformed to as nearly as possible, and about $325,000 of the above mentioned sum will be expended as soon as the trustees can agree as to the uses it shall be put to. The balance will continue to draw interest, and no one who reads this paragraph will ever know whether it eventually amounts to twenty three millions or not. It is certain, however, that if it is not invested in boom enterprises, or in any of the other ways not approved by Boston conservatism, it will amount to a very large sum, and if Boston is in existence in 1991 or thereabouts, the money will come in very handy. The mite of the poor printer boy who over a century ago tramped through Jersey in search of a job has become a thing not to be despised.

CORPORATIONS OR PEOPLE: WHICH!

Let us suppose the election is over.

Is it Senator Voorhees you wish to see, you plain citizen of Union county? Then send in your card, sirrah! The liveried page will bring you answer. What, Senator Voorhees can't be seen! He knows you worked and voted for him; you have a matter of business to bring before him—a measure of much importance to the folks at home. Can't help it, sir: Senator Voorhees can't be disturbed from his pleasant hour with his friends John Kean, Frank Bergen and Ben Sewell. The Senator is engaged till the session opens, when he must hasten to the Chamber in the interest of those bills increasing the powers of the Plainfield and Union county water monopoly, extending the privileges of the Plainfield lighting corporation, and abolishing the State tax from railroads.

But hold! It isn't Senator Voorhees, after all; but Senator Martine. No, no: you need no gilt-edge monogram to reach the Farmer Orator. That's his voice you hear now, stirring, earnest, eloquent, urging the adoption of a law to break monopolies, pleading for the repeal of bills that foster immorality and vice. There is—he says—no more debasing and debauching influence than race-track gambling, and the statutes legalizing it are a disgrace to the State and should be wiped off our books. He has stopped, and they are cheering, men of all parties alike. He hears your name spoken. His face glows with memory of home, and welcome of you. Jim Jones, you know— I'm downright glad to see you—and he grips your hand and listens to what you say; and when you leave you are proud of your county's Senator and confident that as your representative he will guard and promote your interests faithfully and well.

THE LINDEN INCIDENT.

The Grand Jury of Union county made an emphatic pronouncement against the Town Committeemen of Linden, for being so over-zealous in the interest of public improvements as to grant a race-track license in exchange for inducements so exceedingly advantageous as those held out to the township. The race-track corporation tempted the Committee with the offer of a sewer system for the township. The people of the township were clamorous for a sewer, but could not afford one. Here was a chance to get one free. The Committeemen had been elected on an anti-race-track ticket, but this was a beautiful fruit that had not been foreseen growing on the race-track trellis. The Committee plucked it, for the township's sake. Go ahead with your race-track,—they said—and give us the sewer.

Now this was contrary to the ante-election pledges of the Committeemen, and it proved the unwisdom and uselessness of political promises. It was for the Committeemen's bad judgment, and for their not keeping faith with their electors, that the Grand Jury so sharply censured them.

This was as far as the Jury felt it could safely go.

But Republicans of high station and low degree, eager to strain a point against James E. Martine in his Senatorial candidacy, are clamoring that these Committeemen should have been indicted for bribery. They admit that no personal profit attached to the Committeemen through the race-track transactions. It was a business bargain, pure and simple, between the Linden Blood Horse Association and Linden township: just the same as is transacted annually, through the Plainfield Common Council, between Plainfield city and the licensed liquor-dealers: just such a transaction as the Board of Freeholders, at the instigation of Frank Bergen, Foster Voorhees, and other associates, accomplished a few days ago when the Union county Board of Freeholders was enticed into granting a franchise to run trolley cars over a county road, in exchange for public improvements pledged by the trolley company.

Is such a public exchange bribery? Can it be that men in office are to be put on trial for a heinous criminal offence because they voted a privilege to a private corporation in return for something by which the people benefited materially and by which they themselves benefited not at all!

The Linden Committeemen were representative citizens, men accustomed to walk the path of rectitude and to follow the voice of conscience. They could see no crime in their course. They acted openly and above-board. Every detail of the transaction was in public session. Outside citizens were there to object if they desired. They could see no bribery.

And the Union county Grand Jurors saw evidence of none. They searched for it high and low, in the mass of testimony in their secret room, in the investigations of the sworn Prosecutor, in the utterances of an honored Judge on the bench. They could as honest men censure the Linden Committeemen for permitting their regard for public improvements to overcome their personal convictions; but they could not put these citizens to the open and undeserved shame of trial for bribery when the Committeemen had neither obtained nor sought personal profit, nor had it offered to them.

This was no James Martine decision; the Grand Jury had of members besides him more than a score. And it was no partisan decision; ten of the members were Republicans. All were unanimous against indictment for bribery. They agreed not to indict because they could find no evidence convincing them that there had been bribery; and they had the assurance of the Prosecutor that the Court did not believe that any one of the Linden Committeemen had personally profited by the granting of the race-track license.

These Grand Jurors were men solemnly sworn to do their duty and to find indictments wherever the evidence warranted. Their unanimity, in a body so evenly divided as to politics, is conclusive proof of their integrity.

Foreman Martine deserves all the more honor, that he did not seek to dissuade them from their purpose when he knew what machinations were on foot to use a refusal to indict as argument against him in his Senatorial campaign.

FIT THIS TO JAMES MARTINE!

It Was Good Argument for Senatorial Candidate Rankin—Why Not Just as Good for the Farmer Orator!

(From Mayor Rankin's letter refusing to make a pledge, Oct. 26, 1896.)

I have been eight times elected to public office in the city of Elizabeth, and I have yet to make the first pledge or promise to any individual as to what my official action would be.

It is my settled conviction that no candidate for legislative office should, in advance, tie his hands by any pledges with respect to his action upon any particular measure.

(From The Central New Jersey Times, Oct. 29, 1896.)

With the properly dignified spirit, Mr. Rankin calls up his record as the only pledge necessary regarding his stand upon this subject. If his past life is not a pledge of faithfulness, of conscientiousness and an earnest determination to do what is right, then no words can add any weight. Mr. Rankin's stand is a noble one. He can be trusted because he has never proved recreant to any trust. He is willing to stand by his record as the pledge of his future action.

Martine and Sauer.

(From The Rahway Democrat.)

Our candidate for Senator, James E. Martine, of Plainfield, needs no introduction to the mass of our readers, nor to the voters of Union county. His eloquent voice has been frequently heard in our city during the campaigns for years past, and his loyalty to true Democratic principles and those of morality and justice generally, cannot be questioned. His word is his pledge, better than any perfunctory or buncombe resolutions, as his neighbors and all who know him will testify. He can be depended on as being on the side of morality and for justice to the workingman at all times.

John S. Sauer, our nominee for Sheriff, is a well-known resident and business man of Elizabeth, capable, honorable and popular with all who become acquainted with him. He was elected as a member of the Board of Chosen Freeholders two years ago, and his ability and fitness for responsible positions were so well recognized by his fellow members that he was last May made Director of the Board, which position he has filled with honor, strict attention, and to the advantage of the county.

Able and Honorable.

(From The Rahway Democrat.)

The Democratic Assembly Convention for this, the third district of Union county, complimented the young voters on Monday, by selecting one of their number, John Herbert Winans, as a candidate—an able and honorable young man, eminently competent by education and training for the position, and whose morality cannot be questioned. We have known him personally from boyhood, and hence can speak from that knowledge. Although the district is looked upon as hopelessly Republican, he has determined to enter into the canvass with a will to aid in the success of the whole ticket and to cut down the usual majority in this district as much as possible; and it is not beyond a possibility for him to be elected.

No One Doubts Him.

(From The Elizabeth Herald.)

James E. Martine is getting along nicely. His party has faith in him, his friends have faith in him. No man who knows him, whether Democrat or Republican, doubts the integrity or ability of Mr. Martine. He will cast a vote for the next United States Senator from New Jersey.

HYMENEAL.

Williams—Force.

The richness of Autumn's floral treasures added to the beauty of a charming home wedding, in the Mansion House, Bound Brook, Tuesday, when Miss [illegible] L., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. [illegible] H. Force, was married to Will F. Williams of this city.

The ceremony took place in the large double parlors, in front of a bank of chrysanthemums. The windows were draped with ropes of chrysanthemums and ivy, making a very pretty effect.

The bride was radiantly beautiful in a gown of old-rose and green changeable silk, which was a striking contrast to the conventional black worn by the groom. On her departure with her husband for their wedding trip, this was exchanged for a traveling dress of blue cloth.

The entry of the wedding party into the parlors was to the joyous music of the march from Lohengrin, sounded from the piano strings by the bride's sister, Miss Mabel Force. At just 4:30 the Rev. Cornelius Schenck united the twain. The responses of the bride and groom were remarkably clear and distinct. The ring was placed by the groom on the bride's finger, and hearty congratulations were bestowed by all. A jubilant march was played by Miss Mabel Force as a signal for the feast. The fifty or more relatives passed into the huge dining room and were seated at four large tables. Each napkin contained a chrysanthemum boutonniere. The scene was an enlivening and happy one, and time passed merrily.

The feast was just such an admirable one as should be expected from Mine Host Force's excellent cuisine. Colored waiters served in fashionable style.

In the parlors upstairs were the wedding gifts. They filled three large tables, and among them all was not one duplicate.

At 6 the wedded pair boarded a Royal Blue train for Washington, amid the customary showers of rice and sincere good wishes. They will return in one week, and make 19 Craig place their residence.

The bride has a large circle of friends in this city and vicinity, and the groom is the popular and efficient head clerk in Mulford Estil's bookstore.

OPENING BALL.

St. Mary's T. A. B. Society Have a Pleasant Time at Their Hallow E'en Dance.

St. Mary's T. A. B. Society gave their grand opening ball last Tuesday, at their hall, corner of Fourth and Liberty streets, and it proved to be a success both socially and financially.

About 150 couple were present and tripped the light fantastic until the "wee sma' hours" to the strains of O'Reilly's orchestra.

Many people were present from Elizabeth, Newark, Bound Brook, Somerville and other places.

The committee having the initial dance in charge was composed of P. Mack, chairman; C. Guinee, secretary; P. Reville, treasurer; and W. Shannon, D. O'Keefe, J. Kiely P. Lawlor and P. Nugent, and they deserve great credit for the good order that was maintained during the evening and for their efforts in seeing that all had a good time.

THE REINHART DANCE.

Hallow E'en Passes Merrily, in an Atmosphere of Autumn Gold.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Reinhart, of Netherwood, gave a Hallow E'en dance for their daughter Miss Katharine Reinhart Monday night. The house was beautifully decorated for the occasion, the prevailing color being yellow. The guests were chiefly from the younger set, as Miss Katharine Reinhart is not yet out.

The dancing continued until after midnight when the spirits of Hallow E'en disappeared for another year.

Among those present were: The Misses Reinhart, daughters of C. S. Reinhart, the artist, of New York, Miss Carrie Vail, Miss Edith VanBoskerck, Miss Florence Waring, Miss Lulu Holly, Miss Mary Whiton, Miss Gertrude Andrews, Miss Nancy Lawson, Miss Ethel Finch and Miss Marion P. Bowen, Messrs. Fred. Walz, William Runyon, Gerald Lowe, Edward VanBuren, Lawrence VanBuren, Harry Bunnell, Sherwood West, Arthur West, George Schoonmaker, James Middleditch, Harry Talmadge, Wesley Abbott, Edward Finch and Howard Corliss.

JAMES E. MARTINE.

The Democratic Candidate for State Senator.

(From The Elizabeth Journal, Rep.)

James E. Martine, the Democratic candidate for State Senator, is a native of the city of New York, having been born there forty-four years ago. For the past thirty-three years he has lived in Plainfield, is a farmer by occupation, having the management of and interest in a large estate in and near that city. He has never held political office but once, when he was elected a member of the Plainfield City Council.

Personally Mr. Martine is a gentleman of cultivated tastes, pleasant address, and a large fund of broad and useful information. He is a public speaker of acknowledged ability, and exceedingly in earnest in the advocacy of his party interests. The late Cornelius W. L. Martine, who for a number of years was Director of the Board of Freeholders, was a cousin to the present Democratic candidate for Senatorial honors.

Tribute to the Late Hon. Nathan Harper,

By the Board of Governors, Muhlenberg Hospital.

The Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital desire to record this minute, on the occasion of the death of Hon. Nathan Harper. This Hospital was one of the many works of benevolence of our city, to which he was ready and glad to give aid and encouragement.

He was for several years, in the early part of its history, a member of this Board, cheerfully giving his time and counsel to the furtherance of its work. The clearness of his perception and the calmness of his judgment, were found to be of great value in our deliberations, while his well-known character in this community, as an honest and wise man, was of great assistance in laying the foundation upon which this institution is built, and on which it has met with so much success, and been the instrument of such great usefulness to very many of our needy and suffering fellow men. WM. R. COOK, Secretary.

Police After Petty Coal Thieves.

Police Captain Grant and Sergeant Kiely were called to the railroad track near Plainfield avenue, on Wednesday, to investigate the coal thefts that are taking place there constantly. Many coal-trains stop at this spot and the residents about there find it easier to take the coal without paying for it than it would be to purchase it at $5 a ton. They knock the coal from the tops of the cars to the ground and when the train moves away they come with baskets and pick up enough fuel to keep them supplied through the winter. Tons of coal have been stolen from the company in this way. The captain secured the names of many of the offenders and they will be brought into court—when the Judge comes back.

[illegible] Till the Judge Comes Back.

For a long time the boys who hang about the entrance of Music Hall these nights have made a nuisance of themselves by begging passes of patrons and by playing tag in a very boisterous manner. Tuesday the police arrested two of the offenders, but dismissed them until the Judge comes back.

Pulled [illegible] Taffy.

Miss Ethel and Miss Bessie Brower gave a Hallow E'en candy pull last night, at their home on Watchung avenue. About fifteen of their young friends passed the evening pleasantly, and all enjoyed it hugely.

SELF DENIAL OF PARENTS.

It Should Never Be Permitted to Degenerate Into Self Effacement.

That parents should deny themselves superfluities for the sake of their children is not in the least to their credit. It is meet, right and their bounden duty. That they should give their children better advantages than they have had themselves is equally, in the nature of things, their proper line of conduct. Each generation owes to the one in advance all that it can bestow of preparation, of culture, of opportunity and of privilege. The self denial of parents is the tribute the race demands. It is not especially notable nor particularly praiseworthy, because it is the appointed and expected role which is given to people when they take upon them the obligations of parenthood.

But self denial on the part of the parents is one thing, and self effacement quite another. The plain man and the plain woman who have scrimped and stinted and saved, contrived, managed, risen early and sat up late, to send their sons and daughters to college, to educate them liberally, to place them well in the world, are not to be set aside as of small account when their children arrive at maturity.

They are wrong to allow themselves to be pushed to the wall, set in the background, as they sometimes are. The mother may not know Euclid or have the faintest acquaintance with the Greek poets, the music her daughter plays may be a Chinese puzzle to her comprehension, but she does know a whole world of science, not necessarily in books, to which her daughter can gain no clew in the classroom, since life must be the teacher.

The father may speak a less ornate vernacular than his boys' vocabulary, but he has the shrewdness, the acquaintance with men, which come only by intercourse with one's fellows, by joy and sorrow and the different phases through which all pass who live long enough. It should be no part of the self denial of parents to do without the deference, the tenderness, the regard, of those whom they have brought up.

One finds it oftener in a comparatively new country than in the more conventional life of our cities, a state of things in which parents seem to have been outgrown by their children. There are farmhouses in our frontier states where women, not yet middle aged, have put on gray hairs and wrinkles, lost the beauty and elasticity of youth, years before their time, resignedly accepting privation and toil and loneliness to give their girls a chance.

If the girls are noble, sweet natured and true, they will hold the dear mother in the greatest esteem because of all that she has done for them. Far from entertaining a feeling of pride or of complacency, they will repay the beautiful self denial of their parents by a devotion which never knows a shade of diminution. It is an ignoble nature alone which is capable of feeling ashamed of those who belong to one's kith and kin on account of any simplicity of manner or plainness of speech. Self denial must not become self effacement.

A few years ago it was not uncommon to find the parents of young people rather crowded out of the way, the drawing rooms given up to the youthful daughters and their friends, while the mother and father sat by themselves in a basement dining room or their own chamber. A better state of things obtains now, and young people have learned that society is crude and unsatisfactory, in which parents have not their fitting place.—Harper's Bazar.

In a Hurry to Marry.

"Oh, won't you marry me!" cried a rather comely girl, with a deep olive complexion, the other day as she met one of her gallants down town. The girl spoke English with a decided foreign accent, and it was learned subsequently that she was an Armenian girl. Apparently the girl was not more than 16 years old. Her face wore signs of worriment.

"What, get married immediately?" asked the surprised friend.

"Yes, right away," said the girl impulsively.

The young man thought that the girl had gone daft, but she soon informed him the reason for her action. On the following day was her seventeenth birthday. By the strict Armenian custom, which her parents followed, any girl who is not married before she is 17 is considered to be "old maidish" and unattractive to men. Her parents also cling to the custom of compelling their daughter to fast for 48 hours after the beginning of the seventeenth birthday and then to eat salt fish for the next 24 hours, without being allowed to quench the thirst.

This the poor Armenian girl suffered, as the young man refused her proposition, but from now on she can get married when she pleases without fear. And whenever she sees that young man who would not marry her immediately she feels like biting his head off.—Philadelphia Press.

How Tom Reed Became a Lawyer.

This is how Tom Reed became a lawyer. He gave up school teaching, and thinking that a young man would have a better chance out west he went to California. Judge Wallace, afterward chief justice of California, examined Reed for admission to the bar. It was in 1863, during the civil war, when the legal tender act was much discussed in California, that Wallace, whose office adjoined the one where Reed was studying, happened in one day and said: "Mr. Reed, I understand that you want to be admitted to the bar. Have you studied law?"

"Yes, sir. I studied law in Maine while teaching."

"Well," said Wallace, "I have one question to ask. Is the legal tender act constitutional?"

"Yes," said Reed.

"You shall be admitted to the bar," said Wallace.

Tom Bodley, a deputy sheriff, who had legal aspirations, was asked the same question, and he said "No."

"We will admit you both, for anybody who can answer offhand a question like that ought to practice law in this country."—McClure's Magazine.

The Spanish Money Changer.

The street money changer is an interesting character in Spanish cities. He stations himself at a principal street corner early every morning and exchanges a bag of coppers for silver. By 10 o'clock his bag is exhausted, and he goes home. All the servants on their way to market get their money changed by him, as they are not skillful in counting and afraid of false coins. He gives them full count, his coppers being obtained from the bakers, who get rid of their coins at a discount.—Exchange.

The Ethics of Shopping.

Salesman—This matches your sample perfectly, madam.

Customer—It certainly does. It couldn't be closer.

Salesman—How many yards do you wish?

Customer—Oh, not any yet. You see, this is the very first store I've tried.—New York Times.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

If you have not engaged your work, I should be pleased to do it for you.

I buy only first-class Marble and Granite and do not sell unless at prices that will enable me to put up the work with credit to myself and justice to the parties purchasing.

I employ no agents and therefore am enabled to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customer, of the commission generally paid to agents.

I am under a very small expense in running my shop, myself and my son doing the larger portion of the work, and we personally attend to the setting of all work, and look upon business in this light, that Good Work and Good Material, at Fair Prices, is a standing advertisement for my business, which will tend to build up trade, and I feel safe to warrant that no dealer can sell you the same work and material any cheaper than I can.

Hoping to be favored with your patronage, I am yours respectfully,

CITY DEPARTMENT

Walter Irvine Clarke, City Editor.

—Twenty tough tramps are encamped near Westfield.

—It is rumored that a City Councilman is soon to be married.

—When are letter-carriers going to call in their summer helmets?

—Newark and Dunellen will come together in a ten-man bowling match, next week.

—The sidewalks around the new German church on Grove street are flagged with bluestone.

—Benjamin Button is arranging for a concert to be given soon for the benefit of Muhlenberg Hospital.

—Geo. Kirch is adding to the borough improvements by laying a stone walk in front of his store on Somerset street.

—Miantonomah Tribe of Red Men of this city will go to Elizabeth Nov. 9 as guests of Osceola Tribe of that city.

—The bottle-stopper factory has removed from the old stand into the new building, Fourth and Washington streets.

—A Lunardi & Co., of North avenue, on Saturday received a consignment of seventy kegs of California white grapes, probably the largest order ever sent to this city for one firm.

—A genuine live owl is the latest acquisition to the City Hotel menagerie. Since "Jennie" one of the pet squirrels, died, "Dick", her companion, has been almost frantic with grief.

—Next Sunday evening Franklin and Somerset Councils, Jr. O. U. A. M., will attend divine service in the Park Avenue Baptist church, when the Rev. J. W. Richardson will address them.

—The people of Washington Park are praising Frank Day, the manager of Dunster & Son's Metropolitan Stables, North avenue, for placing a wagonette on the route for New York commuters.

—Masons at work on the new Babcock building were laid off Friday because they had finished their part of the work, and at present there was nothing more for them to do until the stone work is further advanced.

—A class for young men for the study of theory and sight reading of music is being formed by W. H. Miner. The class will be limited to ten. Applications will be received at Room 30, Stillman building, 213 West Front street.

—The Rev. C. E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church, has formed a Bible class for young men. There are about a dozen entered at present. A meeting is held once a week, and the pastor has mapped out certain lines of study to be followed.

—Geo. DeMeza has lost the handsome watch chain which so distinguished his vest. It was made up of Greek coins linked together, and he prized it as a family heirloom. Whoever finds it will do a favor by returning it to the mourning owner.

—A committee from the International Association of Machinists are busy preparing a programme for the first of a series of musical and literary entertainments that they intend giving during the winter, which will be held in Red Men's Hall, West Front street, Wednesday evening, Nov. 8.

COMIC OPERA AT CRANFORD.

The Alcmena Society Successfully Opens Its Second Season with "Iolanthe".

The Alcmena Society, a company of clever actors and sweet singers who delighted Westfield and Elizabeth last winter by their admirable performances of "Patience", "The Mikado", and "Pirates of Penzance", began their second season on Tuesday at the Cranford Opera House where Gilbert & Sullivan's charming "Iolanthe" was capitally presented with the following cast, before a crowded house:

The Lord Chancellor	William Holmes
The Earl of Mt. Ararat	R. F. Moore
The Earl of Tolloller	Ogden W. King
Strephon	Jas. F. Fisher
Private Willis	H. M. Jackson
Train-bearer	George Taggart
Queen of the Fairies	Jessie Robertson
Iolanthe	Clara Rowine Keppel
Celia	Sadie J. Brown
Leila	Susie Wagner
Fleta	Tottie Jackson
Phyllis	Hattie Diament

Chorus of Dukes, Marquises, Earls, Viscounts, Barons and Fairies.

"Iolanthe" is perhaps the daintiest effort of its authors, by no means an easy opera to perform satisfactorily, and the fact that everything on the stage went as smoothly and gracefully as any professional troupe might hope to make it go, reflects the greatest glory upon the players and their manager. The costuming was superb, the mounting of the highest order, and the enthusiastic applause of the large and fashionable audience must have been very grateful to all concerned.

Plainfield was represented by William Holmes as the Lord Chancellor and George Taggart as his train-bearer. Mr. Holmes sang and acted in his usual finished style and made a decided hit albeit the role of the Lord Chancellor did not give him the opportunity his talents merit, and a blunder of the orchestra effectually spoiled his first entrance. George Taggart played the train-bearer at short notice and, with a very wonderful make-up, danced and strutted the small part into dignified prominence.

Mr. Fisher as "Strephon" and Mr King as "Tolloller" displayed pleasant tenor voices and acted thoroughly well. Mr. Moore, familiar as a church singer hereabouts, did ample justice to Mount Ararat. Of the ladies the chief credit belongs to the sweet "Iolanthe" of Miss Keppel and the dainty "Phyllis" of Miss Diament, both petite, true, intelligent singers and charming actresses. The minor parts were perfectly played and the chorus thoroughly trained, the Fairies especially singing most tunefully and exhibiting an array of pretty faces and graceful presences that were very fetching.

Charles Day conducted the music, and H. M. Jackson, the manager and inspirer of it all, deserves the heartiest praise for the great success of his efforts.

It is understood that the Society will revive "The Mikado" at an early date and then turn their attention to something new for springtime.

Flannery's Onion.

That onion now on exhibition at Uncle John Flannery's, Scotch Plains, and grown in the garden of John Archbold on the mountain, is not exactly out of sight, nor is it out of smell. Its measurement is 16 inches, and its weight 1½ pounds. Charley French offered $24 for it and wanted to use it for seed, but Uncle John said "Oh, no; we will save that for election night, and then slice it, no matter who is elected, for there will be a dozen of a small in any event".

Taxes Come in Slowly.

Tax-Collector John Johnson reports that the taxes are not coming in nearly as fast this year as they did last. The total tax budget amounts to $231,000 on a total valuation of about $7,800,000. Up to date only $7,800 in taxes has been collected on this year's levy.

The police force is increasing in spite of the lack of public funds. The cause for this remark is that a junior Policeman Saunders has come to town. The happy parents will name the bouncing boy after some municipal celebrity.

Miss Maude Nelson, sister of Abraham Nelson, who was formerly with Caleb Dickinson, the Park avenue jeweler, was married a few days ago to a son of Senator Fair. Miss Nelson has been on the stage for some time. Her parents live in New Market.

Mrs. P. B. Goodfellow of Park avenue, and daughter Mrs. J. K. Main of Brooklyn, have returned from Montreal after a visit of three months. They report that old residents say there has not been such fall weather in Montreal in 11 years; it is more like June than October.

Mrs. Charles Furlow, of Jackson avenue, North Plainfield, who has been visiting relatives at Hopewell, met with a serious accident Monday morning. While h trying to catch a train for home she slipped on a wet board walk and fell, injuring her spine. She was brought home and is now doing as well as can be expected.

Captain G. Kohler and Mrs. Kohler, of Brighton Heights, Staten Island, have been visiting the World's Fair. On their return last week they stopped in Plainfield and called on Mr. Kohler's brother-in-law, Henry VanName, of Elmwood place. Mr Kohler is superintendent of the R. & O. Rapid Transit on Staten Island.

The invitations are out today for the fifth season of Assemblies. The patronesses are Mrs. Charles E. Brooks, Mrs. Charles J. Fisk, Mrs. Tilley Fisk, Mrs. Robert L. Bennett, Mrs. Harry O. Runkle and Mrs. William T. Kauffman. The dances will be held as usual in the Casino on the following dates: December 11, January 1, January 29 and March 26. The books will be open for subscriptions until November 25 and no subscription will be received for less than the full season. Admission tickets for separate Assemblies may be obtained for non-resident friends of subscribers.

They were accompanied east by the family of John DuBois, who have come here to live. Mr. Smith reports times very hard in the west, and says that in Topeka, a city of 33,000 inhabitants, he noticed only one new building of any magnitude going up.

THAT HOSS JOKE.

Mr. Patterson Had No Case, Even If the Complaint Was Intended Seriously.

Councilman Fisk will not be called upon to appear before the City Judge on the charge made against him by City Accountant Patterson. The charge was that Mr. Fisk violated a city ordinance by leading or driving a horse on the sidewalk in front of Mr. Patterson's residence. The whole thing was intended as a practical joke, but when Mr. Patterson informed the Corporation Counsel of the facts of the case Mr. Marsh told him that he had no case. The City had not the power to make it a penal offense to lead or drive a horse across a sidewalk, when the object was merely to reach adjoining private premises. The City never attempted to exercise such a power. He advised Mr. Patterson to stop the proceedings and discontinue the case.

Mr. Patterson at once saw the matter in its true light, and told the officer not to serve the warrant. He also requested the Corporation Counsel to have the case discontinued. He said that there could be no trouble about that, as the City Judge was informed that it was only a practical joke before he issued his warrant.

SAVED PRISCILLA.

Clever Recovery of a Plainfielder's Sunken Yacht.

The Marine Journal tells of the clever recovery of the yacht Priscilla, owned by Albert A. Wright of this city, which was wrecked with a party of Plainfielders on board, last summer:

A peculiar case of wreckage and of clever salvage was that of the schooner yacht Priscilla, of New York, which went ashore two miles west of Watch Hill, Conn., in a fog on Aug. 25. The yacht has a draft of 9ft., and struck on the rocks at Napatree Point, dragged over them and went ashore on Napatree Beach, inside the Point and toward Watch Hill. The ladies were landed through the surf by the lone captain of the life-saving station, as he then had no crew, and on the following day a severe storm landed the yacht well up on the beach, where it was supposed she would become a total wreck. Being a strong vessel, however, she stood the "racket" first rate, but the wreckers wanted a large sum to get her off.

The owner, Albert A. Wright, of Plainfield, with the aid of implements furnished him by Messrs. Maxson & Co., of Westerly and others, decided to save her himself if possible, and on Sept. 25 she again slid into the water apparently [illegible] 1,200 ft. away from where she had landed and into the Narragansett Bay instead of the ocean. By the use of jacks she was raised and a cradle placed under her, and by means of rollers she was moved over the bank to the bay side of the beach and along the beach 1,200 ft. to a convenient location, where she was righted up and launched into deep water. Before launching, her seams were recalked where necessary, her bottom painted and made tight again, and the following day she left for City Island under her own sail to have her cabin refitted. No little credit for the work is due J. Irving Maxson, who took a very practical interest in its execution.

Dunellen Doings.

Miss S. Schilling is visiting among friends on Staten Island.

John F. Apgar is erecting a new building on Front street to accommodate a steam engine and boiler to run his planing and turning mill.

David S. Campbell started a night school recently, but it was patronized by only a few, and those evidently did not care to be enlightened.

The usual offer of a bottle of Mumm's Extra Dry Champagne has been offered by the proprietor of Taylor's Hotel, for the first person reaching the place in a sleigh this coming winter. Last year the prize was won by a Plainfield sport.

DRUGGED AND ROBBED.

MARKETMAN TOTTEN'S EXPERIENCE IN NEW YORK.

He Took a Drink in Greenwich Street, to Brace Him up Against Tooth Extraction, and Knew Nothing of Events Till He Found Himself Destitute and Sore Wandering the Streets Bewildered.

Richard Totten, of East Front street, went to New York last Monday, to buy produce for his store.

He started in the forenoon, reaching the city about noon.

One of his errands was to have a dentist extract a tooth, which had been giving him much pain, and thinking he could transact his business better after this was done he began to hunt for a dentist.

Being a little nervous about the matter, he stopped in a place on Greenwich street, where wet goods are dispensed, and purchased a little stimulant to brace up on.

That—said Mr. Totten—is the last he remembers, until midnight, when he found himself wandering around City Hall Park.

His overcoat, watch, money, railroad ticket, and everything of value, were missing.

It was for some time difficult for him to recall any previous actions, and then everything seemed hazy. That he had been used rather roughly was evident, for there were bruises on his face and body.

He finally went to a firm in Washington Market, where he buys goods, and secured enough money to reach home.

His mother and sisters were much worried about him, on account of his not coming home on time, and the story of his escapade caused much excitement in the family.

He is sure he was drugged and robbed in the Greenwich street saloon.

ONE OF THEM CAUGHT.

Dunellen Thieves Are Found to Hail From the Bowery.

Robbers are still operating at Dunellen and vicinity. On Thursday night the candy manufactory of Joseph Laing was broken into and robbed of about $60 worth of candy, etc. The robbers, three in number, entered the place by prying open the back door of the barn adjoining, climbing into the hay mow, thence through an open window and through a trap-door into the shop. They were unmolested and evidently in no hurry to leave, for they stopped into Mr. Laing's water-melon patch and carved two of his largest melons. The robbery was discovered next morning, when the back door of the shop was found wide open.

A strange coincidence in connection with the affair is the fact that a robbery had been committed near Somerville the same night, and Detective Crow of that place had notified the police along the Central road as far as Elizabethport to look out for the robbers. About 3 o'clock Friday morning a coal train stopped at the Port, and a young man giving his name as Thomas Miller, aged 19, of New York, got off. He carried a large bundle and was arrested on suspicion. His two pals escaped by running along the tracks. Miller was held until late Saturday afternoon, when Officer Crow took him into custody. He turned State's evidence and admitted stealing the seven boxes of candy found in his possession from Mr. Laing of Dunellen. His pals, he said, were Samuel Robinson, who worked all last summer for Mr. Laing, and Jacob Kilrain, all of New York. Miller said Robinson enticed him out, and all three walked to the Greenbrook banks, with their booty, intending to board a coal train and reach New York before daylight. Miller showed the officer the exact manner and way they got into the place. As no justice of the peace could be found on Saturday night, Miller was locked up in the Somerville jail, and today an effort is being made to find his two companions, whom he says "hang up" on the Bowery.

This is the second time within two weeks that Mr. Laing has been robbed of large quantities of candies, etc.

Wild Man from Westfield.

James Duffy, of Westfield, while intoxicated, undertook to take possession of a coal train on the Jersey Central Saturday night. He got on the engine at Fanwood and drew a revolver on the engineer. The latter knocked him off the train. Duffy got on a car and rode to Cranford. He was overpowered by the train hands, taken to Elizabeth and delivered to the police. Conductor W. H. Snyder made a complaint against him yesterday, and Duffy was sent to jail for a month.

Pink Tea for the Building Fund.

The Rev. J. W. Mitchell, pastor of the Emmanuel Baptist church, is desirous of having his new house of worship on Richmond street, enclosed before winter sets in. In this event, Mr. Mitchell says, he feels confident of completing the building without outside assistance. At present he is a little financially crippled, and in order to see his way clear will give a pink tea and supper in the basement of Reform Hall, Thursday evening.

That's So!

(From The New Brunswick Home News, Rep.)

Senator McPherson has reflected credit on this State by force of his character and ability.

Why? Why is Strictly Pure White Lead the best paint? Because it will outlast all other paints, give a handsomer finish, better protection to the wood, and the first cost will be less.

If Barytes and other adulterants of white lead are "just as good" as Strictly Pure White Lead, why are all the adulterated white leads always branded Pure, or

"Strictly Pure White Lead?"

This Barytes is a heavy white powder (ground stone), having the appearance of white lead, worthless as a paint, costing only about a cent a pound, and is only used to cheapen the mixture. What shoddy is to cloth, Barytes is to paint. Be careful to use only old and standard brands of white lead.

"Atlantic" "Bradley"
"Brooklyn" "Jewett"
"Ulster"

are strictly pure, "Old Dutch" process brands, established by a lifetime of use.

For colors use National Lead Co.'s Pure White Lead Tinting Colors with Strictly Pure White Lead.

For sale by the most reliable dealers in paints everywhere.

If you are going to paint, it will pay you to send to us for a book containing information that may save you many a dollar; it will only cost you a postal card to do so.

HARD-CIDER SHOPS.

Sunday Liquor Selling Openly Carried on in Plainfield.

In spite of the fact that all saloons are closed on Sunday and that it is forbidden by law to sell alcoholic liquors on that day, Monday morning brings in more drunks to the City Court than any other morning in the week, and according to the police more drunkenness is seen on the streets Sunday than on any other day. Chief of Police Grant says that the trouble lies in the cider shops, which are legally open on Sunday [illegible] with the Seventh-Day [illegible] ordinance. There are three of these places where cider is sold, and each one gives the police a great deal of trouble. Captain Grant says that men get intoxicated much quicker on the hard cider that is dispensed in these places than they do on the stuff sold in the saloons in town. There is a constant stream of men going in and coming out, in various stages of intoxication, all day Sunday, and these shops do a rushing business. Few people have any objection to an orderly Sunday traffic in peanuts or soda-water, but some provision should be made in the city ordinance to stop this violation of the Sunday liquor law.

WEST END BIRTHDAY FROLIC.

At the palatial residence of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Q. Lawson, corner of Grant avenue and Seventh street, Saturday evening, there was held a gorgeous birthday surprise party in honor of little Miss Florence Lawson. The large house was ablaze with seventy-six electric lights. All the young folks of the neighborhood were present, and spent an enjoyable evening. Mrs. Lawson, assisted by her near neighbor, Mrs. E. P. Williams, made the young people feel at home, and attended to their wants. Several large cakes, and hundreds of sandwiches, left over, were forwarded to the Children's Home. The committee who managed the affair were: Misses Annie Littell, Eleanor Williams, and Marion Woodcock. Below is a list of those who were present:

Misses Ada Rogers, Eleanor Williams, Annie Littell, Marion Woodcock, Eleanor Woodcock, Clara Long, Gussie Long, Enda Long, Edith Wright, Emma Wright, Ada Woodruff, Florence Taylor, Florence McCray, Lilly McCray, Ella Rogers, Etta Randolph, Marion Egan, Louise Egan, Edith Burt, Amy Burt, Jennie Douglas, Lulu Randolph, Jessie Burt, May Batchelor, Helen Hall, Etta Pond, Fannie Hayes, Ada Aldrich, Rena Aldrich, Ada Fountain, Annie Kingsman, May Woodruff, Florence Williams, Mary Egan, Vanduzen, Beekman, Wenzel.

Masters Allen Taylor, James Taylor, Seaman Woodruff, Lester Woodruff, Donald Wright, Charlie Burt, Lester Baldwin, Lin Hillman, Stephen Aldrich, Cyrus Kingsman, Walter Long, Roy Long, Russell Pond, Alfred Egan, Harris Egan, Gifford Crane, Harry Weltmann, Archie Douglas.

Smashing Brittle Bluerocks.

Only ten members of the Climax Gun Club were in attendance Monday at their regular monthly shoot, but, nevertheless, an enjoyable afternoon was spent and some clever shooting done. The shooting was entirely at artificial targets, and they were thrown at unknown and difficult angles. The scores in the regular club event, with the allowance given each contestant, is given below, the scratch men shooting at 25 targets:

On election day the club will hold a live-bird shoot, an attractive programme will be offered, and the various events will be open to all.

FED ON BIVALVES.

Proprietor Windham, of the Arlington, Royally Entertains His Many Friends.

A large crowd gathered at the Arlington Hotel, Somerset street, Monday night, on invitation of the proprietor, Henry Windham, and partook of an oyster supper.

The newly-furnished dining room presented a handsome appearance, and as one entered he thought it was a conservatory, so profuse were the plants and flowers arranged in tasty style in different parts of the room.

Courteous waiters were in attendance and served the dainty bivalves in any style that was called for, and many would first have a plate of raw, then a stew, and then, if he so desired, a luscious fry was placed before him. Other dainties were also on the tables, and, as was remarked, if anyone got up from the table hungry, it was his own fault.

Mr. Windham has had his bar room fixed up in great style, and the beautiful painted panels on the wall, which are the work of Mr. Windham, were admired by everyone.

After satisfying the inner man, those possessing vocal abilities adjourned to the parlor, where, to the strains of a handsome new piano, singing was indulged in until a late hour, when all departed for home declaring that as an entertainer Mine Host Windham was way above the average.

FLOURISHING MIZPAH.

Its Members Have a Pleasant Evening in Howell Division Rooms.

The musical and literary entertainment given by Mizpah Lodge, No. 1, United Order of Odd Ladies, in Howell Division Lodge rooms, Monday night, was a success in every respect, and the ladies are well satisfied with the results.

The committee in charge arranged an excellent programme, which was carried out in good style.

The song, "I have only been down to the club", by Mr. and Mrs. Chamberlin, put the audience in good humor for the other things which followed.

A dialogue, "The manager in trouble; or, the O. P. E. A.", was neatly performed by Miss Maggie Page, Miss Pauline Coon, William Tallamy and Walter Magee.

Mrs. Leland sang a pleasing solo, accompanied by Miss Ada Nash.

Another dialogue, entitled "The Widow's Mite", was given by Miss Fanny Westphal, Miss Lotty Westphal, Miss Maggie Page, Miss Pauline Coon, Bert Tallamy and John Coon.

This was followed by a recitation, "The Bootblack", by Miss Lena Weber.

The following quartette rendered a very pretty vocal selection: William Tallamy, Bert Tallamy, Bert Littell and William Leland.

Miss Lena Weber recited "No Sir", in excellent style.

A song by Miss Angie Moore, and a farce in two acts entitled "Corbett Outdone", by Mr. and Mrs. Chamberlin, concluded the evening's entertainment.

Much credit is due to the ladies for the way in which they entertained their friends.

If the various saints whom we have honored today could have made it convenient to drop in at the old barn on the Brooke property, over back of the Park Club, Tuesday night, it is altogether likely that they, with the possible exception of St. Anthony, would have been surprised. A happy party of unconventional young people had possession of the barn and spent the evening in knocking all the accepted traditions of Hallow E'en into infinitesimal fragments. In the first place—now don't faint—the boys all appeared in knickerbockers, and most of them, being either borrowed or else relics of a remote childhood, fitted very close indeed, and many a downward glance told eloquently of the wearer's anxiety. And then secondly—you may faint this time—the girls came out in short skirts, real short, and, of course, indescribable, and wore their hair down just as they did in the good old days of juvenility when they ran around and climbed trees and jumped fences and made mud pies. A 16-candle-power lamp played "Two Little Girls in Blue" and the young people and the knickerbockers and the skirtlets and the flowing tresses danced all the dances they knew and some they did not know. Then there were some chaperones (in long dresses) who, disposed at convenient intervals about the barn, watched the merry-makers, tried to keep warm, and wondered what time it was. Everybody said they enjoyed it ever so much, though, and all went home at a late hour, laid away the abbreviated garments and hoped that they hadn't caught their death of cold. Those present were: (In short trousers) Carl Brown, Howard Turrill, Philip Jacques, Edward Beekmore, Charles Faber, William Faber, Henry Wells, Frank Thompson, Charles Cook and Samuel Case; (in short dresses) the Misses Grace Brown, Kate Miller, Blanche Miller, May Goodwin, Hallie Vandeventer, Grace Barlow, Alice Barlow, Marion Henderson, Cornelia Faber, Edith Clapp, May Shreve, Emma Haviland, Gertrude Haviland, Alice Thompson, Daisy Elsberg and Etta Rodman. The chaperones (in long dresses) were Mrs. Vandeventer, Mrs. Reed, Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Henderson.

HALLOW E'EN SURPRISE.

Young People Have a Jolly Time at the Weigman Home.

A genuine surprise was given Miss Lillie Weigman, Tuesday evening, at her home on East Front street, when a large number of her young friends took possession of the house at 8, all bent on having a good time.

The committee having the affair in hand, Miss Lena Weber and Miss Katie Butterfield, had done everything in their power to make it a complete surprise, and they succeeded admirably.

Music for dancing was furnished by the veteran musician [illegible], and that, together with games, singing, etc., helped to pass the evening very pleasantly.

At midnight a sumptuous collation was served, and dancing was then the feature until daylight had almost made its appearance, when the guests started for home all declaring that they could not have had a better time.

Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Hugo Kurtzhals of Westfield, Mr. and Mrs. Redin, Mrs. Redin, Mrs. Wm. Bieler, Mrs. Charles Smith, Mr. and Mrs. George Feller, Mrs. M. Weber, Mrs. Chas. Glasstaer, Mrs. Fred Stine, the Misses Mamie Walsh, Annie Angerbauer, Dora Thorn, Annie Fiering, Laura Redin, Matilda Mersiker, Carrie Bieler, Dora Ottinger, Minnie Bechtel, Minnie Scheddecker, Lizzie Scheddecker, Annie Feller, Minnie Long, Lizzie Mohl, Carrie Mohl, Lizzie Scheline, Mamie Mohl, Messrs. Albert Allen, John Hewitt, Willett Swick, John Swick, Adam Angerbauer, George Scheline, F. Scheline, and many others.

Chrysanthemum Dance.

The Chrysanthemum Circle held their first reception last Tuesday, at the home of their president, Miss May Flanagan, West Fifth street. The young ladies forming this circle demonstrated their ability to entertain their friends in royal style, and those present all agreed that it was a delightful affair. Those present were the Misses Mamie, Maggie and Nora Casey, Sarah and Kate Carney, Kate Mack, Tessie and Alice Kasley, Julia Fields, Mary Galbraith, Fanny Rafferty, May and Marguerite Flanagan, Kate Daly, Mary Glass, F. Monahan, Mary, Louise and Annie Madden, Maggie Flynn, and M. A. Loftus; and the Messrs. Chas. Warde, Michael Winn, John S. Traynor, John Gallagher, Michael Mack, Michael Whalen, John Keely, John F. and Thomas P. Daley, Charles Daley, John Powers, Michael Flynn, William Kiely, James Casey, Caspar Waglow, M. J. Casbon, John Hibbitts, James Flynn.

Refreshments were served in abundance.

A Darling Party.

A charming Hallow E'en party was given by Miss Mabel Darling, at her home, 24 Prospect avenue, on Tuesday. The time was pleasantly passed in dancing and playing games.

Those present were the Misses Welch, May Moffett, May Crosby, of Westfield; Cora and Ella Gardner, Henrietta Cumming, Bertha Wheeler, Lily Livesy, Carrie Williams, Adelaide Runyon, Messrs. Fitz, [illegible], Wm. Taylor, M. Townley, of Westfield; Frank Duke, of New York; Messrs. George Rockfellow, George Fuller, Louis Olff, Harry Runyon, Joe Fuller.

Refreshments were furnished during the evening.

The Plainfield Money-Saver.

Phenomenal success has attended Vincent L. Frazee in his model market at 151 West Front Street. The throng of eager buyers there is continual, from early morning till long after all other shops have hung up their shutters. Mr. Frazee has achieved success by deserving it. He keeps the best of goods, yet he sells at such a small margin of profit that the prices are below those charged at other stores. The thrifty housewife finds by experience that at Frazee's she can save more money than by patronizing dealers elsewhere. Frazee's market gives the people a big worth for their money, and affords a chance to put something on a bank account besides. The big list of bargains published in the columns of The Press today is but a sample of the ordinary everyday list. Frazee's model market is where all the people swarm.

Bishop Vincent's Unique Pilgrimage.

During his Episcopal tour through Europe last summer, Bishop John H. Vincent, of Buffalo, N. Y., arranged with the Rev. Dr. Lunn, editor of the Review of the Churches, London, to carry out next January and February a very remarkable extension of the Chautauqua movement in the form of historical and educational pilgrimages through England, Italy, Spain, Greece, Egypt, and Palestine. The full programme can be obtained from Bishop Vincent.

A Public-Spirited Broker.

E. C. Mulford, the wide-awake real estate man of North avenue, has sold the attractive house which he built on a large lot on Park place, near Mercer avenue, North Plainfield, to Mr. and Mrs. Samuel W. Clark, who will reside there.

Mr. Mulford is to be praised for his admirable spirit in putting up but one house on the lot, as he might have erected two and found tenants for them without difficulty; but he had sufficient consideration for the neighborhood to sacrifice his own interests for the sake of the street.

Dunellen's Bowling Club.

The Dunellen Bowling Club now numbers 30 members, and every Monday is devoted to practicing. During the winter the club will probably practice two nights a week. The club has challenged the West Ends of Somerville to play a series of games, but the challenge has not yet been accepted.

RECTOR MURPHY WINS.

THE COMMITTEE DECLARES ITS LABORS FINISHED.

Wonders What Has Influenced Such a Change of Sentiment Among the Vestrymen—Still Believes the Majority of Parishioners Desire Mr. Murphy to Go—Resents the Interference of Clergymen of Other Denominations.

At a meeting of members of the Church of the Holy Cross, held Oct. 28, the committee appointed at a previous meeting to wait on the Rev. T. Logan Murphy and request his resignation, presented their report, as follows:

Your committee appointed to wait on the Rev. T. Logan Murphy, and, on behalf of a number of the parishioners of the Church of the Holy Cross, ask for his resignation, beg leave to report, that as directed they called on the rector and in as few words as possible made known your wishes. We did not consider it necessary to enter into a discussion of your reasons for taking this action; the duty was an unpleasant one and we hoped that a simple expression of your wishes would be sufficient. To our communication we have received the following reply:

HOLY CROSS RECTORY,
PLAINFIELD, N. J., OCT. 14, 1893.

Mr. Charles Matthews:

Enclosed find resolution passed by the vestry of the Church of the Holy Cross. I shall act in accordance with the wish of my vestry.

(Signed) T. LOGAN MURPHY.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Oct. 13, 1893.

Charles Matthews, Esq., Chairman, Plainfield, N. J.:

SIR—At a meeting of the vestry of the parish of the Holy Cross held on Saturday, Oct. 14, 1893, the following resolution was moved and carried unanimously:

"That the Secretary of the vestry be instructed to write the committee which called on Mr. Murphy and requested his resignation, that Mr. Murphy has laid before us, the vestry, the substance of their call, and that after very careful thought, and in consideration of his past services, present usefulness and irreproachable character, we deem it for the future good of the parish that he should not resign, and have requested him to act in accordance with our wishes, and in doing this the vestry believe they are expressing the sentiments of the majority of the parishioners."

(Signed) JOSEPH B. PLATT,
Secretary.

For a number of years it has been thought by many that a change of rector would be desirable. At the time we called on Mr. Murphy we had reason to believe that a large majority of the parishioners were of this opinion, and we still hold to this belief. We also knew that a majority of the members of the present vestry had expressed themselves in a like manner, one of them even offering to be one of a committee to wait on the rector and so inform him. What has since influenced them to change their views we do not know, but the fact remains and will hardly be denied.

Having performed the work intrusted to us, we feel that our work is done and submit our report for your consideration. We feel, however, before asking to be relieved, that we should in justice to ourselves, say to you and other members of the Church of the Holy Cross that we disclaim responsibility for the articles that have appeared in the public press attacking the rector and his family, and cannot but express our disapproval and indignation at the character of the same. The simple facts are as we have stated, and any reports in the newspapers that go beyond them were made up of idle gossip, misrepresentation or pure invention. As they appeared in the newspapers they were thought by some to have been inspired by your committee, and members of what is known as the Ministers Association felt called upon to come the defence of our rector.

We think that the members of the Church of the Holy Cross, without regard to their views on the question of a change of rector, feel abundantly able to manage their own affairs without outside assistance. We do not seek to interfere in any questions that may arise in other denominations, and it will hardly be thought unreasonable by the members of the congregations that these ministers represent, if we ask for ourselves the same privilege.

Chancellor Ulrich to Push the City's Claims for the Pythian Home.

The General Committee appointed by the lodges of Knights of Pythias of District No. 14 of New Jersey to advance the interests of the proposed Pythian Home of this district met in convention Friday night in the Castle Hall of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P. In spite of the bad weather a large number of members was present and many enthusiastic speeches were made.

The following resolutions were adopted by the committee:

First—That it is the unanimous vote of this committee that the Grand Lodge Knights of Pythias of New Jersey do establish a desirable and suitable Pythian Home in New Jersey.

Second—That it is the sense of this committee that the Grand Lodge of New Jersey should as a Grand Body take cognizance of this matter, and formulate and advance plans with a view towards the creation of such a Home.

Third—In order that the Grand Lodge may properly and effectively have their attention directed to the desired Home, the committee recommend that a committee of three be appointed to prepare a suitable memorial, which memorial shall properly set forth the desirability and necessity of the [illegible]

JOHN S. SAUER,

Democratic Candidate For Sheriff.

[From The Elizabeth Journal, Sep.]

John S. Sauer, whose portrait is presented today, is the Democratic candidate for Sheriff of Union county. He was born in this city in 1854, has always lived here, and is a successful business man and possessed of considerable property. His place of business is on the corner of Broad and East Jersey streets, where he conducts a large retail shoe trade, and his residence is on East Jersey street, near his place of business.

Mr. Sauer does not now appear in politics for the first time. He ran for member of the City Council twice, being once defeated by John C. Rankin and once by Joseph G. Ogden. Two years ago he was elected a member of the Board of Chosen Freeholders, and last spring became Director of the Board, an office which he still holds.

He is a gentleman of genial temperament, standing high in the circles of society in which he moves, and influential in the organizations to which he belongs. He is one of the leading members of the Young Men's Catholic Literary Association, whose handsome building is on Rahway avenue, and a member of the St. Michael's R. C. congregation.

CONSTERNATION IN BEEMERVILLE

Nearly Fifty Years Postmaster, Gabriel L. Beemer Has Been Turned Out at Last.

Beemerville, Sussex county, has a new postmaster. In many towns in the State the having of a new postmaster would not be a novelty or an event of more than passing moment, but it is a great sensation in Beemerville, for this new postmaster is the first new one the place has had in forty-seven years. In 1846, when Polk was President, Gabriel L. Beemer was appointed postmaster at Beemerville. He held the office continuously from that time until one day last week, when Wm. P. Wolfe surprised him by asking him to hand over the office to him, as he had been appointed to the place by President Cleveland. The veteran postmaster delivered the office and its belongings to the new postmaster, and the people of Beemerville haven't got their breath back yet.

"What!"—exclaimed one old-time Jersey farmer—"Gabe Beemer turned out o' the Post Office! Then, mark my words, the Democratic party is gone!"

Funeral of Miss Ella Thorn.

The funeral services of Miss Ella V. Thorn, whose sudden death occurred last Sunday at Mt. Pleasant, Ohio, while coming to Plainfield, was held Thursday afternoon at 2, from the residence of her aunt, Mrs. M. F. Marckley, 131 New street.

The Rev. Dr. Lowry and the Rev. Dr. Yerkes were present and each made remarks appropriate to the occasion. Dr. Yerkes read the Scripture lesson and spoke in part as follows: "There is nothing left of the household from which our sister has departed. But there is another relationship; that which unites us with the heavenly family. It is an enlargement of family relationship for those whose lives are united with Christ. Death cannot break that tie. We think of our sister today with saddened hearts. We are apt to think that her sudden death was a mishap, yet it cannot be. She started for Plainfield to meet her friends and receive their greetings. Instead she has received the greetings of her loved ones gone before. Her battle is fought; her race is run.

What is more beautiful than an immortal soul crowned with glory.

I knew the deceased a long time before she confessed Christ, knew her experience. She was always willing to trust others, and mistrust herself, and had an abiding consciousness of her unworthiness. She knew what it was to have communion with Christ.

Her last request to the friend by her bedside was that the 23d Psalm might be read to her.

The doctor's remarks were followed with a touching and pathetic prayer.

Interment was made in the Friends cemetery.

The pall-bearers were A. M. Vanderbeek, Mulford Estil, Robison Pound and Elmer Runyon.

Singular Coincidences.

A very strange coincidence has occurred in the Fraase family of this city within the past year. During that time five deaths have occurred on Sunday and each one was buried on the following Wednesday. The list is:

Mrs. William Morgan, sister of A. M. Fraase, died Sunday, Dec. 12, 1892; buried Wednesday.

Ida, daughter of Samuel D. Fraase, died Sunday, Dec. 25, 1892; buried Wednesday.

Gershom, Fraase, died Sunday, Feb. 5, 1893; buried Wednesday.

Mrs. Nancy B. Southard, wife of A. M. Fraase, died Sunday, April 14, 1893; buried Wednesday.

Mrs. Elnora Munn, wife of Samuel D. Fraase, died Sunday, Oct. 22, 1893; buried Wednesday, Oct. 25.

Out of the ten children of the late Randolph Fraase, only three are living—James, Samuel D., and Augustus M. Fraase.

Muhlenberg Hospital Fair.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—The undersigned begs leave to call attention to the advertisement on another page of this paper regarding the fair which is to be held Nov. 1 and 2, afternoons and evenings, at the Casino, under the auspices of the Woman's Auxiliary Board of Muhlenberg Hospital.

The arrangements are now nearly completed, and bid fair to satisfy even the most fastidious taste. Special attractions will be offered to all, including the little folks, and the ladies in charge cordially invite the public to favor them with a large attendance, and to help them with willing hands in their enterprise.

A GIANT ENGINE.

This New Bit of Machinery Has the Strength of 150 Horses.

The foundation for the new engine in the Plainfield Electric Light plant is completed, and the work of erecting the machine will begin immediately. The engine is a Westinghouse Compound of 150 h. p. and will be used to run the Edison railroad generator, which will be moved to a foundation opposite the new engine. The engine that at present is used to run the railroad generator will be used for a 1200 light Westinghouse alternator.

With the present addition the lighting plant will consist of two Westinghouse standard 150 h. p. engines, each running a 1200 light alternator, two Westinghouse compound 150 h. p. engines, one running a 1650 light machine and the other a 1200 light machine. With the proposed arrangement of the plant it will be possible to use the two compound engines alone for the night shift, thereby effecting a great economy in the consumption of steam.

The Press as an Educator.

An interesting scene was enacted at the Fanwood station Thursday, just after the arrival of the evening papers.

A youth of some twelve summers secured a copy of The Press and noticing the articles relating to Fanwood proceeded to read them aloud to a companion. In an incredibly short time other children came in for the papers and gathering around the good-natured reader insisted upon having a repetition to hear it all. The waiting room was soon filled and the manner in which the reading was conducted, and the rapt attention of the other children, moved one of a party of gentlemen gathered at the window to remark: "This is indeed a night school, and I shall encourage my child to improve his mind by just such reading."

OFFICIAL.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Oct. 13, 1893.

Resolved, That permission be and the same is hereby granted to the said Consolidated Traction Company to lay a double track street railway, with the necessary turn-outs, switches, sidings and turn-tables, in and through said avenue from North Broad street, in the city of Elizabeth, and to make necessary connections therewith; and the tracks of said Consolidated Traction Company and the same are hereby located in and through said street or avenue, between said North Broad street and the county line; and be it further

Resolved, That said license, permission, location and franchise is hereby granted on the following terms and conditions:

1. That said tracks shall be laid in the centre of said avenue as nearly as practicable; that the guage of said tracks shall be four feet eight and one-half inches, and the space between their inner rails shall not exceed five feet. The rails used in constructing said tracks shall be of the kind and known as the standing girder rail now being laid on Elizabeth avenue in the city of Elizabeth.

2. That a row of paving stones shall be firmly placed against each side of each rail, six inches wide and eight inches deep, and flush therewith, and constantly maintained in that position; that the space between the rails of each track and the space between the tracks shall be paved with cobble stones and kept in order, and a space of nine feet along the outer side of each of said tracks shall be paved by said company with Telford macadam pavement, the same as called for in the county specifications for the paving of said avenue.

3. That the poles to be used for equipping said road for operation by electricity shall be of iron or steel, and placed on the sidewalks of said avenue adjoining the curb stones, and said poles shall not be less than one hundred and twenty-five feet apart, and that the wire shall be not less than twenty feet above the street.

4. That the work of constructing said road shall be commenced forthwith and carried on as rapidly as practicable, under the direction of this Board or of its committee and county engineer; and that said road shall be equipped and ready for occupation by electricity on or before the thirtieth day of June next.

5. That the said company shall connect the street railroad on North Broad street, now owned or controlled by it, with the tracks hereby located, and take such proceedings as may be necessary to equip the street railroad extending from the intersection of North Broad street and Newark avenue to [illegible]

WONDERFUL STORY OF SURGERY RELATED BY A DRUMMER.

The Second Remarkable Operation Performed by His Two Doctor Friends. Trouble Ensued When This Latest Patient Tried to Sing in Church.

The Chicago drummer who tells the wonderful surgery stories was in town again last week. Two years ago he related how two doctor friends of his had successfully removed a diseased stomach from a patient and grafted into its place the stomach of a sheep, and how the patient became perfectly healthy, but had to subsist on grass in summer and hay and bran mash in the winter.

Coolly seated in one of the big leather covered chairs at the Hotel Cadillac, the drummer related another marvelous feat of surgical skill performed by the two doctors.

BAD SPELLERS.

Imperfections in Eyesight as a Reason Leading to Defective Orthography.

A man who is constantly making ought, of course, to be able to spell the words which he is constantly seeing on the page before him. Yet, as we know, it often happens that good readers are exceedingly bad spellers. Why is this? We believe it is because the bad speller sees and reads each word as a whole—as a phonogram or thought symbol, that is, and not as so many letters. All people, of course, do this to some extent, but we believe that the accurated bad speller does it very much more than the good speller.

The ordinary man, puzzled about a word, writes it to see how it looks, and this look tells him at once whether he has spelled it right or wrong. The true bad speller is, however, not helped the very least bit in the world by this process. He is only the more puzzled by the writing on the blotting pad. He may write the word a dozen ways and not get one version which looks to him better than the others. The truth is his eyes have some defect, probably of focusing power, which prevents him seeing clearly the letters of the words. [illegible]

Grandma's Song.

In the corner, softly rocking,
With her knitting, grandma sat;
At her feet before the fender
Purred the household tabby cat;
Soft and cheery glowed the firelight,
Reflecting on the polished tongs,
As grandma plied her needles nimbly,
And repeated this loveliest of songs:
"Ye banks and braes o' bonny Doon,
How can ye bloom sae fresh and fair?
How can ye chant, ye little birds,
And I sae weary, fu' o' care?"

There beside her on a hassock
Sat her darling golden head,
Little Mabel, with her dolly,
Nearly ready for her bed.
Through the thoughts of that wee maiden
Rang the notes of that old tune,
And between her childish fancies
Swept its dreamy, tender rune:
"Ye banks and braes o' bonny Doon,
How can ye bloom sae fresh and fair?
How can ye chant, ye little birds,
And I sae weary, fu' o' care?"

To grandma's lap climbed little Mabel,

Faith.

[illegible]
Only when we are strong, shrinks when we shrink.
It comes when music stirs us, and the chords,
Moving on some grand climax, shake our souls
With influx new that makes new energies.
It comes in swelling of the heart and tears
That rise at noble and at gentle deeds—
At labors of the master artist's hand,
Which, trembling, touches to a finer end,
Trembling before an image seen within.
It comes in moments of heroic love,
Unjealous joy in joy not made for us—
In conscious triumph of the good within,
Making us worship goodness that rebukes.
Even our failures are a prophecy,
Even our yearnings and our bitter tears
After that fair and true we cannot grasp;
As patriots who seem to die in vain
Make liberty more sacred by their pangs.

What is

CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
DR. G. C. OSGOOD,
Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
DR. J. F. KINCHELOE,
Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. ARCHER, M. D.,
111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

A Shark's Mistake.

We had on board the brig Emma Luce a full blooded native of the South Sea islands whom we called Kalina, which is the name of the place where he belonged. Kalina was on his way back home after a visit to civilization, and he was very happy. He was a supple, sinewy fellow, with a restless eye and a hand that could move with the swiftness of a flash. He had picked up a certain amount of broken English, and he was very proud of his accomplishment.

For some days a huge shark had been following us, and the superstitious sailors declared it was an omen of evil. They reiterated time after time that some calamity was bound to befall us. Finally we were becalmed beneath a brazen sky and in the midst of a vast, glassy ocean. Still the shark played about us, his back fin cutting the surface of the water here and there.

"It's a sure sign of death," soberly declared one old tar.

Kalina heard the words and nodded.

"Somebody got go," he said. "Kalina go."

We did not fathom the meaning of his words until he had swiftly stripped off his clothes and plunged over the rail headlong into the sea. Everybody rushed to the side and yelled at him to come back, for he was swimming swiftly from the brig, something gripped in his teeth. He paid not the least attention to our cries.

It was not long before the man eater sighted the swimmer, and we saw the sharp fin cutting through the water like a streak. A feeling of unutterable horror seized every one of us, and we watched for the consummation of the tragedy.

The South Sea islanders are the most expert swimmers, but all at once Kalina seemed to become confused or frightened, for he began to splash and flounder about in the most awkward manner. The shark must have felt sure of his feast.

Just as we expected to see the man eater grasp his prey, Kalina disappeared like a flash. It was impossible to tell how he did it, but he seemed to dive down into the water as if he had plunged headlong from a great height.

There was a sudden flurry beneath the surface, in which rose a bright crimson stain, and then up came a dark body that turned over on its side and lay still.

It was the shark, and he was dead as he could be!

But where was Kalina? We looked about for the native in vain, and all began to think he had been killed and the body had sunk to rise no more. Just as we arrived at this conclusion a hail came from under the bow of the brig, and there was Kalina, having swum under water from the scene of the encounter to the Emma Luce.

A rope was immediately flung to him, and he came aboard hand over hand with the agility of a monkey, a knife gripped in his teeth. Quickly he stood grinning before us, his black body shining in the sunlight.

"Shark sign of dead," he observed. "You bet! Him dead. That make right. Kalina fool him." GILBERT PATTEN.

The heating is produced so quickly locally that neither the water nor the body of the metal rod has time to become hot. So rapid an evolution of heat means a tremendously high temperature. WEEKLY CONSTITUTIONALIST
DAILY PRESS
(Chautauqua Building),
PLAINFIELD N. J

THE BOROUGH WAKES UP.

IT HEEDS THE WARNING OF THE DAILY PRESS.

Better Police Protection in Prospect—Two New Marshals to be Put on as Night Patrol—Frank Currie Appointed on the Board of Health—Better Public Business in North Plainfield.

The regular monthly business meeting of the Borough Council was held in the Council chamber Friday evening.

Mayor Saunders called the meeting to order at 8.

In the absence of Clerk John Vetterlein, Borough Counsel Charles A. Reed was called on to act in his place.

Councilmen Needham, Howell, Fountain and Edwards were present. Councilmen Neal and Kraemer were absent.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

Mr. Howell presented a communication signed by Benjamin Day, C. B. Matthews, Samuel Townsend and others, residents of Washington Park, asking the Council to provide better police protection, and that a marshal be kept on duty all night. It was received and placed on file.

Mr. Fountain presented a communication from residents of Willow and West End avenues, asking for more street lamps. It was referred to the proper committee.

The bill of Frank Schenk, for $5 65, was presented, and later in the evening was ordered paid, as was also the bill of John Mackey, for $2.25 for special police duty.

The Mayor appointed Frank Currie to membership on the Board of Health, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Robert T. Currie. The appointment was confirmed by the Council.

Mr. Fountain reported that the Plainfield Water Supply Company had placed the hydrant on Girard avenue, as ordered, and that it was ready for use.

A communication from the Edison Electric Light Company, stated that much trouble had been experienced in lighting the streets on account of boys breaking lamps, and asked that the Council offer a reward for their capture.

Mr. Howell thought the company should protect their own property, and did not see why the Council should offer a reward.

Mr. Fountain afterwards offered a resolution that $10 be named as a reward. It was adopted.

I. J. Stiles, of Dunellen, petitioned the Council for a light on Rock road. The members did not think it advisable to grant it, and acted accordingly.

Mr. Fountain said it was impossible for him to discover all the broken lamps through the Borough, but a young man named Brokaw had been assisting him, and Mr. Fountain reported several lamps broken.

Mayor Saunders said he wished The Press would state that the Council would consider it a favor if residents would report any lamps that did not give satisfaction or were broken.

The Mayor asked about a lamp that was ordered placed on Orchard place. Mr. Fountain said the Superintendent of the Edison Company told him it would be burning that night. Mr. Howell stated that it was not burning. The company will be notified.

Mr. Needham offered a resolution that the Corporation Counsel and Clerk give due notice of the intention of the Council to vacate Fairview avenue. Several years ago this property was staked out for the purpose of putting a street through, but nothing further had been done. It is now the intention of the Council to open the street, hence the notice to vacate the property, which is near the ball grounds. The resolution was adopted.

Mr. Fountain offered a resolution, which was carried, that eight new lamps be placed as follows: Two on Willow avenue, two on West End avenue and four on Rockview avenue.

Mr. Needham offered a resolution that for better police protection two marshals be appointed to do police and patrol duty all night under the direction of the Borough Marshal, the term of service to be determined by the Mayor and Council, and their salaries not to exceed $30 per month. He also suggested that one man be placed on each side of Somerset street. It was adopted.

Mr. Needham moved that when the Council adjourn it be to meet Friday, Nov. 17, at which time the Borough Marshal could submit names for the consideration of the Council for marshals.

A resident of Summit avenue was present at the meeting, and complained of the condition of his street, which he said had been ploughed up and had not been put in good condition. The Mayor instructed Marshal Pangborn to see Councilman Neal about the matter.

The Mayor made the following appointments, to fill vacancies:

Committee on Laws, Ordinances and Election—Robert Fountain.

Committee on License and Marshals—Robert Fountain.

The Council adjourned at 9.

HOPE CHAPEL'S SUCCESSFUL SHOW.

Pleasant Evening Passed Under the Auspices of the Ladies Aid Society.

The entertainment in Hope chapel Friday night for the benefit of the Ladies Aid Society was a brilliant success. The chapel was crowded to its utmost capacity, and a good sum was realized to help the treasury of the Society.

The farce at the end of the programme kept the audience in roars of laughter. The cast was exceptionally good, and Miss Lizzie Dorvir as "Katrina" won great applause. The recitations and musical selections were all well received. After the entertainment coffee and cake were served to the audience. The following is the programme:

Piano Solo..........Miss Firstbrook
Vocal Duet—"I Live to Love Thee",
Messrs. Tallamy Brothers
Recitation—Selected..........William Newman
Solo and Chorus—"When the Roses Bloom Again",
Mrs. Westphal, Miss Sears and Messrs. Tallamy Brothers.
Cornet Solo..........William Newman
Tenor Solo—"Star of Bethlehem" Fred A. Lewis
Recitation—"Sheridan's Ride", by request,
Master Albert Ford
Selection—"Hush Thee My Baby"...Quartette
German Sayings..........John H. Carney

The evening's entertainment concluded with the side splitting farce entitled "Rudolph Krummeyer, The Shoemaker". The following is the cast:

Rudolph..........John H. Carney
Katrina, his frau..........Miss Lizzie Dorvir
Smith, The Grocer..........William A. Westphal
Brown, The Butcher..........William Newman
Charlie, The Newsboy..........Master Ford

To Keep the Baptists Warm.

IN BOWER OF PALMS

AND AUTUMN BLOOM, TWO HAPPY HEARTS THEIR PLEDGES PLIGHTED.

With Rubric Palms and Rare Ferns the Atmosphere Was Sweet—Delightful—Scotch Airs Were Played for Groom and Maid, and All Was Sweet as Harmonious.

In a bower of palms and white chrysanthemums, Miss Josephine Pierson was married Thursday night to Malcolm McKenzie. The ceremony took place in the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church. The bride is daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Israel C. Pierson of Watchung avenue, and the groom son of Mr. and Mrs. John D. McKenzie of Central avenue.

The witnesses were a throng, and the wedding was as pretty as ever graced a Plainfield altar.

The ceremony was performed promptly at 8:30 by the Rev. William R. Richards, D. D. Some time before the hour set for the ceremony the body of the church was entirely filled by the wedding guests. Admission was by card only.

The ushers, Messrs. Charles M. Hay, Frank Beattys and Rollin P. Grant and the Rev. George Kennedy, were kept very busy seating the multitude of people who flocked to the church.

The wedding party arrived on time. In the procession the four ushers came first, then the maid of honor, Miss Mabel Pierson, sister of the bride. The bride came up the aisle escorted by her father. Clarence McKenzie, brother of the groom, was best man. Miss Jennie Utter presided at the organ, her selections included several Caledonian melodies in compliment to the groom, who is a Scotchman. The front of the church was filled with palms and ferns. A single bunch of huge white chrysanthemums relieved the solid green bank. The bride wore heavy white silk, trimmed with duchesse point-lace. She wore a tulle veil and carried lilies of the valley. The maid of honor wore pale green crepe de chine, and carried white chrysanthemums and maiden-hair ferns. The groom wore flowers from the bride's bouquet, and the lapels of the ushers' coats were decorated with large white chrysanthemums.

After the ceremony a limited number of the guests reassembled at the home of the bride, 732 Watchung avenue. The house was exquisitely decorated with white, pink and yellow chrysanthemums, ferns, palms, smilax and autumn leaves. The entire floral decoration was in charge of William H. Brower & Son, of New York and Plainfield. Supper was served by Marsel, and the music, which was a feature of the evening, was by a string quartette, led by P. Ludwig Conde of Plainfield. The selections were chiefly Scotch airs.

The bride and groom left at 9 for Washington, where they will spend the honeymoon. Their home will be New York. Among the guests at the reception were:

Mrs. James A. Edgar, Miss Edgar, Rev. Dr. and Mrs. W. R. Richards, Miss Barrow, Mr. and Mrs. John D. McKenzie, Mr. and Mrs. John Jay Chase, Mr. and Mrs. John Van Horne, Mr. Brown, Hon. and Mrs. Robert A. Davison, Mr. and Mrs. L. N. Lovell, Benjamin H. Boyle, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Newhall, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Baker, Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Myers, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Woodruff Chancellor and Mrs. Henry M. MacCracken, Mr. and Mrs. Henry E. Bowen, W. A. Brower, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Ayers McKinzie, Mrs. Boone, Mrs. Harbagh, Fred E. Booth, Mr. and Mrs. J. Hugh Petrie, Miss Kate M. Booth, Miss Sadie Booth, Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Huntington, Miss Huntington, Theodore Petrie, Miss Preston, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac L. Miller, Mrs. Worthington.

MOUNTAINEER DEBATERS.

Young People of Washingtonville Organize a Lyceum.

A number of the young people near Washingtonville have formed themselves into the Lyceum Debating Society. Meetings are held the first and third Wednesdays in every month, in the schoolhouse in the Valley. Last evening the society met and listened to an able address by John F. Bagger, a teacher in the school, on the World's Fair.

A banjo duet by Miss Mamie Steiner and Miss Ida Lewis was enjoyed. Following this, a "question box" was conducted by Miss Mamie Steiner, Frank Dodge and Theodore Bartell, which was very interesting.

The members of the society are: The Misses Ida Lewis, Belle Lewis, Mamie Steiner, Maggie Miles, Edith Miles, Jessie Coddington, Nettie Beeching, Lena Smalley, May McLaughlin, Etta Blair, Anna Spier and Rose Spier, and Messrs. Robert Clark, Edward Clark, John Steiner, Herbert Schott, Harry Coddington, Lewis Schott, William and Herbert Woodland, Herbert Steiner, Henry Rogers, Robert Clark, Sr., George Beeching, Frank Dodge, Willie Kitchen, Harry Drake, Willard Morrison, Alfred Coddington, Theodore Bartell, Robert Rogers, Richard Rogers, and George Spier.

The next meeting will be held November 15, for which an elaborate programme is being prepared.

HARDSHIP TO LITTLE ONES.

Unjust Discipline of Classes for the Misbehavior of a Few.

Complaint comes from several families having small children in the public schools of the treatment that some of the younger classes receive when one or more of their number misbehave.

"I think it a shame"—said an indignant parent—"that one child should be kept in on account of the ill-doing of some of the others. The teachers do not realize"—said he—"that the nerves of the more sensitive children are stretched to their highest tension by the long hours of study, and that an additional hour or two is apt to break down a child entirely. My little girl sometimes comes home at 4 crying because she has been kept in with the whole class on account of the misbehavior of some of its members. It is not right, and I hope Supt. Maxson will effect reform in this direction."

Thatcher Sees Out Now.

Herbert Thatcher has received a letter from his brother John Thatcher, who is in Chicago. The latter states that he is recovering from his injuries received by the horse car, and is able to attend business with the aid of crutches. His many friends will be glad to hear of this.

Grateful for Assistance.

Mrs. Wm. B. Huntley desires, through the columns of The Press, to thank her many friends, who gave such valuable assistance during the illness of her late husband, and wishes to thank especially the members of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., the Woman's Relief Corps, No. 20, Auxiliary to the Post, and the Ancient Order of United Workmen.

BOUNCED FOR HIS MANHOOD.

Editor Runyon Had No Use for a Reporter Who Respected His Pledge of Honor.

The inconvenience of a newspaper man acting as officer of a club is demonstrated in the case of Henry Swift Thomas. Mr Thomas has been a faithful worker on the Courier. Up to last night he was also secretary and treasurer of the Crescent Wheelmen. Last night Mr. Thomas resigned his position as an officer of the club. The reasons for his resignation are as follows:

When the Crescent Wheelmen were agitating the question of fusion with the Board of Trade, all the city newspapers made notes of the facts, and when the final action was taken by the Wheelmen The Press published a full and exclusive account of the proceeding. It seems that the club passed resolutions at that meeting to give nothing to the papers about the matter until the Board of Trade had acted upon it. The Press not being a member of the club was not bound to respect this injunction of secrecy when a member gave the facts away. Mr. Thomas as secretary and treasurer of the club was bound to reveal nothing, and refrained from printing any reference to the matter in The Courier. When Editor Runyon read The Press and found that the news of the action had not been published in his paper, he waxed very wroth, and, calling Mr. Thomas to him, dismissed him forthwith from the staff.

Here, then, was a man who because he had honor enough to carry out the injunction of a club as an officer of that club was discharged by his employer. But virtue and ability bring their own reward, for Editor Runyon has since found it to his best advantage to ask Mr. Thomas to return to the staff, as he finds he cannot get along without him. He had to resign from office, however, to be unpledged in the future.

HAS TO SAY THIS TO KEEP HIS JOB.

This Story Entirely Different from What He Told His Friends About Town and at the Club.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—In an article printed in your columns yesterday, you stated that I was discharged by Mr. Runyon as reporter for The Courier, because I failed to furnish a story of the action of the Crescent Wheelmen. You are entirely wrong. I was not discharged nor was there any disagreement between Mr. Runyon and myself regarding the matter. Mr. Runyon expressed a desire that I should free myself of such arrangements as conflicted with my work as reporter for his paper. In order that I might not be again placed in a position conflicting with my business, I resigned as Secretary and Treasurer of the Wheelmen. Your aspersions upon Mr. Runyon were untrue and absolutely unjust.

H. S. THOMAS.

Plainfield, Nov 3.

[Does Mr. Thomas forget what he tremblingly told his fellow members at the Wheelmen's meeting Wednesday night? That story is in the possession of The Press, but we hope Mr. Thomas will spare himself the pain of forcing us to publish it.—Ed.]

HE'S A HUSTLER FROM PLAINFIELD.

Something About the Brooklyn L's Oldest Conductor, Now a Despatcher.

In a recent issue the Brooklyn Times published the likeness of an energetic looking young man from Plainfield, and said:

This is a pretty good picture of Peter J. Collins. If Mr. Collins had sat for his photograph with the blue cap he used to wear perhaps the thousands who knew him would recognize the likeness more readily. Mr. Collins wearing the derby hat indicates to the railroad man that he is above the cap degree; in other words, he can wear the derby while on duty. Mr. Collins was the first conductor appointed on the Brooklyn Elevated Railroad system, and he had the honor to conduct the first train over each of the lines in turn as they were opened. Mr. Collins is now a train despatcher at one of the most important points on the system—the foot of Broadway. He was appointed in recognition of his faithful work as a conductor. Until he was promoted Mr. Collins was the oldest conductor on the road. When he used to bang open the car doors and energetically yell the name of the stations everybody remarked what vim he had.

Mr. Collins earned a reputation as a good conductor and now he is turning his attention to a wider field. Up in East New York he is known as a very shrewd politician, and is at the head of the Brownsville contingent of the Democracy of that section. Mr. Collins is a warm admirer of Police Capt. Henry French and he has labored hard in that popular gentleman's cause. Two thousand independent Democrats swear by Mr. Collins and they are talking of nominating him for Supervisor of the Twenty-sixth Ward. If he would put as much vim into helping run the county's affairs as he used in running trains then Mr. Collins would surely make things hum. Mr. Collins was born in New Jersey, and his home is in Plainfield. He has been in the railroad business ever since he was big enough to board a train.

Candy Show, Next.

The opening of the World's Candy Exposition, in the Lenox Lyceum, Madison avenue and 59th street, will be an event, next Monday evening, in which New York will be interested, and in which Plainfield people who visit New York should be interested also. The exhibition will be novel and important. It will be full of candy and candy making, and will be, in its liberality to visitors, equal to the food shows that have been so popular. Admission to everything will be 25 cents, with a box of bon-bons to every lady purchasing a ticket. The doors will be open daily from 1 until 10:30 p. m., and the exposition will close November 25.

Thanks to Warren Chapel.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Permit me to express to the late trustees of the Warren mission and to the trustees of the Warren chapel our heartfelt thanks for the privilege of worshipping in their building for so long a time.

We are thankful to say that during that time we have grown, and through God's grace have been enabled to secure a building of our own. May the richest blessings of God follow them in their own work, which they begun in this place!

THE HOSPITAL FAIR.

ALL PLAINFIELD WAS THERE, AND MONEY WAS FREELY EXPENDED.

The Women Ran Things as if They Had Wings, and All Said the Result Was Most Splendid—From a Painting Screen to a Paper Cigar You Can Get What You Want at This Famous Bazar.

(From The Press, of November 2.)

The first afternoon and evening of the Muhlenberg Hospital Fair at the Casino have shown results gratifying to the managers. As to the artistic success of the fair, there was little doubt of that from the first, and not enough can be said in praise of the effects of the tables and their decorations. Along the walls of the Casino the tables are placed at short intervals, each draped in white muslin and decorated with the large red cross of the hospital. On the tables is a fast diminishing variety of salable articles of every description, comprising not only things that one really wants, but even things that no one could find any use for. It may be mentioned that the latter class sells more readily than the former, as most people have a prejudice against buying useful articles at a charity fair. Nevertheless, all the goods, whether useful or not, are attractive and some are artistic. Among the most attractive tables, and one that proves very popular, is the one where the Sub Rosa girls sell everything you can think of, made of paper, from a lamp shade down to a cigar—at least one supposes the cigars are made of paper, as very few were sold. The deficiency in the cigar trade, however, was more than made up by the sale of the other paper things, and the secret society maidens with Mrs. George Wharton Edwards at their head wrung many a hard-earned dollar from the pocket of susceptible youth. A blotter painted and contributed by Mr. Edwards sold at a high price shortly after the fair was opened. Mr. Edwards was very generous in his contributions to the fair, as a large water color by him, marked $100, testified. The picture is called "On the Dunes". The figure is that of a young pleasant girl easing over the dunes, and the coloring and treatment are in Mr. Edwards's best style.

The flower and candy table is one of the prettiest of all the pretty ones. It takes up the whole of the front of the stage, and is loaded down with attractive sweets and covered with flowers.

An ingenious idea is embodied in the doll table. On this are some thirty or more dolls dressed and sent in by the various hospitals, a list of which is given below. Each hospital dressed its doll in the uniform worn by the nurses at that institution, and the collection of frocks and caps attracts many interested spectators.

In an oriental retreat Miss Elizabeth Stewart told the fortunes of the fortunate who went to her to have their palms read, while Mrs. Haviland took charge of the Lady of the Lake booth, in the opposite corner of the Casino.

While the attendance was good yesterday, there was no crowd at any time. The prospect of a dance tonight will doubtless bring many more to the Casino, and a very large attendance is expected. The following is a list of the tables, with their chairmen and assistants:

Fancy Goods Table—Chairman, Mrs. Charles E. Brooks, Assistants—Mrs. Frederick Mead, Mrs. William Kaufman, Mrs. Robert L. Barnett, Mrs. Van Buren and Mrs. Chas. Kinne.

Odds and Ends Table—Chairman, Miss Mary Tweedy, Assistants—Miss Musgrove, Miss Erskine, Miss White, Mrs. Conefsky and Miss Tweedy.

Sub Rosa Table—Chairman, Mrs. George Wharton Edwards, Assistants—Miss Jeremy Horne, Miss Marion Dumont, Miss Maude VanBoskerck, Miss Lizzie VanBoskerck, Miss Florence Huntington, Miss Fay Hawley, Miss Corliss and Miss Lawrence.

Fancy Goods Table—Chairman, Mrs. William R. Lowe, Assistants—Mrs. Fleming, Mrs. Finch, Mrs. Herring, Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Simpson.

Book Table—Chairman, Mrs. Beers, Assistants—Mrs. Lapsley, Mrs. Goddard and Mrs. Henry E. Bowen.

Flower and Candy Table—Chairman—Mrs. Cox and Mrs. Huntington. Assistants—Miss Talmadge, Mrs. Howard Tracy, Mrs. Daniel Ginna, Mrs. Tracy, Miss Hawley and Miss Streuli.

Fancy Goods Table—Chairman, Mrs. G. W. Endicott, Assistants—Mrs. William S. Marsh, Miss Anna Haviland and Miss Sortell.

King's Daughters Table—Chairman, Mrs. Foster and Mrs. Haviland. Assistants—(Representatives of each Circle of King's Daughters will act as assistants.)

Fancy Goods Table—Chairman, Mrs. Saunders, Assistants—Mrs. B. A. Hegeman, Mrs. Charles Reed, Mrs. E. Waltmann and Miss Woltmann.

Cushion Table—Chairman, Mrs. Runkle. Assistants—Mrs. Charles Fisk, Mrs. Pliny Fisk, Mrs. William Wadsworth, Mrs. J. K. Myers and Miss Ritchie of Trenton.

Art Table—Chairman, Mrs. James Scott, Assistants, Mrs. William Boome, Mrs. T. R. Tomlinson, Mrs. Walter Stewart, Miss Tomlinson, Mrs. Stimson.

Doll Table — Chairman, Miss Florence Tweedy. Assistants, Miss Lillian Erskine, Miss Schipper, Miss Cook, Mrs. Schipper, Miss May Tracy and Miss Moran.

Grocery Table—Chairman, Mrs. Ford, Assistants, Mrs. Arents, Miss Verdon, Mrs. G. H. Frost, Mrs. A. B. Green, Miss Lillian Fritts, Miss Emily Sandford and Mrs. McElroy.

Lemonade Table—Chairman, Mrs. Lawson. Assistants, Mrs. Randall, Miss Margaret Tracy, Miss Abbott and Miss Whiton.

Refreshment Table—Chairman, Mrs. Woodruff. Assistants, Mrs. Stover, Mrs. Case, Mrs. Harmon, Mrs. W. H. Miller, the Misses Ditch, Miss Schoonmaker, Miss Thorne, Miss Woodruff and Miss Bowers.

MR. FISK KNOCKS 'EM DOWN.

THE CHERUBIC COUNCILMAN MAKES A NIFTY AUCTIONEER.

He is Ably Assisted by Mr. Kaufman, and They Get Rid of Everything Left Over from the Hospital Fair—Profits Approximate $1,500, which is a Substantial Benefit.

The Hospital Fair reopened Thursday afternoon with a very large attendance, and the crowd increased until late in the evening, when the Casino was practically filled with people. Business went on briskly at all the tables, so that at 10:30 when the auctioneering began there were but few articles left to knock down to the highest bidder. Charles Fisk was the first to start the auction. Mounted on a chair behind one of the fancy goods tables he called loudly to the men and women to admire the quality of the articles for sale. Rag dolls, pens, penholders and pen-wipers were quickly disposed of, none of them bringing surprisingly high prices.

Meanwhile W. T. Kaufman had climbed to the top of the table, where household articles and kitchen utensils were for sale, and, with a muffin pan in one hand and a chocolate grater in the other, solicited the patronage of the crowd.

Enthusiasm for buying things at auction did not last long, and soon Mr. Kaufman was begging the people to accept a large and juicy cake as a gift. One rash man found himself possessed of a pail of lard which he carried around as if it were a baby, and he did not know just what to do with it. Many of the tables were entirely sold out, and what few things were left were all disposed of by Messrs. Fisk and Kaufman.

At the household table copies of The Press of yesterday, donated by the publisher, and containing a full account of the opening day of the fair, at 5 cents apiece sold rapidly and netted a few extra dollars to serve the grand total. Many of the most attractive articles were chanced off, and the winners secured them for a song. Mr. Edwards's peasant girl picture "On the Dunes" was disposed of at $1 a share, and the fortunate person who won it had no cause to complain of the investment.

It was estimated last night that about $1,500 had been netted at the two-days sale, but it was impossible to judge accurately of the amount made. The proceeds of the first day amounted to $916, and the "gate receipts" of yesterday were over $60.

The promised dance to the girls that helped at the tables began about 9. The floor was perfect, and the music was exceptionally good. Messrs. Conde and Rogers with their men made dancing a pleasure, and their choice selections and excellent time were remarked by all.

Among those dancing were:

Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Brooks, Mr. and Mrs. William T. Kaufman, Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Barnett, Miss Lawrence, Miss Erskine, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Tracy, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Ginna, Miss Haviland, Miss Sortell, Mr. and Mrs. William L. Saunders, Mrs. B. A. Hegeman, Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Reed, Mr. and Mrs. Pliny Fisk, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fisk, Miss Ritchie, Miss Lillian Erskine, Miss May Tracy, Miss Moran, Miss Lillian Fritts, Miss Emily Sandford, Miss Margaret Tracy, Miss Abbott, Miss Whiton, Miss Murphy, Miss Harte, Miss Dumont, Miss Maude VanBoskerck, Miss Lizzie VanBoskerck, Miss Huntington, Miss Hawley, Miss Corliss, Miss Talmadge, Miss Streuli, Mr. and Mrs. Louis G. Timpson, Miss Waring, Miss Florence Waring, O. G. Waring, Dexter O. Tiffany, Irving West, Sherwood West, James Murray, Jules Erickson, Siegfried Arens, Howard Huntington, Henry Bushnell, Gerald Lowe, Edward VanBuren, Laurens VanBuren, J. B. Anthony and Wesley Abbott.

JOLLITY IN THE VALLEY.

Much Merriment Afforded by Mr. and Mrs. Pedefloux.

Pedefloux's Hotel in Washington Valley was the scene of a merry dance and a first-class supper, given by Mr. and Mrs Pedefloux to their many friends in Plainfield, New York and Brooklyn. Among those who enjoyed the hospitality of the host and hostess were William Reinman, Miss Chapot, Mr. Proudhomme and sister, A. E. Leland and wife, E. Zergerbie, C. D. Baldwin, E. Baldwin, H. Baldwin, G. Williams, C. B. Austin, justice of the peace, Warren township, J. C. Cooper, P. Burnett, H. Myers, F. Pope and R. H. Smith. J. E. Reinmann acted as Marshal and H. P. Williams, P. Bowers, J. D. Bornmann and L. Cochrane as Committee of Arrangements. It was early this morning before the good nights were said, and many were the wishes that just such another affair should be given soon.

A Card From Holy Cross Choir.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—In view of the fact that the latest phase of the campaign of misrepresentation now being carried on against the Rector of Holy Cross church has taken the form of an imputation upon our honor, we beg that you will nail the lie. It has been stated that our Rector has importuned us to become subscribers to the church in the amount of five or ten cents a month, in order that we may be rendered eligible to vote in his behalf at the Easter parish election.

Inasmuch as a majority of us are already eligible by reason of age and standing as regular communicants, the contradiction of a story so absurd would be needless were it not that many persons, ignorant of the church laws, are likely to be misled. Our Rector has, of course, never approached us on any such fool's errand, knowing full well that our loyal votes will be cast on the side of right. Thanking you for the courtesy of publication. TOPICS OF THE TOWN.

FREE-LANCE COMMENTS ON PLAINFIELD MATTERS.

Women and Smokers—A New Musical Club—Gossip That Will Be Discussed in Home and Club.

It may be remembered by readers of these columns that the Bicycle Club gave a smoker some time ago, at which was present a representative gathering of men of the town. It may also be remembered that the boxing match which was to end the programme was itself ended suddenly by one of the contestants slipping and striking his head against a chair. The man was slightly stunned, so the match was called off.

Of course the affair came to the ears of the women, and equally of course the facts were picturesquely ornamented.

It was at a meeting of one of the numerous women's clubs of which Plainfield boasts that the matter first came out.

This club, which is a well-known organization and has presumably for its object the improvement of its members' minds, meets in the early part of the week. In the interval between the Saturday night on which the smoker took place, and the following meeting of the club the horrors of that boxing match had multiplied even as do the cholera bacilli in fly time.

It was reported with bated breath that a terrible battle between the boxers had taken place. It was told how the floor had flowed with blood, while the audience, raised to a pitch of brute excitement, egged on the contestants. In short, these misguided women perturbed themselves egregiously about something of which they knew nothing, to the great ill fame of their husbands and everyone else who attended the innocent smoker.

The members of these women's clubs take themselves and their clubs very seriously, and woe betide the unfortunate male who dares question their usefulness. The clubs are innocent when they confine themselves to their legitimate functions, but their gossip is hardly improving.

The Hospital Fair is over, and the receipts are much larger than anyone expected. Few people can withstand the temptation to buy at a bazar of this kind, and the temptations in this case were exceptional. It was the prettiest thing of the kind ever seen in Plainfield, and it was largely due to the wisdom of the managers in choosing the Casino as an abiding place. When a dance was promised to the girls who helped at the tables some doubt was expressed as to the crowd that would claim the floor as soon as dancing began. With admission at a quarter, a fine floor and good music, many people expected that outsiders would take advantage of the opportunity to have a good dance. But these people were mistaken. The few outsiders who did come in were manifestly uncomfortable, but there was little difference in the set dancing from that seen at the Assemblies. This all goes to show that the saying about birds of a feather is true, and that in this extremely democratic country the various social cliques stick together with truly continental persistence. The curious part of it is that the Assembly set would be just as uncomfortable at the functions of the other people as the latter were in the Casino.

The musical club that was organized a couple of years ago among the girls in town has spread out its arms and taken in members galore. Everyone who could play or sing ever so little, and some that could do neither, were absorbed into this organization, with the natural result of lowering the average of the performances heard at their various meetings. When the club was formed it was decided that no man should ever cross the threshold of their meeting rooms. Now there is really very little talent in Plainfield as far as instrumental music is concerned, and some of the members of the club who are willing to sacrifice the extreme independence of the sex to the interest of a little more variety in their music have broached the idea of starting another club to include all those men who can do anything in the musical line and who are otherwise eligible. Active steps have already been taken in the matter. The club will meet in the evenings, and music will be the primary instead of the minor object of the meetings.

THE LOUNGER.

OBITUARY.

William White.

At his home, 40 Willow avenue, at 1 on Saturday, there passed away William White, one of North Plainfield's most honored citizens, in the seventieth year of his age. His death was calm and peaceful, the deathbed being surrounded by the immediate members of his family. His demise resulted from a complication of diseases, after an illness covering a period of two weeks.

Mr. White was formerly a masons' contractor in Jersey City. He came to Plainfield about 30 years ago, and purchased what was known as the old Isaac Manning farm, now known as Washington Park. He cut the property up into building lots, which he sold to individual purchasers. For the past 18 years he had been prominently identified with the real-estate department of the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York. He was a member of the Building Committee of the First Baptist church when that present structure was erected, and was a member and deacon of the church up to the time of his death. He was one of the original stockholders in the City National Bank, and was at one time a director. He erected the White & Stelle building at Front street and Park avenue, and owned besides a large amount of valuable real estate both in this city and North Plainfield.

Mr. White was the principal one to start the 9:30 Sunday morning service in the First Baptist church. He was always present, and took a deep interest in the progress of this service. He never arranged for a leader of the meeting in advance, but would call on someone present to officiate. His interest in having the young people there was a marked feature. He leaves a wife, a son George, and two unmarried daughters.

Canine Prayers.

M. Weber of East Third street owns a good-sized mongrel dog "Chippie" with no known pedigree. The animal understands both English and German, and obeys its master's commands as given in either language, even to kneeling in silent prayer on the table.

Who Said Soldiers Monument?

Gen. Hegley was present at a meeting of Major Anderson Post, No. 109, G. A. R., Thursday evening, and made an address. Other matters, including the Soldiers Monument project, were discussed till a late hour.

THE ELECTION.

(From The Press, of November 8.)

This edition of The Press is issued at daylight to give the public the news of the great Republican tidal wave which has swept the States where elections were held yesterday. While the local interest centres on New Jersey, it is no less important to note the tremendous change in New York State, Brooklyn and Massachusetts. No one dreamed that the gallant young Russell of the old Bay State could be defeated, but that is only one of the many surprises. The chief matter of regret to local Democrats is that the intrepid leader James E. Martine has been swept along with the rest of the ticket in the general landslide. Mr. Martine was forced to accept the nomination for Senator against his will and against his better judgment, but having entered the arena he fought with his characteristic earnestness. He accepts his defeat philosophically. The zeal and power of the Farmer Orator will continue with his party for a long time to come. Democrats may proudly point to his campaign as a cleanly one, distinguished in brilliant contrast from the unsavory methods of the Republican local organs. The venomous personal abuse which has been characteristic of the sheet bossed by the Plainfield ring was certainly no contributory cause towards the Republican victory, but simply one of those filthy incidents which crop out in politics to the disgust of decent people and the disgrace of the men of influence who permit them.

As for New Jersey, the Republicans seem to have captured her after years of waiting. What they will do with her is an interesting study of the future. For the present The Press is content to state the facts and await the outcome.

It was beautiful weather, anyway. The Republicans can't take away Democratic enjoyment of that.

Gentlemen of the School Board: You want to know what to do with the Wadsworth property? Sell it, gentlemen; sell it all! Don't stop at the greenhouse.

The Press has insisted from the start that Founder Bradley of Asbury Park would make an interesting and important figure in the State House. And he will!

The Republican Common Council chose a somewhat inappropriate time to introduce an ordinance legalizing racing on the public highway. It is ill-advised to add to the dangers of traffic on so important a thoroughfare.

The election of Thompson as Senator from Somerset reaffirms that the Republicans of the mountain districts can control that county when they will. North Plainfield Republicans who felt sore because Spencer was defeated last campaign for Surrogate, in spite of his handsome North Plainfield majority, could n't have got square this time even had they seriously tried.

The Common Council doesn't find it easy to control the Water Supply Co. In fact, the city may be said to be heartily sick of its bargain with the monopolistic corporation. Monday night steps were taken to compel the company to fulfil its contract, and there is a chance that the city may rescind it as broken. Councilman Erickson is a fighter, and he is justly aroused at the company's indifference to the terms of its contract. The city would save annoyance and make money by owning its own water-works.

THE SCHOOL BOARD LOAD.

The maxim of that rare old philosopher, Benjamin Franklin, "Do n't pay too much for your whistle", holds good today, and is worthy of practice right here in this city of Plainfield.

Franklin's story told how when he had squandered his all on his toy he could get no fun out of it, for its blasts drove people frantic. He saw his mistake when the money was gone, and he could n't redeem his loss, for no one would buy a whistle which had become such a nuisance.

That Wadsworth-property purchase should have come under the eagle eye and virile tongue of Poor Richard.

"Do not buy what you do not want because it is cheap: it will be dear to you."

MAYNARD SWAMPED.

HE BROUGHT DISASTER TO THE STATE TICKET.

Croker Yields—Concedes that Even the Legislature Is Lost—Tammany in Gloom—The City Only, Saved to the Tiger.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—At Republican headquarters at 9:30 p. m. the claim was made, based upon information received from party leaders throughout the State, that E. J. Bartlett is elected Judge of the Court of Appeals by from 25,000 to 30,000 plurality.

The balance of the State ticket is claimed by pluralities ranging from 15,000 to 20,000.

At 8:30 o'clock, at Tammany Hall, Richard Croker conceded the defeat of Isaac H. Maynard and the entire State ticket, with the exception of the Legislature.

At 9 p. m. Richard Croker said: "It looks as if the Republicans have made a clean sweep of the State ticket, including the Legislature."

Isaac H. Maynard has undoubtedly been defeated for Judge of the Court of Appeals.

The presence of his name on the Democratic ticket cost the party thousands of votes in this city and throughout the state, and was the cause of its defeat.

Returns from this city, Kings county and up the State received up to 3:30 p. m., confirm the prediction of Thomas C. Platt and Chairman Brookfield, of the Republican State Committee, that Isaac H. Maynard will be buried under a landslide.

FANWOOD SLAUGHTERS SAUER.

Martine Runs Ahead of His Ticket in Assemblyman Kyte's Home.

(Special to The Press.)

FANWOOD, Nov. 7—The counting of the vote here was concluded early. Kyte did nobly in his own home, and far exceeded the township's usual Republican majority of 55. A year ago his majority was 77; this year it was 136. The total vote polled was 308, of a registration of 347. The returns are as follows:

FOR SENATOR.

DEM.		REP.
Martine	139	Voorhees	175

FOR SHERIFF.

Sauer	60	Kyte	[illegible]

FOR ASSEMBLY.

Winans	120	Codding	207

FOR CORONER.

Kelly	120	Holmes	[illegible]

NEW JERSEY REPUBLICAN.

DEMOCRATS SUFFER OVERWHELMING DEFEAT THROUGHOUT THE STATE.

Republican Majority Probable in Both Branches of the Legislature.

The election in New Jersey was for 8 members of the State Senate and an entire House of Assembly, 60 members. In the last Legislature the Senate contained 5 Republicans and 16 Democrats, and the Assembly contained 21 Republicans and 39 Democrats. The Democrats thus had majorities of 11 in the Senate, 18 in the House, and 29 on joint ballot. Four Republican and 9 Democratic Senators hold over, and yesterday's elections were to fill the places of 1 Republican and 7 Democrats. They resulted in the choice of 7 Republicans and 1 Democrat, a Republican gain of 6. Added to the hold-over members, these will make the Senate stand 11 Republicans and 10 Democrats; the Republican majority being 1, against 11 Democratic last year. The new House of Assembly will, apparently, contain 37 Republicans and 23 Democrats; the Republican majority being 14, against a Democratic majority of 18 last year.

THE NEW SENATORS.

REPUBLICANS, 7.

Camden County—Maurice A. Rogers.
Essex County—George W. Ketcham.
Gloucester County—Daniel J. Packer.
Monmouth County—James A. Bradley.
Salem County—John C. Ward.

Union County—Foster M. Voorhees.

DEMOCRATS, 1.

Warren County—C. F. Staates.

SUMMARY.

Republicans elected 7; Democrats elected 1; Republicans hold over, 4; Democrats hold over, 9; Republicans, total 11; Democrats, total, 10; Republican majority, 1. Last year's Democratic majority was 11.

THE VOTE IN UNION COUNTY.

Country Districts Roll up a Big Republican Aggregate.

Midnight returns from Union county indicate the undoubted election of the entire Republican ticket. Rahway gives 198 Republican majority, Westfield 142, Cranford 96, New Providence 20, Summit 30, Linden 90, Union 95.

SENATOR MARSH GIVES UP.

(Special to The Press.)

ELIZABETH, Nov. 7.—At midnight Ex-Senator Marsh concedes the election of the entire Republican ticket in the county. He says that the new House will be Republican, and probably the Senate.

THOMPSON WINS IN SOMERSET.

(Special to The Press.)

SOMERVILLE, N. J.—L. A. Thompson, Republican candidate for Senator, has been elected by 500 majority. Frank W Somers, Republican candidate for Assembly, is also elected.

THE BAY STATE REPUBLICAN.

Greenhalge Elected Over Russell by 15,000 to 20,000.

(Special to The Press.)

BOSTON, Nov. 7.—Seventy-five precincts in Boston give Greenhalge 11,155, Russell 13,156. In 1892 these same precincts gave Haile 10,905, Russell 14,934.

Henry Cabot Lodge is figuring the returns at the Republican Club headquarters with Chairman Winslow. They had returns from 54 towns showing a ten per cent. uniform gain.

Senator Lodge said the State would give Mr. Greenhalge 20,000 plurality.

The Globe (Dem.) in a 7 o'clock extra concedes Greenhalge's election by 15,000 plurality.

The Herald at 7:25 p. m., bulletins: "Greenhalge elected; his plurality is only a question of size. Russell gets a small vote in Boston."

PRAYER AT THE POLLS.

Warren County Divided Between the Two Parties.

(Special to The Press.)

BELVIDERE, N. J., Nov. 7.—The election here was remarkable in some respects. Before the polls were open a prayer meeting was held under the auspices of the Citizens' League. Prayers were offered for the success of the Citizens' League ticket in Warren county.

BOODY BEATEN.

SCHIEREN ELECTED MAYOR OF BROOKLYN BY 10,000.

(Special to The Press.)

BROOKLYN, Nov. 7.—Ring rule in Brooklyn has been overthrown.

The votes of its citizens cast today at the polls have decided this, apparently by a safe majority.

At 8:30 this evening it was claimed at Republican Headquarters that Mayor Boody had been hopelessly beaten, and that Mr. Schieren, the Republican candidate, had been elected by at least 10,000 majority.

The indications at that hour were that the entire Republican State ticket had received a safe plurality in Kings county, and that Maynard had been beaten by 12,000 votes.

The other Democratic candidates on the State ticket were believed to have been defeated by pluralities ranging from 8,000 to 10,000.

In addition to this a sweeping victory is claimed for the local Republican ticket in Kings County.

The Democrats themselves have acknowledged their defeat and have thrown up the sponge.

This is one of the most crushing blows ever administered to the rule of the bosses, and it is generally regarded as a direct consequence of the high-handed proceedings which have characterized the political policy of the ring during the past few days.

PASSAIC LIKE THE REST.

(Special to The Press.)

PATERSON, N. J., Nov. 7.—The Republicans sweep Passaic county on the county ticket, electing Johnston Sheriff by 1,500.

HUNTERDON ALONE FAITHFUL.

(Special to the Press.)

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Nov. 7.—Hunterdon county elects two Democratic Assemblyman—James L. Chamberlain in the First District, by 100 plurality, and W. C. Alpaugh in the Second District, by 900 majority. The whole Democratic ticket is elected in the county.

BRADLEY ELECTED.

(Special to The Press.)

FREEHOLD, N. J., Nov. 7.—James A. Bradley, Republican candidate for Senator, has been elected over Terhune (Dem.) by 500 majority. The three Republican candidates are elected to the Assembly in Monmouth county.

ESSEX COUNTY REPUBLICAN.

(Special to The Press.)

SOMERVILLE, Nov. 7.—Essex county elected Herman Lehlbach, Rep., Sheriff, and William Riker, Rep., Register.

HUDSON'S GREAT FLOP.

(Special to The Press.)

JERSEY CITY, Nov. 7.—The Republican candidate for Sheriff of Hudson has been elected by 4,500 majority.

SOUTH DAKOTA REPUBLICAN.

(Special to The Press.)

YANKTON, SOUTH DAKOTA, Nov. 7.—The State has probably gone Republican, though the Democrats claim one Supreme Court Judge.

GLOOM AT TAMMANY HALL.

Bulletins Read Announcing Maynard's Big Falling Off.

(Special to The Press.)

NEW YORK, Nov. 7—The usual rejoicing generally witnessed at Tammany Hall on Election Night has given place to gloom. Many of the braves are there, but as bulletin after bulletin is read showing a falling off in Maynard's vote everywhere, the depression is deepening.

VIRGINIA DEMOCRATIC.

Large Majority for State Ticket and in the Legislature.

(Special to The Press.)

RICHMOND, VA., Nov. 7, 6 p. m.—There is every indication that the Democratic State ticket is elected by a large majority and that they will have more than a two-thirds majority in the Legislature.

The negroes are voting the Democratic ticket.

M'KINLEY BY 50,000.

That's the Present Outlook for Governor of Ohio.

(Special to The Press.)

COLUMBUS, O., Nov 7.—Latest advices state that McKinley has been elected by 50 000 majority.

Happy Home-Coming of Bride and Groom.

Will F. Williams and bride returned from their wedding trip on Tuesday, and took possession of their cosy rooms at 19 Craig place. They were agreeably surprised to find that kind friends and relatives had taken possession of their rooms during the day and that everything was placed in apple-pie-order, including the wedding presents, which were many and handsome.

PAPER CHASE FROM HOLLY FARM.

THE RIDING CLUB AND ITS FRIENDS HAVE A GLORIOUS DAY.

After a Eighteen Course and Cross-Country Gallop, the Riders Have Supper at Spring Lake Homestead—John Munn Wins the Spurs in a Brilliant Finish.

The enthusiasm that has been rife for equestrian exercise among society people of Plainfield culminated Tuesday afternoon in one of the most unique entertainments that has ever been given in this city. The paper chase at the Holly Farm has been the theme of discussion for a week past and it is but mild approbation to say that no one was disappointed when the expected event became a reality.

The most of the "paper chasers" took place at the Holly home at 3 yesterday afternoon and at that time a score or more of riders had assembled and a number of rigs of various kinds were in readiness to follow the horse-run. Mr. Pentz of Fanwood, who is a member of Troop A, New York, and of the Riding Club in this city, acted as the hare and was given 15 minutes start of the other riders. He was supplied with strips of white muslin by which he marked his course. At every turn he tied a strip of the white cloth to a tree or fence to show his pursuers which direction he had taken. The start was made at about 3:30 and the 20 horsemen filed out into Park avenue followed by the carriages. The course lay down Park avenue to the cross roads beyond the race track, down Woodland avenue past the Hillside cemetery to Netherwood, on South avenue to the railroad bridge between Netherwood and Fanwood, to Front street, to Scotch Plains, back via Front street to Crescent avenue, out Eighth street to New Brooklyn and back to the Holly farm. The whole run took but one hour and a quarter. The carriages took the best roads all the way while the horsemen took to the fields wherever practicable and had a taste of some real cross-country riding. Taking into consideration the fact that many of the riders had never done anything but the quietest road riding, the entire chase comported itself gallantly and no accident of any moment occurred during the entire run. The pace set was a breakneck one and the mounts were urged to their utmost speed on all the smooth stretches that lay in the course. The prize given by Mr. Holly to the one first covering the course was a handsome pair of spurs and the fortunate one to win them was John Munn, who succeeded in reaching the gates of the Holly place only a length ahead of the second man.

After the riders had seen that their horses had been cared for they assembled in the house, where, with appetites whetted with the exhilaration and excitement of the ride, all hands enjoyed a jolly supper. Part of the evening was spent in an amusing contest between the girls and the men in making neckties and trimming hats. Some twenty hats were trimmed and an equal number of neckties were made and the results would have driven a milliner or a haberdasher out of his head. Prizes were given for the best example of each of the tasks, the men voting to decide the victorious necktie and the girls choosing the best hat. Miss Holly of New York was the fortunate maker of the finest necktie and received a bonbonniere for her prowess, while Mr. Tenny, of New York, was awarded a silver match-box, the prize for the most artistic hat. After the prizes had been awarded and the winners had received the congratulations of the company there was dancing in the dining-room, which had been cleared for that purpose.

Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Ginna, Mr. and Mrs. Pentz, of Fanwood; Miss Maude Van Boskerck, Miss Lizzie Van Boskerck, Miss Streuli, Miss Stewart, Miss Walton, Miss Yates, Miss Dumont, Miss Corlies, Miss Ginna, Miss Annie Opdyke, Miss Erickson, Miss Adams, H. V. Borden, John Pier Munn, Marshall Adams, O. G. Waring, Edward Bloodgood, George VanBoskerck, Thomas Van Boskerck, Irving West, Harry Johnson, John Moore, Augustus D. Shepard, J. S. Anthony, Howard Corlies, Alfred Streuli, J. H. P. Wharton, Jr., James Hallock, Mr. McGee and Mr. Tenny.

THE FOREIGNER.

There is a great deal of good feeling between Russia and France, but it seems to be wholly of French origin.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Whether Russia and France make a formal alliance or not, the significance of the reception of the Russian fleet at Toulon remains the same.—New York Sun.

Guesses as to what will come of the alliance are plenty enough, but they are only guesses, and have little value. The future alone will reveal that.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

The splendid reception by the French people of the Russian squadron at Toulon is much more than an expression of cordial good feeling on the part of France toward Russia.—New York Press.

Flirtatious France had better look "a bit out" how she buys a Russian pig in a poke. She may find out after she has irretrievably involved herself that she has been buying all sorts of trouble unawares.—Chicago Mail.

The festivities at Toulon did not cause Emperor William to lose any sleep. The kaiser pulled on his faithful pipe, sipped a little more beer, devoured a portion of hasenpfeffer, and is now patiently awaiting a chance to make a move on the political chessboard of Europe.—Ohio State Journal.

THE JOCKEY.

Dinah, 2:21¼ trotting, has been put to pacing.

Hulda's recent injury will not disable the great trotter permanently.

The best trotting race record in California is 2:11¼, by McKinney.

Richard Croker has cleared nearly $200,000 on his stable this season.

Goss and Goldsmith have landed over $25,000 each in stakes and purses.

There are 170 trotters with records of 2:15 or better, and 300 pacers in the 2:15 list.

Rolla Wells has resigned the presidency of the St. Louis Jockey Club and Fair association.

There are two horses named Free Coinage. One is from Kansas, the other from California.

James McLaughlin, the ex-jockey, won enough money recently on Wah Jim to start another stable.

The result of the breeding of the Russian trotters to the Palo Alto stock will be watched with interest.

TOBACCO HABIT EASILY CURED.

A FEW Testimonials from persons who have been cured by the use of Hill's Tablets.

THE OHIO CHEMICAL CO.:—DEAR SIR:—I have been using your cure for tobacco habit, and found it would do what you claim for it. [illegible] and from one to five cigars; or I would smoke from ten to forty pipes of tobacco. Have chewed and smoked for twenty-five years, and two packages of your Tablets cured me so I have no desire for it.
B. M. JAYLORD, Leslie, Mich.

DOBBS FERRY, N. Y.
THE OHIO CHEMICAL CO.:—GENTLEMEN:—Some time ago I sent for $1.00 worth of your Tablets for Tobacco Habit. I received them all right and, although I was both a heavy smoker and chewer, they did the work in less than three days. I am cured.
Truly yours, MATHEW JOHNSON, P. O. Box 45.

PITTSBURGH, PA.
THE OHIO CHEMICAL CO.:—GENTLEMEN:—It gives me pleasure to speak a word of praise for your Tablets. My son was strongly addicted to the use of liquor, and through a friend, I was led to try your Tablets. He was a heavy and constant drinker, but after using your Tablets but three days he quit drinking, and will not touch liquor of any kind. I have waited four month before writing you, in order to know the cure was permanent. Yours truly,
MRS. HELEN MORRISON.

CINCINNATI, OHIO.
THE OHIO CHEMICAL CO:—GENTLEMEN:—Your Tablets have performed a miracle in my case. I have used morphine, hypodermically, for seven years, and have been cured by the use of two packages of your Tablets, and without any effort on my part.

THE JESTER.

Called Her Mary.

Her mother named her "Mary," that good, old fashioned name,
And all through school she wore it, contented with the name.
But when she'd graduated and left the school behind
She dropped the "y" and "Mary" became—"'twas so much more refined.
She's married now and off the hands of her enduring pa,
Still more her name has been reduced—her youngest calls her "Ma."

A Demurrer.

Judge Snuffy—Erastus Lightfoot, you are charged with chicken stealing. Have you a lawyer?

Erastus—No, sah.

Judge Snuffy—Do you wish the court to assign you a lawyer?

Erastus—No, sah; no, sah!

Judge Snuffy—What do you wish to do about it?

Erastus—Well, judge, if it's all de same to you, I'd just as leave dismiss the case.—Harlem Life.

Autumn Thoughts.
[By a Baldheaded Man.]

'Tis sweet to see the blushing leaf
And hear the wind's refrain.
'Tis sweet to note the bounteous sheaf
And greet the garnered grain.

'Tis sweet to see through waving trees
The mellow purpling skies,
But sweeter 'tis than all of these,
To think there are no flies.
—Washington Star.

They Were Both So.

Prisoner—As my counsel has failed to put in his appearance, I would ask your honor to adjourn the case.

Judge—Why, you were caught in the act of stealing a gold watch from the person of a gentleman. Besides, you admitted the charge. I am curious to know what under these circumstances your counsel could have to say in your defense.

Prisoner—So am I, your honor, and therefore I should like to hear him.—Vogue.

A Good Name.

"Pray call me a pretty name," said he
One night to his darling Carrie,
The girl he had courted so long that she Thought he never meant to marry.
Up from his bosom she raised her head,
And her cheeks grew red as roses,
"I think I will call you 'man,'" she said,
"For they say that 'man proposes.'"

A Reconstructionist.

"I wonder what makes this man so anxious to get old newspaper files?" said the dealer in secondhand literature.

"Do you know who he is?" asked the clerk.

"No."

"He's the well known after dinner speaker. I suppose he wants the papers to get new stories from."—Washington Star.

A Word For Ourselves.

In everything we take high place—
The mart, the field, the forum;
Our yachts are first in every race,
In short, high cockalorum.
We may not have the skill and brains

But we kill more people on railroad trains
Than any other nation.

Disinterested Affection.

He—Leonora, it becomes my painful duty to request a release from our engagement.

She—Why, have you ceased to love me?

He—No, dearest, but I am a man of honor. I have just learned that your father has met with a disastrous failure, and I cannot consent to lead you into a life of poverty.—Chicago Record.

Kept Her Word.

"I'll always be the same," she said,
When we love's tie did sever,
"Tho' years may come and years may go
I'll changeless be forever."
Tho' twenty years have flown since she
That prediction started,
She's yet the same old twenty-six
She was before we parted.
—Yonkers Gazette.

Gave Him a Parting Shot.

Miss—So your husband has gone?

Madame—Yes.

Miss—Left without a word, too, didn't he?

Madame (with pride)—Well, hardly. I gave him several to take along.—Godey's Magazine.

A Point on Arithmetic.

"Jephtha," asked Mrs. Jones, who was busy with pencil and paper, "can you tell me how many feet there are in an acre?"

"No," said Jones savagely, "but I can tell you how many achers there are in a foot."—Detroit Free Press.

All Want to Hear It Again.

The success of Mr. Ragan's new lecture, "The Columbian Exposition," is beyond all precedent. In the first week of his season he has delivered it six times, and the audiences have been, without exception, large and enthusiastic. In every place a strong desire has been expressed for a return date, and in nearly every place applications for dates have reached him directly from neighboring towns. It has been found wholly impossible to supply the easte n demand for his work in the time originally laid out for the east extending to the end of January. He has therefore decided, after a brief western trip in February, to return to the east for March and April. Plainfield will be favored with the new series early in the season, as he gives his first lecture here next Monday night, in Music Hall.

If you have not engaged your work, I should be pleased to do it for you.

I buy only first-class Marble and Granite and do not sell unless at prices that will enable me to put up the work with credit to myself and justice to the parties purchasing.

I employ no agents and therefore am enabled to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customer, of the commission generally paid to agents.

I am under a very small expense in running my shop, myself and my son doing the larger portion of the work, and we personally attend to the setting of all work, and look upon business in this light, that Good Work and Good Material, at Fair Prices, is a standing advertisement for my business, which will tend to build up trade, and I feel safe to warrant that no dealer can sell you the same work and same stock any cheaper than I can.

Hoping to be favored with your patronage, I am yours respectfully,

FUNERAL OF WILLIAM WHITE.

Obsequies Over His Remains Held in the Baptist Church.

The last sad funeral rites following the death of William White took place from his late residence, 40 Willow avenue, North Plainfield, at 3:30 Tuesday afternoon. The house was densely filled with relatives and sympathizing friends of the family, many representative citizens from this city and North Plainfield being in attendance. The body lay in a casket of black cloth and silver mounting, in the east parlor, and around it were clustered friends and associates of the dead man from the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, with which institution the deceased had been prominently identified for the past eighteen years. The casket stood in an alcove, and there were beautiful floral emblems around it—one bearing the word "Father", and another "Grandpa". The Mutual Life Insurance Company gave a handsome pillow of roses, callas and lilies of the valley.

A quartette composed of Miss May Grant, soprano, Miss A. Runyon, contralto, W. W. Howland, basso, and Charles W. McCutchen, tenor, sang sweetly "Asleep in Jesus".

The Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes read the Scripture and preached the funeral sermon. He spoke in fitting terms of Mr White, who, he said, was a firm believer in the reality of unseen things. The reverend doctor also eulogized Mr. White and told of his Christian faith and unwavering principles.

The Rev. Dr. Judson, of New York, who was Mr. White's pastor in New York one winter recently, spoke of the lamented dead. He said he had always found him an earnest, conscientious Christian, and one always willing and ready to respond to all cases of emergency. The Rev Dr. Yerkes offered a solemn prayer, the quartette rendered a beautiful anthem, and the service ended.

The remains will be interred in Hillside Cemetery at 10 today.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer $100 for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address

THIS HORSE RAN FAR.

He Took Fright at a Bicycle, and the Woman Nearly Fainted.

A runaway occurred on East Ninth street yesterday afternoon, which for a time threatened serious consequences. A young man named Sandford, and a young lady, Miss Murray, were driving along that thoroughfare when the horse became frightened at a bicycle and ran away. The animal was brought to a stop near Broadway, and the lady alighted in a fainting condition. A coachman from a nearby stable took the reins, turned the horse around, when the animal again ran away. The horse turned into Central avenue, with the phaeton on two wheels, and ran fully a mile before it was brought under subjection.

RIOTS IN CAMDEN.

A Number of Persons Shot and Republican Deputy Sheriffs Arrested.

CAMDEN, Nov. 7.—Election riots occurred today in the Ninth ward. Several persons, including deputy sheriffs, are reported as having been shot by policemen. Deputy sheriffs are being arrested by the police authorities and held without bail. The voting in every ward in the city was heavy. In some of the precincts more than two-thirds of the entire registered vote being polled up to noon.

In the Fifth and part of the Sixth and Ninth wards there have been a number of rows, mainly between the special police and the deputy sheriffs. Several deputies were arrested by the special police and during a riot in the Ninth ward several deputies were wounded.

At noon persons appealed to Sheriff West to place the military in readiness as a general riot was feared. At the Cooper Hospital the following persons have been admitted:

Samuel Fullman, 812 Chestnut street, shot in the head; George Banks, shot in the leg; Frank Swain, Eighth ward, shot in the leg and head cut; Nelson Geary, shot in the head; Edward Greer, shot in the leg; Martin Van Dyke, shot in the side; Julia Chambers, 700 Chestnut street, cut in the throat by an unknown person; Frank Dobson, head cut; Samuel Collins, Stockton, shot in the leg.

"What I Eat Does Me No Good."

How often this expression is heard—life-destroying dyspepsia has hold on you when you feel thus, and should not be trifled with. There is but one remedy that can permanently cure you, Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, made at Rondout, N. Y., a vegetable compound endorsed by the medical profession.

GUNNER JAMES SHOT HIMSELF.

SERIOUS ENDING OF A DAY'S UNSUCCESSFUL SPORT.

While Waiting in Evona Station for a Train for Home, He Accidentally Discharged His Gun, the Charge Mangling His Foot.

John F. James, of Bergen Point, met with a serious gunning accident near this city Tuesday. He started out in the morning with his gun, for the purpose of hunting game.

He hunted around in the neighborhood of Evona and Dunellen, and, finding nothing, walked to the Evona station, for the purpose of boarding a train for home.

While sitting in the station, the gun, which he held under his arm, was pointed towards his left foot. The gun was discharged, and the charge lodged in the toes of his left foot.

The woman in charge of the station became frightened, and reproved the man for shooting himself, she thinking it an attempt at suicide.

Mr. James made inquires as to what he might do, but could get no satisfaction.

He finally walked across the street, where he met Wallace Vail, who was driving to this city. Mr. Vail, being a good Samaritan, very kindly offered to take Mr. Jones to a physician. They then went to Dr. Long's house, where his foot was taken care of.

The doctor found it necessary to amputate the second toe, which had been torn to shreds. The shoe was also torn. The man was afterwards taken to the North Avenue station, whence he left for home.

The accident will not impair his walking after it has healed.

Deserved Tribute to McPherson.

(From The Somerset Record.)

There is little reason for fear that New Jersey is to be deprived of the services, in the United States Senate, of John R. McPherson. It is [illegible] easy to understand why Senator McPherson might look with equanimity on a prospective retirement from a place in which he has given the best years and greatest labor of his life to the service of the people.

The Democratic party has too few men of Senator McPherson's calibre and attainments to weaken itself by permitting him to be supplanted by a representative of the methods that have gained so much power, as well as disrepute in these days.

In the eighteen years that John R. McPherson has represented New Jersey he has added to the honor and fair fame of New Jersey as no predecessor of his had ever done; and today when the people have the proud consciousness of being represented in the United States Senate by two of the ablest men in that body, they are not likely to weaken the position given them through such representation by assenting to the retirement, voluntary or enforced, of the man who has done so much to give the Democratic party in New Jersey, force, character and public confidence.

The Engine Broke Down.

Locomotive 189, attached to a west-bound loaded coal train, broke her right driving side at Grant avenue yesterday afternoon at 3:40. The locomotive and train were sidetracked at Washington street, and another engine was telegraphed for to take the train to its destination.

PIERCE [illegible] CURE.

COUNCILMAN FISK AS SANTA CLAUS.

HE PUTS THROUGH TWO ORDINANCES WITH SLEIGH BELLS ON.

Sleighing for Coasting on Broadway Hill, and Sleighing for Beau Brummel on East Second Street—But Isn't He Afraid of the Cry Against Legalizing Winter Racing?

The Cherubic Councilman, Charles J. Fisk, had on his Santa Claus smile Monday night, and spoke in favor of winter outdoor sports till one could almost sniff a frosty flavor in the air, see the sparkle of the snow, and hear the music of the bells. Mr. Fisk does like to see the young people enjoy themselves, and he purposes to help them have royal fun. So last night he introduced two ordinances, one permitting sleigh racing on East Front street, in an easterly direction, from Richmond street to Cole's Hill, the other permitting coasting on the Broadway hill in spite of protesting neighbors. The ordinances were adopted on second reading, and are advertised in The Press today.

A. B. Summers petitioned the Council for permission to erect an open shed at the rear of 109 Watchung avenue. The petition was referred to the Fire and Buildings Committee with power.

J. S. Garretson and others petitioned for electric lights on Lee place between Fourth and Seventh streets. The petition was referred to the Committee on Lights, with power.

Patrick Lynch and others petitioned for an electric light on West Second street between Central avenue and New street. The petition was referred to the Committee on Lights, with power.

Mrs. E. T. DeForest and others asked for a crosswalk at West Second and New streets, and an electric light on West Second between New and Liberty. The proper committees were given power to act.

D. A. Woodhouse offered $1,000 for Gazelle engine. The offer was accepted.

The two Boards of Freeholders wrote that they had no jurisdiction over the old and shaky Sandford avenue bridge. The communications were filed.

Christopher Columbus and others were granted peddlers' and similar licenses.

The report of the City Physician, stating the cases he attended in the quarter, was filed.

The Tax Collector's report, showing collections of $6,996.89 for the month, was filed. The usual monthly adjustment of accounts, notes and other financial matters, was accomplished.

AFTER THE WATER COMPANY.

Councilman Ericksen reported that the Plainfield Water Supply Company had not yet fulfilled its contract in the placing of certain hydrants. As a legal formality towards effecting a remedy, resolutions were adopted insisting on the company's doing as already stipulated.

An ordinance was adopted on second reading and ordered engrossed and advertised permitting property owners on West Second street from Madison to Central avenue to set back their curb line so as to widen the street two feet.

A motion was adopted requiring W. J. Funison of Watchung avenue to replace his wooden awning with one of iron. The City Clerk and Fire Marshal were blamed for having permitted such a misunderstanding.

The Street Committee was authorized to sell iron pipe, curbing and other accumulated junk.

A resolution was adopted to assess as delinquent taxes all unpaid assessments on the widening of Peace street and the extension of Orchard place.

The opinion of Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh was read, clearly showing that James Moses has no claim to the return of money paid on the Peace street extension assessment, until that assessment shall have been legally set aside. A copy of this was ordered sent to Mr. Moses.

Council paid its bills and adjourned.

JUSTICE WADSWORTH WAS RIGHT.

So the Court of Common Pleas Decided Yesterday—His Direction to the Jury in Griffen vs. Springer to Bring in a Verdict in Favor of the Plaintiff Was Repeated By Judge McCormick.

The fourth jury in the famous landlord and tenant case of Griffen against Springer was impaneled at Elizabeth in the Common Pleas Court Monday. It will be remembered that at each of the three trials in Plainfield, Justice Wadsworth granted C. A. Marsh's motion to strike out the defense and direct the jury to bring a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for the full amount claimed (about $175). The juries here refused to obey the Court. Two of the juries simply disagreed, but the third saw fit to disregard the Court entirely and found a verdict the other way. The Justice quietly remarked that he would be set right when the case should be tried on appeal.

It is very gratifying to him that the higher court yesterday sustained him in every way. After the evidence was in on both sides, Mr. Marsh made the same motion that he had made before Justice Wadsworth. It was hotly contested and the opposing counsel tried to ridicule it and demanded the right to address the jury, but the court granted the motion all the same, and overruled the whole defense and told the jury to find a verdict for the plaintiff for the bill. This the jury did without leaving their seats.

Children's Eyes.

Children have various complaints of the eye, some of which require glasses. When a child holds his book conspicuously near; when he has difficulty in seeing letters and figures on the blackboard at school; when he complains of his eyes hurting and of headaches: have his eyes examined and the trouble corrected, and let him grow up in the comfort of perfect vision. If a child sees better or with more comfort with glasses, he should wear them, and to say he is "too young to wear glasses" is just as reasonable as to contend that he is to young to have a fever or toothache.

The famous oculists and opticians, Leech, Stiles & Co., formerly with Queen & Co., of Philadelphia, send their Eye Specialist to 7 East Front street, Plainfield, Thursday, Nov. 9.

It will cost you nothing to determine if glasses will improve vision, as the examination is without charge.

DEFEATED, BUT NOT CAST DOWN.

Candidate Martine Ready to Fight It Out Again on the Same Lines.

TO THE DEMOCRATS OF UNION COUNTY:—The contest has been fought and the Democratic party is defeated. For myself I most earnestly thank my friends for their support in the canvass. I still feel that our principles are the salvation of our country, and would again fight the battle on the same lines. As I have oftimes said, "Better defeat in defense of a great principle than victory in the advocacy of an unholy cause". Let us still stand together in the glorious fight for "equal rights, equal laws and justice".

WHERE TO SPEND YOUR LEISURE.

ADVANTAGES OFFERED BY THE PLAINFIELD PUBLIC LIBRARY.

Here the Workingman Out of a Job May Find Restful and Educational Employment for His Enforced Leisure—Some of the Special Attractions, and the Regulations in Force.

For those out of work, the Free Library affords a most pleasant and profitable means of filling in the idle hours, and the special attention of such is herewith directed to the resources of that admirable institution. Thus they may find a way to turn their enforced leisure to account. The Library is open each day from 9 a. m. until 12, from 2 until 6 p. m., and from 7:30 until 9 p. m. It receives regularly 57 periodicals, comprising dailies, weeklies, scientific and technical, the more important and popular illustrated magazines, and reviews both American and English. Current numbers of these are always kept on the reading-room tables, and are always open to the public, as are also the well-stocked shelves, containing something over 12,000 volumes. Readers are quite free to go to these and help themselves, though an attendant is always present during the day to assist readers in finding the books of which they are in quest, or to direct them to books on the subject which they are looking up. Saturday evening being delivery night is usually the busiest time of the week, for on this night borrowers who are unable to get to the Library in the daytime come to provide themselves with reading matter for the coming week.

To become a borrower, the Library requires that the form with which each applicant is furnished should be properly filled out, and the signature of a real estate owner obtained as a needed reference. Anyone over 12 years of age living within the city limits can become a borrower on complying with these regulations. In addition to this, North Plainfielders may pay $1 semi-annually in advance, which entitles them to all the privileges of the Library.

The reading-room and art gallery are of course open to all, whether they are borrowers or not. The gallery contains many excellent works of art, and temporarily Col. Scott's very interesting collection of Indian curiosities. In this collection are articles of wearing apparel, wampum, arrows, hatchets, scalps, a fine war-bonnet, and looms in use among the Moqui and Navajo Indians. Mr. Fountain's collection is one of peculiar interest to Plainfielders generally as well as to archaeologists, being a purely local collection. It comprises spearheads, arrowheads, and stones worked by the Indians of this locality for various purposes. The gallery and reading-room each have a case of stuffed birds; that in the reading-room was presented by Dr. Endicott.

The gallery hours are shorter than the library hours, the winter hours being from 10 until 12 in the morning, and from 2 until 4 in the afternoon.

THE FAIR STILL OPEN.

Here's the Chance of a Lifetime for a Safe, Inexpensive and Delightful Trip to the Great White City.

"The Columbian Exhibition."

This was the subject of that most fascinating of lecturers, Henry H. Ragan, in Biddeford, Me., Oct. 20, and the Biddeford Times of the next day said:

Those who have been to Chicago during the Exposition are hardly more fortunate than those who took the trip last night with this delightful guide. The excursion started from New York city. Before boarding the fast Chicago limited on the famous New York Central, Mr. Ragan apropos to the journey and visit to the Fair, went back 400 years and gave a brief story of the discovery.

Starting on the journey up the Hudson, a stop was made near the historical residence once occupied by Aaron Burr, and another at Niagara Falls. The stereopticon views were marvelously true. The Falls were seen from several points and the party taken down to the famous whirlpool rapids.

No other stops were made till they reached Chicago. A few of the principal points of the business and residential sections of the city were visited and then the party proceeded to the White City.

The Exposition, including the Midway Plaisance, was thoroughly gone over so far as general exterior and interior views go. Close inspection of some of the principal buildings and statuary and a few of the chief exhibits was had. The views on the Midway Plaisance were especially entertaining. Mr. Ragan had a few amusing stories and suggestions concerning some of the features which added much to the delight of the lecture. In all it was a genuine success and one of the most novel and satisfactory entertainments on record.

And all this, Plainfield may see, in Music Hall Monday night. A dollar bill pays for that and two other lectures fully as fascinating and educational.

CHASED FROM FANWOOD.

A Fraud with a Subscription Paper Runs Against Judge Moore.

A well-dressed man canvassed Fanwood pretty thoroughly Sunday afternoon with a subscription paper raising money for his family whom, he said, had been burned out of house and home at Rahway. He was very persistent and in cases where money was refused he begged for clothes. His own good attire excited suspicion, however, and he was sent by one man to the house of Judge C. E. Moore. He told his story to the Judge who told him to go to the railroad station where he would talk to him, as the house was filled with company and the genial Justice did not wish to create a disturbance. The man gave several different names at different times and told such an improbable tale of woe that Judge Moore warned him that by going around begging he was laying himself open to the action of the tramp law, and recommended him to leave town. The man grew a little impudent and said that when justices sent a man from town they usually paid his fair. To this the Judge replied that he would pay his fare but that in that case he would send him down with a constable. The man evidently did not desire the company of one of the minions of the law for he drew out a roll of bills and bought a ticket for Plainfield and left for this city on the 4:58 train. Charitable persons would do well to look out for him and not be imposed upon by such a palpable swindler.

HOTEL ALBION IN BAD SHAPE.

FIRE AND WATER CAUSE HEAVY DAMAGE.

Flames Start from Mysterious Cause, and Col. King and His Guests Are Quickly Driven Out—Quick Work of the Department—Fireman Addis Almost Suffocated.

A most puzzling fire occurred Tuesday [illegible] about 7:30, in Hotel Albion.

While Col. A. E. King, the proprietor, and several others, were seated in the parlor, some unknown man rushed into the hall-way and informed Mr. King that his house was on fire. He at once secured the key for the fire-alarm box and sent in an alarm.

The department turned out in wonderfully quick time, and appeared at the scene of the fire very soon after. When Chief Doane arrived, he and Mr. King ascended to the top floor where the flames were discovered. It appears that the fire started in and around the toilet rooms, near the water tank. How it started is a mystery. Several ideas are advanced by different ones, but authentic information is not obtainable.

The entire structure and its contents were thoroughly soaked with water, and the fire was soon extinguished. The water poured down the stairways in a cataract and submerged the floors, ruining walls, carpets and furniture. The interior is in a sorry mess.

The main part of the fire seemed to be located entirely in the upper part of the house.

Some 200 blinds were stored in the attic, which were consumed.

There are a few rooms in the house that were unmolested; these will be occupied by some of the guests; the others will be provided for.

The loss on the building is fully covered by insurance, and work will be commenced at once to restore the hotel to its former condition.

Fireman William Addis was overcome by inhalations of smoke. He was resuscitated at Gazelle Engine-house.

The new hose-tower truck was used to good advantage.

PATRIOTISM VS. PARTIZANSHIP.

Sermon Last Night by the Rev. J. W. Richardson, in the Park Avenue Baptist Church, Before the Local Councils Jr. O. U. A. M.

The edifice was full, and the men with their attractive regalia of red, white and blue attended in large numbers and made an impressive appearance. The text was Esther IV: 14—"Who knoweth whether thou art come to the Kingdom for such a time as this". Mordecai believes in the presence of God in history. He believes that God raises up instruments to do his will at the proper time. Great issues are before us as a nation. There are influences at work which threaten to remove all those distinctively American institutions which have made our country sublime in the sight of men. This Order has been raised up for such a time as this. It teaches its sons to place the Bible next to the heart, and to follow the flag. There is need today that a pure ballot, a pure pulpit, and the integrity of the public school be preserved. The American idea of a ballot cast without priestly dictation; of a free press, without ecclesiastical or political censorship; of an untrammeled citizenship, owning allegiance to none but the government of this land; of the right to worship God according to the dictates of one's own conscience, without being called a heretic and consigned to Hades for it, still has the sanction of God. Your voice that in America, American ideas shall rule, cannot be silenced. God's chariot is in the van; under His providence, this mighty movement of protection shall roll on, until your present membership of thousands, shall have become twenty millions of United Americans, who own ballots and who shall rise up and banish un-American ideas from the land. The same kind wisdom that is said to place an antidote to every poison near the place where the poison itself is found has arranged to meet every crisis in human history. There is abroad in the land today the poison of ecclesiastical interference with our institutions; there is the poison of communism; there is the poison of monopolies; but, behold, in the Americanism of the Jr. O. U. A. M. God's antidote for the poison. The times demand the best thought and action of the truest and best citizens. We congratulate ourselves that we have no czars or lords. But we forget that we have railway kings, and coal barons and the despots of commerce who speculate in the necessaries of life. We sneer at the privileged classes of Europe who grind the face of the masses; but we have here the privileged classes that form rings, and bribe legislatures, and tell us for whom we shall vote, on pain of being anathematized "mugwumps" if we refuse. We cry out "Away with the Czar": but we meekly bow beneath the yoke imposed by the political boss, and vote for his man, because he is the party nominee. The great crying evil is that the better portion of our citizens take no part in politics. Your principles, gentlemen, should stimulate and develop a public sentiment that shall induce the sober, intelligent citizens of every community to properly discharge their duties. What we need to do in this country, today, is to become Americans at the polls, as well as Americans by profession. Oh for a gigantic expression of American principles. George III said in a famous speech, "I can give up my crown and retire from power; I can quit my palace and live in a cottage; I can lay my head on a block and lose my life; but I can not break my oath". We need Americans with such spirit. Citizens to whom the oath of allegiance to their country is so sacred, that a bribe, that office, that the desire for popularity, cannot swerve them one hair's width from loyalty to the stars and stripes. This Order was designed to bring forth such patriots, and statesmen, and citizens generally, who will revere and obey the laws of the land.

Two Women Speak

For the benefit of others.

Miss Helen Smith,

43 22d Place, Chicago, Ill., says:—

"I was troubled with irregularity and leucorrhœa. I followed Mrs. Pinkham's advice, took her Vegetable Compound, and used her Sanative Wash. I now feel like a new woman, and am perfectly healthy."

Mrs. E. Fox,

Woodstown, N. J., writes:—

"I had been sick 10 years with womb trouble and leucorrhœa. I could do no work. Doctors could not help me. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did. Now I can do all my work, and stand nearly all day, and not feel tired. I cannot thank you enough. I recommend it to every woman who has any weakness."

THE WHITE ELEPHANT INVESTMENT.

THE SCHOOL BOARD WANTS TO DISPOSE OF PART OF IT.

Thanksgiving Vacation Fixed—A Pay Student Graduated—Trying to Get a Loan at Less Than the Market Interest — Two Vacancies to Be Filled.

The regular meeting of the Board of Education was held Monday night, in the High School building. Dr. Probasco, the Rev. Dr. Richards, Edward L. Finch, members of the Board, Superintendent Maxson and Clerk Clark, were present.

In the absence of President Babcock, Dr. Probasco officiated. The meeting was called at 8:10. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. The bills of the month, amounting to $889.02, were ordered paid.

Tax Collector John Johnson submitted a statement of money received from taxes, $8,160.29 having been deposited in the banks. The report was received and filed.

Superintendent Maxson reported $157 received for tuition, from outside scholars.

The Board thought it advisable to close the schools Wednesday, Nov. 29, and keep them closed until the following Monday. This is done on account of Thanksgiving Day coming Thursday of that week.

In regard to the loan of $73 000 secured from the Mutual Life Insurance, Company, Mr. Finch said that he had seen Mr. Richards, a representative of the company, and was informed that no loan under 6 per cent interest was carried on their books. He had tried to negotiate with the Mutual Benefit of Newark for 4½ per cent, but they were unable to put money out at that figure. The Board thought they could secure 5 per cent, and the committee will inquire into the matter further and report.

Superintendent Maxson reported that 68 pupils from out of town were enrolled.

The graduating diploma of Miss Celia Daboll was signed by the members of the Board. Miss Daboll is a resident of Roton, Conn., and has been attending school here. She has virtually graduated, and therefore will receive her diploma.

The matter of nominating School Trustees, to succeed Dr. Hurlbut and Dr. Richards, was ordered advertised in the usual way.

The Board decided to sell the greenhouse on the Wadsworth property to the highest bidder.

The Board adjourned at 8:55, to meet again the first Monday in December.

THEIR CHURCH DEDICATED.

German Lutherans Enter Into Possession of Their Cozy New House.

The beautiful little church on the east corner of Grove street and Mercer avenue, North Plainfield, was formally dedicated as a house of worship, Monday, when all-day services were held in the building.

For a long time past a number of the German Lutherans of this city and North Plainfield have been agitating the matter of having a church of their own. The congregation, though small, is energetic, and the members have spared no pains to consummate their plans. John Koch donated the plot of ground on which the building now stands, and by private subscriptions, entertainments, etc., the new church was erected at a cost of about $4,000 on which there is only a small indebtedness. The Building Committee, Messrs. Henry Hess and Gustav Sutterlein, deserve credit for the manner in which they have conducted the construction.

The interior is finished in yellow pine and hard wood; it will comfortably seat 450. The furniture cost about $500. The altar covering in red and the silver service were presented by Moldenke church of New York; the plush drapery and gold-trimming around the speaker's desk were donated by the Ladies' Society, of which Mrs. Charles Smith is President, and Mrs. M. Weber Vice-president. The building is heated by steam and lighted by electricity. The organ used is the gift of F. M. Bulett, and the bell in the belfry was purchased by private subscriptions and collections made by the children.

The building was started August 27. Pierson & Gayle were the carpenters, Charles Burnett was the mason; G. Thorp & Co. did the painting, and R. H. McCullough furnished the hard-wood seats and pulpit.

Yesterday was the time set for the dedication of the new edifice, and about one hundred German Lutherans from New York, Elizabeth and New Brunswick were present. Dinner was served to them by the Ladies' Society, at the home of G. Sutterlin on Green brook road. The pulpit decorations were very pretty, consisting principally of cut flowers and potted plants. At the morning service the house was densely filled, the Rev. E. Moldenke, D. D., of New York, preached the dedicatory sermon in German. John F. Seiffert, of New York, presided at the organ, but there was no special music. In the afternoon there were addresses in German by the Rev. W. Berkemeir and E. Broneski of New York.

The evening service was in English, except the singing of hymns. The Rev. R. Kiesko, pastor, presided, and made a few remarks. R. C. Berkemeier of Mount Vernon, N. Y., was the speaker, he took his text from Chronicles vi:18—"Will God in very deed dwell with Man on Earth?"

Mr. [illegible] said among other things that [illegible] a day of great rejoicing among the German Lutherans, who now have a temple of their own—a place where the children may receive instruction and be taught the language of their fathers. Nothing, he contended, is more inspiring than the singing of German hymns. As the seed in the field grows, so does religion among the German Lutherans. They have longed for their "Home, Sweet Home", and they have it at last.

The audience was dismissed with the benediction.

Are You an Englishman?

Whether you are or not, you will be interested in knowing what Englishmen say of Marshall P. Wilder, who is to be in the Casino Saturday night.

The Prince of Wales says: "A very clever little gentleman." The Princess says: "Your stories were so bright!" And Gladstone says: "The soul of humor." Don't miss the chance to hob-nob with this soul!

Magnetic Preaching to Come.

The Rev. Arthur Crane is to conduct meetings for men under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. for one week beginning next Saturday evening. The Biddeford, Me., Times says: "The preacher is a magnetic speaker, using no notes whatever, nor in fact a pulpit. He is very free in speech and he emphasizes his words with graceful and appropriate action."

Betrayed by a Sticker.

At the First district polling place of the Fourth ward, when counting the votes Ballot No. 171 was challenged when taken from the box. It was a Republican ticket, with the name of James E. Martine pasted over the words "Republican Ticket." The Democratic Inspector, M. Flynn, contended that the ticket should be thrown out, and for over an hour the question of ballots was disposed with.

TRIBUTE TO WM. WHITE.

(From a Friend.)

A useful and honorable citizen of North Plainfield, and well-known throughout the community, died Saturday morning, Nov. 4, 1893. He came to Plainfield in the spring of 1862 and has been identified with its business interests ever since. During the fall of the previous year he purchased a large tract of land in what is now the Borough. In 1867 he entered into an agreement with his neighbor, Judge Boone and others, to lay out, beautify and improve their farm property of several hundred acres, including his own recent purchase. The result was the development of "Washington Park", as it is known at present. He also superintended the grading and laying out the streets. In this city he invested in real estate on Front street, and built the large brick block on the east corner of Park avenue; and on a double lot about 150 feet west of Somerset street he erected other store buildings. His sound business qualifications recommended his practical services in the management of the Washington Fire Insurance Company; the Dime Savings Institution, and other fiduciary organizations. Since 1875 the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York engaged his valuable experience as appraiser of real estate. There was probably no other man so efficient and reliable in the judgment of valuations of property in Northern New Jersey. Upon his careful estimates, millions of dollars have been loaned on bond and mortgage.

Mr. White was born in England, Oct. 27, 1824. When six years old his father died and his mother shortly thereafter came to America with her two daughters and the boy. The family settled in Jersey City and there it was that the lad learned the mason's trade beginning as soon as he was twelve years of age. He worked faithfully and uninterruptedly at the builders art till twenty five years old, at which time he had accumulated considerable property for those days. The excitement of the gold fever in 1849 induced him to seek a quicker fortune in California, whither he went for a short time, and not finding the "nuggets" as plentiful as was expected, he took up his life trade. While in San Francisco he built there the first Baptist church on the Pacific coast.

Returning to the State of his adoption, and getting fairly at work again buying building lots in Jersey City, and erecting dwellings and stores thereon, he settled down to married life. In 1855 he made the choice of Miss Mary Hegel, who has been a helpmeet indeed through all these years, and survives him today in the full vigor of a noble womanhood. Besides her, there are left a son George F. White and two daughters Mary and Nellie.

Not only in the public business affairs of life and the more peaceful duties of his domestic relations was Wm. White a worthy example of fidelity and uprightness; but in his Christian character he honored his religion by a life of purity and usefulness. He was converted from worldly ways in 1841 and united with the Jersey City Baptist church and has always been closely identified with this denominational faith. Subsequently he was instrumental in organizing the Bergen Baptist church in 1859. With that society he was actively associated in every department of Christian endeavor and in many places of responsible trust, till he transferred his membership, in the summer of 1865 to the First Baptist church of this city. Here he has been a valued and prominent worker, giving freely of his time and means to promote its interests in all spiritual and benevolent enterprises. Appreciating such consecrated service the church has honored itself in calling Mr. White during the past years to the important offices of Trustee, Sunday-school Superintendent and Deacon, all of which duties he has performed with conscientious earnestness and humility.

A pillar of the temple has fallen.

The American Catarrh Cure

Is the result of twenty-six years' study and treatment of the disease. One bottle convinces the most skeptical. It is always ready for use, needing neither douche nor atomizer. It restores the hearing, clears the hawking cough and expectorating, removes the headache and stops bleeding, increases the appetite, produces sound sleep, invigorates the whole system and increases the vitality. Prepared only by W. B. Jones, M. D., No. 1296 South Eighth street, Philadelphia. For sale by T. W. Randolph, 21 West Front street. Price $1.

Death of Richard Murphy.

Richard Murphy died last night at his home, 1325 Watchung avenue, of typhoid fever after an illness of five weeks. He leaves a wife and one child. The funeral will be at Binghampton, N. Y., Wednesday. The funeral party will leave Plainfield Wednesday morning at 8:15.

Richard Murphy has been in the employ of A. D. Thompson for some years, and was his right-hand man in the horse business. To him Mr. Thompson entrusted the buying of stock and general management of affairs pertaining to his stable. His loss will be felt personally in the business he has so long handled so successfully.

Hibbitts Got the Wheel.

The drawing for the Credenda special cycle, in the Crescent Wheelmen's rooms Saturday night, resulted in John Hibbitts winning the wheel. He held eight tickets altogether, and No. 280 was the lucky pasteboard. 400 tickets in all were sold. Mr. Hibbitts promptly bought a box of good cigars, which his friends smoked for him.

THE MAN ON THE CARS.

He Tells How Awfully Naughty Our 'Boys Think They Are, and Says the Girls Are to Blame for It.

The Man on the Cars, being reminded of his promise to tell something about our "gay" young man, led me into a half-filled car on a late train and took a seat in a dark corner.

"It is a very terrible subject,"—said he, —and one cannot be too careful in these crank times. I would n't have even the brakeman overhear for worlds. What do I mean by the 'gay' young man? Those who pose as our gilded youth, our jeunesse doree, if you please, and shake out a sportive bluff that is comical indeed. They appear to have learned the great mysterious truth that to be really fascinating to the girls one must wear a shadow of naughtiness, and pretend to have had no end of experience and a dreadful 'past', like the shallow Mrs. Tanqueray No. 2. This, of course, is perfectly true in a more or less degree, but when the 'past' and the experience are chiefly mythical the one hope of making an impression rests upon the foolishness of the girls. It is a regrettable fact that this hope usually succeeds. It think it is too bad that some of our young men who contrive to seem so really awful and horrid cannot be shown up in their true, lamb-like guilelessness. Have you never heard one of them retailing to his open-mouthed companions on the morning train the history of his rakish career of the previous night? No? Then you have missed something very funny; take it in the next time you have the chance. You will learn to your horror how really wicked and bad a young man may be, and not show it. You will discover that the average of viciousness is to be computed by the number of mild cigarettes that have been smoked; that coming home on the midnight train is a bit of diablerie most terrible; that going to a New York theatre in the evening is shocking beyond comparison, and that the very worst thing in the world that anyone could possibly do is to stop in at a certain East Fourteenth street so-called "concert hall" and sip a glass of beer. Of course, you will recoil with nervous prostration from the contemplation of such copper-lined iniquity, and turn to old Hogarth's pictures of the "Rake's Progress" and think how very much worse things are than they used to be. That Fourteenth street "concert hall" appears to be to our gilded youth the bete noir of all creation, the acme of Satanic ingenuity and the climax of Mephistophelian contrivance. And yet while I hate to down anyone's fondest hopes, I must say for the reassurance of everyone interested that no matter what the boys like to think and seek to appear, they really are not very bad after all. It is only a bluff, you know, and although it works pretty well it doesn't amount to anything. The question is, why do they want to appear in this false, reddish light, and I imagine, as usual, that the girls are to blame. The boys think they will make a deeper impression if they flaunt a skeleton in fair faces, and the dear girls encourage this idiocy by looking with admiring eyes upon every dark and mysterious youth who comes around and pretends to have a 'past'. Queer state of affairs: is n't it?

"You brought this tirade upon yourself, you know, and so I will not apologize for it. Good-night."

And he slipped out as the train pulled into Plainfield.

A TRIO OF RAGAN LECTURES.

For One Dollar Each Plainfielder May Go to the World's Fair, Rome and Spain.

H. H. Ragan, whose lectures have given so much delight and profit to Plainfielders in the past, has been again secured by the manager of Music Hall, and will give, this month, his latest charming series, as follows:

"The Columbian Exposition"—Monday, November 13.

"Rambling in Rome"—Monday, November 20.

"Spain, the Patron of Columbus"—Saturday, November 25.

The lectures are to commence at 8 each evening. A course ticket, with reserved seat, will be but $1, or single reserved seat tickets may be obtained at 50 cents each.

Mr. Ragan is a graduate of Yale University, where he was recognized as one of the most prominent men in his class, carried off most of the literary honors for which he competed, and was unanimously elected to represent his class as Orator on Presentation day. He was educated for the bar and practiced the profession successfully until his irresistible fondness for travel, coupled with his remarkable descriptive powers and his natural gifts as an orator, almost forced him upon the lecture platform. A visit to the Alhambra of Granada first suggested to him the idea of illustrated lectures. With the rise of amateur photography he became one of its most enthusiastic and successful devotees, and every season since has made it a rule to visit and photograph some new field. For this purpose he has made many journeys to the old world and explored almost every nook and corner of the new. For Mr. Ragan does no traveling by proxy. In no case does he attempt to describe or illustrate what he has not personally seen. Aiming at perfection in every feature, he early determined so far as possible to present his illustrations in the colors of nature. This was most dangerous ground, for the ordinary colored transparency is a nightmare. For weeks Mr. Ragan searched London and Paris until he found the artist by whose aid he has been enabled to present scenes so exquisitely beautiful, yet so true to nature, as to arouse the enthusiasm of artists and critics wherever he has appeared both in Europe and America. But, though the illustrations he employs are unquestionably the finest ever produced, it is by no means upon this feature alone that Mr. Ragan's acknowledged supremacy rests. Aside from all mechanical accessories, his scholarly training and remarkable gifts as a public speaker have placed him easily at the head of his profession. Besides his work in the lecture field, Mr. Ragan's illustrated articles in The Cosmopolitan and other magazines, and his magnificent book, "Art Photographs of the World", have added much to his reputation. Mr. Ragan opens the season of 1893-'94 with a record of 2,100 lectures delivered, and the audience he has failed to satisfy and delight is yet to be found. Plainfield should renew his charming and cultivated acquaintance this year with large houses.

To Help the "G. A. R. Fund.

A Conference Committee of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., and the Woman's Relief Corps, No. 10, met at the residence of I. McVoy, East Front street, Thursday evening, for the purpose of arranging for a fair for the benefit of the Relief Fund. It was decided to hold the fair in the Republican Association rooms for a week, beginning early in December.

An Evangelistic Week.

The week beginning Sunday, Nov. 12, is especially set apart by the Y. M. C. A. as a week of prayer for young men.

The Plainfield Association has secured the services of the Rev. Arthur Crane, the successful New England evangelist, for the week, to conduct special meetings for men in the rooms and to give Bible reading in the afternoon, to which all are invited.

Ready for a New Season.

The Fanwood club-house has had its appearance brightened by a coat of paint, and has been thoroughly repaired.

FIFTEEN CASES IN COURT.

Judge Coddington Has an [illegible] by Busy Saturday.

More business was transacted in the City Court on Saturday than has been seen in the court room for many a month. One of the causes for this deluge of justice is the raid in which the police have recently been engaged against the coal stealers in the vicinity of the boulevard.

Annie Hart, Mrs. Kate Kiely, Kitty Kiely, Dennis Kane, Helen Bergen, Mary Stiles, John Stiles, Ida Brown and Mary Bell were all in court charged with stealing coal and trespassing on the railroad property.

Mary Bell, Annie Hart, Miss Kate Kiely and Kitty Kiely were discharged as no case could be made against them. Dennis Kane, Mary Stiles, John Stiles and Ida Brown, pleaded guilty and sentence was suspended except in the case of Dennis Kane, who was accused by the policeman of persistently disregarding his warning to keep away from the coal trains. Kane was fined $5 or 20 days.

Ellen Bergen insisted on her innocence and only gave in when numerous witnesses were brought to prove her guilt. She was fined $10 or 30 days.

Baldy Clark arrived here safely from Bayonne where he was arrested on suspicion of being concerned in the burglary of the Crescent building in this city. Charles Hand identified the man as the one he had seen hanging about his building the day previous to the robbery. Toulson the feed man said he thought the man was the one he had seen but was not willing to swear to it. The charge of abusing Mrs. Gogan of Grant avenue, was brought against Clark and he was sent up for 30 days. More witnesses of The Crescent robbery will be secured.

Fred. Willibald, the newsboy, was fined $5 or 30 days for riding on coal trains. He is out on bail now charged with breaking into the ticket office of the North avenue depot. His fine will be paid.

Joseph Doyle, drunk and disorderly on Liberty street, Thursday, was fined $10 or 30 days.

THE NEW RIDING CLUB.

Successful First Ride of the Young Folks, and Other Features of the Academy.

The Young Folks Riding Club met for their first ride in the Academy Friday afternoon, and made a very creditable display. This club expects a membership of 40, and as they have brass-band music furnished for the occasions very enjoyable Friday afternoons amusement is in store for them during the winter.

Percy C. Ohl, a member of the celebrated Cavalry Troop A of New York, ably assisted by Mrs. Ohl, leads and instructs the class.

The Boys Cavalry Troop drills three times a week, and is instructed in the art of riding, mounting, saddling and the use of the sabre, as in the regular U. S. Army Cavalry tactics. Plainfield young people who can afford it could not indulge in a more manly sport, or a more healthful exercise, while to be educated in matters pertaining to horsemanship is very desirable. Wednesday evenings there is music in the Academy to enliven the steeds and riders of the Plainfield Riding Club. To all wishing to see the riders an invitation is extended.

The Academy offers opportunity of passing many pleasant hours, and it is a pleasure to note the prospects of this institution.

A Christian Endeavor Burial.

The funeral services of the late William V. Creveling were held at the residence of his parents on West Front street Thursday afternoon at 2:30. The Rev. Cornelius Schenck officiated.

A large number of the members of the Christian Endeavor societies of the city were present, and the scene was an affecting one.

The deceased was a member of the society of the Trinity Reformed church. It was only last Thursday evening at Dunellen that he was present with the society in good health, and his sudden death was a severe shock to all.

The Rev. Mr. Schenck read the Scripture, offered prayer and followed with a few remarks, in which he spoke in the highest terms of the deceased. He told of his devoted Christian life, at home and before the world; of his obedience and love to his father and mother and sisters.

He was a faithful member of the C. E. society and will be greatly missed.

Interment was made at Hillside cemetery.

The pall bearers were President Fred E. Smith, Frank Woodruff, Harry J. Wood, of Trinity Reformed C. E; President Henry Seader, of Warren Chapel C. E.

Objected to Familiarity.

Two young men, one the son of a wealthy real estate dealer in this city, were driving through New Market on the way home from Piscataway late Thursday evening, when they espied an object in the roadway directly in front of the horse. The young men were frightened, and one of them whipping out a revolver shot at the object, which proved to be a skunk. A new suit of clothes was ordered from a local merchant next morning.

The Bi Club Show in the Casino.

To the Editor of The Press:—While thanking you for giving me space yesterday's issue to announce the coming delightful entertainment to be given by the Bicycle Club, I will have to ask to be allowed to make a correction, namely: since the affair was first contemplated, we have decided that the Casino would be more acceptable than the club-house; hence it will be given in the former place.

PATRIARCH.

Thanksgiving Anticipated.

Henry Voehl was driving along Washington Valley on the way to this city, Thursday morning, when he found three headless chickens lying in the roadway. They had evidently been stolen and killed and dropped by the thief in his hasty escape.

Smallpox in Morristown.

A family in Morristown brought a servant from New York last week. After living with them for a few days she was taken ill and sent to the hospital, where it was found she was suffering with smallpox.

Howard Teel's New Departure.

Howard Teel, who arrived in town Thursday, after an extended trip to Pittsburg and Chicago, will settle in Trenton, where his father has established a well-paying business.

The Diocese to Convene Here.

The Diocesan Union of the C. Y. M. L. clubs will meet tomorrow afternoon in the Plainfield club-house. Forty delegates are expected from the various Leagues of the Union.

Smith's Party Bagged 48.

The party of hunters from here, headed by the popular "Dutchy" Smith, returned from White House with 48 rabbits. They report game not so plentiful as in former years.

Beat All Fairs.

The gross receipts of Muhlenberg Hospital Fair were nearly $5,000.

With Ely's Cream Balm a child can be treated without pain and with perfect safety. It cures catarrh, hay fever and colds in the head. It is easily applied into the nostrils and gives immediate relief. Price 50 cents.

My catarrh was very bad; for 30 years I have been troubled with it—have tried a number of remedies without relief. A druggist advised Ely's Cream Balm. I have used only one bottle and I can say I feel like a new man. I make this voluntary statement that others may know of the Balm.—J. W. Mathewson, Lawyer, Pawtucket, R. I.

Surprised the [illegible].

To the Editor of The Press:—Will you allow me space in your columns to praise in the highest manner the way in which Frank Hadden, of Hadden's stable, had in readiness the coaches and carriages for the different guests at the McKenzie-Pierson wedding. Not a break was made, and all had their conveyances at hand as soon as the number was called. I was agreeably surprised, as I did not think they had things down so fine in Jersey.

NEW YORKER.

THE ACTOR.

Lint & Davis will dissolve partnership at the end of the present season.

Woolson Morse is at work on the score of a new opera for De Wolf Hopper.

Bessie Bonehill is meeting with good success in her play, "Playmates."

John H. Mason is writing a combination play of melodrama and vaudeville, which he will call "Kate and the Commodore."

G. A. Byrne and Louis Harrison are to write another extravaganza for E. E. Rice, to be called "Atlantis; or, The Amulet."

Ella Fontainebleau will start upon the road at the head of a repertory company under the management of Warren & Pyne.

Jerry Hernell, author of "Justice at Last," in which Rose Watson is starring, says that the play is meeting with success.

Henri Marteau, the French violinist, will concertize in Frankfort, Mayence, Cologne, Berlin and Leipsic before sailing for America in November.

Jennie Eustace, a member of A. M. Palmer's stock company, is preparing a series of articles on dramatic subjects which will soon be published.

Will C. Cowper and Lenox Gordon will soon start upon the road with a company of players presenting "A Mexican Romance" and "Gypsy Born."

"The Island Waif" is reported as having made a success and will be included in the repertory of J. C. Rockwell. The play is by Clara Grady Davenport.

"The Honeymooners," by C. M. S. McClellan and William Furst, was recently sung at the Lyceum theater, Rochester, by the Pauline Hall Opera company.

Leoncavallo's opera "I Pagliacci" ("The Strolling Players"), was produced in English for the first time in this country at the Star theater, Buffalo, by the Boston Grand Opera company.

The Marie Tavary Grand English Opera company will include Mlle. Irene Pevny, Baroness Helen von Doenhoff, Charles O. Bassett, Payne Clarke, Emil Steger and Conrad Behrens.

THE MODISTE.

Elegant tan jackets or capes are trimmed with astrakhan or sable fur.

Pink and very light green felt hats with dark velvet trimmings and narrow fur bands and coils are dressy favorites in millinery.

Cream white corded silk capes are lined with rose colored brocaded satin and trimmed with fluffy white fur. These capes are lovely additions to an evening toilet.

Stylish and serviceable traveling wraps are made of fine camel's hair or ladies' cloth in Russian redingote form, with triple capes edged with mink fur an inch wide.

Kilt plaiting, accordion, box and knife plaitings all reappear on dressy toilets for the winter, rivaling the gored and bell skirt, with long Grecian or short apron overskirts.

Paniers are announced, and alas for the short, stout woman if they become as generally fashionable as they were once. Tall, slim women will, however, score a distinct advantage by the mode.

Every conceivable shade of brown, mahogany, rosewood, nasturtium, brick dust, flame color, gray and green will be worn this winter, the various fresh dyes appearing christened with the most romantic names by the manufacturers.

For the tall women this winter are the fur bordered Russian gowns, which appear in two styles—one with a belted Russian blouse, fur edged, fur girdled and full sleeved, a style with which we are familiar, but which is nevertheless a decided novelty.

Among the luxurious garments are tight fitting sealskin coats, merely silk lined to make them less heavy, with additional warmth imparted by a shoulder cape of the same fur falling over full sealskin sleeves that fit tightly on the lower arm and made without cuffs.—New York Post.

THE DESIGNER.

Double wreaths of gold and pearls combine in brooches.

There are fascinating new card counters in perforated silver.

There is a fancy for enameled trinkets for bridesmaids' presents.

Enamel studs are desired. There is a prospect of fobs being called for by women.

Swords with black enamel dangling with stones are beautiful. The black gives relief to the stones.

Jewel boxes of perforated silver of the finest work have set in the tops like a dome, pincushions of the palest hued velvets.

Since women have returned to parting their hair in the middle the diamond star is a very prominent form of hair adornment.

Blue enameled divided sleeve buttons, with a crumpled diamond shaped bit with a clover leaf in white enamel, are delightfully feminine.

A bracelet was seen for a silver wedding present. It was made up of two rows of diamonds set in silver. Between them were the words, also in diamonds, "The Silver Echo of a Golden King," which is very pretty, if one doesn't know what it means.—Jewelers' Circular.

THE ELECTRICIAN.

The French transatlantic cable was worked at a loss of £913 last year.

It is stated that fully one-third of the copper refined in this country is treated electrically.

There are more than 300 companies in the United States that employ electricity in running operations for light and power.

An electrical ambulance is in the course of construction at St. Louis. It promises to be as swift and steadier than a vehicle drawn by horses and will be given right of way by the street car companies.

The unit of electrical induction will be called the Henry in honor of the late professor Henry of the Smithsonian institution. The volt was named for Volta, an Italian scientist, the ohm for Ohm, a German, and the ampere for Ampere, a Frenchman.

THE EPICURE.

Two or three geranium leaves added to crab apple jelly will give it a delicious flavor.

The Portuguese have a proverb that no man can be a good husband who does not eat a good breakfast.

To roast small birds, fasten the head under the wings. Lay a thin slice of pork on the breast of each bird and a slice of bread underneath. Roast in a hot oven.

A pretty breakfast dish: Salt the whites of eggs, while beating to a stiff froth; then arrange on a plate. Place the yolks at regular distances apart in cavities made in the beaten eggs and bake till brown.

In Paint the best is the cheapest. Strictly Pure White Lead is best; properly applied it will not scale, chip, chalk, or rub off; it firmly adheres to the wood and forms a permanent base for repainting. Paints which peel or scale have to be removed by scraping or burning before satisfactory repainting can be done. When buying it is important to obtain properly made. Time has proven that white lead made by the "Old Dutch" process of slow corrosion possesses qualities that cannot be obtained by any other method of manufacture. This process consumes four to six months time, and produces the brands that have given White Lead its character as the standard paint.

"Atlantic" "Bradley" "Brooklyn" "Jewett" "Ulster"

are standard brands of strictly pure Lead made by the "Old Dutch" process. You get the best in buying them. You can produce any desired color by tinting these brands of white lead with National Lead Co.'s Pure White Lead Tinting Colors.

For sale by the most reliable dealers in Paints everywhere.

SOME ODD STORIES.

ADVENTURES AND INCIDENTS FAR OUT OF THE ORDINARY.

The Hermit of the African Forest and His Beautiful Daughter—The Baboon Woman Who Was Jealous of the Girl—Shot Dead by the Desperate Father.

(Copyright, 1893, by American Press Association.)

"Certainly there are such things as 'monkey men'—and monkey women, too," said Rodney Dahlgren, the famous traveler and African explorer. "Have I seen any of them? I have. There is a reason why I should never forget them. Yes, there is a story behind it. It is a most unpleasant recollection—something I seldom speak of—but I will tell you about it if you care to listen.

"From the gulf of Guinea southward for at least a thousand miles is a thickly wooded country inhabited by the giant gorilla, a creature as large as a man, sometimes larger. Why Alvarez Barriot should have made his home in such a wild region is something I never understood, although I imagined he had good reason for turning hermit and secluding himself and his beautiful daughter from the rest of the world. There I found them, living in the midst of a garden that was rich with flowers and fruits, apparently happy and contented. He welcomed me to his home, and I spent there a few of the most pleasant and delightful weeks of my life.

THE BABOON WOMAN WAS JEALOUS.

"The servant in Barriot's home was a strange and hideous woman of uncertain age, a creature with the most repulsive features I ever saw on human being, with hands and feet that seemed deformed and looked like claws. She always went barefooted, absolutely refusing to wear shoes. Her voice was singularly gruff, and she spoke a kind of broken English that it took me a long time to understand. When she became angry, she would utter a chattering scream that reminded me of a monkey's cry the first time I heard it. This creature was exceedingly shy of me, although she would look at me from the first with her beady black eyes as if she longed to fly at my throat and fasten her clawlike fingers there. Barriot and his daughter called her Molly.

"This woman fascinated me by her repulsive aspect, and I took an unaccountable interest in her from the time I first saw her. I wondered what race or tribe she could belong to, and I finally became satisfied that there was a mingling of black and white blood in her veins. I longed to question the hermit concerning Molly, but he was a man who resented inquisitiveness, as I quickly discovered, and so I refrained.

"Molly was devoted to Enithe Barriot, to whom she was ever gentle and considerate. Indeed the hideous woman seemed to love her mistress passionately, and her jealousy was immediately aroused if she fancied Enithe was paying more attention to me than she ought. This jealousy became open and violent as the hermit's daughter and myself grew better acquainted and were in each other's company a great deal.

"As for Enithe, she was the sweetest, purest, most innocent girl it has ever been my fortune to meet. She knew no more of the great world beyond the limits of her garden home than her books and her father had told her. She would have created a sensation in any Fifth avenue reception room, but she had quite escaped the contamination that mingling with the world must bring to the most innocent maiden. I was charmed with her from the very first, and it was not long before I found myself completely enamored, but I felt it was like betraying the confidence of my host to win the affections of this fair child, and I should have departed with the secret of my passion locked fast in my breast, but for Alvarez Barriot himself.

"One day the hermit took me for a walk far into the forest, and there, seated beneath the spreading branches of a mighty tree, we had a long talk. He questioned me about myself, and I answered every question as frankly and truthfully as I could, even though I was filled with wonder by his strange manner. At length, after some minutes of silence, he asked:

"'Dahlgren, do you love Enithe?'

"The question came with the suddenness of a thunderbolt, but I answered as soon as I could recover from the start it gave me. I told him I did, but I explained that I intended going away as soon as possible, that I might keep my love a secret. Then came the greatest surprise of all.

"'She loves you,' declared the hermit, his voice shaking with emotion. 'She told me so yesterday, but it needed no words from her to reveal the truth. You shall not take her from me, but if you are willing to marry her and live with her here until I am dead and gone she shall be yours.'

"It is needless to say I had no hesitation in agreeing to anything that would give me Enithe, even though I, too, were forced to turn hermit. When we had talked it over a long time, he suddenly said:

"'You must beware of Molly, for she hates you. She is a baboon woman. You have heard of them? I rescued her from the great apes and tamed her, although she was like a wild animal at first. I am satisfied she was stolen from her parents by the baboons and brought up. Watch her, Dahlgren.'

"That night Enithe and I pledged our love beneath the stars. As I kissed her sweet lips for the first time, I heard a rustling in the bushes, and the next moment I was knocked flat and felt a great weight on my breast. Then two clawlike hands clutched my throat, and I saw the hideous face of the baboon woman close to my own. Her fiery eyes seemed to burn into my brain, and her harsh voice shrieked:

"'She mine! No have her! Kill, kill, kill!'

"I fought with all my strength, but I was not able to fling her off. It was wonderful what power she possessed. I heard the bones in my neck cracking, and I could not breathe. I was being strangled to death.

"Enithe's cries brought her father running from the house, rifle in hand. The baboon woman saw him coming, and, with a wild, chattering scream, she released her hold on me and grasped the girl. In a moment she had flung Enithe over her shoulder and fled into the forest.

"Barriot was nearly crazed when he realized what had happened. 'The creature is carrying my child to the baboons!' he screamed. 'We must follow and save her! Come on!'

"He knew the great cliff of rocks among the caves of which the baboons had their homes, and we were able to intercept Molly. Seeing she was cut off, the wild woman started to climb the almost perpendicular face of the bluff, which lay in the full light of the moon. She carried Enithe, who was unconscious, as if the girl were a feather. Driven desperate, Barriot lifted his rifle and fired. The bullet crashed straight through Molly's head, and she fell dead at our feet. Enithe was unharmed, and we carried her back to her home."

Dahlgren ceased speaking, and after a time I ventured to say:

"You are not married. Enithe"—

"She is dead."

He turned his face away and looked out from my window upon the great artery of New York, seething Broadway. And I questioned him no more.

A Soft Answer, Etc.

"You are no gentleman!" exclaimed an angry man in a Broadway car recently to another man who had jostled him and forgotten to apologize.

"You're no lady," said the rude man coldly.

"I said you were no gentleman," said the first speaker scornfully.

"And I said you were no lady," replied the original offender.

"You're impertinent."

"No, I'm accurate."

Then the other passengers smiled, and the angry man first looked foolish and then also concluded to smile.—New York Herald.

Dwyer's Dangerous Whim.

Frank Dwyer of the Cincinnati baseball team has a nervous affection of the eye that makes him wink his eyes occasionally. Joe Malvey says of him: "He winked at me, and I thought he wanted to give me an easy ball. I swiped at it, and it was a wide outshoot. He winked again, and I got set for a drop. Then he winked the third time, but I thought I'd fool him. I didn't hit at the ball at all, and he slammed it right over the plate for the third strike."

IT FASTENS ON STUDIOUS MEN.

The Disease, Angina Pectoris, Which Is [illegible]

The cause of their illness, angina pectoris, which has recently been given as the cause of one or two deaths of well known men, is the scientific name for a disease that is more familiarly known as breast pang. It is said that Dr. J. G. Holland died of it, and so did Charles Devens, Rutherford B. Hayes and a member of the Astor family who died recently. Breast pang does not so well describe the ailment as the phrase "suffocation of the heart," which has been applied to the disease half a century ago. It used to be said of this ally of mortality that no physician has ever been able to study the symptoms, because it comes unexpectedly and stealthily and acts quickly, either to kill or to return as suddenly again. It was carefully studied in 1888, however.

In one medical dictionary it is described as an "affection of the chest characterized by severe pains, faintness and anxiety, occurring in paroxysms, connected with disorder of the pneumogastric and sympathetic nerves and their branches, and frequently associated with organic disease of the heart. An attack of angina pectoris commences with pain in the region of the heart, generally on a level with the lower end of the sternum. The pain is severe and generally of a grasping, crushing or stabbing character. It is accompanied by a distressing sense of sinking, of fainting or of impending death."

The attacks last various lengths of time between a minute and an hour or even two hours. They end either in the death of the victim or the cessation of the attack. Often the disease manifests itself during sleep, but it may be induced by emotion or physical exertion, especially by rapid climbing, or it may come from exposure to a cold draft or to wind. Men are more subject to it than women, "in the ratio of 11 to 1," says one authority. Excessive smokers of tobacco are said to be subject to it, but it should be remembered that it was a well known disease before tobacco was known to Christendom. Literary men and men of sedentary habits are often killed by it, and two or three noted New York lawyers have died of it recently. It does not result from bad habits so much as from bad air and lack of exercise.—New York Sun.

Earthquakes.

Shocks of severe earthquakes appear in some cases to be transmitted completely around the globe.

A remarkable example of this occurred on July 28, 1889, and has only recently been brought to light. While examining the record of pendulum experiments at Potsdam, Herr Paschwitz happened to consult a volume of the publications of the Seismological Society of Japan, an association for the study of earthquakes, and was surprised to find that a severe earthquake which had occurred at Kumamoto on the date above mentioned coincided in time, allowance being made for transmission of the shock, with a double perturbation which had been noticed by the pendulum experimenters at Potsdam and Wilhelmshaven.

The explanation of the double perturbation recorded in Germany is not the least interesting part of the story. It was interpreted to mean that the shock in Japan ran both ways round the globe, and as the perturbation which traveled westward had a shorter distance to go it arrived at Potsdam about 2 hours and 26 minutes sooner than did the perturbation which ran round the shell of the earth eastward.

The distance along a great circle of the globe from Kumamoto to Potsdam, reckoning toward the west, is about 5,600 miles, while the distance along the same great circle reckoned the other way round is 19,500 miles. The average velocity with which the shock traveled in the earth was about 7,887 feet in a second. This agrees very well with the velocity observed in some other similar cases.—Youth's Companion.

THREE LOVERS.

There was one I dearly loved whose heart
Seemed to mine a counterpart.
The notes were false or my ear was wrong,
And so an ending of that song.

There was one who loved me well whose soul
Fitted to mine as ear to thole.
A gale sprang up, as a gale well may,
And tomorrow was turned to yesterday.

There was one I loved whose radiant face
Made me run a perilous race.
There is one I love and one loves me
With a love that spells eternity.

—Walter H. Pollock.

Air Ventilation and Coal.

A thorough and scientific examination made by an English chemist on the effect of air and ventilation on coal gives the following results: First, the danger of spontaneous firing of coal in large lumps is very slight, but is much greater with smaller coal and greater still with dust, the increase of danger being due to the larger amount of surface exposed to the air in proportion to the mass of the coal. Second, air dried coal which contains more than 5 per cent of moisture is dangerous, but if it contains less the danger diminishes, the moisture contained being a measure of the absorbent power of the coal for air, and the more absorbent the coal the more dangerous. Third, the danger is somewhat increased by the presence of pyrites in large quantity. Fourth, newly won coal should be shielded from the air as much as possible to prevent the chance of rapid heating, and for the same reason it is best not to stack it in large heaps, since these retain the heat. Fifth, all external sources of heat, such as steam pipes, [illegible] and hot flues in the neighborhood of a coal, add very greatly to the risk, spontaneous heating becoming vastly more rapid when it is assisted from without. Of course these conclusions have special relation to coal that is stored or shipped in cargoes.—New York Sun.

Anonymous Gifts.

The Princess of Wales once had a tiny white dog sent to her by the parcels post in a wicker box. Fond as the princess is of all her pets, "Fussy," for so he was named, remains her prime favorite, and very often does she wonder who the thoughtful donor could possibly have been.

One of Albani's finest parures of diamonds and turquoises came from a lady to whom she had never spoken. During the whole year of the run of "The Dancing Girl," Mr. Tree was supplied nightly with a buttonhole, and during "Captain Swift" with more than he knew what to do with, and both he and his wife have been recipients for some time past of beautiful gifts of china and other pretty things sent anonymously to the theater. Nor was the famous Bully Boy forgotten, since boxes of macaroons and other dainties were frequently sent to him by ladies who appreciated the pathetic glance of his rolling eye and the stolid wag of his tail.—London Gentlewoman.

ADVENTURE WITH A BOA.

An Extremely Unpleasant Encounter In a Cingalese Garden.

One incident that occurs to me is a little adventure I have had with a python, a snake of the molurus tribe, in my own garden in Colombo. One evening I was smoking on the veranda after dinner. It was a cloudy night, but the air was perfectly still. What seemed to be the branch of a tree was lying across the carriage drive, and as I noticed it I wondered how it could have fallen when not a breath of wind was stirring. It was perfectly motionless, and after awhile I went down to throw it aside out of the path. But the moment I stooped over it the object seemed to melt away.

Amazed and half doubting the evidence of my own eyes, I took a step in pursuit, but the instantaneous contraction of the whole body, ready for a spring, and the long, deep hiss that followed told me of the danger I was in. Each stood without the movement of a muscle for about 20 seconds, and then the snake imperceptibly disappeared. One long sigh of relief and a dart into the house that beat the record for a 20 yard sprint closed the proceedings for me that night. Had I by mistake laid the slightest touch upon the creature's body the probability is that within less than half a minute I should have been reduced to a shapeless lump of pulp and broken bones. Escape would have been impossible. Providence was merciful to me that night.

Soon after we found that the python had taken up its abode in the garden, but it had chosen its hiding place so cunningly that there was no getting at it. One night a lady who was ill was lying awake in her room, and the room next to hers was occupied by my sister. The door between the two rooms was open, and suddenly the lady saw a large snake come in at the window, moving its head about in search of a place where it might alight. A moment later it fell with a loud flop to the floor. Of course it had disappeared by the time they had recovered from the shock and called for assistance.—Westminster Gazette.

What is

CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhoea and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

Dr. G. C. Osgood, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

Dr. J. F. Kincheloe, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

H. A. Archer, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

Ruins in Bolivia and Peru.

Major William [illegible], a retired Connecticut army officer, has completed a theory, whereby he attempts to prove that there are more ancient ruins in Bolivia and Peru than there are in Egypt. He declares the most ancient remains of former civilization on this continent to be those ruins of temples and of cities that are found in the neighborhood of Lake Titicaca, such as the [illegible] ruins. These ruins are scattered over a great extent of country and reveal remarkable skill in stone [illegible]. This [illegible]

"Thirty Days Hath September."

The following rhyme (first printed, I believe, in 1571) may be found in Grafton's "Abridgement of the Chronicles of Englande, 1572," sig. Ff. ii verso:

Thirty dayes hath Nouember,
April, Iune & Septemher.
February hath xxviij alone,
And all the rest have xxxi.

Five years later (1577) it appears in Harrison's "England," with one or two trivial changes and the addition of the line:

But in the leape you must ad one.

That the version with September in the first line was current by 1601 is evidenced by a passage in "The Return from Parnassus," written in that year (III, i., p. 27 of Arber's ed.). The following French version is from a book published in 1594, "Proverbes en Rimes," ii, 311:

Trente ont les Mois de Nouembre,
Avril & Iuin & Septembre;
Et vingt-huit jours en a vn,
Tous les autres en ont trente-vn.

An old Italian version is:

Trenta di ha novembre, april, giugno e settembre;
Di ventotto ce n'e uno; tutte gli altri n'han trentuno.

—Notes and Queries.

Didn't Like Cats.

Only those who have examined the matter carefully have any idea of the many figures of speech in use in our ordinary everyday language. Indeed these figures are so intimately woven into the web and woof of our language as the figures in a Persian rug. Even the most rigid science has to depend on figures of speech to make itself understood.

But as some people use more personal ornaments than others, so some indulge in more figures of speech, and Mr. Robb of Williamsburg, N. Y., is one of these.

Recently, when thinking of changing his dwelling, he called on a German landlord who had a number of houses to let.

Mr. Robb was shown the most desirable of these. It was a very nice residence, but it struck the prospective tenant that the rooms were rather small, and he expressed his opinion in this way:

"It's a nice house, Mr. Goldberg, but the rooms are too small. Why, in most of them there isn't room to swing a cat."

"Vot's dot you say?" asked the landlord.

"I say I couldn't swing a cat in most of these rooms."

"Gott im himmel! Vot for you vant to swing der gat in dem rooms, eh?"

"Well," laughed Robb, "I might want to, you know, and if I should there isn't room."

"I don'd like dings like dot," muttered Goldberg. "I own dem houses den year unt haf goot denants, bud none oof dem vos in dot swingin gat piziness."

Promising to see Goldberg again, Mr. Robb left, but he did not return, for that evening Mr. Goldberg's son called on him and said:

"Mein fader, Mister Goldberg, he send me round to say he is goin to rent dot house py a family widout gats."

Russian Village Fire Department.

In a Russian village there is not even such an organization as we possess in this country in the small volunteer companies. In their stead is a log stable with thatched roof, containing an old fashioned hand pump and three casks mounted on wheels. These are kept filled with water, and each is drawn by a single horse. The horses are the property of the commune, and they are kept saddled outside the cabin, ready for duty at a moment's notice. A place is also set apart in the box for the watchman, who serves as watchman, an office that is held, turn by turn, by the inhabitants of the township. The location selected for this cabin is as near as possible to the residence of the pristav, or the district captain of police, and upon an alarm of fire he drives to the scene in his telega at the head of the procession of casks and pumps.—Harper's [illegible]

PLAINFIELD N. J

THE PATRIARCH AND THE BI CLUB.

HE TELLS THE TRUTH ABOUT THAT TERRIBLE SMOKER.

How the Blood from the Pugilistic Encounter Covered the Floor and Rose to the Galleries—A Bit of Argument that Effectually Answers the Ladies.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—I have been both amused and annoyed by the comments and criticisms about the "Smoker" given by the Plainfield Bicycle Club, some three weeks ago. I think, on the whole, that I have been more amused than annoyed; but I very much regret that misrepresentation, distortion and enlargement of a little incident at the close of the evening have put the club in an unfortunate and a false light before the good people of Plainfield, particularly the ladies. Place aux dames always! Bless their dear hearts! we could never have built our pretty little club-house without their assistance.

Now, what are the facts in regard to the "Smoker" alluded to? That there was a most delightful evening of mirth and music I think "nobody will deny". Burdett, Pearsall and the Columbia Quartette acquitted themselves beautifully, and the tenor Cree-ated a furore.

After that, the deluge, of blood! You many have heard that it was ankle "deep, or "up to the horses bridles", but, Mr. Editor, let the truth be told though the heavens fall! The fact is that the blood from this fearful contest with soft gloves, first covered the floor, then it arose to the windows, and then to the galleries, where the panic-stricken spectators had sought safety in flight, but had sought it in vain. It closely followed and overwhelmed them, continuing on its upward course into the pool room, (appropriate name!), thence flowing down the front stairs and out at the door. It was a horrible sight! High-blood mark is indelibly imprinted on the side of the club-house, like high-water on the few remaining houses after the Jamestown flood!

In fact, it was the impossibility of removing these crimson stains, either by the use of Sapolio or whale oil soap, that led us to transfer the coming entertainment (it is not a smoker) of Saturday night last, to the Casino.

One word more about the boxing which led to the evil reports. I have no word of defense for brutality in any shape, but boxing, with large, soft gloves, has never been considered brutal. To some hypersensitive organizations, it is not pleasant, but it is healthful exercise, and, at the Bicycle club-house, we have extracted "heaps" of innocent fun from it. Who will ever forget the set-to between a handsome coffee broker and a rising architect, equally handsome? But it was not given to all men to witness that contest. Like all others it was harmless. Sometimes a grazing blow may incarnadine the cuticle slightly, if it is sensitive, but I have never known any serious effect from the use of soft gloves.

It has been reported that such a dreadful blow was given to the club janitor that he had been "put to sleep". Now, Mr Editor, granting the "sleep", it does not prove that the blow was hard, because sleep is that darkey's normal condition! Hence, it would not require much of a blow to put him there. Why, for an inordinate, uncontrollable, insatiable and overwhelming capacity for sleep, the C. J. puts "that boy Joe", immortalized by Dickens, deep into the shade?

Will you allow me a little more space for a "finally"? Ladies, (Plainfield ladies, too), eagerly and excitedly watch a game of base-ball or of foot-ball. Men have been killed by being struck by a base-ball. At both games, fingers, legs, arms and ribs have been broken. At foot-ball, ears have been torn off and noses dislocated. In Michigan, the other day, a deaf mute was killed by his fellow students falling on him (in a regulation way) in a game of foot-ball. But we hear of no protest from our Plainfield Sorosis! PATRIARCH.

P. S. In all seriousness: after a close connection with the Plainfield Bicycle Club for ten or twelve years, and having seen it grow from fifteen to one hundred in membership, and knowing that the aim and trend of the club has been toward higher manhood, I regret deeply the false impression made by a slight but untoward incident. Morally, our "Smokers" are beyond reproach. I have never heard a song sung nor a story told, which might not have been sung or told in the lecture room of any church.

HYMENEAL.

Searles—Lowrie.

The wedding of Miss Rose Lowrie, daughter of Dr. H. H. Lowrie of Park avenue, to Dr. Frank B. Searles, took place in Grace church Thursday at 7:30. The body of the church was crowded to its utmost extent and the ceremony was performed promptly at the hour set, so that no one was kept waiting.

The church was beautifully decorated with chrysanthemums of every hue and size. The church was a mass of exquisite potted plants, and palms were flanked on either side of the choir steps. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. S. P. Lowrie, D. D., brother of the bride's father. He was assisted by the Rev. Mr. Bristol and Dr. Rodman. The bride wore white silk and a tulle veil, and her maid of honor Miss Maude Lowrie wore pink. The ushers were Dr. Humphrey of South Windham, Conn., Dr. Poinck of Brooklyn, Elston M. French, Fred J. Yates, Harry R. Lowrie, and Howard Whiting of Boston. A reception was given at the home of the bride after the ceremony. The young couple left for New York at about 11 and will probably make a trip through the south during their honeymoon.

OBITUARY.

JAMES H. FORCE.

The shocking news was brought to Plainfield on Saturday of the sudden death of James H. Force, proprietor of the Mansion House at Bound Brook, and brother of the publisher of this paper.

Mr. Force was chatting pleasantly with his son John, at 1 o'clock. He left him and went into the hotel yard.

Ten minutes later the landlady went out to hang clothes and found him lying dead on the board-walk. He had evidently been seized with an attack of heart failure, sat down to recover, and fallen over dead.

The body was carried into the house, and physicians were summoned. They pronounced life extinct. Not only the household but the entire borough was affected by the bereavement, for Mr. Force was a most popular man.

The news came to Plainfield by the 2:15 train, and expressions of sincere sorrow were heard on every lip.

Mr. Force was for many years in the hotel business, a large portion of the time in this city.

He was a most devoted husband and father, and his best thoughts and wishes were always for his family. Nothing his wife or children could ask for, but was always granted them.

He leaves a wife, an only son John, and two daughters, one of whom was but recently married to Will F. Williams of this city.

He was the eldest son of the late Lewis M. and Mary L. Force. Albert L. is the sole surviving brother, and Sarah E. Prescott, of 648 Monroe street, Brooklyn, is the only sister. The aged mother still lives with her son Albert on Duer street.

James and his brothers were all born on the Hotchkiss farm in this city, in the rear of ex-Mayor Randolph's home, where they were taught the saw-milling business, which they followed till about 1870.

Mr. Force had been a great sufferer from inflammatory rheumatism, which is thought to have reached his heart. He was in his fifty-fourth year, being two years older than his brother the late Wm. L. Force.

THE GLARE THAT PLAINFIELD SAW.

Westfield Firemen Have a Hard Run of Three Long Miles.

At 11 Tuesday night a man on horseback brought word to the Westfield Fire Department that Weisgard's mills at Branch Mills were on fire, and asked for help. An alarm was sounded and the horses were quickly hitched to the chemical engine. It was a three-mile run over bad roads, but the engine arrived in time to save two buildings adjoining the burning structures. The mills were erected last year by S. J. Weisgard on the site of what has for years been known as the lower mill at Branch Mills, and employed about fifty Hebrews in the grinding of flour for unleavened bread and the manufacture of snuff. The fire is believed to have been started by a couple of employes who were lately discharged. Both mills, with most of the stock on hand, were destroyed. The loss is placed at $10,000. One building and the residence of the owner were saved. Mr. Weisgard's New York office is at 235 Orchard street.

No Reflection on His Worth.

In the hour of defeat, it is gratifying for the unsuccessful candidate to receive such letters as the following:

DEAR MR. MARTINE:

I sincerely regret your defeat, knowing that your service in the Senate would have reflected honor upon the State, and I trust that the result of Tuesday's battle will not in the least dishearten you. Throughout the country, our party has been deserted by misguided people who charge it with effects of which our opponents were the cause, but you have the consolation that your defeat in no manner personally reflects upon your worth.

With sincere regards, I remain,
Very truly yours,
ALLAN L. McDERMOTT.

Officials Entertained.

The popular townsman, Geo. F. Randolph, after passing a very busy day as one of the election board at the polls, entertained a party of gentlemen at his residence, 98 Duer street, Tuesday evening. The guests were Councilman Fountain, ex-Councilman Sebring, Township Clerk Martin, Messrs. Williams, Day, McDonald, N. B. Smalley, J. M. Smalley and D. W. King. The menu consisted of Welsh rabbit, coffee and fruits.

Admired by Veteran King.

Col. King, Proprietor of Hotel Albion declares that within two minutes from the time he sent in an alarm from fire box 26, at the corner of Park avenue and Eighth street, Tuesday evening, the firemen were on the spot with their apparatus ready for duty. This, he says, is remarkably quick time for a volunteer department.

Talk and Tea for the City Union.

A social meeting of all the circles and members of the Plainfield City Union of King's Daughters will be held Monday, Nov. 13, in the Crescent Avenue church parlors, at 3 p. m., to be addressed by Mrs. M. L. Dickinson. Tea will be served, and a full attendance is desired.

No Game and No Vote.

Four votes were lost in North Plainfield, Tuesday, as that many gunners went hunting early in the day and did not return until half an hour after the polls closed. They were quite indignant when told that their votes were barred out. The game they captured could be brought home in a vest pocket.

PLAINFIELD CASES IN TRENTON.

SUPREME COURT PASSES ON LOCAL LAWSUITS.

Mrs. Tingley Gets Damages from Neighbor Runyon for Trespassing—Walter Scott Gets a Verdict—Craig Marsh Wins These and Other Cases.

(From The Press of November 9.)

Mrs. Grace A. Tingley and her next-door neighbor have been indulging in the luxury of a lawsuit that was decided yesterday in favor of Mrs. Tingley. She claimed that Theodore Runyon, whose property adjoins hers on the southwesterly side of West Fourth street, had about five or six years ago cut down several trees and injured others and moved his line fence over on her land. When she presented her claim for damages, recently, Mr. Runyon denied that he had encroached on her land. Mrs. Tingley thought wise to settle that question first before suing for damages. Suit was therefore brought in the Supreme Court to test the question who owned the land in dispute. Mrs. Tingley's counsel put her deed in evidence, but relied upon proof of over twenty years adverse possession as proof of title.

Mr. Runyon put in his deeds and claimed title under them and also by over twenty years adverse possession. The surveyors and other witnesses for the two sides respectively contradicted each other in the most remarkable manner. The case was tried before the Court without a jury.

Yesterday, Judge VanSyckel announced his decision in favor of Mrs. Tingley, holding that she was entitled to recover the whole of the land claimed by her with costs of suit.

The next suit will be for the damages for the trespass and injury to the trees.

Walter Scott against S. R. Krom was also decided by Judge VanSyckel, yesterday, in favor of Mr. Scott.

Morris against Higbie, in the Court of Chancery, was decided in favor of complainants E. L. Morris and Dr. Seymour Marsh of this city.

Craig A. Marsh was counsel for the successful sides in all the above cases.

INTELLIGENT ALMS-GIVING.

A Correspondent Advises from the Depth of His Experience.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—The idea advanced in recent issues, for the establishment of an Association of Charities, is a good one, and meets with my hearty approval. There are those in our midst who are working all the different channels of aid at the same time. In this they are impostors. But, when one has it doled out to him in minimum doses, you can hardly blame him for making it a business to support himself in this way. While in the beginning it is a very unwelcome task to them, they soon get hardened to it, and quickly develop into well-defined (as the physicians say) cases of chronic want. I sometimes think the whole system is wrong, especially as I see it conducted in this city. All municipalities have their poor to care for, and while it is a "burden, grievous to be borne", still they must be looked after. It is not well to be "penny wise and pound foolish" in these cases. If a person is deserving of help, the city should see to it that assistance is granted—not by a fixed amount to each—but with some regard to former conditions of life. Let me illustrate: A well-known "bummer" applies for assistance. Here is a case where the minimum amount of relief may be granted with propriety—merely sufficient to house and feed him. But when the applicant is a mechanic out of work, with wife and children dependent on him, there is another (and not a new) phase presented. In this case it is not right to dole out the usual small amount, as it will not keep the family as they should be cared for. This case, if properly assisted, will not long be needing aid, but if on the other hand a mere pittance is handed out it takes away the self-respect of the mechanic and he and his family have a tendency to drift into pauperism. The great question is: What shall be done for this latter class? They are with us this winter, and must be cared for. Now I suggest this to our philanthropic citizens: Let a fund be subscribed and placed at the disposal of the Overseer of the Poor or some of our charitable societies, or better still be placed in the hands of the proposed "Associated Charities", to be loaned to the specially deserving to help on payment of house rent and provisions, that the self-respect of the one assisted may be maintained. By lending this assistance to those who have a fair record of working when work can be had, true philanthropy would have its best results. A large number of the loans might never be repaid, but the children, (innocent sufferers), would be cared for properly. I would not make them loans in money direct to the beneficiaries, but indirectly by payments of rents and for provisions. The rent is the great bugbear, and few if any provisions would be required. Is it not worth trying? Who will set it in motion? J.

Neatly Said, McBride!

(From The Elizabeth Journal.)

Our sincere respects to James E. Martine and John S. Sauer: Gentlemen, you made a hard fight, and your private characters have suffered nothing in the severe contest. But you failed, gentlemen, through the proscribed policy of your party, to take the side of right in this struggle of the people against the common enemy, and the result has been your defeat. Nevertheless, rest assured that, as gentlemen the public have lost nothing of the regard they had for you before election.

Jim May Be Young, But He's Through Running for Office.

(From The Elizabeth Herald.)

James E. Martine, in reply to kindly inquiries as to his health, etc., telephones me that he is "crushed but not conquered". Down at the Herald office, Mr. Martine, we are neither crushed nor conquered. You are a young man and political honors will probably come to you yet. As for the rest of us, at present we are getting the political experience, while the fellows on the other side of the house are grabbing the loaves. But we'll make them let go, after awhile.

Wedding Reception.

The reception given by Mr. and Mrs. August Trust, at 263 Somerset street, to their friends was a delightful affair. Excellent music was provided by Conde & Rogers. Later in the evening supper was served. Those present were: The Misses Blanche and Eva Bostest, Miss Leandrid, of New York, Miss Lillie Walters, of Brooklyn, Miss Qulbert, and Miss Chambers, of Fredericksburg, Md., Miss Freilicks, of Mobile, Alabama., Miss E. F. Gilleat, Miss M. Hodson, the Misses Minnie and Jessie Allison, and Messrs. Alfred Quilbert, of Fredericksburg, Md., William Trust, John McLaughlin, William McLaughlin, George Doldson and Fred Ollie.

LIBRARY OFFICERS RE-ELECTED.

THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES ORGANIZES FOR ANOTHER YEAR.

A. C. Baldwin President, M. W. Tyler Vice-President, W. M. Stillman Secretary, and J. B. Dumont Treasurer—Committees Appointed, and Librarian's Reports Approved.

A regular meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Plainfield Public Library was held Friday night. There were present A. C. Baldwin, M. W. Tyler, Rowland Cox, J. W. Yates, J. Evarts Tracy, J. B. Dumont and Wm. M. Stillman.

The minutes of June were read and approved. Bills were ordered paid amounting to $420 27.

This being the first meeting of the new Board, the Directors proceeded to the election of officers for the ensuing year. On motion, Mr. Cox and Mr. Tracy were appointed Committee on Nominations.

The Librarian's reports for August, September and October were ordered received and placed on file. The Committee on Nominations reported as follows:

President—Augustus C. Baldwin.
Vice-president—M. W. Tyler.
Secretary—W. M. Stillman.
Treasurer—J. B. Dumont.
Library Committee—Mason W. Tyler, J. Evarts Tracy, H. P. Talmadge.
Art Committee—G. H. Babcock, Jos. W. Yates, Rowland Cox.

On motion the Secretary was ordered to cast the ballot in favor of the above nominees; carried, and the Secretary then cast the ballot as directed, and the nominees were declared duly elected.

On motion the price of the bound "finding list" was fixed at cost price, $1.50, and the pamphlet form at $1; and the Librarian was directed to send copies to other libraries, not exceeding fifteen, as have sent their catalogues to this library.

Adjourned. WM. M. STILLMAN, Sec'y.

REPEAL IN NEW JERSEY.

Instructions for Republican Legislators—Thompson's Seat in Danger.

[From The Sun, Dem.]

TRENTON, Nov. 10.—The State Republican League of New Jersey issued an address today calling upon the local clubs to use their influence with the Republican members of the Legislature just elected to secure the repeal of all partisan acts passed by the Democratic Legislatures of the past three or four years. The address says:

The watchword of the party in its legislation during the coming session ought to be "Repeal". First and foremost, and on the very day of organization, the race-track acts should be repealed and the bills sent to the Governor for his signature. As rapidly as possible, bills ought to be introduced repealing each and every one of the partisan acts, including those creating the county excise boards, the boards of public works, the police boards, the State police force, and all the rest of that brood. Salaries must be reduced, and all useless offices abolished. The new scheme of taxation so cunningly devised to provide funds to pay the great horde of useless officials must be made to contribute to the relief of the people from the burden of local taxation and used either for the support of the schools, the building of roads, or other public enterprises. Local self-government must be restored and the appointing power of the Governor restricted to the appointment of the officers named in the Constitution. All other officers should be elected in joint meeting or by the people.

There is said to be no good ground for believing that Gov. Werts will take advantage of the power, if he has it, to order another election in New Jersey on account of Judge Depue's decision, holding that the present method of electing Assemblymen is unconstitutional.

A great deal of evidence is said to have been collected showing that William J. Thompson of Gloucester won his election by corrupt means, and the conviction is growing rapidly that he will not be allowed to take his seat. Jacob C. Lippincott, his Republican opponent, has retained counsel to conduct the contest for him.

Agents Rewarded for Faithful Service.

Superintendent Norbury, of the Plainfield district, and Superintendent S. D. Prince, of the Elizabeth district, of the Metropolitan Insurance Company, gave a supper to the agents of this district at Stephenson's ice-cream parlors last evening. It was a most enjoyable affair and the following excellent menu was the most pleasant feature:

Blue Points—half shell.
Celery. Mixed pickles.
Oyster stew.
Butter crackers.
Water crackers.
Oyster crackers.
Fried oysters.
Cake. Coffee. Cigars.

Journalistic Amenities.

(From The Elizabeth Herald.)

The Journal last week courteously accommodated The Herald when the latter's supply of paper, under an extraordinary demand, ran short. The Herald today has a number of reasons for which it can find no use. The Journal may have these with the understanding that it will reciprocate about this time next year.

One Crumb of Comfort.

(From The Elizabeth Herald.)

The Democrats of Union county have not been overwhelmed. All of their banners are not trailed in the mire, and the cries of victory do not all proceed from Republican throats. One Democrat at least rides on the crest of the wave and waves the flag of Democracy. He assures all of the other Democrats that they still live.

The gentleman we refer to has been elected constable at Roselle.

One Good Cure at Muhlenberg.

Charles Long, for four weeks a patient in Muhlenberg Hospital, suffering from pneumonia, has been discharged, almost cured.

REPUBLICANS PLAN BIG CHANGES.

ALREADY DEVISING SCHEMES TO SWAP THE STATE HOUSE.

Race-Track, Board of Works and Other Laws to Be Repealed Summarily—Offices to Be Abolished or Filled by Republicans—Election Day Victors Thirsting to Divide the Spoils.

[From the Republican Organ, The Newark Daily Advertiser.]

TRENTON, Nov. 9.—"Come up on Wednesday and see the flag float" was Barney Ford's parting invitation to some friends who called to see him last week. Superintendent Ford was at his post of duty on Wednesday morning and surrounded by many Democratic statesmen, but no flag floated in celebration of the expected victory. In fact, it is questionable whether a flag could have floated in the gloomy and sad atmosphere which pervades the State House. Blue, a deep-dyed-in-the-wool-blue, warranted to wash, is the prevailing color. It may be seen everywhere, and may even be traced on the gloomy faces of the many office-holders and employes, who know that their time is short.

The Democrats are just beginning to realize how far-reaching is the result of Tuesday's election. Not only will it clean out the State House, but will repeal many acts creating boards and commissions and offices, affecting every city, town and hamlet of the State, and making important changes in government. It is this unpleasant prospect which has cast such a deep gloom over the State House, and has completely changed the spirit of the Democratic dream. Even the corridors, which on Governor's Day resound with the heavy tread of rural statesmen, are impressive in their silence. The building was not deserted; far from it. The opening of the Supreme Court brought down a great crowd of lawyers, and among them many ex-leaders of Democratic politics. Robert Adrain, Nelson Fidcock, General Heppenheimer, Bernard J. Ford, and many lesser lights, put in an appearance early in the day. But they didn't have the air of bosses about them. It was in the Supreme Court room that the rejoicing took place. Handshaking and congratulations were the order of the day, and it was some time after the usual hour before the Court got down to business.

Democratic office holders are beginning to joke with each other as to who will be called upon to go first. That the Republican Legislature will spend most of its time repealing partisan legislation and undoing the work of the last three years is accepted by all.

"The laws of 1894"—said a Democrat, high in the councils of his party—"will all begin 'An act to repeal an act passed by the Democratic caucus.'"

If the Republican Legislature undertakes to wipe from the statute books the partisan legislation of the past three sessions, as is confidently expected, the session will be a long one. Not since 1885 have they had uncontrolled power and the work of putting things in proper shape will keep them here many weeks.

The first duty of the Legislature will be, of course, to repeal the Race-Track bill. Said a prominent Republican this morning: "The first bill introduced at the next session should be a repealer of the infamous race-track legislation, and the Legislature should show its respect for the wishes of the people, by not undertaking any work until the repealer becomes a law. But the Legislature will not stop at that. Stringent measures will be introduced which will wipe out race-tracks within the borders of the State!"

The Court having adopted R. Wayne Parker's view of the Constitution, that Member of Assembly is a county office, and that the members must be voted for by the entire county, the Republicans are forced to abandon their plans for Assembly district re-apportionment.

The joint meeting will have the election this winter of a Comptroller and Treasurer in place of General Heppenheimer and George R. Gray. General Heppenheimer will probably be succeeded by Major Anderson, who held the position for twelve years, and whose ability is recognized by all. Frank Magowan, of Trenton, is mentioned for the position of State Treasurer, but as that has been filled by a north Jerseyman for many years, it is not unlikely that an Essex man will get the place. Essex county is undoubtedly entitled to recognition, and the fact that Mr. Gray is from that county will tend to strengthen the claim.

But it will be in repealing laws creating commissions and boards that the Legislature will be engaged most of its time. The Boards of Works in Newark, Paterson, Jersey City and Trenton will be wiped out. They are unpopular with Democrats and Republicans alike. The County Excise Boards, against which the Republicans have been fighting, and the many provisions to strengthen the interests of liquor dealers in cities, will soon be things of the past. Chief of State Police Feeney, with his invisible force, will probably retire. The office of Superintendent of State House and Grounds, which has been acceptably filled by Barney Ford, will either be wiped out, or the appointment given to the joint meeting, and a Republican put in his place.

It is impossible to enumerate all the offices which have been created during the past few years, and filled by Democrats, which may be either abolished by the Legislature, or filled with Republicans. Prominent among them is the Commissioner of Banking and Insurance, whose salary is $4,000 per annum; the Judges of the District Courts in Camden, Elizabeth, Hoboken, Jersey City, Newark, Paterson, Trenton and Bayonne, to make room for whom Republicans were turned out before the expiration of their terms; the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, with a salary of $3,000; Supervisor of the State Prison, and the four Inspectors; the Riparian Commissioners, and the State Board of Assessors, which, before 1891, were non-partisan boards; the State Board of Electrical Subways, a fancy board, which has only been in existence two years and meets occasionally; the Commissioner of Mines, who has been unheard of since his appointment, except to draw salary; the Inspector of Factories and Work Shops; the State Board of Arbitration, who draw a per diem salary whenever they make an unsuccessful attempt to settle disputes between workmen; the Fish and Game Commissioners, and the numerous Fish Wardens. One of the most obnoxious innovations has been the Police Justices act, under which the appointment of Police Justices in Camden, Trenton, Paterson, Newark and Jersey City was taken from the local authorities and placed in the hands of the Governor. The State Asylums will probably also come in for a share of attention, and the law changed to make the boards non-partisan.

Another important measure talked of for next winter is the Congressional reapportionment of the State. Under the apportionment of 1891 the State was so cut up as to make it impossible for the Republicans to elect more than two out of the eight Congressmen from this State. There is some question as to the power of the Legislature to make another apportionment until after the next census, but a Republican lawyer, who has looked into the matter, insists that it rests entirely with the Legislature to say how and when the Congressmen shall be elected. If his views are sound, an apportionment this winter may be expected which will give the Republicans at least four Congressmen out of eight.

Whatever the Republicans do, the coming session of the Legislature will be a lively one, and a host of Democratic statesmen will be looking for work next spring.

COLUMBIAN SOCIAL.

Trinity Endeavorers Made a Unique and Merry Time.

The Christian Endeavor society of Trinity Reformed church is always planning to interest its members and their friends, spiritually, intellectually, and socially, and the results are very gratifying.

Last Friday a Columbian Social was arranged for, and the committee spared no pains in doing all in their power to make it a success.

The Sunday-school room was a patriotic scene. Flags and bunting were so used as to bring out every latent spark of patriotism in the breasts of those gathered, while over the platform was an excellent picture of Christopher Columbus. On the blackboard, which is used for announcements, was placed the lettering:

Y. P. S. C. E.
—Toast:—
1492.
1893.

Streamers were run from post to post. Large lamps were tastefully arranged in different parts of the room. Altogether, the scene was a most attractive one. Those present formed themselves into small groups, and everyone enjoyed the atmosphere of sociability.

A quartette consisting of Miss Phœbe Mills, Miss Fanny Mathison, Robert Clark and Mr. Moore, sang patriotic songs which brought forth generous applause.

President Smith then announced that B. A. Mecker would give a short talk on the "Midway Plaisance". His description was excellent. He told of the different classes of people to be found there, of their habits and ways of living. At times he became quite humorous, telling of his experiences on the famous Midway. He also spoke of the Ferris Wheel, which he claimed was the best specimen of engineering skill ever seen.

H. E. Gayle was introduced, and read a most interesting paper on "The Buildings and Grounds". He said there were 150 buildings in all, and gave a minute description of each one, telling of their proportions, and the material of which they were made. Mr. Gayle, being thoroughly acquainted with this line of work, gave a most interesting account.

John VanWinkle's subject was "The United States Exhibit", which proved to be highly interesting. He said there were very few who had anything to say about the exhibit of our own country, which was an important one. He then spoke of the special exhibits which interested him the most. He gave a graphic description of the Life-saving Service, and its workings; the Indian Industrial School; the iron-trestle lighthouse, 100 feet high, and a large tree, 30 feet high, 26 feet in diameter, in which a door had been cut; at the time the speaker walked in, there were about 70 people inside. It cost in all about $10,475 to bring this tree to the Fair.

The last speaker was Horace Martin, who talked of "The Court of Honor" (of which Lecturer Ragan has exhibited so fine a view about town) and things in general. The grand basin in the Court of Honor, he said, was a most attractive place for him. In the early evening, when the gondolas were swiftly passing to and fro, and sweet strains of music floated on the breeze, it was a most lovely spot. The illumination of the Court in the evening was a memorable sight, and Mr. Martin's graphic account was richly enjoyed. He also spoke of the Ferris Wheel, which he said was 264 feet high, there were 36 cars about the size of our electric cars, each would carry 60 people, making in all 2,160 people when all the cars were filled. It would take about 20 minutes for a trip.

At the close of Mr. Martin's remarks the quartette sang "America". President Smith thanked all for their assistance in making the affair a success.

Each lady present brought a lunch in a box, with her name written on the same, and after the entertainment checks were passed to each gentleman, who was supposed to get a box, and eat lunch with the young lady whose name was written thereon. It was very amusing to see the results, as one can readily imagine.

Coffee was served with the lunch.

The committees in charge were as follows:

Social Committee—Miss Ella C. Benedict, chairman; Miss Viola Huff, Miss Carrie Mohl, Miss Ella Dunn, Miss Cora Gardner.
Reception Committee—Miss Nellie Crawford, chairman; Miss Ella Gardner, Miss Phœbe Mills, Miss Lizzie Dunn, James Love, Frank Woodruff.

The quartette, which is the regular choir in the church, rendered a patriotic song from each of the following countries: Italy, America, Spain, Germany, Russia, England and Scotland.

The Constitutionalist.

A. L. Force, Publisher & Proprietor.

The Elizabeth Journal speaks of the huskiness of Jim Martine's voice. Jim got it speaking in the cornfields.

City Clerk Runyon has announced to his friends that he is not and will not be a candidate for re-election next year.

When does the street railway company intend putting those much-needed stoves in the cars? The weather demands it, and the matter should not be delayed.

The Press devoutly trusts that Gov. Werts will not make the fatal mistake of being inveigled into the extra-session scheme which the wily race-track men are planning.

Assemblyman Codding is receiving the congratulations of Republicans, Democrats and Prohibitionists.

"If I don't do right"—says Mr. Codding—"jump on me."

But The Press does not anticipate that there will be any necessity for jumping on so worthy and capable a representative as Mr. Codding.

John Ulrich has been suggested as a possibility for State Comptroller. If the Republicans insist on installing some one else in place of so faithful and experienced an official as Wm. C. Heppenheimer, they can surely find no man more worthy than the Plainfield ex-Judge. Mr. Ulrich has been a most devoted and zealous Republican, and his appointment would be a reward of merit and bring pleasure to his host of friends in both political parties.

The great and only Pearsall, that shining light of Westfield and New York journalism, speaks truly when he writes:

> George Kyte, the new sheriff of Union county, being a man of brains and broad-minded, is looked to by the people to keep his important office above suspicion. He was not elected by Republicans. His plurality in the whole county, 1564, was a handsome compliment, greatly to be prized, and means more than a simple victory.

Sheriff Kyte will do right.

The sudden death of County Clerk James J. Gerber is another impressive reminder that man's days are as the grass of the field, which today flourishes and tomorrow is not. These sudden deaths have been of startling frequency of late, and they smite with peculiar force when they remove from the walks of life men so high in station. Mr. Gerber was a faithful public officer, both as Surrogate, in former years, and latterly as County Clerk. His worth as a man is given sufficient testimony by the actual tears which Plainfield lawyers shed on hearing of his untimely end. He was a valued citizen and a good friend; he was warmly endeared in the hearts of those who knew him well.

The vacancy created by the distressing death of Mr. Gerber is an important one. The Governor has the appointing power for one year, and after that a new election will be held. It is not unlikely that Mr Gerber's efficient deputy, Elmore D Moffett of this city, will be advanced by the Governor in the line of promotion. The selection would be most excellent.

DESPERATE DEVICES OF THE RACE-TRACK GANG.

The New York Evening Post Tuesday published the following:

> Reports have just leaked out of a recent meeting in Philadelphia of the defeated race-track men of New Jersey to devise a means of preventing repeal of the race-track gambling laws. The meeting was called by William J Thompson, the Gloucester boss, who presented the following plan:
>
> To request the Governor to call an extra session of the Legislature at which the race-track laws may be so amended as to meet the views of the members of the Senate who last year voted against them, but who then said they would favor modified laws permitting horse-racing. These members would at the next session of the Legislature, Thompson argued, oppose the total repeal of the laws, and thus defeat the aim of the Republican majority in the House. To put a more effectual block in the way of repeal, Thompson suggested the plan of unseating Senator Hoffman, and that the Democrats contest the election of Bradley of Monmouth county on the ground that his free distribution of dimes to boys who would learn his campaign songs and sing them was a violation of the ballot law, which forbids the use of money to influence votes. The Governor is the stumbling-block in the way of the ring, but Thompson is reported as saying at the meeting in Philadelphia that Gov. Werts owed his nomination and election to him, and that he would be found ready to call a special session of the Legislature if Thompson desired it. As a matter of fact, however, Thompson is as discredited since the election as is John Y. McKane of Gravesend, and no Democrat in the State who has any hope of any political future would dare to listen to him.

The Press commends this to the attention of all good and loyal patriots in the Democratic party, and emphasizes the need of speedily purging the Democracy of such iniquitous schemes as Thompson. There is not a possibility of Gov Werts being influenced as threatened by such a man as Thompson, but just the same Thompson is a continual menace to Democratic decency, and he and his following should be suppressed.

THE CAMPAIGN IN UNION COUNTY.

(From The Summit Record.)

The disastrous defeat which the Democrats of this county suffered on Tuesday last, was the inevitable result of its lack of appreciation of the conditions with which it was confronted.

It might perhaps have been possible to prevent the Republican victory, had the Democratic conventions seized the opportunity presented, to place the party and its nominees on a platform of unequivocal opposition to race-track gambling. Such a course might not have insured victory this year, but it would at least have averted the ignominy unavoidable in such a defeat as the Democracy has suffered, and would have left the organization in good shape to cope with its foes in future contests.

Instead of this, however, the Democratic ticket has carried down with it one of the best and cleanest county candidates ever presented for the support of the voters of Union county.

In point of ability and honesty, James E. Martine is without a peer in Union county and we are absolutely certain he was sound on the question of repealing the race-track laws. It is his misfortune that he was overborne by bad counsels, and deterred by unwise and imprudent friends from taking a position of unalterable opposition to last year's race-track laws. Had he followed his own judgment or acted upon the promptings of his honest convictions, he would have made his campaign as an advocate of the repeal of the laws.

His fate illustrates in the most effective way, the folly of believing that "diplomatic silence" on questions in which important issues are involved, is much of a stock in trade for the nominees of any organization. The public despises cowardice in a political party and is certain to rebuke any candidate, however worthy, who endeavors to "carry water on both shoulders".

Not one of the victims of last Tuesday's cyclone deserves so much sympathy as James E. Martine, or was so worthy a better fate.

Thank You, Brother Pearsall.

(From The Union County Standard.)

The Standard congratulates and applauds the Plainfield Press for its enterprise in getting out by daylight a post-election edition telling in manly terms of the defeat of its own candidates and dealing with facts without stint, partiality or reserve. This is being a newspaper, which is much better than being an "organ".

Prohibition's Big Gain.

Scotch Plains doubled its Prohibition vote. They had one vote last year and two votes this year. This increase of one hundred per cent. is very encouraging.

SUDDEN DEATH OF J. J. GERBER.

UNION COUNTY'S CLERK STRICKEN AT HIS HOME.

(Special to The Press.)

Elizabeth, Nov. 15—James J. Gerber, Clerk of Union County, died at 1:10 this afternoon, at his home in this city. He had been seriously ill but a few hours, though complaining for several days past. The death was a great shock to the community.

MARTINE TALKS ON POLITICS.

SPEAKS PLEASANTLY OF THE CAMPAIGN AND ITS RESULTS.

Favors Amendments to Existing Election Laws, and Would Have Compulsory Voting—Feels that the Ante-Election-Day Distribution of Ballots is a Bad Thing.

James E. Martine, recent candidate for State Senator on the Democratic ticket, was met in Elizabeth shortly after election day by a Journal representative. His facial appearance—says the Journal—showed conclusively that he had worked earnestly, vigorously and unremittingly during the recent campaign, but the few days of rest has restored his voice—which had grown exceedingly husky from speaking—almost to its normal condition. Only a slight hoarseness was noticeable.

Mr. Martine spoke pleasantly of the campaign and its results, accepting the latter with philosophic patriotism. There are some features of the struggle which he condemned, holding that they were too small politics to be indulged in, but on the whole had little else to censure.

With reference to the methods of the elections Mr. Martine was emphatic. He declared that the ballot law should be amended as soon as practicable in several particulars, and that especially should the distribution of ballots before election day be also prohibited. He held that the distribution of these ballots, as at present, served to nullify much of what was good in the law, and gave wide opportunity for vicious practices.

He further said that he was in favor of compulsory voting. He believed that every man, legally authorized to vote, should be compelled to cast his ballot, and only be excused on the certificate of a physician that he was physically unable to attend the polls. Upon this point he said that the State had a right to command the assistance of every citizen in the payment of taxes, that it could command the personal influence and physical force of every man to put down riots and protect property, and it ought also to have the right to command every legal voter to assist in carrying on its government by casting his vote.

Mr. Martine spoke in conclusion of the high regard he had for Mr. Voorhees and Mr Kyte.

They've Got It.

As for our fellow townsman, Charles Nelson Codding!—remarks The Standard,—

Well, did you ever!

Was it personal popularity?

Partly, doubtless.

Better than that; it was character!

Never was the majority in the Third Assembly District so large for any candidate.

He ran splendidly everywhere.

He carried Plainfield by 563, Rahway by 217, running way ahead of Winans, even in his own town. Linden gave Mr. Codding 178 majority and good old Westfield, his own town, slammed the enormous majority of 250 at him.

Think of it!

That pre-eminent American, Foster M. Voorhees, of course, ran like the wind and came out 1,287 votes ahead, beating Martine, the strongest candidate the Democrats had.

Of course the Republicans will make him president of the Senate.

That is to say they will if they have any sense.

Three Able Divines.

In the First Church of Christ this week the following will be the addresses:

Wednesday evening — Mr. Hinck, First Church of Christ, New York.

These will be interesting meetings, and all are invited.

Gone Up Higher.

At a regular meeting of Queen City Lodge, No. 226, I. O. O. F. held the 13th day of November, 1893, the following resolutions were adopted by the Lodge:

Whereas, It has pleased our Heavenly Father to call from earth life our highly esteemed and beloved Brother Past Grand David L. Abbott, whose earth life we believe to be such as to entitle him to a far higher place than any that could possibly be accorded to him in this life. Therefore be it

Resolved, That while deeply mourning his loss as a Brother Odd Fellow, we extend our sincere sympathy to the sorrowing widow and family of our deceased Brother. Also be it

Resolved, That the trustees of this Lodge be instructed to drape the charter of this Lodge for the period of thirty days and that these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the Lodge and a copy of the same be transmitted to the widow of our departed Brother and also published in the daily papers of the city.

Rabbi Berkowitz to Speak.

The Rev. Dr. Henry D. Berkowitz, rabbi of the Rodef Shalom congregation in Philadelphia, will give a lecture in All Souls' church, Thursday evening, Nov. 16, at 8. Dr. Berkowitz is the founder and director of the Jewish Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle. He has devoted the past summer to complete the plans for the work and made all necessary arrangements with the National Chautauqua officials who will put the machinery of their organization in motion for the benefit of the Jewish branch.

One of the beneficent features of the new department will be the special course for Jewish emigrants, which has been planned by Dr. Berkowitz. The aim of this course will be to aid the newcomers in the study of the English language, familiarize them with the peculiarities of the American government and institutions, and teach them how to fit themselves to their new conditions, in fact to Americanize them.

A HEAD FOR LOCAL CHARITIES.

THE STATE CHARITIES AID SOCIETY RECOMMENDS CONSOLIDATION.

An Enthusiastic Meeting at the Crescent Avenue Church—Rev. Dr. McAllister Presides—Mr. deForest Speaks on Methods—Committee Appointed to Consummate Plans.

A large and enthusiastic meeting of the Union County Branch of the State Charities aid association was held Monday night in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue church. Every charity in Plainfield was represented at the meeting, and an unusual amount of interest was manifested by those present. Senator-elect Foster M. Voorhees, President of the Union County Branch of the Association, was to have presided at the meeting, but was unable to come on account of pressing business. A communication from him was read, expressing his regret at not being present. Dr. McAllister, of Elizabeth, Vice-President of the Branch, presided in the absence of Mr. Voorhees.

Robert W. de Forest, President of the Charities Organization Society of New York, spoke at some length on the methods and objects of the society. He told of the necessity of educating public opinion in as to the proper methods of charitable organization. At present while there are many people willing and anxious to aid the poor and needy their efforts are often productive of more harm than good as there is no system in the relief and one person may be receiving aid from several sources at once and no one be the wiser for it, while some worthy and needy people may be neglected entirely. One of the primary functions of a Charities Aid Society is thorough investigation of every case, and a step to be taken after investigation is the registration of all cases requiring help as soon as they are brought to the notice of the society.

In a place the size of Plainfield an organization to which the other charities can turn for information and advice is absolutely essential to the proper administration of charitable aid. Nothing is so injurious to a community as indiscriminate alms giving. It generally fails to meet the needy cases and encourages a class of paupers that would not otherwise exist. Mr. deForest gave several examples to illustrate his point and demonstrate the evil of unsystematic charity. It will be found in the practical working of a Charities Organization Society that it is best to have one or two paid officers to do the real work, some people who can be depended upon and are at the order of the society. In addition to this the friendly visitor is a great help to the society. A society of this kind does not disburse funds from its own treasury to relieve needy people. It acts more as a head which does not interfere with the functions of the other charitable societies and directs only as it is asked for advice. An ideal position for a Charities Organization Society would be for it to be in immediate communication with a benevolent society of some kind, in fact to have the offices of the two in the same building so that direct and immediate mutual aid would be practicable.

After Mr. de Forest's remarks the meeting discussed the questions broached and much additional light was thrown on the subject by the debate.

The following resolutions were drawn up as the result of the meeting:

Resolved, That the Board of Managers and Advisory Board of the Relief Association, with others selected by the board, be requested to take into consideration the matter, with a view to ascertaining by what method the charities of Plainfield can be administered so as to carry out the principles of organized charity, and that this committee be asked to report to a meeting called by them for the purpose.

Public-Spirited John.

John Emmons, of Rockview avenue, says there are two street lamps, not far distant from his home, which burn generally on moonlight nights but which at other times are almost obscure. The cost to the borough for the two lamps is about $55 per annum, and Mr. Emmons says he would much sooner have the lamps removed and maintain one at his own expense than have the present system of lighting that thoroughfare continue.

Alarming Result of a Cut.

John Emmons, of North Plainfield, accidentally cut his right wrist a few days ago, but he paid little attention to the matter until Friday, when the arm began to swell and became more painful. The swelling reached as far as the elbow and threatened serious consequences. Mr. Emmons applied warm poultices, and today is suffering less, although the arm is still swollen to large dimensions.

Put in Shape After a Cave-in.

The new cesspool of the German Lutheran church in North Plainfield caved in a few days ago, and William R. Moore was engaged to finish the work. He found that part of the wall was only six inches thick, and that only three loads of stone were used in its construction. In its renewed condition the walls are 18 inches thick, and it required seven loads of stone to complete the work.

Panicky Name, But Lovely Decoration.

Plainfield afforded, this fall, an admirable opportunity to judge of the decorative value of clematis paniculata. The Casino has been beautifully outlined by this rampant climber, the pillars of the porch being wreathed with the fragrant white flowers, which extended to the roof, where, in great profusion, they lay in relief against the weather-stained shingles.

AFTER CONCERT, CAME PANCAKES.

BAPTIST YOUNG LADIES PROVIDE A NOVEL SHOW.

Singing Sweet Music Given in Amusing Fashion, with a Homely but Palatable Supper Following, and a Fake Art Gallery as a Contemporary Adjunct.

"Ye Olde Folks Concert" given by the Young Ladies' Missionary Society of the First Baptist church, on Tuesday, far exceeded the results hoped for by the projectors. The lecture room of the church was filled to overflowing, with people whose interest and enthusiasm were shown in many ways.

W. E. MacClymont, under whose direction the concert was given, again demonstrated his ability to conduct such an affair capably, and as an accompanist Tabitheasy Addition Case filled the position very acceptably to all.

It was nearly 8:30 when the participants marched to the platform and took their seats. There were old men and women, young men and maidens dressed in ye olden tyme fashion, and the deception was well maintained even to the most critical eye.

After the bustle had subsided, the choir sang as an opening selection "Auld Lang Syne". The harmony of voices was pleasing, and the effect was excellent. The "Anvil Chorus" was well given, and "When George the First was King", by Ephraim Huckleberry Holmes, was entertainingly rendered.

"Jerusalem My Glorious Home", by the choir, was followed with a reading by Ursula Graceful Yerkes, which was accorded due appreciation by the audience. The anthem "Songs of Zion" preceded the ever familiar "Swanee River", arranged for four voices. Miss King sweetly sang the solo part; her clear soprano voice was at its best. Popular and patriotic "America" was roundingly sung. That the American audience is yet to be found that does not appreciate this National hymn, was attested by the loud applause following. In the ditty, entitled "John Brown", by Hezekiah and the choir, Fred Bonney took the part of Hezekiah with good effect. Jerusha Ann Dodge then gave a quaint and most charming recitation, that must have taken old lovers back to palmy days of long ago. "Sound the loud timbrel", by the choir, was an enjoyable selection, giving plenty of scope for the various voices. "My Grandma's Advice" sung by Louisida Miriam Emmons, was rendered in most captivating style. Probably the best number on the programme was ye two parte dittie, "Reuben and Rachel" by Ephraim Huckleberry Holmes and Mabel Stirabout Clawson. The production was perfect, and could not have been improved on. The concert concluded with the homely but touching song "Home, Sweet Home", by the choir.

As an extra after-attraction, the young ladies provided an excellent pancake supper, which was all to be desired.

The art gallery was a great burlesque. "A Bust of a Boy" was represented by a pair of short trousers, with the seat missing; "Bonaparte Crossing the Rhine" was represented by the poor bone which old Mother Hubbard didn't find in the cupboard; this was laid on a piece of rind. "A Rise in the World" was a yeast cake. "My Native Land" was a handful of earth. And so it ran. There were almost one hundred of these representations, and they were much enjoyed by those who were taken in by the elaborate catalogues, entitled "Fine Art", which were freely distributed.

"Rebecca's well", where refreshing lemonade was served, was in charge of the Misses May McLaughlin and Lena Smalley.

The affair was successful in every way, and a desirable profit was realized.

The officers of the society are:

President—Mrs. G. H. Batchelor.
Vice-president—Mrs. Pike.
Corresponding Secretary—Miss Ida Yerkes.
Recording Secretary—Miss Grace Yerkes.
Treasurer—Miss Edith Harold.

Those taking part in the concert and assisting were as follows:

The Misses King, Emmons, Hetfield, Anna Boice, Emma Case, Gussie Runyon, Fanny Randolph, Bertha Needham, Alice Needham, Alice Woodland, Susie Woodland, Anna Marsh, Minnie Marsh, Della Feytal, Florence Dodge, Edith Harold, Grace Yerkes, May Clawson, Lura French, Laura Runyon, Lizzie Smalley, Mamie French, Margaret Corlell, Emily Corlell, Edith Miles, Maggie Miles, Minnie Smalley, Mrs. Harold Serrell, Mrs. Harry Brokaw, Mrs. Frank Jones, Mrs. Fred Slater, Mrs. David King, Mrs. L. W. Randolph, Mrs. E. VanName, Mr. Marsh, Mr. Douglass, William Holmes, Frank Jones, George Westervelt, John McLaughlin, Harry Drake, Fred DuBois, George Randolph, Raymond Dunn, Walter Serrell, Horace Martin, W. O. Chapman, Bradley Hall, Edward Clark, Mrs. Vail, Miss Nora Williams, Miss Dora Grant, Miss Belle Carkhuff, Miss Florence Marsh.

The Prodigal Comes to Town.

"The Prodigal Husband" who is to visit Plainfield Saturday night is a most interesting character, and he brings many other interesting people with him. "The Prodigal Husband" is a first-class realistic drama, and will be interpreted on Music Hall stage by the sterling young actor, Edward C. Stratton, and a capable company.

Death of Wm. D. Hyde.

News reached Plainfield last night of the death of William Douglass Hyde, formerly of this city, which occurred in Hornellsville, N. Y., Nov. 9. Hyde spent last summer in Washingtonville. He was well known in Plainfield and vicinity. He and Miss Edna McKibbon, with their fancy skating entertainment, opened the old Casino skating rink in this city. Hyde was 25 years of age.

To Build Up the Outskirts.

The Plainfield Land Company met at the residence of Dr. J. T. Fritts, Park avenue, Monday evening, and organized by electing J. Kirkner president, W. C. Kelly vice-president, Dr. J. T. Fritts secretary and treasurer, and Messrs. Fritts, Hummer and Lutkins managers. The company's object is to develop an outlying section of the city.

One Dead, One Alive.

A party of five Plainfielders went gunning near Metuchen, Monday. They spent the day beating the underbrush, and the only game captured was a half-grown rabbit, shot in twain by one of the party. A flying squirrel was also captured, but it was caught alive in the trunk of a tree.

They Saw Two, and then Beat the Fair.

Ex-Councilmen W. L. Hetfield and Charles Beek returned from the World's Fair Monday. During their trip in the West they visited Thomas Hale on his ranch in Wisconsin, where they were agreeably entertained by the genial lawyer. Both are loaded down with Fair stories.

Trustees to Be Elected.

The adjourned annual meeting of the Star Automatic Feed Bag Co. will be held in the company's office, East Front street, November 16, at noon. There will be five trustees elected, and other important business is to come up for consideration.

Stockholders' Postal Supply Bureau.

An important feature of the sale department of the Company is the Stockholders' Postal Supply Bureau.

The Company acts as agent for each stockholder in the purchase of all books published, and secures for stockholders the greatest possible discount, varying from 25 to 50 per cent. Stockholders will also be supplied with catalogues containing the list of the Company's publications, with a confidential price list, giving the wholesale prices and a special additional discount, which will be given to stockholders alone. Such discounts to stockholders will amount to an immense sum on the yearly purchase of books, thus yielding large DISCOUNT DIVIDENDS, in addition to the Cash Dividends, on the investment.

TOWNSEND'S Marble & Granite Works,

30 SOMERSET STREET, PLAINFIELD, N. J.

If you have not engaged your work, I should be pleased to do it for you. I buy only first-class Marble and Granite and do not sell unless at prices that will enable me to put up the work with credit to myself and justice to the parties purchasing. I employ no agents and therefore am enabled to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customer, of the commission generally paid to agents. I am under a very small expense in running my shop, myself and my son doing the larger portion of the work, and we personally attend to the setting of all work, and look upon business in this light, that Good Work and Good Material, at Fair Prices, is a standing advertisement for my business, which will tend to build up trade, and I feel able to warrant that no dealer can sell you the same work and same stock any cheaper than I can. Hoping to be favored with your patronage, I am yours respectfully,

THE JOHNSTON ESTATE DIVIDED.

HERBERT THE SON RETAINS NETHERWOOD FARM.

Mrs. Mali Has the East Front Street Homestead—Great Changes Expected, with Prospects of a Lenox-Like Fashionable Quarter.

The property of the late John Taylor Johnston has been divided, and Plainfield people naturally are interested in knowing the exact disposition made of the Plainfield real estate. As was anticipated Herbert Johnston retains possession of the Netherwood Farm property, which reaches from Mountain avenue over into the valley beyond the mountain. Mr. Johnston's hobby is fine Jersey cattle, and he has the best at his model farm. Mrs. Pierre Mali, who was Miss Fanny Johnston, has taken the Johnston homestead and the beautiful grounds bounded by East Front street and Farragut, Mountain and Netherwood avenues. Mr. and Mrs. Mali will continue to occupy the house from spring to autumn, every year, spending the winter season at the marble palace in Fifth-avenue. It is not improbable that great changes will be wrought in the appearance of the Johnston property within five years, and that these changes will result in the establishment of an exclusive settlement of fashionable people nearby who will make that part of Plainfield a second Lenox.

HYMENEAL.

GOODRICH—CARTER.

The marriage of the Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church of this city, and Miss Jeanette M. Carter, of Montclair, took place at the home of the bride Tuesday at 6 p. m. The ceremony was a very pretty one, and was performed by the father of the groom, the Rev. L. Goodrich, of Manchester, N. H.

Following the ceremony, a reception was given at the residence of the bride's father, Benjamin Carter, 21 Park street. The large grounds were handsomely illuminated with Chinese lanterns, and the house was filled to overflowing with the many friends of the happy couple. The beautiful gifts bestowed on the bride completely filled an entire room. An elegant supper was served in the dining room. The guests included many members of Mr. Goodrich's church.

The list of Plainfielders is as follows: Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Boss, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Wadsworth, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Briant, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Morse, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Winckler, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Rockfellow, Mrs. VanAlstyne, Miss Minnie G. Morse, Miss E. Beckman, Miss J. Louise Jenkins, Miss F. F. Clark, Miss Elfrida Whiting, Miss Maxson, Miss Robinson, Miss Conover, Miss Bainbridge, Miss Parsons, E. L. Suffern, R. L. Suffern, Harry Maxson, Stacy Reynolds, J. A. Robinson, P. W. VanAlstyne, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. LaBoyteaux. Also present were the Rev. L. B. Goodrich and wife of Bound Brook, and E. S. Hunt of New York.

—The 4:13 p. m. train now stops at Plainfield for Philadelphia passengers.

—The King's Daughters of Hope chapel will give an entertainment Nov. 23, in the chapel.

—You surely are going to Rome and Spain, with Mr. Ragan, after the delightful experience of last night.

—The young people of the First Baptist church will give their first sociable as a Christian Endeavor society at an early date.

—"The Prodigal Husband", a stirring dramatic success, will be presented by a strong company in Music Hall Saturday night.

—The clerks in Edsall's store will be entertained at the home of Frank Putnam, Orchard place, Thursday evening of this week.

—John H. Kitchen, contractor and builder, is about to erect a handsome residence on Grandview avenue, for Jacob Voehl.

—A machinists helper named Ryan fell on the walk on East Front street, Saturday night, and cut his head. A physician dressed the wound.

—A young lad living on East Front street, while in a state of frenzy, Friday night, brutally assaulted his mother and sister, and then left the house. He should be locked up.

—The Union Meat Market Company of Plainfield will open a meat market in Alexander Hunt's store on Elm street, Westfield. A. Sturtevant will have charge and manage the store.

—Fred Randolph, colored, kicked up such a rumpus around his home on East Third street, Sunday night, that the neighbors had him locked up. Today Judge Coddington fined him for his fun.

—The W. C. T. U. and Y. P. S. C. E. jointly are striving to arrange to have the celebrated Major Hilton deliver a series of temperance lectures in Plainfield between Dec. 3 and 10, probably in the First Baptist church.

DEATH SMITES C. B. RIPLEY.

WESTFIELD'S BIGGEST CITIZEN PASSES SUDDENLY AWAY.

He Slept in the Hoffman House, and Awoke in Another World—End of a Noteworthy Career.

Chauncey B. Ripley, the owner of Ripley Hill, and whose giant figure was familiar to Westfield and Plainfield alike, is dead. His lifeless body was found in bed in the Hoffman House, New York, Sunday afternoon.

Mr. Ripley had been ill there since Thursday. He was attended by Dr. Frank A. Maguire of 451 Lexington avenue. When the chambermaid tried to get into the room yesterday there was no response to her knocking. The door was broken open. Mr. Ripley had been dead for some hours. Word was sent to his brother, Dr. John H. Ripley of 605 Lexington avenue, and Dr. Maguire. The latter attributed Mr. Ripley's death to cerebral apoplexy.

Mr. Ripley lived in Westfield, N. J. He was born in South Coventry, Conn., May 14, 1835, and was a son of Chauncey Ripley, whose father, Jeremiah, was an officer of Washington's army, and afterward became a County Judge. Mr. Ripley was a graduate of the University of Lewisburg, Pa., now Bucknell University, and took the course in the law department of the University of the City of New York. He was valedictorian when he graduated in 1856. He studied in the law office of Benjamin Vaughn Abbott, and afterward opened an office in the old New York Times building. On Oct. 4, 1865, he married Cornelia Ross, daughter of the Hon. Gideon Ross of Westfield. She died in 1869. Mr. Ripley had a fine stock farm at Westfield, and was very much interested in road building and the development of the town. He was Chairman of the Executive Committee of the National League for Improved Roads, of which Senator Manderson is President. The trustees of Bucknell University conferred the degree of LL. D on him in 1888. He was twice President of the Alumni Association of Bucknell University, and served several terms as President of the New York Alumni Association of the law department of the University of the city of New York. For more than twenty years the trustees of this university annually appointed him one of the committee for the examination of candidates for degrees in the law department and for the scholarship prizes. He delivered the address on behalf of the alumni at the inauguration of Dr. Howard Crosby as Chancellor of the University in 1870. He was a member of the Sigma Chi fraternity, and last winter was selected to initiate President Cleveland. He became ill shortly afterward and was unable to perform the ceremony. Last July Mr. Ripley had a sunstroke, and he had not been in good health since. He was over six feet tall and weighed over 300 pounds, and his figure was well-known on Park row.

Circumstances that have been developed concerning the death of Chauncey B. Ripley, of Westfield, in the Hoffman House, have led the New York Herald to the inference that Mr. Ripley committed suicide by inhaling chloroform or some other volatile poison, notwithstanding Coroner Louis W. Schultze's investigation of the case and his declaration that Mr. Ripley's death was due to cerebral apoplexy.

Mr. Ripley was found dead in his bed on the fifth floor of the hotel about noon Sunday. He had not been seen about the hotel since the previous Friday, and his door was forced.

The body was found in bed with the face turned to the wall. The head rested on a pillow, on which, close to his mouth, was found a sponge.

The sponge exhaled no odor, but even though it had been saturated with chloroform on Friday night—the probable date of his death—the drug would have evaporated. The arms were folded and the attitude of the body showed that death had apparently been painless.

In accordance with the appointments to duty of the coroners on Sunday the case did not come under Coroner Schultze's jurisdiction but under that of Coroner's Physician McNulty. Coroner Schultze happened to enter the Hoffman House on Sunday afternoon and on being informed of Mr. Ripley's death remarked:

CORONER SCHULTZE WAS OBLIGING.

"Why, I am a physician as well as a Coroner and I can dispose of this case for you without any further delay. Then I can give a permit for the removal of the body. So there will be no further trouble in having the body in the house."

Then the Coroner visited the room where Mr. Ripley's body lay and pronounced death due to cerebral apoplexy.

Sexton A. Meurer, of Trinity chapel in West Twenty-fifth street, was asked by the hotel clerk, meanwhile, to remove the body. He telephoned to Undertakers H. E. Taylor & Co., of 163 Bowery. The body was taken to the Bowery establishment.

There Dr. Weston, Coroner's physician, expected to find it, and, if necessary, perform an autopsy. To Dr. Weston's surprise he found this undated note from the Coroner's office awaiting him:

CORONER'S OFFICE, NEW YORK.

DEAR DR. WESTON:—Coroner L. W. Schultze directs me to notify you that he has taken charge of the death of Chauncey B. Ripley and that he last night granted a death certificate, and that any further examination is unnecessary.

Yours truly,
EDWARD F. REYNOLDS, Clerk.

Mr. Sawyer, the assistant employed in H. E. Taylor's establishment, removed the body from the Hoffman House to the Bowery rooms. He said to me last even-

MR. RIPLEY MADE HIS WILL.

HE WAS FOUND WRITING IT JUST BEFORE HE DIED.

The New York Herald Reiterates Its Suspicions of Suicide, and the Coroner Confesses that He Would Have Concealed the Fact to Spare the Family Feelings.

(From The New York Herald.)

Further investigation into the cause of the death of Chauncey B. Ripley some time between Friday and Saturday last in the Hoffman House indicates that he committed suicide. It came to light yesterday that last Thursday Mr. Ripley told a friend, Lawyer Aaron Kahn, of 59 William street, that he was writing his will. Mr. Kahn said to a reporter yesterday: "I was in the law library in the Post Office Building and saw Mr. Ripley, whom I had long known as an eminent lawyer, sitting at a table writing. Occasionally Mr. Ripley would lean back in his chair, bite the end of his penholder for several minutes and then resume writing. His face was always ruddy, but I noticed that it was unusually flushed. I exchanged a few words with him and then remarked that he seemed to be very busy.

" 'I'm writing my will,' said Mr. Ripley, at the same time putting his hand over the paper, so that I could not see what he had written. I think it is entirely likely that he was writing his will, because if he had been writing a will for a client he would have naturally done his writing in his own office."

I visited all the drug stores in the vicinity of the Hoffman House yesterday to learn whether Mr. Ripley had recently purchased chloroform or any other volatile poison with which he might have saturated the sponge found on his pillow by Undertaker Sawyer last Sunday. While no such record exists, I was told in several of the drug stores that it was not necessary to suppose in the event of Mr. Ripley's suicide that he had purchased the drug in the vicinity of the hotel. It might have been bought in any drug store in quantities sufficient to commit suicide.

Mr. Ripley's body was taken to Westfield early yesterday morning without an autopsy having been made. Funeral services were held in the First Presbyterian church and the interment was in Fairview Cemetery.

Coroner Schultze said yesterday that there was no need of an autopsy. He had viewed the body and granted a burial permit as a personal favor first to Mr. Ripley's brother, Dr. John H. Ripley, of 305 Lexington avenue, under whom he had studied medicine, and, second, for Subway Commissioner Jacob Hess, who had requested him to examine the body in order that it might be removed.

"While I still hold that Mr. Ripley died of cerebral apoplexy,"—said Coroner Schultze—"I don't deny that I would conceal the fact that a person had committed suicide. I would do it to spare the feelings of the family, lest the fact should be printed in the newspapers. That's the position I have taken since I was elected."

BOOKS AND READING.

Lucy Gibbons Morse Gives an Interesting and Edifying Lecture.

The paper read by Mrs. Lucy Gibbons Morse in All Souls church on Monday afternoon was one of the best that has been heard in the attractive course of lectures that has become such a feature in Mr. Clark's church.

The subject chosen by Mrs. Morse for her paper was "Books and Reading", and what might have been a pedantic and tiresome theme in less able hands was made interesting and attractive by her treatment. The paper was divided into three parts under the heads of "Novels", "The Influence of Journalism" and "Serious Reading". About novels Mrs. Morse had a good deal to say. She thinks that the effect of novel reading depends on the class of novels chosen and that if one's taste has been properly cultivated it is safe for even very young people to be allowed to chose their own reading.

"If"—said Mrs. Morse—"a child has gone through the regular course of wholesome children's books, including the more healthy fairy tales, the Bodley books, some of Frank R. Stockton's works and ending with the Waverly novels it will generally be safe, say at the age of 15 or 16, to allow the reader henceforth to choose for himself." If the taste becomes vitiated by trashy novels it is extremely hard to care for anything else.

Mrs. Morse had a good word to say for the newspapers and under the head of the "Influence of Journalism" she spoke at

DAVE ROANTREE'S BAD HUNTING.

HE OVERCHARGED HIS GUN AND IT BURST.

Roantree's Face Badly Disfigured, and His Eyesight Endangered—Part of His Nose Shot Away.

David Roantree, accompanied by Benjamin Feyner and Wm. Wagner, all of New Market, went hunting last Saturday in the vicinity of Stelle's woods.

They had been looking for game several hours, and had seen nothing.

Roantree then put all his powder and shot into his gun. It was equivalent to three ordinary charges. He had no sooner loaded his firearm than a rabbit came in sight.

All three were anxious to shoot it, and endeavored to get Roantree's gun, but the owner was determined to use it himself.

Placing it on a fence rail, he took aim at the fleetfooted cotton-tail.

The trigger was pulled, but the load, instead of leaving the barrel, blew out by the hammer.

The gun was a total wreck. Pieces of the shattered metal flew in all directions, and the entire charge was blown into the hunter's face, disfiguring it to an alarming extent. Part of his nose was blown off, and his eyes were frightfully burned.

Roantree was taken to Dr. Nelson's office, New Market, where he was treated. It is thought he may lose his eyesight, and his face will be marked for life.

His comrades were surprised that the explosion did not kill him outright.

The hammer when blown off entered a piece of wood, and it was with difficulty that it was extracted. It is not likely that Mr. Roantree will go hunting for some time.

All that can, is being done for his comfort and speedy recovery.

ROBBERY ON THE BRIDGE.

Candy, Cigars and Cider Taken from Ralston's Store.

Some time early Saturday morning one or more thieves broke into William M. Ralston's store on Somerset street, and carried away a dollar's worth of candy, a gallon and a half of cider and three boxes of cigars. One of the boxes of cigars was found in the rear of the store, unbroken. Entrance was effected by bursting open the back door. No clue was left whereby the robbers could be identified.

Mr. Ralston says he is willing to give $100 for information that will lead to the arrest and conviction of the culprits.

HOW TO HELP THE WORTHY.

Here's an Excellent Medium for Distributing Charitable Donations.

The Plainfield Relief Association begs to suggest to the charitably disposed that, in response to appeals in the papers, they kindly send their donations, whether in money, provisions or other articles, to the Association, instead of giving them directly to those they wish to benefit.

Much more good would be done in that way, than if, as frequently happens, a number of persons give once and at about the same time to some family in need of assistance.

If the former course were to be pursued, the money or articles could be retained by the Association and given in proportion as needed, to the designated families.

It occasionally comes to the ears of us, the workers in the Association, that some one or some family has been largely helped from outside sources, but it almost always happens that those persons are shortly again requiring succor from the Relief, if even they have not been receiving it all the time. The pressure on the poor will no doubt be very extreme during the coming winter, so that more than ever, all general donations will be gladly welcomed, as well as those for any particular case.

Money left at Reynolds's Pharmacy for Mrs. H. P. Reynolds, Treasurer of the Relief Association, for the benefit of a family in great need, will be thankfully received. The head of the family is ill of an incurable disease, and cannot be moved. Back rent is owing to a widow, who has little else to support her, and it is necessary to secure sufficient money to pay the rent for some months to come. Between thirty and forty dollars will be needed.

A Good Sheriff and Good Bondsmen.

Sheriff-elect Kyte, of Fanwood, was sworn in by Judges McCormick, Wiley and Hyer, on Tuesday at 10, in the Sheriff's office, Elizabeth. He enters at once on his duties as Sheriff. His bondsmen are John Kean, Jr., Hamilton Kean, Frank Bergen, E. R. Pope and John W. Whelan, each of whom gives surety for $4,000.

L. W. Miller of Fanwood was sworn in as Under-Sheriff.

Getting Cured.

Martin Conners of Washington Valley, who was admitted to the Soldiers Home in Kearney, suffering from rheumatism, four weeks ago, returned to Plainfield Saturday much improved. He went into service with the 79th Regt. of New York in 1861, and re-enlisted in 1863. Mr. Conners went to the Home on crutches, but today is able to walk with the assistance of a cane.

Plainfield Cyclists as Firemen.

HIS HIRED MAN LAID HIM OUT.

WM. KELLY OF OAK TREE HAS A TOUGH EXPERIENCE.

For Reproving His Farmhand, That Functionary Murderously Assaults Him.

When William Kelly of Oak Tree went home he found that his hired man Dave had only dug four post-holes as a day's work. He reproved him, and Dave murderously attacked him.

Kelly was struck over the head with a billet of wood, and clawed and bitten, by his furious assailant. Kelly's ears were almost torn from his head, his hand was bitten, and his head was cut. Kelly broke away and ran to the home of the Sheriff-elect, near Metuchen. He got that official to go back and arrest Dave, who meanwhile, armed with an axe, had driven Mrs. Kelly into the house and broken the servant girl's arm.

Dave was subdued, committed by a Metuchen Justice, and locked up in the jail in New Brunswick.

The hired man is supposed to have been attacked with momentary insanity. He had a similar attack 15 years ago and attacked William's brother.

Dave had been treated like one of the family by Kelly, and had even been taken to the World's Fair. Thursday Kelly bought him a new pair of boots and overalls.

Dave was always a queer chap. His favorite summer garb included a pair of linen trousers, an overcoat and a silk hat. He worked for Kelly 28 years.

The Best Book of the Fair.

Last year The Bancroft Company established themselves in the Auditorium Building, Chicago, for the express purpose of producing in print and pictures, the best work on the great Columbian Exposition. They sent East and to Europe for the best artists, and set up an entire plant for drawing, photographing and engraving. Being in the field long before the Exposition opened, they prepared in every way to paint this wonderful panorama true to life. In many respects The Book of the Fair, by Hubert Howe Bancroft, has no competitor, and can have none.

To enter into details regarding its plan is obviously impossible. Not only have the buildings and the exhibits of the Exposition departments their special curious and educational attractions, but the commonwealths of the United States and the foreign countries, present miniature worlds in themselves. All are reproduced true to life. There are also scores of unclassified features, such as those grouped and massed along Midway Plaisance. Then again, are presented the intellectual and religious traits of all nations, such as centre around the World's Congress Auxiliary. To clearly place this vast panorama before the public, is a work worthy of the highest ambition; but the Bancroft Company is accustomed to great enterprises and to carrying them to a successful issue. Plainfielders interested should write.

13 Guests at a Birthday Party.

Last Saturday evening James Holmes celebrated his twenty-first birthday, at the home of David Bush on Elm street. There were thirteen of his friends present, who made the evening one of much pleasure.

Music, recitations and games were indulged in till a late hour, when a collation was served.

All will long remember the event as one of the most pleasant they ever experienced.

The Bi Club a Winner, Thanks to "The Patriarch".

The Casino was filled Saturday night. Marshall P. Wilder, banjoists Brooks & Denton, and pianist Silberberg, all met with an enthusiastic reception. The music won repeated encores, and no one could hear or see enough of Wilder. Thanks to "The Patriarch's" hustling and generosity, the Bi Club made good profit. Had there been a loss, "The Patriarch" would have assumed it, which proves his generosity still more.

Cleverly Catalogued.

The catalogues of all the books on the shelves of the Plainfield Free Public Library, numbering a little over 12,000, are now on sale at the Library. This catalogue is so arranged as to show not only all that the Library contains of a given author, but also all that it has on any given subject, the full index giving a fair idea of the resources of the library. These lists so long asked for cannot fail to be of the greatest convenience to all who make use of the Library.

They Must Not Flirt with the Giddy Borough Girls.

Superintendent Adleman has posted a new notice on the bulletin board at the car-house. It is to the effect that all motormen and conductors on the Somerset street branch are requested to stop flirting. Someone has evidently made a complaint.

The Westfield Club.

The Westfield Club held a special meeting Friday evening at which the new constitution and by-laws were signed. A good many applications have been made for membership by citizens not heretofore connected with any club. The new club dates from December 1, at which time it will formally take possession of the club property.

UNCONSTITUTIONAL.

HENCEFORTH THE ELECTION OF ASSEMBLYMEN MUST BE BY COUNTIES AT LARGE.

(Special to The Press.)

TRENTON, Nov. 9.—The Supreme Court declares unconstitutional the election of Assemblymen by districts, and holds that each election must be by the whole county. This decision won't affect the present Legislature.

Under this decision, no gerrymandering is possible, and the Assemblymen will be elected by the county at large. The old law has been in force since 1851.

THE EXCISE LAW ALSO SET ASIDE.

(Special to The Press.)

TRENTON, Nov. 4.—The Chief Justice today declared unconstitutional the law providing for County Excise Commissioners to whom license applications locally refused might be appealed.

HYMENEAL.

Williams—Daft.

(From The Seattle (Wash.) Telegraph, Sunday, Nov. 5.)

On last Friday evening Alfred Williams and Miss Matilda Juliet Daft were united in marriage at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Leo Daft, 1909 Joy street, the Rev. Wallace Nutting officiating. Only the families of the contracting couple were present, and after the ceremony had been performed a splendid wedding dinner was served. The house had been artistically decorated for the occasion with flowers, evergreens and autumn leaves, and presented an exceedingly attractive appearance.

Mr. Williams is with the firm of Thomas & Co., financial agents, and is probably one of the best known young men in the city, owing to his previous connection with the City Government and the Spring Hill Water Company. He has a host of friends who wish him and his bride every pleasure and success possible. Leo Daft, father of the bride, is one of the foremost pioneers of electrical invention in this country, and is well-known as such throughout the Eastern States.

Mr. and Mrs. Williams will remain in Seattle and have taken up their residence at 1909 Joy street.

SEWERAGE FOR PLAINFIELD.

THE BOARD OF TRADE TAKES AN ACTIVE HAND.

Mayor and Councilmen Explain the Plans and Needs, to a Large Gathering of Representative Men.

The Plainfield Board of Trade met in the Board's rooms, on East Second street, on Thursday, principally for the purpose of conferring with Mayor Gilbert and the members of the Sewerage Committee of the City Council—President S. A. Ginna, George H. Frost and E. N. Erickson.

President George W. Rockfellow presided, and Secretary George A. Hallock reported the proceedings.

When the president called the meeting to order at 8:15 there were present: His Honor Mayor Gilbert, President Ginna and Councilmen Erickson and Frost (Councilman Fisk came in later), J. D. Runyon, A. M. Runyon, H. H. Baker, A. Andrews, F. H. Martin, D. W. Rogers, John Ulrich, A. M. Williams, J. F. Hubbard, J. A. Hubbard, Dr. O. L. Jenkins, H. H. Coward, George Griffin, J. B. Doane, Capt. Doane, E. R. Pope, J. W. Lowrie, John Doane, A. D. Thompson, John Emmons, Charles Place, Henry Liefke, L. B. Woolston, W. A. Woodruff, F. C. Langhorne, G. Q. Packer, E. A. Mosher, J. F. Buckle, D. W. Littell, F. W. Runyon, James A. Davis, Clarence Teal, E. F. Murray, C. M. Ulrich, Chas. Vail, John Rowland, Chas. B. Clifton, and others.

President Rockfellow of the Board called the meeting to order and Secretary George A. Hallock read the call. The former stated the object of the meeting, which he said was to explain the sewerage question. He called upon Mayor Gilbert, who spoke at length, giving statistics and interesting data. He said he was glad the Board of Trade had so soon from its incipiency entered upon the duty of protecting the public interests. Each citizen and taxpayer should acquaint himself with these existing emergencies. Many people, he considered, know very little about the sewerage question, when it is broached to them, and many refuse to sign a petition, not knowing its purport. The Mayor is a believer in the fact that the Board of Trade will spare no pains to bring about a change in the affairs, and assist materially in introducing a system of sewerage unequalled by any in the United States.

The committee of the Council, he said, was making progress every day, but slowly. Three-fifths of the real estate valuations, by their owners' signatures, are required and necessary to express the willingness of the property owners before sewerage can be introduced. Thus far $2,000,000 has been obtained, and about $600,000 more is necessary. Some objections are made to the proposed system; mainly that it is not perfect; others claim the taxes will be higher, and still others that the filtration beds located near the city would prove to be a menace and nuisance to the public health. This idea was dispelled later on.

Mayor Gilbert, who was the principal speaker, said the committee had studied up the various systems now in vogue all over the world, before submitting a report to Citizens' Committee at a recent meeting held for the purpose; well-known experts on the subject had also been consulted. When the Joint Committee came together some months ago, sub-committees were appointed—one to ascertain legal objections, if any there be; another to find out the cost, etc.

The Intermittent Filtration System,—continued the Mayor—is the best adapted for both small and large towns. At South Framingham, Mass., where the same system has been in operation for the past five years, Mr. Ginna, one of the committee who went to investigate, did not expect to see and find what he did; the Massachusetts State Board of Health established an experimental station at Lawrence, and soon the question arose as to whether or not the filtering beds would perform service in winter as well as in summer. Last winter was the worst "old-fashioned New England winter" experienced in many a year, and the Massachusetts Board of Health watched the filtering process with much zeal, and their report was that the last obstacle with reference to the disposal of sewerage had been removed.

The proposed filter bed is made of a top dressing of soil and some other composition; below, some two feet, is a layer of stone and coarse gravel, and still further below are the filter drains; 998 out of 1,000 parts of the sewage is made up of water and the remaining two parts of solids; the water naturally flows away, while the solid matter adheres to the bed, where microbes form on the under side, and in less than 24 hours all the sediment is gone, actually eaten up, and there is no offensive odor.

The mode of construction and probable cost and location, said the Mayor, are daily questions to be met. As to location nothing could yet be said, but the entire matter had been carefully gone over by some of the best experts in the country and their report has been confirmed by a personal investigation of the Sewerage Committee of Council. "We propose"—said he—"to put in only house sewerage; the surface water will flow off and care for itself; the pipes are to be kept clean by the automatic flushing system." The cost is the most important to some people, but it should be understood that sewers come to save health as well as cost money, and the people should be willing to bear their share of the burden for the benefit of the public health. The total cost will be about $125,000, making liberal allowance for contingencies which may arise; of this expenditure about one-half will fall on the city and the remaining half on the property owners benefited, the latter to be determined by commissioners appointed by the court. The law will not allow the issue of bonds for the whole undertaking, but the city's share can be bonded and the interest maturing for some time would be about $6,250 per annum, and the tax would increase about 10 to 12 cents on the $100 valuation. Mayor Gilbert said in conclusion, that the committee expected to encounter great obstacles in locating the filtration beds, but good judgment with no detriment to the public health would be exercised in case the proper ordinance is enacted by Council. And to this end more signatures are needed to the petitions.

President Ginna emphasized what the Mayor had said and went on further to state that at Lawrence, Mass., big tanks were erected, and soil from different portions of the State was taken there to test its qualities for filtration. Expert chemists claim that the water flowing through the filtering beds is equal to that taken from the wells.

Assessor Hubbard asked about corner lots owners whether they would be assessed on both sides, and the Mayor said he presumed not, but the Commissioners would have to decide this question.

In Berlin with a population of 1,000,000 the same system of filtration is used.

Councilman Geo. H. Frost was the next speaker. He said it was only a matter of a short time before the city must have sewerage. Plainfield, he said, was the last city of its size in the United States to adopt water-works; the cost of sewerage, he contended, is a mere bagatelle; experts have been here and gone over the ground thoroughly and everything is in readiness to go ahead with the work as soon as Council acts on the petitions; few cuttings of the streets, he said would be below 12 feet; if quicksand is encountered, the cost cannot be estimated; the work is to be given to contractors, and borings are to be made every 100 feet; at Grant avenue probably 19 feet would be the depth of the main.

The basis centre is at Park avenue and Ninth street, from which point all grades must start. Regarding the cost Mr. Frost said, at Somerville it cost 45 cents; Fort Wayne 57 cents, and here he believed the system could be put in for 50 cents a foot. Green Brook is too shallow to be used as a receptacle for sewerage, and it is a matter of conjecture whether or not an opening could be made in the Raritan river; at all events connection must be made above the "dam", and this is likely to involve an expenditure of $125,000 in lawsuits. There are three different systems—said Mr. Frost—broad irrigation, chemical precipitation, and the filtering process. The first needs a large area of ground; the second is too expensive; the filtering process is most economical.

Mr. Erickson hoped the Board of Trade would assist the committee in getting signers to the petitions, and the Mayor asked for 100 men to work as he does to solicit signatures.

H. H. Baker was one of the questioners, ex-Judge John Ulrich also asked questions, and they were promptly answered by the Mayor and Mr. Frost.

Editor Runyon moved that the Mayor furnish the list of names not now on list. It was so ordered. Petitions for signers will be circulated.

Mr. Frost said Netherwood property would be most benefited.

J. A. Hubbard said there was a "kick" among owners of vacant lots.

There are now 1,000 names on the petition and more are wanted.

THE MAN ON THE CARS.

HE GRUMBLES ABOUT THE TRIALS OF COMMUTERS.

Says Time is Money, and Shows How the Currency of Eternity Is Blown in on the Railroad.

"I'm not to be trifled with tonight"—said The Man on the Cars, the other evening, as he took the seat I had saved for him and scowled dangerously at me.

"What's on your mind"—I inquired, noting the red light in his eyes, and drawing away into the corner.

"I'm mad: that's all"—he returned.—"I've been mad all the way over the river, and it won't work off for an hour. One of those wretches who sit in the New York ferryhouse to punch tickets and pass commuters did it. I tipped my hat to him as usual, but he called me back and in no very elegant language demanded a view of my ticket. Of course, like all of us, I carry an old commutation pasteboard in my hat, the sight of which generally passes me, but this particular Cerberus was obstinate, and I had to unbutton my coat, produce my pocketbook, and display my November card. Meanwhile an immense crowd blocked the narrow passageway, and, no doubt, mentally consigned me to everlasting punishment. I suppose I must have wasted two or three whole minutes just to satisfy that one miserable microbe, and I call that highway robbery. This ticket business is a terrible drain on one's time, anyhow, and some ingenious mortal ought to devise a means of obviating it: don't you think so?"

"Oh, assuredly"—I replied, anxious to be agreeable.—"But you call it a waste of time—where does that come in?"

"Well, I'll tell you. It's very evident that you have never figured it out, and equally plain that you do not set a proper estimate on the value of your time. Time is money, and should be as jealously guarded as dollars and cents. This ticket nuisance is an atrocious bungling method of stealing time, and should be regarded as a capital offense. You may not think so, but when it comes to blowing in seven or eight hours a year in such unremunerative employment, I pass."

"Seven or eight hours a year!"—I exclaimed.—"What are you giving us?"

"Facts, my boy, facts"—he returned.—"I'll take the trouble to prove it for you, though. You show your ticket three times a day at least: do you not?—once in the New York ferryhouse and, on the train, once in the morning and again at night. Say it requires thirty seconds for each of these operations, and you will find that you spend one minute and a half each day in this way. Suppose you commute three hundred days in the year; there are four hundred and fifty good minutes gone to grass, and nothing to show for it. Four hundred and fifty minutes, you will discover, are just seven hours and a half; and these figures are conservative, for oftentimes the conductor keeps you waiting two or three minutes on the train while he jollies a friend, or watches a card game, before punching your ticket. Think of seven hours and a half annually chasing on into eternity, wasted in this manner of idleness! I guess it never struck you in that light: did it?"

"No: I can't say that it has"—I observed.—"I'm afraid I shall be inclined to regard conductors as kleptomaniacs hereafter."

"Well, that's what they are,"—he answered—"what they are paid to be—thieves of time—sneak thieves, too; for most people, like yourself, never know they are being robbed. You ought to learn to stop once in a while and think about these things. Did you ever read Anstey's 'Tourmalin's Time Cheques'? No? You should; I'm afraid you are a profligate."

And he rose and went forward to talk to a man who owes him twenty dollars, so he tells me.

BABBITT'S MINSTRELS.

Plainfield's Ambitious Colored Men Try Their Show on the Scotch Plains Dog.

James Babbitt's Republican club, with headquarters on East Front street, has merged into a minstrel troupe, and Friday evening the company played in Excelsior Hall, Scotch Plains, before a good-sized audience. Some of the performers went to Fanwood on the cars, others went by stage, and some "hoofed" it. The company is made up of local talent, and is destined to "go in the soup" at the next stand, Westfield, one week from Monday. Cranford will be the following jumping-off place. James Scott and Charles Jefferson are the managers, and Joe Mitchell will take the tickets at the door, provided any are presented. There was a scarcity of unhealthy eggs in Scotch Plains when the troupe sang "Swanee River", which followed "Opening of the Overture", but there were many in the audience ready to lend a helping hand to drive the minstrels out.

The train due here at 11:13 was late on account of the colored population who boarded it at Fanwood. The programme follows:

A SLEEK STRANGER STOLE THE RIG.

ON THE PROMISE OF A JOB, HULETT PERRINE WAS DUPED.

Blue-Eyed Mr. Swindler Dumped the Owner of the Horse and Wagon at the Dr. Coles Place, Drove Rapidly Away, and Hasn't Been Captured Yet.

Hulett Perrine, of Westfield, had his horse and wagon stolen Monday night by a very clever thief and he has found no trace of the missing rig. Perrine had stopped at Gamble's Hotel, Westfield, and there met a stranger who told him that he knew of a job if Perrine cared to try for it. Perrine said he was anxious to get to work, and the stranger said he would take him to the place. Accordingly the two men started off in Perrine's rig and went in the direction of Scotch Plains on the Springfield road. They stopped at a house near the Dr. Coles place, and when Perrine got out of the rig to go into the house the stranger said he would drive on to Scotch Plains village and get some beer. Perrine said he did not want any beer, but the man drove off rapidly and has not been seen since. The horse stolen was a bay roan, and the rig was a two-seated box wagon with double steps on each side. The thief is described as being of medium height, rather thick set, and smooth-shaven, with blue eyes and red cheeks. The only clue that has been heard of the missing rig is that obtained from two bicycle riders, who said that a horse and wagon corresponding to the one stolen had been seen tied to a hitching post in Metuchen for some hours the day after the theft. The police have been notified, and will investigate the matter. Perrine, who had been saving a long time to buy the rig, can ill afford to lose it, and it is to be hoped that the thief may be brought to justice.

SOME ODD STORIES.

ADVENTURES AND INCIDENTS FAR OUT OF THE ORDINARY.

The Blind Gambler of the Black Hills—His Story of the False Friend and Faithless Wife—How a Pistol Shot Restored His Sight—The Hunt Ended.

[Copyright, 1898, by American Press Association.]

Blind Joe was one of the well known characters of Deadwood in the early days of the Black Hills metropolis, and chance led me to befriend him and learn his sad story. Strange as it may seem, even though he could scarcely distinguish daylight from darkness, Joe was a gambler. Poker was his favorite game, although he sometimes ventured money on faro. He could recognize the denomination of any kind of a coin the moment his fingers touched it, but it seemed pure chance that led him in the selection of cards and the betting of his money.

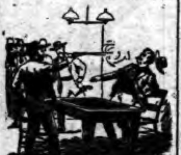
He was almost invariably a winner which was the most remarkable part of it as he never lifted a dealt hand from the table in choosing his discards, but ran his fingers over the backs of the pasteboards as they lay face downward and cast aside one two or three cards as the fancy struck him. He always touched the cards he drew when they were dropped before him, as if by some wonderful necromancy he could read them as he read gold and silver coins with his fingers. Having touched each card, he bunched them and let them still lay face downward, after which he either bet or passed.

From one gambling house to another Joe made his way, and wherever he stopped to engage in a game the table at which he sat was immediately surrounded by an eager and curious throng of spectators. It was these spectators who saw the blind gamester received a fair show, for any one who attempted to play crooked with Blind Joe was promptly and summarily dealt with by the onlookers. After a time the sightless sport became so well known that he could scarcely induce old gamesters to play with him, as they asserted he was in league with satan.

More than one attempt was made to rob him of his winnings, and thus it came about that I got acquainted with him. I had followed him from the Metropole saloon one night at a late hour, and as he reached a dark and deserted portion of the street, feeling his way along with a cane he always carried, I saw a man leap upon him. Joe was felled to the ground, but I drew a revolver, uttered a shout and dashed forward, causing the robber to take to his heels.

The blind gamester was not severely injured, and I aided him to the wretched little hut in which he lived all by himself. He asked me in, and that night we became so friendly that he told me his tragic story.

His name was Joseph Danvers, and, save one year of his life, he had lived as a gambler since becoming old enough to handle the cards and venture money upon them. He declared that he was born a gambler and that he did not seem suited for any other occupation, but having fallen in love with an innocent and beautiful girl he forswore the life he was leading and did not touch a card or venture money on any game of chance for a year. The girl married him, and he cut clear of his old associates, with a single exception, making a brave attempt to live an open and honorable life. As he had saved several thousand dollars, he was able to invest in a modest business and live comfortably in a quiet way for a few months, which was the happiest period of his life.



A QUICK SHOT.

Manson Webb was the only one of Danvers' former associates from whom he did not clear himself, and Webb retained his friendly relations with the reformed gambler, being a welcome visitor to the pretty cottage home. Danvers trusted his wife implicitly, and he did not dream that she could do a wrong until by chance the knowledge was brought to him with stunning force that her relations with Webb were not what they should be. Furiously enraged, Danvers confronted his false friend and charged him with his treachery. A struggle followed, and the husband was stricken senseless by an iron bar that Webb caught up.

That blow injured the optic nerve in Danvers' head and nearly cost him his life. When he recovered and left the hospital, it was to go forth into darkness, a blind man, and learn that his wife had fled with the treacherous gambler. Then a blind hunt—a groping through midnight gloom—began, for Danvers swore to follow and find the guilty pair. He converted everything of his that was available into money, and then, aided by a detective, sought to track them down. The detective robbed him, and he was forced to do something to obtain more money. Then it was that a chance game revealed to him the wonderful fact that he could still play poker, but he did not understand how it was that he always seemed to select the right cards to throw away and almost without fail bet his hand for just what it was worth and no more. It was as great a mystery to him as to any one else.

Six months before coming to Deadwood he had found his wife. She was dying in Chicago, where the villainous Manson Webb had abandoned her, and ere she breathed her last, she heard the lips of her sightless husband utter words of forgiveness. Over her grave he swore to devote the remainder of his life to tracking the wretch who had wrought such ruin, and as Webb was a gambler he felt that they would some day meet across the board.

"But what can you do?" I cried. "You are blind! You"—

"I carry a revolver constantly," he said, his voice cold and hard. "If I hear him speak, I shall know him. I can play cards even though I am blind. I believe I can shoot."

That night I lay awake until near morning, my head filled with thoughts of this wonderful man and his sad history. Three days passed before I saw him again. It was a rainy night, and a great throng had gathered in the Metropole, which was the leading saloon and gambling house of the place at that time. Blind Joe had been playing and had just cleaned out Dandy Frank, a veteran poker sharp. As Frank arose from the table, cursing his ill luck, a black bearded stranger slipped into the chair, observing:

"I don't mind taking a hand, as I have a few dollars to lose."

The sightless gambler started as if thrilled by an electric shock. A revolver leaped into his hand, and he shouted:

"That voice! Manson Webb, I know you! Your life is mine!"

"Joe Danvers!" gasped the man of the black beard, seeming to recognize the blind gamester for the first time. He sprang aside, wrenched out a revolver and fired just as Danvers pulled trigger. The stranger was just touched, but the blind gambler slipped from his chair to the floor without uttering a cry or a groan.

The stranger's bullet had plowed along the side of Danvers' skull, stunning him for the time, and when he recovered consciousness he started up, declaring he could see as well as ever. In fact the bullet had given him a shock that had fully restored his sight in a moment, a thing the hospital doctors had been unable to do.

"Where is that devil—where's Manson Webb?" he wildly cried, looking about him.

"Wa-al," drawled Big Ben Weston, leader of the vigilantes, stepping forward promptly, "we reckoned as how the onery critter had throwed ye cold, Joe, and so we took him out to soak in the rain. They was a rope got tangled round his neck an' ketched to the limb of a tree so high up that he couldn't seem ter git his feet down on the ground right handy like. I 'low you'll find him thar when you wants him."

How Big Foot Died.

On the morning of Dec. 29, in his tepee Big Foot, the Sioux chief, lay dying of pneumonia, while before the lodge, squatting in a half circle, was his entire band of warriors, fear, hatred and despair writing on their grim faces. Five hundred men surrounded them, soldiers of the regular army, commanded by Colonel Forsythe. Hotchkiss guns were mounted and trained to command the camp, and at 8 o'clock the order was given to disarm the redskins.

By Big Foot's side crouched his faithful squaw, ministering to his wants as well as she could. The flap of the tepee was lifted, and the chief could look out upon the scene that was being enacted. He had surrendered to the whites in good faith, but noting the ominous preparations of the fully armed soldiers, he began to fear all his followers were to be butchered without a show for their lives. He knew the warriors feared the same, although they spoke no words, for he saw the looks that were flashed from side to side beneath scowling brows.

The order came for the Indians to deliver up their arms in squads of twenties. The first squad delivered two useless muskets. This so angered the officers that, after a hasty consultation, the order was given for the cavalrymen to dismount and close in. This they did, taking a stand within 20 feet of the redskins. Then a detachment was directed to go through the tepees and search for arms.

Big Foot tried to lift himself to his elbow, the fire of battle flashing from his black eyes, but his strength was far spent, and he sank back feebly. Then, all at once, a weird sound broke on the frosty air. It came from the throat of the dying chief, and it was a death chant. The warriors outside took it up, and the plaintive wail of their voices echoed back from the furthermost bluffs.

All at once, in the twinkling of an eye, the chant changed to a warwhoop. Out from beneath their blankets leaped their loaded rifles as they sprang to their feet, and they opened fire to the right and left on the startled soldiers. The warriors who had no rifles leaped like tigers at the whites, their hatchets and knives ready for red work.

"Fire!" rang the command, and the soldiers returned the volley.

"Remember Custer!" That was the battle cry of the whites.

Slowly Big Foot arose to his feet, making one fearful struggle to fling off the grip of death that was on him and join his people in battle against the hated whites. His face was working convulsively and his eyes blazing. To his full height he arose, his lips parted, to utter a wild warcry. Then he was riddled by 20 bullets and fell forward on his face without uttering a sound—fell as falls the mighty monarch of the forest when riven by the lightning's blast. His squaw shrieked and sprang up, but the remorseless bullets cut her down, and she sank across Big Foot's body.

And merciful death veiled the eyes of the chief to the horrible slaughter of his people that followed—a slaughter that was miscalled the battle of Wounded Knee.

In the Stormy Night.

"One night as darkness came on," said the old sailor, continuing his reminiscences, "we found ourselves running down the Newfoundland coast before a heavy gale, having been unable to make an anchorage. The wind was steady and strong, and although everything was close reefed but a single staysail the schooner was cutting through the water with a speed that seemed equal to an express train. The Merribel, as she was called, had a cutwater like the blade of a knife, and she was certainly the fastest craft I ever saw that was not built particularly for speed.

"The crew in general felt decidedly shaky, even though Captain Jones told us over and over that there was no danger unless the wind shifted to drive us on the lee shore, and we were all aware he knew every foot of brine from New Bedford to Greenland. He ordered two lights set aloft, while others were kept burning forward, and two men were constantly on the watch. For all of his assurance that there was no danger, I could see he was nervous. This was explained when he declared we were close upon the fishing banks, where sometimes the venturesome fishermen anchored their smacks and rode out anything but the severest storms.

"Barely had he made this explanation when the lookout shouted:

"'Boat ahead!'

"We were right upon her when the cry was uttered, and I saw she was a small schooner that was laying at anchor, broadside toward us. With fatal carelessness she had failed to hoist a light.

"There came a sudden shock as we struck her amidships, but the speed of the Merribel was scarcely checked. We cut the strange schooner fairly in two and bore her down under the waves, while our vessel sped straight on through the wild night. In one terrible moment just after we struck the fisherman, as the sundered wreck was sinking beneath us, I caught a glimpse of two or three half naked men, who rushed from her cabin, flinging up their arms and shrieking out their despair. Their wild screams ring in my ears at this very minute.

"Onward shot the Merribel, and we were alone on the stormy sea. It was impossible to beat back in the face of that gale, and to this day I do not know what boat we struck or if one of the wrecked fishermen escaped." GILBERT PATTEN.

SOME ODD STORIES.

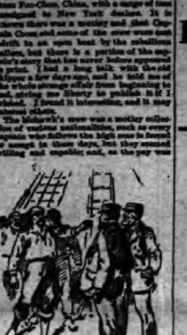
ADVENTURES AND INCIDENTS FAR OUT OF THE ORDINARY.

The Unaccountable Mutiny on the American Ship Mohawk—Overpowered and Set Adrift in an Open Boat—The Storm and the Vision of the Shipwreck.

[Copyright, 1898, by American Press Association.]

Everybody remembers the mysterious and unexplained disappearance of the full rigged American ship Mohawk that sailed from Foo-Choo, China, with a cargo of teas consigned to New York dealers. It is known there was a mutiny and that Captain Cross and some of the crew were cast adrift in an open boat by the rebellious sailors, but there is a portion of the captain's story that has never before appeared in print. I had a long talk with the old skipper a few days ago, and he told me of the whole strange affair from beginning to end, giving me liberty to publish it if I wished. I found it interesting, and it may interest others.

The Mohawk's crew was a motley collection of various nationalities, such as every captain who follows the high seas is forced to accept in these days, but they seemed willing and capable; and, as the pay was satisfactory and the feed unusually good, the captain did not apprehend any serious trouble. To this day he is unable to explain the cause of the mutiny, but he is inclined to think there was a spell cast on the ship by a beggar who was driven from her deck as she lay in Foo-Choo and that she sailed from that port under an evil star. All sailors are more or less superstitious.



HIS DEFENSE.

The Mohawk was well down the Indian ocean when the mutiny occurred, and it came without the least warning, like a thunderclap from a clear sky. One of the men, a Lascar, refused point blank to go aloft, and when the first mate attempted to lay hands on the fellow he gave a cry that brought two-thirds of the sailors rushing to his side. Then he defied captain or mate to lay a hand on him.

"Mutiny!" cried Captain Cross, starting for his cabin, where he kept a fine winchester rifle.

Although shocked by the suddenness of the affair, he was not stunned, and he meant to make a stiff fight, but two of the rebellious crew intercepted and grappled with him. As he struggled with the men, both of whom were powerful fellows, he saw the first mate fighting fiercely in the midst of the mutineers. The others of the crew who were not in the plot had fallen back to the rail, all of them appearing frightened and undecided. The skipper roared at them to pitch in and fight for their lives, but even that was not enough to arouse them.

The struggle was brief, resulting in the complete conquering of the captain, first mate and three of the crew who were not in the plot, for plot it plainly was. The leader of the mutineers was a dark faced man named Delaro, in whose veins there ran the mingled blood of at least three races. He was a sullen, silent man, but an efficient sailor, and Captain Cross had never for a moment dreamed he would head a rebellion.

"What do you mean to do with us?" demanded the skipper after he had discovered commands and threats were wasted.

"Wait," said Delaro, who was standing guard, a loaded musket in his hands. "Don't git in hurry. You find out soon."

"I warn you that I will hunt you down and bring you to justice for this," grated the furious but helpless captain. "You will not escape."

Delaro sneered. "That's all you know. We not fools to sail the seas. Pirates all gone. Ship worth money; cargo worth money. I know how to git money. Then you find us. We be scattered everywhere."

The captain tried to convince him he would find it impossible to dispose of the Mohawk or her cargo, but the chief of the mutineers expressed his scorn by looks and grunts. A boat was quickly loaded with "salt grub," two casks of water being added, after which she was lowered from the davits and the overpowered sailors forced to descend into her. Then the mutineers aimed their firearms at the unfortunates and sent a few bullets "chugging" into the water about the boat as the ship sailed away.

The men in the boat watched her until she was hull down against the horizon, and Captain Cross seemed to arouse himself with an effort.

"Men," he said soberly, "there is a group of small islands to the westward, and I propose we make for them, as, if I am not mistaken, a storm is brewing. We do not want to be on the sea in this boat if a heavy blow arises."

They got out the oars and pulled away to the west. It was near sundown when they ran through the jagged reef that surrounded a beautiful little island, and they were scarcely ashore when the storm that had been threatening for long hours came swirling down upon them with appalling suddenness. Darkness flung itself over the sea with the vanishing of the sun, and all that wild night they crouched in the lee of a huge overhanging bluff, while the wind roared, the surf thundered over the reef, the murk was sundered by jagged lightning, and the earth fairly reeled at each peal of thunder. The rain literally fell in a flood.

Toward morning the fierceness of the storm lessened, and as a muddy brown streak showed in the east the fury of the tempest swept on and was gone. Still the breakers boomed over the reef in a white mass of foam that leaped up in a vain attempt to brush the sullen mass of ragged clouds that hung low over the face of the ocean.

All at once one of the men leaped up, fairly screaming:

"Look, look, a ship!"

They all looked in the direction indicated, and they distinctly saw a dismasted ship driving toward the reef, seeming perfectly helpless to avert her doom. Evidently she had been disabled and nearly wrecked in the terrible storm, and the work of disaster was to be completed on the relentless reef.

"It's the Mohawk!" shouted Captain Cross. "I know her for all that has happened! She's flying a signal of distress! Why don't the men take to the boats? She'll surely go to pieces on the reef!"

Now the mutineers could be distinctly seen rushing about wildly, and it soon became evident they had no boats to launch, probably having been deprived of them in the hurricane. Then Captain Cross and his companions rushed down to the shore and shoved their boat into the water in the teeth of the heavy sea, a thing they could not have accomplished but for the fact that the reef broke the force of the waves in a measure. For all of what had happened, the skipper and seamen resolved to render such assistance to the imperiled mutineers as lay in their power.

As the boat ran out from the island the ship seemed to strike a reef, and the shrieks of the men aboard her were plainly heard. The captain and his men all pulled to the best of their ability, and as they approached they saw the ship go to pieces before their eyes. Still they pulled, hoping to be able to pick up some of the unfortunate wretches who were aboard the doomed craft. Through the leaden mists of dawn they saw the luckless mutineers struggling in the water. And then, all at once, as the clouds in the east broke away and a ray of rose colored light shot through and fell on the boiling water about the reef, neither ship nor men were to be seen. In a single moment all had vanished, and only the wild waves roared and flashed and lashed over the reef.

Captain Cross and his companions were stunned. In vain they cruised about the spot, hoping to see a timber, a spar, something—anything that would tell them it had not all been a hallucination. They saw nothing. The clouds parted in the east, and the morning sun shone through before they rowed back to the island. And not a body nor one piece of timber did the water throw up on the beach, although they watched for something of the kind the entire day. Not until the coming of another night could they agree they had been deceived by a vision, a delusion, a mystery of the sea. Then they decided the Mohawk had not driven on the reef at all, [illegible] was impossible that every piece of the ship and every one of the men aboard her should have sunk like lead and no relic been washed up by the waves that beat on [illegible].

[illegible] no trace of her has ever been discovered. No sailor believes her yet afloat, and still no sailor seems to know in what part of the great deep her bones lie buried. And not one of the mutineers has Captain Cross confronted since the day he was cast adrift in the open boat with a few faithful followers.

Two days after the storm he was taken from the island by an American vessel, being eventually landed in Baltimore. It was agreed among the men that no mention should be made of the visionary shipwreck they fancied they witnessed until at least two years had passed or the lost Mohawk was discovered. That was more than two years ago.

A Boaster Cured.

Reuben Dean lives in the rather sleepy little town of B—— in the state of New Jersey, and he has acquired the unenviable reputation of being an unblushing liar and boaster. Up to one night about two weeks ago he missed no opportunity to bore somebody with a tale of some terrific adventure through which he had passed, taking care to depict himself as the fearless hero of each bloodcurdling episode. He declared he did not believe in spirits other than those to be found at the bar of the village tavern, and he professed to hold in the greatest contempt any one who feared ghosts or the supernatural.

Reuben lived about a mile and a half outside of the village, and it was his custom each night after supper to hitch his scrawny old white horse into his wobbly wagon and ride down to the "howtel," where he was certain to meet his cronies and spend an hour or two romancing and bragging. Through the day he kept the white horse out to pasture, and one night he found the animal had knocked out several lengths of the staggering fence and escaped from confinement. If he spent much time to search for the horse, he would not get into town in time to hobnob with his set, so he started out afoot, satisfied the horse would not go far and no one would steal him.

Just outside the village is the cemetery, which Reuben passed every night. This evening, some time before he came to the cemetery, he fell in with two men of the place, who were on their way to the postoffice. As the three trudged along the subject of ghosts happened to come up, and one of the men remarked that old Mother Carey, who had the reputation of being a witch, had been buried that day.

"Wa-al," drawled Reuben as he took a huge chew of tobacco, "I s'pose folks'll be seein spooks 'round the graveyard naow she's burried there. Such foolishness makes me sick, by gosh! They hain't no such thing as spooks, and if there was they'd never skeer me."

Immediately one of his companions challenged him to cut across the cemetery with them. At first he tried to get out of it, but their laughter caused him to consent, and he scaled the fence, telling them to follow.

They had not proceeded far amid the white tombstones, where the darkness was gathering thickly, before one of the men said the new made grave of the old witch was just ahead. At that instant a loud "woosh" came out of the shadows, and then up before the trio rose a huge white figure that looked grotesque and terrible amid the murky shadows.

A wild yell of horror pealed from the lips of Reuben Dean, and he promptly whirled and fled for his life. He hadn't made more than six leaps before he fell floundering into a newly excavated grave, where he lay groaning:

"Don't touch me, Mrs. Carey! I'd never said it if I'd thought! I didn't mean anything! Oh, Lord! Don't touch me, good Mrs. Ghost!"

In about three minutes the other two men came along and pulled him out of the grave, one of them saying with the utmost contempt:

"Get up here, you fool! Shut up your whining! Here's your ghost, and I advise you to take it home."

Then Reuben saw before him his own old white horse, which one of his companions had captured without a struggle. It took him about five minutes to get the thing through his head, and then he took the horse by the mane and led it home. Since then he sneaks into the village surreptitiously and gets out as soon as possible, but somebody is sure to see him and ask him about that "ghost." He has quit boasting, and it is hoped he is cured.

THE HEIR APPARENT.

The kings of Italy, Spain, Belgium, Bavaria and Saxony have never taken the trouble to be crowned.

The Duchess of Fife recently performed the feat of landing seven salmon, weighing from 6 to 10 pounds each, in one day near Mar Lodge.

It is stated that at one time the father of the Princess of Wales was so poor that he was obliged to supplement his small income by giving drawing lessons.

Among the many decorations worn by the queen of Portugal is a medal which was conferred on her several years ago, when she threw herself into the Tagus to save her children.

The sultan of Turkey is a monomaniac on the subject of carriages. He has been steadily engaged in making a collection of such vehicles for the past 20 years, and now has nearly 200 of all makes and kinds.

The Princess of Bulgaria has won the hearts of her people by her simplicity. She attends the weekly market at Sophia on foot, going from stall to stall to make her purchases, escorted only by a respectful crowd of peasants.

Queen Victoria has taken to having pet birds in her private rooms. At first canaries were tried, at the suggestion of the Princess Beatrice, but the queen found the noise too trying, and at the present moment she has with her a bullfinch and a linnet.

THE CRITIC.

Oscar Wilde says, "Beware of women who wear violet."

Mrs. Julia Ward Howe received the very munificent sum of $5 for the "Battle Hymn of the Republic" from the publishers of The Atlantic and $10 for "Our Orders."

William Dean Howells is about to issue a book in which he will elaborate his views upon the social system. He is a socialist in theory and is even accused of leanings toward anarchy.

Zola put his recent visit to London to some practical use by learning all he could about the seamy side of the British metropolis, with the idea of utilizing the information thus obtained in his next novel.

Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes is looking well for his years. The other day he visited the Boston courthouse, and when he saw his son standing at the door made a respectful bow and said, "How do you do, Mr. Justice Holmes?"

The historian Mommsen is a small man with a big head on him. He is medium sized in stature, but his extreme thinness makes him appear almost diminutive. The Berliners say he has some of the "windschief" appearance that characterized Frederick the Great.

THE BOTANIST.

Orchids are comparatively new to florists and the public, but they are becoming more common and at the same time more perfect every year.

The great oaks in Waverly, Mass., are survivors of an oak forest that must have existed in that region, according to the geologists, as far back as the tenth century.

In potting the bulbs for winter blooming do not omit the freesias. They are quite cheap, and quantities of them may be potted at small cost. They bloom with but little care.

Yuccas are readily transplanted. They do not always start to grow right away afterward, but they come in time. They are, in fact, so tenacious of life that pieces of root cut into lengths and buried will form plants.

A SUMMER ENDEAVOR.

BY M. O. M.

The Secretary sat in the drawing-room car, looking not at the beautiful scenery, but down at her own little shoes, and trying to fight back the tears that would come, as she thought how the swift express was bearing her farther and farther away from home and of the soldierly man who had kissed her so fondly, as he said "Good-bye, my darling; God bless my little Mildred!" when the last "All aboard!" sounded, and he stepped from the car. For Mildred adored her father, and though now bound on a most delightful holiday visit, she could not help thinking how long it would be before she again saw either him or the tall, stately lady who had said her good-bye, with such a sweet, but watery, smile, that morning.

But the Secretary had no idea of spending her day in crying, so she presently sat erect, and took an observation of her surroundings. A dainty little traveler was she, in her dark-blue gown, wide black hat, with its trimming of black crepe and pale yellow ostrich tips, and tan gloves and shoes. Her pretty valise was at her feet; in her lap lay the "Century", a paper-cover edition of "The Little Minister", and an enormous bouquet, and on the window-sill was a white box, bearing the suggestive inscription, "Huyler." "Poor things", she thought, as her eye lighted on the flowers, "you'll be ruined before I get there. Not a very interesting looking set of people", she went on, "my fellow-travelers: two children, tired out already, and a cross-looking nurse, a society-tired young lady—she looks so, anyway—two young men, and the usual staid, middle-aged people. That is a sweet-looking old lady, though." She took off her hat and gloves, and leaning her curly black head comfortably back, settled down to read.

It was a rather tiresome journey to the Secretary, who had been over the road many times, and she spent most of the time in reading and laying some plans for her stay at her aunt's beautiful home, "The Pines." "I must be an Endeavorer always", she thought, "and a nice time I shall have in that little town, where they think far more about your clothes than your Christianity, and I do n't suppose a single young person goes to the prayer-meeting. Aunt Lou goes to the Episcopal church, and they do n't have prayer-meetings. How I shall miss the dear chapel, and the helpful meetings! I only hope Albert wo n't forget to count the attendance, and write up the secretary book. I'll never forgive him if he does! Oh, Jesus, help me to keep very close to Thee this summer, and to acknowledge Thee in all my ways!"

Well, the first stage of the journey was over soon after noon, and as the Secretary stepped on to the platform, she saw her friends, Elizabeth and Etta Lewis, awaiting her. As soon as the greetings were exchanged, Etta said, "Mildred, we drove in after you, as it is such a pleasant day and the train is so slow, and does not start till so late". "Good", returned Mildred, "I will enjoy it ever so much better."

They had a gay drive from the city out into the rolling country to Mrs. Morton's country home, "The Pines". A warm welcome awaited Mildred here from her aunt and from sweet grandma Lewis; and the next day a gay time began for her. Walks, drives, croquet and tennis, and gay little afternoon teas, lunch parties and evening parties made the days all too short. The Lewis girls wished to give a dance for Mildred, but she was so astonished at the idea that it was instantly dropped, and a large "tea" given instead. It was rather wonderful to the girls of Briarton to find a city girl who would not dance. The young men pleaded in vain, and when the boldest asked outright if she thought it wrong, she said quietly, "It would be very wrong for me, for it would hurt my influence as a Christian". Mr. Atherton said no more, but asked her for a promenade and discovered that the "little Puritan" could talk so delightfully that he really enjoyed the lively debate he had with her more than the swift waltz with Miss Lewis, who was not troubled as to her "influence as a Christian."

Do not imagine it was easy or pleasant for this gentle girl of twenty to fly directly in the face of popular ideas; but—"Ye are not your own" was stamped so indelibly on her heart, that there was only one way for her. Grandma approved of her, and though aunt Lou opened her eyes somewhat, she respected her for her opinions, and Mildred could leave the rest.

Sunday came and the Secretary, in an elegant toilette, went to service with the rest. The instant the singing began she thought "Here is something I can do", and immediately threw the power of her sweet, clear, well-trained voice into the hymn which was being rendered by what Mildred described in a letter to her mother as "an extraordinarily bad choir". "My voice is n't much at home," she wrote "but it really made an impression here. I am so glad I can use it for Jesus!"

In the afternoon, while Elizabeth took a nap and Etta read a magazine, Mildred wrote a "Sunday letter" home, and studied the topic to be discussed that evening in the chapel at home, singing hymns with Etta, reading Havergal's poems to grandma and the evening services finished the day. The

"If you cannot cross the ocean,
And the heathen lands explore,
You can find the heathen nearer—
You can help them at your door.
If you cannot give your thousands
You can give the widow's mite;
And the least you do for Jesus
Will be precious in His sight.

"If you cannot speak like angels,
If you cannot preach like Paul,
You can tell the love of Jesus,
You can say He died for all.
If you cannot rouse the wicked
With the judgment's dread alarms,
You can lead the little children
To the Saviour's waiting arms.

"Let none hear you idly saying
'There is nothing I can do,'
While the souls of men are dying,
And the Master calls for you.
Take the task He gives you gladly,
Let His work your pleasure be;
Answer quickly when He calleth,
'Here am I; send me, send me!'"

Having once started, Mildred had lost all nervousness, and now her voice was very earnest as she added, "We had a topic very like this one in our Christian Endeavor Society a short time ago. And one thing was said that greatly impressed me. It was this: If we do not make the most of the small opportunities for service to Christ that are continually coming to us all, how would God ever dare to trust us with a great service for Him? We do want to serve Him; may He help us to make use of every single opportunity He gives us, however small!"

A young man, sitting in the front of the room, had turned almost directly around and gazed at Mildred, while she was speaking. This was David Pierce, a young physician, who had the reputation of being more of a dandy than a doctor. Now, however, the instant the Secretary sat down, up he popped, and exclaimed, in a voice that actually forgot its English drawl, "The young lady is right; we do n't deserve any large opportunities of service if we do n't use those we have. I have n't used mine, I'm free to say, and I want to do better and I wish you'd pray for me, that I may, from this time out!" And down he sat with a resolved look on his face, which immensely astonished his audience.

Now there arose a tall, spare man, with a face full of earnestness. This was the superintendent of the Sunday-school. "If you will excuse me", said he, "I would like to say that there is an opportunity for Christian service right here in our own Sunday-school. There are three classes that have no regular teachers, and a good many classes that it would n't hurt to fill up some. We'd be glad of some consecrated workers down there, I can tell you, on Sundays."

A sweet-faced matron spoke next. "I can tell you another opportunity. Old Mrs. Williams is nearly blind now, you know, and only yesterday she told me how glad she would be if some one would come in and read to her, once in a while. Would not that be service 'In His Name'?"

A scared voice came from the back of the room, where a slender girl had risen to her feet, "I have been a Christian a long time", she said, "But I have not done much for my Saviour. But I want to begin now; will you pray for me, too?"

The heavy-hearted pastor now had a glad look in his eyes, as he listened to these hitherto unheard voices. Others followed—three or four—either giving some practical idea for work (it was surprising how many such ideas people had, when once some one had spoken), or to express a wish that they might serve their Lord better in the future than in the past. Then, with a heartfelt prayer for those who had that night made new resolves, the pastor closed the meeting. Before Mildred could leave the church he went to her and shaking her warmly by the hand, said, "May God bless you, for your words to us tonight!"

The next morning Louise Waite, the young girl who had spoken in the meeting of her resolve to do more for Christ, was surprised by a call from Dr. Pierce. After a little general talk, the conversation turned on the meeting of the previous night. Dr. Pierce said, presently, "Look here, Miss Louise, if you were as much in earnest as I was, last night, you know that something has got to be different; now I am going to buckle down to my business, and not go it quite so hard in society. But I wish we had something to keep our spiritual activity at boiling point. Do you know anything about the Y. P. S. C. E.?" No, Louise did n't, except in a very general way. So Dr. Pierce told her all he knew himself and he had attended several of their meetings, while away pursuing his studies. "I wish we had one", he said, and Louise echoed his wish. A long talk followed, the result of which was that they should use their influence toward the organization of an Endeavor Society in Briarton. A talk with their pastor, the next day, gave form to their plans. It was decided that this committee of two should call upon Miss Morton, who was the only Endeavorer in their locality, and inquire if she would be willing to give a short, informal talk on the history, object and work of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor, in the church parlors, the next week.

Mildred was most astonished, when they presented themselves and announced their errand. "Why" she exclaimed, "I never did such a thing in my life! I could n't possibly!" But they insisted that she could, and finally grandma took their part and urged Mildred to attempt it, if she only said a few words. And Louise said, shyly. "You know, Miss Morton, you want to make the most of your opportunities to do good; would n't it be doing good to help us organize a Society of Christian Endeavor?" So Mildred finally gave up, and then spent the week before the meeting in a state of scared expectation. She wrote to Boston, to the United Society, for books and leaflets; to the district secretary of her own Union, asking for advice as to what points to emphasize; and to her own society president, her good friend, asking the prayers of those consecrated young people from whose midst she had come, for the effort she was about to you to do anything like that, but Christ will keep you, always!"

Mildred could not attend another meeting of the new society, as late in the week she was obliged to start for home. But they were wide awake, now, and she did not fear for them. David Pierce called the day before she started, and, in bidding her good-bye, he said, "Miss Morton, you are responsible for most of the great blessing that has come to us this month. If you had not said what you did in prayer-meeting that night, and shown us the consecrated energy of one of Christ's Endeavorers, we would never have waked up to see what we ought to be and do. Just tell the young people in that society of yours that they never know how much a little endeavor here and there may do; you have proved your own words of that night to us, Miss Morton. As God, through you, has given us a blessing, may He bless many others through you, and all of your society. And may God bless you, Miss Morton!"

JUDGMENT AGAINST PATTON.

No Defence Made by the Plainfield Broker to the Allegations of the Craig Executors.

A judgment by default for $64,925.40 has been taken before Justice Andrews of the Supreme Court against Wm. L. Patton and Henry L. Saltonstall, who composed the firm of William L. Patton & Co., brokers, in business at 6 Wall street, New York city. It is in favor of the executors of Robert Craig, who left with Patton & Co for safe keeping 13 Richmond Terminal 6s, 29 Oregon Improvement 5s, 8 Tennessee Coal and Iron Company's Division bonds, 200 shares Tennessee Coal and Iron Railroad Company's preferred stock, 100 shares Missouri Pacific Railroad Company's stock, and 200 shares East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia Railroad Company's preferred stock. It is charged that this stock and $2,000 in money were embezzled and fraudulently misapplied by the firm, and that it had been used by the firm by pledging it as collateral to secure advances which had been made to them. The suit was brought to recover $80,000. No defence was put in by either member of the firm, and as it was admitted that the value of the stock was $62,000, judgment was allowed to be taken for that sum with interest.

WANT IMMIGRATION RESTRICTED.

Plainfield's Mountaineers Think Too Many Folks Come Over Here.

The Debating Society recently formed at Washingtonville held an interesting and enjoyable meeting on Thursday in the school-house at that place. There was a good attendance of the members.

The roll was called, and those present responded with quotations from Longfellow.

Miss Margaret Miles gave a delightful reading, which was followed by an excellent recitation by Miss Jessie Coddington.

Debate on the subject, "Resolved, That free and unrestricted immigration is beneficial to the United States", proved highly interesting.

John F. Bigger and Robert Clark, Jr., were for the affirmative; while Henry Rogers and Edward Clark argued for the negative. The question was decided in the negative by a vote of those present.

The entertainment closed with an instructive paper by Robert Clark, Sr., on "The Doings of the Society".

AFTER HIS FATHER'S ESTATE.

William Calloway Turns Up After Many Years and Wants His Patrimony.

William Calloway, an old veteran of the late war, claims that he has been duped or swindled out of a part of his father's estate. He was formerly employed in this city, but is now living at Samptown near South Plainfield. His father was Jonathan Calloway, who died about five years ago, leaving an estate of about 350 acres of land in North Hampton county, Virginia, to a widow and eleven children, all the latter by a second wife. Calloway's mother died when he was quite young, and his father married again. William's friends never heard from him from 1867 up to within a few months ago, when he by chance happened to meet a nephew of his, A. J. Benton, in Washington, D. C., who related to Mr. Calloway the circumstances connected with his father's death and the disposition of the estate, barring out Calloway entirely.

In the spring of 1867, Calloway says, he was a seaman on board a vessel, and was shipwrecked near or in the Delaware Breakwater. Since then his relations, not hearing from him, supposed he went down in the wreck, and was dead.

On information from his nephew, Mr. Calloway went to Metuchen and Rahway a few days ago, met some of his relatives and offered, instead of contesting the will, to sign off for $2,000, and thus relinquish all claim on the estate.

The land in question is not very valuable, but Mr. Calloway has placed the matter in the hands of a New York lawyer to care for his interests.

AND SUCH IS FAME!

JAMES H. FORCE AT REST.

SIMPLE AND AFFECTING SERVICES IN TRIBUTE TO THE DEAD.

Brother Exempts and a Large Gathering of Other Friends Attend the Body to Its Resting-place—Clergymen Point Out the Lessons of Life, and Offer Comfort to Sorrowing Hearts.

Their hearts aching with grief, many friends and relatives gathered Wednesday afternoon to give token of respect and esteem over all that was mortal of James H. Force. Funeral services were held in the Mansion House, Bound Brook, of which Mr. Force had been proprietor, and in the cemetery in North Plainfield, where interment was made. In the hotel, where a large gathering of mourning people had assembled, the Rev. Lincoln E. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church of Bound Brook, spoke as follows:

"'Lord, let me know my end, and the number of my days, that I may know how long I am to live.' These words of the Psalmist were not spoken in a fault-finding spirit, but correctly interpreted they mean 'Make me rightly to study my life day by day, that I may know its true reality. Cause me to learn the lessons Thou wouldst have me know, that I may learn to trust in Thee.' This lesson is exemplified in the beauty of nature, as in the spring flowers, the ripened fruit, the glorious sunlight; they glorify the earth, and so our lives should be glorified by the beauty of the Lord. A power to number or mark his days by earnest endeavor and achievement was David's great desire, and should be ours. Life is a great mystery, and man with his puny mind can only go so far, but he should always be striving ahead. A British chieftain, meeting a Christian teacher, said: 'If you can tell me anything about life, I want to know it.' That should be our desire—to study and know life. To know Christ is the one essential, and He it is that unfolds life to us and gives us strength and comfort. Life is not to be spent alone in the pursuit of fame and riches. To know God is the end of life. He teaches us not to trust in home and friends for the future. For riches flee, homes are made desolate, and dear friends are here today and called away tomorrow. The prophet's words 'Comfort ye, comfort ye, my people', are here applicable. David says 'Teach us to number our days that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom', and may the Great Teacher help us to do this."

The Rev. Cornelius Schenck offered a most impressive and touching prayer, that in its plea for compassion and grace brought comfort divine to the many sorrowing hearts.

An affecting scene ensued, when the large number of people present looked fondly and lingeringly on the composed and lifeless features of the departed. He seemed but asleep, and one could fancy that in a moment the eyes would unfold and the lips would speak, so natural was the expression.

The body was brought to this city on the 3:13 train, escorted by a large procession to the cemetery, and laid to rest. At the grave the casket was opened, and opportunity was afforded for a farewell view of the remains. The Rev. Mr. Goodrich read a selection of Scripture and offered benediction.

A large delegation from the Exempt Firemen's Association attended in a body, forming a line around the hearse and walking to the cemetery. At the North avenue station, where a large crowd had gathered, the Exempts formed a double column through which the rest of the funeral party passed. Pall-bearers served from their number as follows: Wallace Vail, E. F. Thorn, Auguste Baltzman, Thaddeus Doane, Sr., Stephen Ryder and Henry Force.

The floral tributes were beautiful and appropriate. Among them were a pillow with a foundation of pure white, trimmed with lilies, violets, and roses, bearing the inscription "Husband"; a crescent of Japanese chrysanthemums and roses, with the words "Papa"; a spray of Sago palm leaves and niphetos roses, from the family; a white anchor from the Exempt Firemen's Association. The floral tribute presented by the nieces and nephews comprised a very large bouquet of exquisite Chinese chrysanthemums. Miss Annie Clayton, of Princeton, sent a handsome bouquet of white chrysanthemums and maiden-hair ferns. These and others gave token of the esteem felt for the departed.

All the colored employes of the hotel attended the funeral services in a body, came by train to Plainfield, and rode by carriage to the cemetery.

Dancing in the Barn.

A reception was given by Thos. Bochan, coachman for T. B. Penton of Rockview avenue, on Thursday. About fifty young people gathered at his barn, on invitation. Thomas threw the doors wide open, and

SECOND-STORY THIEF AGAIN.

NEGRO BURGLAR FOUND IN A PLAINFIELD RESIDENCE.

William Stout's Home Entered But Nothing Taken—The Junior William Grabbed His Coat Tails, But He Got Away.

William Douglass, coachman for William Stout of East Front street, took Mrs. Stout home Friday night from a call on Sandford avenue, and then drove to the station and took home Mr. Stout and his son Will.

At the door the son was met by his mother, who in tones of alarm said some unknown person was upstairs. Will investigated, and found a big burly negro in his father's room. He grabbed the fellow's coat-tails, but the thief escaped, sprang through a window to the piazza roof, and dropped to the ground below. He fell near coachman Douglass, who was talking with the elder Mr. Stout, but before they could recover from surprise he was running across the lawn, and got away.

He left his overcoat behind, containing letters by which Chief Grant, who has gone to New York on his trail, hopes to identify him.

The thief made entrance through a second-story window by way of the rear porch.

Pleasant Evening at Trinity.

A missionary entertainment was given in Trinity Reformed church Friday night by the Junior Christian Endeavor society. It was a complete success, as those in charge had arranged an excellent programme. E. E. Anthony opened the exercises with Scripture reading and prayer, and the following programme was rendered:

Recitation—"Katydid"..........Fred Dunavan
Recitation—"What would your sister do."
Bessie Wilson
Songs—Selected,
Robert Meeker, Jr., Fred Dunavan,
George Reynolds, Clarence Rittenhouse,
Fred Dunckley.
Solo—Miss Blair.
Dialogue—"Missionary Concert Exercise,"
David Wyckoff, Robert Meeker, Jr.,
Will Dunlap, Henry Wyman.

Another dialogue entitled "Genius of Christianity", was given by the following representing the different nations:

Genius—Ollie Wyckoff.
Indian—Laura Wyckoff.
Mohammedan—Eva Lance.
African—May Williams.
Chinese—Edith Huff.
Hebrew—Maude VanDyke.

At the conclusion of the programme an offering was received and ice-cream and cake was served to all.

The room was tastefully decorated with chrysanthemums, evergreen and Christmas holly.

The entertainment was wholly arranged by Mrs. E. A. Meeker, President of the Junior Society, assisted by Miss Emma Wyckoff. Much credit is due to them for the excellent programme given.

"Give Us This Day Our Daily Press."

There are many children credited with bright sayings, but the following will no doubt surpass any others of recent date in this vicinity.

On LaGrande avenue lives little Clyde Doane, son of J. Hervey Doane. His age is 3½ years, and he is named after the Clyde Steamship Company. One afternoon recently he was playing newsboy, much to the amusement of his mother. Evening came, and it was time for him to retire, but before doing so he said his prayers, as usual. It was the Lord's Prayer, and when he came to the place where it says "Give us this day our daily bread" he repeated in solemn tones "Give us this day our Daily Press".

It is needless to say that those present were convulsed with laughter.

Married as in the Orient.

The Japanese wedding and entertainment held in the Crescent Avenue church Friday night under the auspices of the Boys Mission Band, was a complete success.

The attendance was very large, and everyone present had a thoroughly enjoyable time.

Mitsuye Oi, of Tokio, who is a student at Rutgers College, conducted the wedding ceremony, and explained it from beginning to end. Japanese costumes and accessories were used, giving an attractive appearance to the scene.

Light refreshments were served, including genuine Japanese tea. The whole entertainment was very interesting and instructive.

Royal Blue Line Changes.

Sundays at 9:00, 11:30 a. m., 1:30, 5:00, 7:30 p. m., 12:15 midnight. For Baltimore and Washington at 9:00, 11:30 a. m., 1:30, 3:00, 5:00,

OIL BARRELS IN A BLAZE.

LOCOMOTIVE SPARKS SET FIRE TO A FREIGHT CAR.

Lively Work of Local Firemen—Both Borough and City Departments Called Out by a Blaze on Somerset Street.

The fire department was busy Friday night as three calls were sounded between 6 and 10. One of these was the borough whistle which blew at the same time that box 13 sounded for the fire that took place on the bridge, and made everyone think that 14 was sounding. The first alarm occurred at about 6:15 at which time a box car which had been used to carry barrels of oil caught fire on the siding between Washington and Richmond streets. The car was filled with empty oil barrels which burned merrily and made a very hot fire. The car was near the oil-house when it caught fire, and the residents of the neighborhood, becoming alarmed at its proximity to such an inflammable structure, pushed the burning car away from its dangerous position to a more safe locality up the track. The department answered very promptly and the fire was speedily put out. The car probably caught fire from the sparks of a passing locomotive. The upper part of the car was badly burned but the floor and frame were not much injured.

An alarm was sent in at about 9:15 from box 12 and from the borough gong at the same time for a fire in William M. Ralston's confectionery and cigar store on the bridge. Ralston says that the fire caught from a match that a customer flicked behind the counter after lighting his cigar, but others have it that the fire was caused by a lamp which blazed up so high that it attracted the attention of some one passing in the street who entered the store and threw a pail of water on the lamp breaking it and spreading the oil over everything. The conflagration was put out by the extinguishers without the use of any water. It is a wonder that the whole building did not go as the shop was filled with rubbish of a most inflammable kind. The damage to the shop will not amount to more than $25.

An Interesting Old Vet.

Thomas Alfred Willis Oliver of Rahway, who is visiting his stepdaughter, Mrs. Thomas Price, of East Front street, was born in Massachusetts in 1812, and went to Rahway soon afterward. In early life he started out as a rover, and claims to have since followed that pursuit. He enlisted in the Mexican war in 1844; after being out of service three months, in 1846 he enlisted in the Mexican war for three years and three months. On June 30, 1862, Mr. Oliver enlisted with the 28th Regt., N. J. Volunteers, from Woodbridge. Of a total of 1,011 in the regiment at Gettysburg, Mr. Oliver says, all but 390 were killed; at Chancellorsville the regiment dwindled down to 90 members. Mr. Oliver, although nearly 82 years of age, is yet hale and hearty.

Lets No Poor Man Pass Him by.

Alexander Frazee, the fish and oyster dealer, is a most charitable individual. He says this winter he will not starve, neither will he allow anyone else to if he can in any way prevent it, but instead the needy can have half of what he's got. Wednesday night a very needy person called at his place of business, and told Mr. Frazee that he had been thrown out of work, had a family, and was destitute, being without coal, wood or provisions. He asked for a few fish eggs, in order to keep starvation from the door. Mr. Frazee said "No, but instead take some of the fish on stand", whereupon the good Samaritan wrapped up a bundle of his best fish, and the man in need went off very thankful indeed.

Praise of The Press Appreciated.

[From The Elizabeth Journal.]

The Elizabeth Journal is always the first to bestow deserved tribute on living or dead.—Plainfield Press.

An acknowledgment of this kind is one of which any paper might justly feel proud, especially when it is made by a strong political opponent. Certain it is that while The Journal stands firmly for its political principles and does what it can to elect its own party representatives, when they are good and proper men, it holds that private character is sacred, and that being on an opposition ticket or belonging to an opposition party does not, in itself, discredit as a candidate a man who is a good citizen in private life. The remarks of the Plainfield Press are based on the courteous words spoken of Mr. Martine and Mr. Sauer shortly after their nominations, and of the late County Clerk Gerber on the day of his sudden death. They are greatly appreciated, and will strengthen The Journal in its established policy to deal fairly with all men.

A Councilmanic Possibility.

Ex-Borough Councilman J. F. Buckle,

The Constitutionalist.

A. L. Force, Publisher & Proprietor.

PROCLAMATION.

In accordance with established custom, I, George T. Werts, Governor of the State of New Jersey, do hereby designate and appoint Thursday, the thirtieth day of November, instant, to be observed as a day of thanksgiving and praise to Almighty God.

I recommend that on the day named the people of this State abstain, so far as possible, from their ordinary secular pursuits and devote themselves to appropriate observance of the occasion, and especially to the rendering of thanks to the Heavenly Father for His continued blessings conferred upon our State and Nation, with prayer that peace, happiness and prosperity may attend us in the future.

Witness my hand and the seal of the State of New Jersey hereunto affixed. Done at the city of Trenton this eighth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and ninety-three, and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and eighteenth.

[SEAL]

By the Governor, GEORGE T. WERTS.
JOHN B. MCMASTER, Private Secretary.

Irrepressible Jim Martine! His friends won't let him alone on his farm. Already he is being discussed as a County Clerk possibility. And why not? Surely the Governor could appoint no better man. Here's that he may get it!

Old Father Time at Babel Tower enjoyed the noisy racket;
At Bedlam's tongues he chuckled off the buttons of his jacket;
But were there fifty Fathers Time, 'tis Plainfield sure would rile 'em—
He heard the Bragonga both turned loose, and's now in the asylum.

When a man gracefully withdraws from a hopeless contest, it is perhaps unkind to comment; but one cannot help wondering if there is any connection between City Clerk Runyon's declination of prospective renomination and his newspaper remarks about Councilman Millington's conduct in a recent bar-room affair.

The cynical layman has been apt to think of the lawyer as a relentless creature without heart or depth of feeling. But the fallacy was effectually dispelled yesterday by the tears of genuine sorrow that bedewed the cheeks of Union county members of the bar, when the grief of James J. Gerber's death smote suddenly upon them. A man is a man, whatever his profession.

The worst performance ever seen in this city was "The Prodigal Husband" Saturday night. The company was devoid of talent, and the alleged play was more stupid than a primary-school dialogue. It transpires that the company has been accustomed to playing in such places as Boonton, and that the Plainfield booking was made through the deception of a theatrical agency. Managers and the public are warned against this tiresome and utterly worthless "attraction".

The Fanwood Township Committee is today in the same position as North Plainfield's Common Council was when Councilman Connolly resigned. The Press held then that the vacancy should be filled by a member of the same political party as the man resigning, and it holds the same in the Fanwood Committee case. It sincerely trusts that the differences may be adjusted tonight and a Republican elected as loyal to manhood and to the people as the retiring Committeeman, the Hon. George Kyte.

The leading candidates for the City Clerkship are Harry C. Runyon, Joseph B. Coward and Winfield S. Angleman. Mr. Coward's candidacy causes young Republicans to clamor for a show and to protest against perpetuity in office. Mr. Angleman is distrusted as the personal candidate of the present incumbent, whose own withdrawal from the race reminds one of the sour-grapes fable. Mr. Coward certainly has ability and experience in the office; and that that is a good thing, the experience of the past two years attests. But aren't they all counting chickens ahead of time?

In spite of his triumphant election, and the early clamor that he was the logical Republican candidate for President in the next campaign, the Republican organs are already beginning to show distrust of Governor McKinley's chances for election in the next national contest. For instance, the Newark Advertiser remarks:

> A New York evening paper states that at the meeting of the Executive Committee of the National Republican Committee in New York this week "the first move towards nominating Governor McKinley, of Ohio, for President in 1896 will be made". It is probable that this is merely a piece of gossip, for it is not likely that the Republican managers will do anything quite so foolish as to inaugurate a boom for McKinley.

By no one was the crushing blow of James J. Gerber's death felt more keenly than by James E. Martine. Only a few nights ago Mr. Martine was a friendly guest of the Gerber household, where sunshine seemed perpetual; yet last evening on his sad visit of condolence as a devoted friend he found that cheer and brightness transformed into the deepest gloom. When death, which is so familiar an experience, fills with sincere tears to overflowing the eyes of strong men who are accustomed to life's vicissitudes, it means something: and in the case of James J. Gerber it means that he had a permanent place in the affections of the people, and that his death is a widespread personal grief.

A WORTHY TRIBUTE.

Editor McBride of the Elizabeth Journal is always among the first to bestow deserved tribute on living or dead, and it is gratifying to find in his stanch Republican columns the following encomium on that sterling Democrat, James J. Gerber:

> Mr. Gerber was born in this city and was 42 years of age. In 1869 he was in the office of the Elizabeth and Newark Horse Railroad Company. He then entered upon the study of law in the office of the late Gen. J. Augustus Fay, Jr. After his admission to the bar, he formed a law partnership with Zerness Norman and continued associated with him, the firm being known as Gerber & Norman, excepting for about two years when Mr. Louis A. Graff was a member of the firm.
>
> Mr. Gerber was a Democrat, and early took active interest in political affairs. In 1882 he was elected Surrogate, and held the position for two terms. In the fall of 1892, he was elected County Clerk, as successor to John L. Crowell.
>
> He was a prominent member of the Young Men's Catholic Literary Association, the Young Men's Democratic Association and the Elizabeth Athletic Club.
>
> He married Miss Busby, and is survived by his wife and one child.
>
> Not only in official and political, but in private, circles was the news of Mr. Gerber's death received with dismay and sorrow. A man of giant stature and commanding presence, his dignity of bearing was marked. Added to this, however, his courteous address and cordial manners made him in themselves a pleasing personality. Among his personal friends—and they were legion—his popularity was unbounded. As one of the earliest members of the Elizabeth Athletic Club, whose prosperity was very dear to his heart, and in whose athletic sports some years ago he was quite prominent, he was a universal favorite, as he was also later in his connection with the Young Men's Democratic Society of Union county and the Young Men's Catholic Literary Association. His loyalty to his friends, and his generosity to all who came to him for help, built up for him a wide personal clientage. His Democratic friends never deserted him or ceased to work for his success, and his Republican friends were proud to boast of their votes for him, and labored zealously for him in all campaigns. To these friends of both parties he never hesitated to give full credit for a great part of his political success.
>
> His success in life was gained by sure personal qualities, by fair and square dealing with friends and foes, and by the industry and perseverance that were born in him. He will be remembered as a shining example of the possibilities our American life offers to all who have them to them.

The Councilmen who not long ago consumed with evident relish the gaudy pictures displayed by the salacious Truth publication, copies of which they passed from desk to desk, will tonight be asked to set up a standard of pictorial morality for Plainfield. This would seem a case where public condemnation cloaks private approbation.

The Plainfield Daily Press is quoted so much through the State that it is accustomed to exchanges getting mixed in giving credit; but when The Monmouth Democrat transfers to the account of the Plainfield Press's Paterson namesake the remarks these columns made in honor of Senator James A. Bradley, then the Editor feels like saying Now you stop!

The prize telegraphic blunderer lives in New Brunswick. New York ticked off a message for the New Brunswick Times, that "F. B. Thurber, millionaire grocer, assigned noon today", and the Raritan river city operator took it down "assassinated". The editor of The Times, who two days ago looked like an own brother of the Seven Sutherland Sisters, has scalped himself baldheaded, as the boys say, and is now after the scalp of the wretched telegraph man. For the startling "assassination" story ran through his whole edition, and the editor's only forlorn comfort is that it was "a 'beat', anyway".

Hugh Boyd of the New Brunswick Home News is the last man in the world to give taffy to anyone in politics, and the Hon. John Ulrich is therefore assured that the compliment so freely bestowed by Mr. Boyd editorially on the Plainfield Republican statesman is volunteered as a recognition of merit pure and simple. Mr. Boyd says:

> The Hon. John Ulrich of Plainfield is a candidate for the office of State Comptroller, an appointment which will be in the gift of the incoming Legislature. Mr. Ulrich is indorsed for this important position by the Republican Executive Committee of Plainfield. He is universally recognized as a leader in the Republican party, made a most efficient member of the Assembly, and is a gentleman every way qualified for the office. If a young man is to get this lucrative position it could hardly fall into more worthy hands than Mr. Ulrich's.

THE NEW JERSEY VERDICT AT THE POLLS.

The official returns of the election in New Jersey have been received from all the counties in the State. They show victory for the enemies of ring rule, as emphasized in the dominance of the race-track gamblers, more widespread than was at first evident. From Cape May county to Sussex, wherever the gamblers were seemingly intrenched, the moral element overturned organized politics and elected men of fair reputation to serve in the Assembly. There were exceptions, but in the general victory they count for nothing, so far as a power to do evil is concerned. The plurality of the Republican party over the Democratic was 22,683; that of Cleveland over Harrison in 1892 was 14,674, and in these figures the extent of the overthrow of bad men's politics can easiest be seen.

The total vote by counties is as follows:

	Rep.	Dem.
Atlantic	1,973	2,859
Bergen	3,985	3,329
Burlington	6,880	5,146
Camden	11,330	6,266
Cape May	1,258	466
Cumberland	4,461	3,236
Essex	29,776	25,405
Gloucester	2,986	2,949
Hudson	25,089	28,390
Hunterdon	2,715	3,380
Mercer	9,365	4,700
Middlesex	6,067	5,645
Monmouth	8,899	7,405
Morris	5,449	4,397
Ocean	2,231	1,369
Passaic	10,861	8,969
Salem	2,685	2,675
Somerset	3,070	2,737
Sussex	2,686	2,666
Union	7,829	6,149
Warren	1,987	3,677
Totals	162,355	139,672

It will be seen that the Democrats carried only four of the twenty-one counties, and these, Atlantic, Hunterdon, Salem, and Warren, among the smallest in point of population in the State.

Since the Supreme Court gerrymander decision a plan to bring the case to the attention of the Court of Errors and Appeal without a formal appeal has been formed by Republican and Democratic leaders. It is to have the next Legislature appoint or elect a successor to the State Comptroller, Gen. Heppenheimer, who will refuse to turn over his office to the new comptroller. The latter will then bring quo warranto proceedings in the Supreme Court and when it is there decided against Heppenheimer the latter will take the case to the Court of Errors and Appeal, where a final decision on the gerrymander will be given, as of course the question will be the pivotal point in the quo-warranto proceedings.

COLLISION ON THE TRACK.

Milkman Randolph's Expensive Experience with an Electric Car.

An accident on the street railway occurred last Monday at 6:45, at the corner of Front street and Central avenue.

L. C. Randolph's Woodlawn Dairy wagon, in charge of Herbert Randolph, was delivering milk on Front street. The last place stopped at was the residence of Jeremiah F. Garretson. Leaving there, he drove towards Central avenue; on reaching this street he attempted to turn, intending to go down the avenue.

Not very far behind was electric car No. 3, in charge of motorman Martin. The latter had no idea that Randolph was going to turn, but just the same rang his bell several times to warn him of his approach. The doors in the wagon being closed, it is supposed he did not hear the bell, and a collision resulted. The wagon was upset, breaking the glass in the doors, also wrecking the rear wheels and bending the axle. Randolph escaped through one of the windows, and cut his left wrist considerably. About 100 quarts of milk was spilled.

The wagon was a brand-new one, and the damage is keenly felt by the owner. The horse was not injured.

A man named Jackson was on the car, and he says that the milkman was to blame, while Randolph claims that the motorman was in the wrong.

Harry Martin is an experienced man, and this is the first accident he ever had. He says he reversed his motor as quickly as possible.

Opening Up Property in the Suburbs.

There has just been completed a street 50 feet wide, including sidewalks, a continuation of Union street, from Arlington avenue to the Stelle property, through the property of Mr. VanHorn, of Jersey City. The work was let by contract to John Brennan, of Arlington avenue, who put it through within the stipulated time. Mr. VanHorn was well pleased with Brennan's work, as he spared no expense in having it properly graded and lined according to the modern methods of construction.

Excavations and grading was commenced opening from Arlington avenue and continued in a westerly line until making junction with Mr. Stelle's property. Mr. Stelle says he will himself soon open up his property by having a road graded to unite with Mr. VanHorn's.

WANTS AN EXCISE BOARD.

DR. LEWIS GETS THE THIRD WARD TO ENDORSE THE PLAN.

Republican Nominees Elias Bird, George H. Frost, H. M. Stockton and Norman Magee for Ward Councilmen.

The Republican primaries were held in this city Tuesday evening, as follows:

FIRST WARD.

Chairman—J. B. Coward.
Clerk—E. E. Anthony.
Inspectors—George W. Moore, Wm. Addis.
Delegates to City Convention—J. T. MacMurray, E. E. Anthony, Wm. Addis, C. C. Lesser, Louis Hagie, Jesse Snell, Wm. Douglas, John Rowland, S. Williams, George Halloway, Wm. G. B. Gee, M. Yerkes.
For Councilman—Elias B. Bird.
Members City Executive Committee—J. B. Coward, J. F. MacDonald, J. MacMurray.

SECOND WARD.

Chairman—George H. Goddard.
Secretary—George D. Patton.
Judge—John Ulrich.
Inspector—Andrew Vanderbeek.
Clerk—George D. Patton.
Delegates to City Convention—John B. Dumont, H. B. Newhall, Arthur Baynon, C. B. Corwin, E. K. Case, J. W. Jackson, S. A. Ginna, Geo. H. Goddard, Capt. Morrison, F. O. Herring, John B. Drayton, Jos. W. Gavett, J. T. Vail, A. V. Nolan.
For Councilman—George H. Frost.
Members City Executive Committee—A. Vanderbeek, C. A. Baynon, W. T. Broadway.

THIRD WARD.

The Third ward primary was perhaps the most interesting of any in the city. Mayor Gilbert called the primary to order in the Casino, and D. E. Titsworth was made Chairman and E. F. Murray the Secretary. The chair appointed judges and inspectors, but their services were not needed, as almost everything went by acclamation. F. E. Marsh nominated H. M. Stockton for Councilman, whereupon the Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis rose up and expressed his views emphatically on the temperance subject; he claimed that the man nominated should come out openly with his sentiments and cry the evil down. Dr. Lewis in his speech favored taking the licensing of saloons from the City Council and placing it in the hands of Excise Commissioners, and offered a resolution recommending the change, which prevailed. The nominations made were as follows:

For Councilman—H. M. Stockton.
For Constable—Amos Moffett.
For Justice of the Peace—J. Oakley Nodyne.
Delegates to the City Convention—C. J. Fisk, T. O. Doane, E. F. Murray, O. T. Waring, W. T. Kaufman, D. McNema, E. R. Ackerman, D. E. Titsworth, W. T. Kirk, Frank Bushnell, S. F. Kimball.
Members of the City Executive Committee—W. T. Kirk, F. E. Marsh and E. F. Murray.

FOURTH WARD.

Councilman H. A. Weber called the meeting to order, and the following officers were elected:

Chairman—Norman C. Magee.
Secretary—J. B. Martin.
Judge—Harold Serrell.
Inspectors—W. S. Angleman, Henry P. Pugh.

The following were elected delegates to the City Convention:

Wm. Westphal, Wm. Newcorn, Arthur Venable, Charles Fisher, Wm. Lee, Charles Foster, J. B. Martin, B. A. Leland, Thomas Fox, E. B. York, Wm. Kelvie, Wm. Connets, James Anderson, John Thompson, Charles McIntosh, Charles Burns, J. T. Coode, E. V. H. Conover.
Members of City Executive Committee—H. A. Weber, E. B. York, Abe Angleman.
For Councilman—N. C. Magee.
For Justice of the Peace—Wm. Newcorn.
For Constable—Frank Vanderhoof.

THOSE DANDY PARKS.

They Score Another Victory Against the Cranfords.

Despite the heavy rain on Tuesday, the Cranford Casino bowlers kept their engagement with the Parks, to bowl on the Park alleys. The game was close and exciting throughout, but terminated in the usual way, as the following scores show:

CRANFORD.		PARK.
Wilber	151	Thiess	160
Voorhes	146	W. L. Brown	130
Lent	137	Lenox	173
Bourne	139	Brooks	140
Sharp	147	Hageman	146
Heisker	136	Rushmore	155
Dunman	150	Fisher	153
Damon	130	Randolph	157
Page	144	Thomas	159
Madden	157	Matthews	169
	1437		1476

The Parks won by 39 pins.

An Interesting Family.

Reuben Beerbower, of Spring City, Chester county, Pa., is visiting his son, John E. Beerbower, proprietor of the Plainfield City Hotel. The elder Mr. Beerbower is now over three score and ten years, the allotted time for man. He has just returned from a five-months trip to Colorado and Nebraska, and reports things, especially finances, very dull. After a short visit here he will go to his old home and spend part of the winter there, after which he will return to this city.

Mr. Beerbower was born in Chester county, Pa., in 1819, and lived there until a year ago. Since then he has been living among his children, of whom six are living and three are dead. Mr. Beerbower was married in 1842 to Miss Mary S. Hartman. Those living are Gertrude, who married H. S. Hallman, now living at Spring City; Levi B., who now runs his well-established pottery at Elizabeth; F. W. Beerbower, a prosperous real estate dealer in Columbus, Nebraska; Clara, married to A. E. Yeager, a prominent merchant in Chester county, Pa.; John E. Beerbower, proprietor of the City Hotel in this city; and William A. Beerbower, Chief Engineer of the Rio Grande Southern Railway, stationed at Ridgeway, Colorado.

Wilmington Approves It.

The Wilmington (Del.) Republican of this week Monday says:

> The sensational comedy-drama "The Oath" was given its first Wilmington production to a large and appreciative audience, at the New People's Theatre last evening. It tells a thrilling story of mysterious murder and robbery, and an excellent cast is employed in its presentation.
>
> New and beautiful scenery is shown, and a number of pleasing specialties are introduced, which kept the audience in continual good humor.
>
> "The Oath" will be given again this and tomorrow evenings and at the Wednesday matinee.

"The Oath" will be given in Music Hall tomorrow night.

No Pity on the Sufferer.

Hiram Hornish, who rents two or three rooms over the United States Express Company's office, has been quite ill for the past few days. There are a number of families living in the same building. The other night a dance was held, and the noise and disturbance were so great that Mr. Hornish, who was reclining in his room, was much annoyed. He requested them to stop, but they did not, and seemed more determined than ever to make the night hideous. They recommended that he go to a hotel and live in rooms.

Fourth Street to Be Repaired.

Street Commissioner Mosher, in answer to criticisms on the bad condition of Fourth street since it was widened, says that the trouble is that property-owners have delayed setting their curb lines. As soon as the curbs are straightened, the macadamization will be begun. The entire work is to be accomplished before December 1.

I have not used all of one bottle yet. I suffered from catarrh for 12 years, experiencing the nauseating dropping in the throat peculiar to that disease, and nose bleed almost daily. I tried various remedies without benefit until last April, when I saw Ely's Cream Balm advertised in the Boston Budget. I procured a bottle, and since the first day's use have had no more bleeding—the soreness is entirely gone. D. G. Davidson, with the Boston Budget, formerly with Boston Journal.

UNITARIANS CLOSE THEIR DOORS.

MOHAMMEDAN WEBB REFUSED PERMISSION TO SPEAK.

This Man from the Far East Excluded from the Most Liberal Sanctuary of Plainfield.

To THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Unitarians, the would-be Liberalists of our town, refuse their hospitality to Mohammedan Webb on the occasion of his coming visit to Plainfield.

Mr. Webb has been welcomed in many of our communities among intelligent people, and his elucidation of eastern thought and religion affords a rare opportunity to those who desire to widen their horizon and who wish in all matters to "judge, not prejudge". We must congratulate ourselves, therefore, on such an occasion being presented in our midst, and the Unitarians, whom one would have supposed were complimented by being asked to open their doors to this worshiper of one God, having seen fit on this occasion to raise a barrier about their sacred precincts, while claiming to be ardent champions of free thought and free speech, it remains for the other church societies of Plainfield to vie in true liberality and hospitality.

Mr. Webb offers his address free of charge, and the doors of some church parlor should swing wide and let in this ray from the far east.

A lesser light can but enhance the luminous, all-penetrating qualities of a greater orb; thus in culture and in religion the comparative method of allowing all factors their free and untrammelled effects is the surest means of establishing truth and excellence.

Welcome Mr. Webb! LIBERALIST.

Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union.

OFFICIAL.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Nov. 2, 1893.

Regular meeting of the Board of Chosen Freeholders held on Thursday, Nov. 2, 1893.

Present—Director Sauer and Freeholders Badgeley, Donahue, Ehrlich, Hubbard, Howard, Halliday, Kyte, Moore, Swain, Scudder, Trabon, Vanderbeek and Woodruff.

Absent—Freeholders Hunt, Roll and Winans.

The minutes of the last meeting, except bills ordered paid, were read and on motion approved.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Consolidated Traction Company:

JERSEY CITY, Nov. 2, 1893.

Application having been made by the Consolidated Traction Company, a corporation organized under chapter one hundred and seventy-two of the laws of the year eighteen hundred and ninety-three to Board of Chosen Freeholders of the county of Union, for a location of tracks of a street railroad on Newark avenue, in the city of Elizabeth, between North Broad street and the division line between the counties of Union and Essex; said avenue being a county road; and the said Board having consented to the construction of a street railway on said avenue, between said street and county line, and having granted the location of tracks on said avenue by a resolution passed at a meeting held on the thirteenth day of October, eighteen hundred and ninety-three.

Now this is to certify that said Consolidated Traction Company hereby accepts said consent, location and resolution, and agrees to the same.

In witness whereof the said Consolidated Traction Company has caused its corporate seal to be hereto affixed, these presents to be signed by its president and attested by its secretary the day and year first above written.

CONSOLIDATED TRACTION COMPANY,
By E. F. Young, President.
Attest: T. J. George, Secretary.

On motion of Freeholder Hubbard received and filed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

From committee on issue of bonds:

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union county:

Gentlemen—Your committee, appointed upon the issue of the $50,000 of county road bonds, authorized by the last Legislature, for the construction of county roads, beg leave to submit the following report:

The committee met and appointed a sub-committee to attend to printing the bonds, consisting of the chairman, the director and county collector, which duty was promptly attended to, and the bonds are now in the hands of the county collector, and placed upon the market, and we are pleased to state that five have been disposed of at par, amounting to $5,000.

Respectfully submitted,
W. H. Trabon, J. F. Hubbard, George Kyte, Chas. A. Moore, John J. Donahue.

On motion of Freeholder Howard received and filed.

TOBACCO HABIT EASILY CURED.

A FEW Testimonials from persons who have been cured by the use of Hill's Tablets.

THE OHIO CHEMICAL CO.:

DEAR SIR:—I have been using your cure for tobacco habit, and found it would do what you claim for it. I used ten cents worth of the strongest chewing tobacco a day, and from one to five cigars; or I would smoke from ten to forty pipes of tobacco. Have chewed and smoked for twenty-five years, and two packages of your Tablets cured me so I have no desire for it.

E. M. JAYLORD, Leslie, Mich.

DOBBS FERRY, N. Y.

THE OHIO CHEMICAL CO.:—GENTLEMEN:—Some time ago I sent for $1.00 worth of your Tablets for Tobacco Habit. I received them all right and, although I was both a heavy smoker and chewer, they did the work in less than three days. I am cured.

Truly yours, MATHEW JOHNSON, P. O. Box 45.

PITTSBURGH, PA.

THE OHIO CHEMICAL CO.:—GENTLEMEN:—It gives me pleasure to speak a word of praise for your Tablets. My son was strongly addicted to the use of liquor, and through a friend, I was led to try your Tablets. He was a heavy and constant drinker, but after using your Tablets but three days he quit drinking, and will not touch liquor of any kind. I have waited four months before writing you, in order to know the cure was permanent. Yours truly,

MRS. HELEN MORRISON.

CINCINNATI, OHIO.

THE OHIO CHEMICAL CO.:—GENTLEMEN:—Your Tablets have performed a miracle in my case. I have used morphine, hypodermically, for seven years, and have been cured by the use of two packages of your Tablets, and without any effort on my part.

If you have not engaged your work, I should be pleased to do it for you.

I buy only first-class Marble and Granite and do not sell unless at prices that will enable me to put up the work with credit to myself and justice to the parties purchasing.

I employ no agents and therefore am enabled to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customer, of the commission generally paid to agents.

I am under a very small expense in running my shop, myself and my son doing the larger portion of the work, and we personally attend to the setting of all work, and look upon business in this light, that Good Work and Good Material, at Fair Prices, is a standing advertisement for my business, which will tend to build up trade, and I feel safe to warrant that no dealer can sell you the same work and same stock any cheaper than I can.

Hoping to be favored with your patronage, I am yours respectfully,

CITY DEPARTMENT.

Walter Irvine Clarke, City Editor.

—A Scotch sociable will be held in the First Presbyterian church Thursday evening.

—Wm. J. Conroy is laying a new stone walk and curb in front of his Linden avenue property.

—The Christian Endeavor society of the First Baptist church will hold their first sociable Thursday evening.

—Charles J. Wilson, of the Bound Brook Democrat, is negotiating for a cylinder press at the Scott Press Works.

—Friday evening of this week is the date set for the "green tea" to be given in Trinity Reformed church by the men of the church.

—Ex-Mayor J. H. Cooley is adding to the borough improvements by laying a stone walk on the Manning avenue side of his Westervelt avenue property.

—A Thanksgiving sale and entertainment will be given in Hope chapel, Wednesday, Nov. 29, from 3 to 6 p. m., by the Helping-Hand Circle of King's Daughters.

—Mrs. J. H. TenEyck, a most estimable wife and mother, of Broad street, Westfield, has become mentally deranged by illness, and was taken to the asylum.

—The last new car for the street railway will probably not arrive here before next spring. An effort will be made to borrow a car from the Newark Passenger Company.

—Watchung Lodge, No. 167, met Saturday evening in Red Men's Hall, and decided to hold an open meeting the evening of November 29, when entertainment will be provided.

—A pleasant social event will be the reception and bazar given by Wetumpka Lodge, No. 3,401, K. of H., in Lodge room Music Hall building, the evenings of Dec. 11 to 14 inclusive.

—The Rev. Frank Fletcher, of New Market, will lecture on "Sherman's March to the Sea", in the First Church of Christ, Tuesday evening, December 12. Admission will be 25 cents.

—The stone house being erected by Smalley Bros. on Mountain avenue is soon to be completed. When finished it will be an ornament to the borough as well as a credit to the contractors.

—Several members of the Camera Club were testing slides in their rooms last Saturday evening. They propose to place the finest in the interchange series, and the selections they made were beauties.

—Street Commissioner Gavin of North Plainfield reports that he is beginning improvements on Howard street. Later on, and as soon as possible, he will scrape the gutters and put other streets in repair.

—It is likely that a third marshal will soon be put on duty in the borough. Private subscriptions are being taken by residents of Washington Park for this purpose, and it is probable that James Line, who was rejected recently, will be the man.

—The high-grade boarding and livery stables of A. N. Dunster & Son, North avenue, opposite station, continues to hold the liberal patronage it deserves. Whenever you want a turnout that will suit you in every way, ring up 172 on the telephone.

—Daniel F. Dugan is building three houses on the northeasterly side of La Grande avenue near Richmond street. They will cost $1,500 each. They will be ready for occupancy March 1. Herman Hanson has the carpenter work and Jacob M. Higgins the mason work.

—Contractor M. Udhal has begun the work of opening Fairview avenue to Broadway. This will open up two fine thoroughfares, 60 feet wide, from Grandview avenue east to Jackson avenue. One street will go through the property recently bought by A. D. Thompson.

—The theft of a watch during the Hotel Albion fire was committed by a new employe of the hotel, who has left town since his release from arrest on his own recognizance. The young man had been in this country only a few months. It transpires that his letter of recommendation was a forgery.

—Chief Marshal Pangborn has a very handsome gold badge with the words "Chief Marshal" thereon. Modesty has prevented him from wearing it. Now that the force has been increased, it would be a good idea for him to don the gold. A fine new police coat has been ordered from Colyer's, Newark, and will soon be worn by the chief.

Rejoice Over Shepard's Election.

Speaking of the election of A. D. Shepard to the Township Committee, a leading citizen says:

"Fanwood will receive a great benefit from the advice and counsels of this highly esteemed gentleman. He is a man worthy to fill any office in the gift of the people; though a Republican, he is admired and looked up to by Democrats as well as Republicans.

His election ended the deadlock, and begins an era of independent, high-minded government for Fanwood. All good citizens look up to Chairman Miller as a model general, and will wish him well in the new position he will soon occupy in the Board of Chosen Freeholders."

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Goff will be pleased to know that a healthy eight-pound boy now brightens their home. His age dates from Saturday evening. Mr. and Mrs. Goff are now living in Montclair.

Mrs. Warnick, wife of the Rev. Mr. Warnick of the Mt. Olive church, read an excellent paper before the Sunday-school, thanking all for their kindness during their stay in Plainfield. The Rev. Dr. Clark followed with an able address.

Samuel Wallace, of Grove street, North Plainfield, returned to his home last week, after an extended trip through New Jersey and Pennsylvania. He visited the place of his birth, Sandy Ridge, this state, for the first time in twelve years.

L. S. Bond, Superintendent of the Boys Club, returned from New Haven, Saturday evening. The body of his little girl, who died recently, was buried there. Mrs. Bond and her children will remain in New Haven with her mother, for a time. The boy who was so ill is recovering.

Host Demler Serenaded.

The Friendship Cornet Band of New Market paid a visit to mine host George Demler Saturday evening.

The band played "The Thunderers", on the plaza of the hotel. The music, carried over mountain-tops by the wind, produced an echo. As the sound was thrown from one mountain to the other, it seemed as if the celestial orchestras had caught up the strains and wafted the melody over Nature's grand amphitheatre.

The guests then adjourned to the ball room, where, under the management of Mr. Johnson, dancing was enjoyed by those who desired.

The well-known cuisine of the hotel was then in requisition, and a fine collation was served in the dining-room, to which the guests did ample justice. After supper the band played several selections. "Down Where the Lilies Bloom" was the most popular and received an encore.

After this, as it was late, Leader Blackford played "Home Sweet Home". Guests were there from Brooklyn, Millington, Plainfield and New Market, and thoroughly enjoyed the evening's music.

THE PRIDE OF ROSELLE.

A Versatile Pen Pays Tribute to Van Court Inn.

VAN COURT INN, ROSELLE, Nov. 22.

Roselle, situated on the line of the Central Railroad of New Jersey within forty minutes from New York, with unsurpassed railroad facilities, about 85 trains daily, each way, renders it one of the most delightful as well as desirable locations in the country for business men and their families, as well as others, seeking a desirable home throughout the year. In order to meet the wants of parties designated a fine hotel has been erected containing all modern conveniences, electric light and bells, baths, fine suites of apartments, excellently equipped in every department, and under the able management of Clarence H. Hale, proprietor, well-known at the Gilsey House, New York, and other prominent hotels. From personal observation your correspondent, and I only voice the sentiment of the guests in the statement herein, that Mr. Hale, the courteous and genial manager of the hotel, known as VanCourt Inn, is untiring in his efforts, assisted by his excellent wife, in rendering the guests thoroughly comfortable and happy. The table is all that could be desired, and excellent attendance. Your correspondent has for many years written up his impressions of picturesque Jersey for publication in the New York papers as well as The Press, and others, concerning the lovely hamlets and charming surroundings along the line of the Central Railroad including Plainfield, and his sole object has been to bring to the notice of the public a section of this State abounding in lovely scenery, excellent driveways, historic interest and all that goes to make life worth living. If he has succeeded in making a few converts he is more than repaid. The excellent service of the Central, with its finely equipped coaches and courteous officials, is worthy of all commendation. Mr. Meredith, in charge of the Roselle station, is unceasing in his efforts to keep his station up to the high standard of excellence for which the railroad company is noted, and that he succeeds goes without saying. A number of guests are now sojourning at the Van Court Inn for the winter season, and the prospects are exceedingly good. A series of weekly entertainments will be given throughout the winter months which will largely add to the pleasure of the guests, so that it is quite safe to predict a delightful and pleasurable season, in the bright and crispy days coming, at fair Roselle domiciled at the VanCourt Inn, only 150 yards from the station.

IN FAVOR OF LINDEN PARK.

The Higher Court Reverses the Decision in Union County.

TRENTON, Nov. 20—The Court of Errors and Appeals met this morning and rendered a verbal decision by Chief-Justice Beasley in the case of the Linden Park Blood-Horse Association. It was convicted in the Union County Courts of keeping a disorderly house in permitting betting on the track. The opinion of the Chief-Justice sets aside the conviction on the ground that gaming is not specifically set out in the indictment. The entire Court concurred in the decision.

ELIZABETH, Nov. 20—The action of the Court of Appeals in reversing the verdict rendered in the Union County Court has occasioned little surprise or comment among the lawyers. The case was tried at the October term in 1890, on an indictment found by the Grand Jury, acting under instructions from Judge VanSyckel, who is bitterly opposed to the race-tracks. When the evidence was all submitted to the petit jury it had no alternative but to convict. Judge VanSyckel, in his charge, distinctly informed the jury that it must bring in a verdict according to the law against the Linden Park Blood-Horse Association, and they obeyed. Then the counsel for the club, James R. English, served notice that he would appeal.

THOSE SLOW PHILADELPHIANS.

Plainfield Subscription Got a Spray of Quaker City Wit.

The other evening at a fashionable boarding house, not a thousand miles from Fanwood, a bright, sharp, typical New Yorker met a lady lately from Philadelphia. In conversation he immediately commenced in the customary way to ridicule the Quaker City, and compared it to New York much to Philadelphia's disadvantage. He did not confine his remarks to generalities, but, warming to his subject, finally became personal to an extreme. The lady from Philadelphia, while somewhat surprised at the attack from a new acquaintance, maintained her composure of temper to the end, and then ex-

Friends in Plainfield Memorialize Legislature on Two Subjects.

The Half-Yearly meeting of the Society of Friends, held Nov. 16 in the old meeting-house on Watchung avenue, memorialized the Legislature as follows:

To the Senate and Assembly of the State of New Jersey.—The Temperance Committee of the Shrewsbury and Plainfield Half-Yearly meeting of the Religious Society of Friends records its deep conviction against the great evil of the liquor license system, and hereby asks for the repeal of all liquor license laws and for the legal prohibition of the manufacture and sale of all intoxicating liquors for drinking purposes.

The following additional petition was also adopted:

To the Senate and Assembly of the State of New Jersey.—The Shrewsbury and Plainfield Half-Yearly Meeting Temperance Committee respectfully and earnestly ask that you will provide by appropriate legislation, for the introduction in the public schools of this State of scientific instruction concerning the effects of alcohol and narcotics upon the human system.

THREE CHORAL CONCERTS.

"Holy City", "Phoenix" and Part Songs to Be Rendered This Season.

Rehearsals of the Choral Society are held every Monday evening. The society has a larger and better chorus than ever before, and is doing the finest work in its history. The first concert will be given Dec. 21, when "The Holy City", by Alfred R. Gaul, will be sung as well as a new work by G. W. Chadwick, entitled "Phoenix Expirans".

The second concert will be given March 8, and part songs will be selected.

At the third concert, May 10, some new composition will be produced, probably "The Song of the Viking" by Whiting.

The selection of seats will be made in December. There is still an opportunity for any wishing to become subscribing members. George T. Rogers, treasurer, of 99 Rockview avenue, will receive applications.

IT'S A REPUBLICAN.

A. D. Shepard Elected to Fill the Vacancy Caused By George Kyte's Resignation.

After all the controversy last night to fill the vacancy in the Township Committee of Fanwood, vice George Kyte resigned, Chairman Miller proposed the names of several Republicans.

Mr. Terry objected to each and every name, and then Mr. Miller nominated Democrats. Mr. Terry came back with Republican names. After five ballots were taken Mr. Miller nominated A. D. Shepard, and Mr. Terry promptly endorsed it. Mr. Miller then moved that a committee of two to apprise Mr. Shepard of his election.

Mr. Terry demurred, and Mr. Miller as a committee of one, accompanied by A. D. Beeckman and John Scoveste, (two Democrats and a Mugwump), went in search of Mr. Shepard. The committee adjourned for a report from the Advisory Committee which returned at 10 and, as announced by Mr. Miller, Mr. Shepard accepted. The meeting immediately adjourned.

TUMBLE AFTER A RACE.

Runkle Could Beat Young Fisk, But a Butcher Wagon Got in the Way.

Charles Fisk, Jr., and Daniel Runkle, were out horseback riding on Monday afternoon. They had turned from Watchung avenue into Seventh street, and were going home. A spirt of friendly rivalry prompted them to race along Seventh street.

When Park avenue was reached, young Runkle was ahead, and still going at a lively gait. Just then one of Smalley's butcher wagons came along Park avenue. A collision was inevitable, and the horse plunged into the wagon, throwing its rider on the hard pavement, inflicting several cuts on his head. The other boy was far enough behind to change his course and not come in collision with the others. The man driving the wagon was thrown out, but not severely hurt. Young Runkle was taken home in a carriage, and it was found that his injuries were not serious.

Deadlock Over Kyte's Vacancy.

The new Sheriff, George Kyte, Republican, of Fanwood, resigned as a member of the Freeholders. The Democrats refused to fill the vacancy with a Republican, thereby causing a deadlock in the board.

The candidates are Dr. Francis Westcott, Republican, and George C. Miller, Democrat, both of Fanwood. The township is largely Republican, and there is considerable feeling owing to the action of the Democrats. Indeed, Director [illegible] as a rebuke to the partisans of his own party, appointed three Republicans on committees where there were vacancies, thereby sending a howl among his fellow-Democrats.

Superintendent Pepper, of the Prudential Insurance Company has satisfied himself by experiment that advertising pays. He is a man of energy and advanced ideas and by extremely judicious management has built up his business in Plainfield to such extent that the accommodations that were quite sufficient for the valuable papers a short time ago have become inadequate. He has treated himself to a new and commodious safe and will shortly make other additions in the line of accommodation for SMALL-POX CLOSES COURT.

ADMIRABLE PRECAUTIONARY MOVEMENT IN ELIZABETH.

All Cases Adjourned to December 12, for the Benefit of Public Health —Prosecutor and Judges Agree on This Excellent Measure.

(Special to The Press.)

ELIZABETH, Nov. 22.—Because of the prevalence of small-pox in Elizabeth and the daily packed condition of the court room, the Prosecutor and Court consulted together today and decided that as a measure for public health it would be best to adjourn all cases till cold weather. All witnesses and others were therefore dismissed till December 12, except in one case which is now being completed. The court room was cleared of all others.

NO FREIGHT MOVED YET.

BUT PASSENGER TRAINS MORE REGULAR ON THE LEHIGH ROAD.

(Special to The Press.)

JERSEY CITY, Nov. 22—All passenger trains on the Lehigh Valley went out on time today. All trains due, except the Buffalo express due at 7:34, arrived from fifteen minutes to two hours late.

Some trains were abandoned, and it was about all that the officers of the company could do to keep any trains moving at all. Not a particle of freight was moved.

The engineer who brought in the 8:20, which got in at 9:30, reported that the Lehigh had secured the services of fifty engineers from the Philadelphia and Reading Road.

The engineers on that road are not Brotherhood men. There are only two engineers on the P. & R. who are Brotherhood men.

Considerable feeling has begun to manifest itself among the employes of the Central Railroad against the engineers running the Lehigh Valley engines.

When the engineer who brought in the 6:20 train on the Lehigh passed the roundhouse this morning he was hooted at and jeered by the men who happened to be about the roundhouse.

The sympathies of the employes of the Jersey Central Railroad are undoubtedly with the strikers. They take every opportunity to express the hope that the men who have "tied up" the road will win the fight.

Fifty switchmen, employed in the yard of the Lehigh Valley in Jersey City, went on strike this morning, completely paralyzing local traffic.

TROUBLE EXPECTED AT AUBURN.

The Police Force Ordered Out to Aid in Moving a Freight Train.

AUBURN, N. Y., Nov. 22.—The united forces of the police department and Sheriff's office are ordered to report at the City Hall at 1 o'clock to-day, and will proceed to the Lehigh yards and guard the making up and going out of a freight train. Trouble is expected.

ON A HORSE THIEF'S TRAIL.

Trenton People Searching in Plainfield for Stolen Property.

Mr. [illegible] of Ewingville and Detective [illegible] of Trenton called at Chief Grant's office, Saturday night, in quest of a stolen horse and buggy. The Chief had neither seen nor heard of it, and was unable to give any information. Mr. Phillips said that Saturday afternoon a well-dressed colored man stopped near his exchange stables at Ewingville. Phillips remarked what a nice rig he had, to which he replied that it belonged to the officials of the telephone company in Philadelphia, and that he was going to take it to Plainfield for the use of the officers in that place. He also said that the horse was bought for $125. Mr. Phillips offered him that price, but the bargain was refused. The colored man, however, took a $5 horse blanket from the wagon and sold it to Mr. Phillips for 75 cents. Later the detective appeared, and reported that the horse had been stolen from a Philadelphia firm, and the two set out on the trail. Chief Grant telephoned to New Brunswick, but got no news of the thief [illegible] that place, and the visitors resumed their search from town to town.

FIRST OF THE SEASON.

Park Club Dance Opened by a Brilliant Social Success.

The first dance of the Park Club, Saturday night, was a great success. Fully 150 young people danced every dance, and only stopped on the stroke of 12. The floor was rather uncomfortably crowded most of the time, but that did not seem to detract in the least from the pleasure of the dancers. The club intends to make these dances a feature during the winter, and they will certainly contribute largely to the success of the season.

PLAINFIELD RAMBLERS IN ROME.

It Was a Glorious Trip, or the People Wouldn't Have Braved Through the Cold.

To the young student as well as to the scholar of more mature mind, "Ramblings in Rome", Mr. Ragan's second lecture, was Monday a splendid entertainment. It was in striking contrast to the first lecture in the course. That showed the art of the present age, with its substantial business application at Chicago; "Ramblings in Rome" told of the wonders of art and architecture modeled before Christ was born. To the man of the age, Chicago's art productions may be, undoubtedly are, thought to be beyond compare; to the real artist mind and heart, a glimpse of Rome's treasures shows the true art.

Mr. Ragan's illustrations of the [illegible]tic Roman structures and the gems of artistic merit were extremely grand and beautiful. The views of Rome's most notable and priceless legacies of ancient art were thrown on canvas without a defect, and seemed to stand out with startling realness. Notable among these were "The Marble Faun", "The Dying Gladiator", Michael Angelo's "Moses", "The Apollo Belvedere", "The Famous Torso", "The Laocoon" and "The Sleeping Ariadne".

Among the most beautiful of the "vast, dim and solemn" views were "The Capitol", "The Forum", "Arch of Titus", "The Coliseum", "On the Palatine", "The Pantheon", "Arch of Constantine", "The Vatican by Night", "The World's Cathedral", and "The Catacombs".

The reproduction of these upon canvas resulted in appreciative applause. The descriptive powers of Mr. Ragan were never better tested, and many who feared a "dry" lecture were very agreeably surprised. The lecturer has a way of dealing with instructive subjects that is intensely interesting to his audiences, and he was in a particularly happy mood last night.

The opera house was as cold as a skating pond, and at Mr. Ragan's suggestion the gentlemen in the audience covered their heads with their hats, and buried their cheeks in their coat collars. The ladies also nestled among their furs, if they were lucky enough to have any, or shivered when not so favored. Unknown to the management, workmen repairing the hall had neglected to close several windows, and while the janitor was piling Lehigh into the furnaces Jack Frost and his elves trooped through the undiscovered apertures. Those who attend the next lecture Saturday night may safely take furs with them, for the hall will be warm enough to suit a spring poet. Besides, they'll be in Spain.

THEIR SECOND ANNIVERSARY.

Happy Surprise to Mr. and Mrs. Cooley.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Cooley of Watchung avenue, were surprised with a celebration of the second anniversary of their marriage, Saturday evening.

A number of their friends had planned to call on them, without their knowledge of it, and the scheme was a great success. It was an informal affair, which was all the more enjoyable. During the evening excellent music and recitations were provided, and amusing games occupied the attention of those present.

The rooms and table were neatly decorated with chrysanthemums and maidenhair ferns. Later in the evening an elaborate collation was served.

Those forming the party were: The Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Schenck, Mr. and Mrs. Fred MacDonald, Mr. and J. G. VanDyke, Mr. and Mrs. Brooks, Mr. and Mrs James McMurray, Mr. and Mrs. Elias Bird, Mr. and Mrs. Edward VanWinkle, John VanWinkle, John VanWinkle, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Anthony, Mr. and Mrs. Haven, Mr. and Mrs. Elderton, Mrs. Sandiker, Miss Lou Sandiker, Miss Nettie Rendell, Miss Minnie Williams, Miss Grace Humpstone, Mrs. Dayton, Miss Dayton, Miss Ella C. Benedict, Mrs. Miller, Mrs. Charles Randolph, Frank Howland.

Only the Moon Lights Them Now.

The Rev. W. E. Honeyman complained to the Borough Council, Friday evening, that the electric light in front of his house on Somerset street had been out for a whole week. That is little, compared with the lights on Stone street. They have not cast a glimmer for the past two weeks, and the patient residents have ceased to complain. It is to be hoped that the Edison Electric Light Company of North Plainfield will wake up before the next change of the moon.

Bullet Branches for Gavels.

Wm. Boe, who has just returned from the battlefield of Chattanooga, Tenn., brought with him two branches of trees into which bullets had been shot. Mr. Boe intends to have the branches turned into gavels. One he will probably donate for the benefit of the forthcoming fair, and the other he will keep himself.

BUSY BOROUGH NIGHT.

NORTH PLAINFIELD'S COUNCIL HAS ITS HANDS FULL.

Sharp Censure of Electric Light Service—Fairview Avenue Changes Abandoned—Grist of Other Work.

An adjourned meeting of the Borough Council was held Friday night in the Council rooms.

Mayor Saunders and Councilmen Hummer, Needham, Neal, Howell, Fountain and Edwards were present.

Clerk John Vetterlein read the minutes of the last meeting, which were approved.

Two protests, one from Charles Hyde and others, and another from E. M. Johnson, were received, stating their objection to the proposed changes of Fairview avenue. They were referred to the Committee on Streets and Public Health.

The following communication was received from the Fidelity Title and Deposit Company, of Newark:

To the Honorable the Mayor and Council of the Borough of North Plainfield:

GENTLEMEN:—The subscribers on November 3rd instant made application to your honorable body according to law for the vacation of Fairview avenue which was laid out in 1870 across lands now owned by the subscribers, but which has never been opened, worked or graded.

It was the intention if the said application met with no objection, to lay out two fifty-foot streets across the said lands in such a way that lots could be laid out averaging one hundred and twenty-five feet in depth from the middle of the street.

Said streets would have been so laid as to connect and join with Fairview avenue at the point where the same is open through the lands of Edward M. Johnson and others, thus giving an eastern outlet to Westervelt avenue to the two streets we proposed to lay.

It was our intention to open, grade and macadamize these streets and to restrict the purchasers of lots so that no house should be built nearer the street than fifteen feet nor which should cost to build less than $3,000 and that no fences should be built in front of said lots, so that on each side there should be a strip of lawn fifteen feet wide.

We deem that such a plan would enable us to build a very desirable class of houses, handsome in design, comfortable, and having all the modern improvements, and which could be rented for about $25 to $30 per month. Such property is very scarce in Plainfield and is in great demand by people who cannot afford to pay the high prices which prevail.

The source of the difficulty we believe to be that ordinarily too much value is in the lots and too little in the houses.

Our plan was to furnish cheap lots and desirable houses and we are confident that such properties would be eagerly sought by a most desirable class.

However, by misrepresentation by people who know nothing of our plans, considerable opposition has been developed and, as it makes no particular difference to us, only doubling the price of lots to the purchasers and making them pay for a hundred and fifty feet of back yard which will be of little use, we hereby withdraw our application for vacation and request your honorable body to proceed at once to open, work and grade Fairview avenue from Somerset street to Westervelt avenue, as required by law.

Dated Nov. 17, 1893.

Very respectfully,
FIDELITY AND DEPOSIT COMPANY

It was referred to the Committee on Streets and Public Health.

The fact that two marshals were to be appointed at this session brought out a number of men anxious to see who would get the plums.

Several letters from prominent borough citizens were received, recommending the appointment of different candidates. They were all referred to the Committee on Licenses and Marshals.

A communication from F. Curtis and others, asking for repairs to the sidewalk at the southwest corner of Mercer and Sycamore avenues, was received and referred to the Committee on Streets and Public Health.

A petition from Mr. Groendyke and others, asking for a sidewalk on Mercer avenue near Grove street, was received and referred to the Committee on Streets and Public Health.

E. C. Mulford petitioned the Council to turnpike Park place. Mr. Neal of the Street Committee said that it had been reported that Mr. Mulford had filled the gutters in front of his property with dirt left in grading, and altogether, on general principles, he did not recommend the work being done. It was so decided.

The Rev. W. E. Honeyman sent a communication to Council complaining of the electric-light service on Somerset street near his residence. He stated that for seven days at one time these lights were not burning. He asked that measures be taken to remedy the difficulty. It was referred to the Fire, Water and Lamps Committee.

The usual monthly bills were presented and after taking the course were ordered paid. The only exceptions were several bills presented by T. W. Morrison and F. W. Runyon, for advertising, which the chairman of the Printing Committee knew nothing about. It was for advertising the dog ordinance. The bills were not ordered paid until the matter should be investigated.

Mayor Saunders said that there were two important subjects that he would like to call the Council's attention to, in reference to borough matters.

One was the question of sewerage. Continuing, he said: "The time has come for us to act in this matter. Plainfield has taken active measures towards the adoption of such a system, and I have learned to my satisfaction that the system which Plainfield is to put in is the best in every way. I think it would be a good idea to let Plainfield know that we are ready to co-operate with them in securing the best service.

The Mayor suggested that a committee be appointed, whose duty it should be to attend meetings in relation to this subject, and act in strict accordance with them and the laws governing the same.

The next point was in reference to the electric light system of the borough. The results of this system were far from being satisfactory; it was very imperfect; complaints are being made continually about the lights, to the Council, citizens of the borough, and the Mayor.

The company is supposed to give a 25 candle power light. The Mayor brought an expert from the city at his own expense and had the lights tested, and found that the people were not getting what they contracted for. Some nights the lights have been out all night. Election night this was the case, and the excuse given was that they were out of coal—a very poor one, remarked the Mayor. "We are bound"—he continued—"to protect the residents and property of the borough. Our contract expires January 15, '94, and I would recommend that something be done to remedy the difficulty."

Mr. Neal, chairman of the Street Committee, reported the work on Summit avenue to be progressing, and that it would soon be finished.

The Committee on Laws and Ordinances presented a communication relative to the laying of sidewalks and keeping them in good condition. It was received and referred to the the Committee on Streets and Public Health.

Councilman Howell said that the condition of the wall in the court room was bad and asked that it be attended to. It was referred to the Committee on Licenses and Marshals.

In a resolution presented by Mr. Howell, the appointment of Zachariah Wilson and Conrad Broski, as night marshals, was recommended, they to be under the direction of the chief marshal and to conform to the rules and regulations governing such offices. Their appointment was confirmed.

Councilman Needham, under the head of miscellaneous business, introduced a resolution recommending that in consequence of the action taken by the Fidelity Title and Deposit Co., that the Fairview avenue matter be dropped. It was so ordered.

In reference to a notice that was sent to property owners on Summit avenue, asking them to lay sidewalks, Mr. Needham said that the work had not been done, and suggested that another be sent. It was adopted. Mr. Needham presented a resolution that the Fire, Water and Lamp Committee be instructed to see the North Plainfield Electric Light Co., and ascertain the terms for lighting the borough for one year, after the present contract expires, and report at the next meeting, Dec. 1. It was adopted.

This subject was freely discussed by Messrs. Howell, Fountain, Needham, and others. Better street lighting was the one thing demanded, and some of the members thought it was an outrage to have to put up with such a state of affairs, claiming that the company had not fulfilled its contract. The matter will be further investigated.

Mr. Neal recommended that the Fidelity Title and Deposit Company be given permission to open, work and grade Fairview avenue, according to law, if they desired to do so, providing it did not cost the borough anything to do it. It was so ordered.

Mr. Neal stated that the note of $1,000 given to the First National Bank some time ago, was payable Nov. 25, and in a resolution recommended that the Mayor and Clerk be authorized to extend this note for the period of one month. It was so decided.

Mr. Needham offered a resolution, recommending that a committee of three be appointed by the Mayor, to consider the system of sewerage, the Mayor to be a member of the committee ex-officio. The following were appointed: Messrs. Needham, Neal and Howell.

Mr. Howell spoke of bills not being presented in time for payment, and suggested that those holding claims against the borough present them promptly.

The bills of the Electric Light Co. for $898.50, and the Plainfield Gas Co. for $1.40, were not ordered paid until they should have been investigated.

The Council adjourned.

THE MAN ON THE CARS.

HE CONTINUES HIS COMMENTS ON THE WASTE OF TIME.

How He Figures on the Centuries that Men Squander in Railroading and the Startling Results that He Sets Forth.

The Man on The Cars was in another statistical mood this week, and he landed on me with figures and calculations sufficient to make a treasury balance sheet.

"Pursuing my remarks of a week ago"—said he as the train got under way—"has it ever occurred to you how much valuable time we annually spend in transit between our homes and our offices? No? Well, I supposed as much. You never seem to consider anything, and, by your leave, I will continue my crusade against your indifference and endeavor to enlighten you a trifle. Lend me a lead pencil, if you please; thank you. I left mine on my desk, and the man who cleans my office will steal it tonight. Now, we find that each of us daily expends at least an hour and a half in travel between his home and his work, and as much again between work and home—three hours a day in transit; or two hours on the cars and ferry, one hour on the way from house to station, and ferry to office, and return. Suppose you go to New York three hundred days in the year, which is a fair underestimation, and you discover to your amazement that you put in nine hundred hours a year in travel, or a little over thirty-six entire days of a full twenty-four hours each. That is, you spend something over a month annually on the road. Surprising, isn't it? Well, rather! But let me carry the thing further. In five years you blow in forty-five hundred hours in transit, or one hundred and eighty-six days—about six months in all. In a decade you give up one whole year in travel. I have commuted something like twenty years, and, therefore, have sacrificed at least two entire years on the altar of travel—a tenth part of my time allowance. If it is true, as I have heard, that Plainfield gives one thousand commuters to the railroad company, it becomes apparent that an aggregate of three thousand hours, or one year and four months, are daily spent by us suburbans in the profitless operation of getting to work and coming to dinner. Sounds pretty large, does it not? I imagine that if we could bunch all the hours that are beguiled in this same way by all who daily go to work in the metropolis—from our State, from Brooklyn, from Harlem and Westchester, we should find that a couple of centuries are squandered every day and never missed! Talk about profligacy! When I amass anything like a competency you may safely wager that I will dry right up and stop at home. The thought of so much time thrown away is almost enough to drive one to bromo-caffeine or suicide—for, as I reminded you last week, time is money, and he who steals my time robs me of my chiefest wealth. And you have never even thought about it? Well, I pity you—I pity anyone who is so blind to his interests.

"Here we are at Plainfield once again; three hours more gone on into the great beyond today and nothing to show for it. Good night!"

Dividing the Frazee Lee Property.

The property owned by the Frazee Lee estate, on the southeast side of East Front street, was divided into four shares. The lot, which contains buildings, comprises about 92 feet frontage. The division has been made thus: Jacob S. Hetfield gets the first lot nearest Peace street; Meeker Hetfield and his family get the second lot; William Hetfield the third and Meeker Hetfield the fourth. There was much discussion on the part of the Hetfields as to who should have the corner lots, but the matter was finally amicably adjusted.

On the north side of the street there is a frontage of 106 feet. This was divided up equally. William Hetfield got the first lot; Meeker Hetfield and family the second; Jacob S. Hetfield the third and Sarah E. Terry the fourth.

The question now arises whether or not the East Front street property can be divided in its present condition; some have leases of the premises, and others have none.

At all events it would be a good thing to tear the old buildings away and erect good, substantial buildings instead.

They All Want the Judge.

(From the Bound Brook Chronicle.)

Ex-Judge John Ulrich, of Plainfield, is favorably spoken of in connection with the office of State Comptroller, to be filled by the incoming Legislature. Mr. Ulrich has many friends in Bound Brook who would be glad to see the genial Judge capture this prize. He is fully competent to discharge the duties of the office.

(From The Somerville Democrat.)

The friends of Hon. John Ulrich, as well as the press, are urging his appointment as Comptroller of the State. While we are loath to see a Republican appointed to that position, we cannot help speaking a word in his favor. He is a bright, intelligent, influential young man, and for services rendered to the party is entitled to recognition. A man better qualified for the position could hardly be found in the Republican party.

Nominates His Rival.

(From The Elizabeth Journal.)

Last week Editor Hyer, of the Rahway Democrat, nominated Editor Robinson, of the Rahway Advocate, for Secretary of the Senate. This is true editorial courtesy, and gives hopes it may result in the editorial friendliness and companionship which has, at odd times, [illegible] rather low in Rahway. Mr. Robinson would make a good and deserving clerk of the Senate.

WILLIAM M. OLIVER

APPOINTED COUNTY CLERK BY GOVERNOR WERTS.

He Is to Succeed James J. Gerber Until Next November—Mr. Martine Withdrew.

News reached Plainfield on Friday that Gov. Werts had appointed William M. Oliver as successor to the late County Clerk James J. Gerber.

A Press reporter called up Mr. Oliver on the telephone soon after the intelligence reached the city. Mr. Oliver said he had not received the official letters from Gov. Werts, but had learned unofficially that the appointment had been made, and that the honor had come to him. The report soon spread in Plainfield, and Mr. Oliver received the congratulations of many friends by wire.

Mr. Oliver is the County Collector. He was among those who were mentioned as candidates, and it was pretty well understood that the recommendations which he would have would be influential.

There were letters and delegations sent to Gov. Werts yesterday in behalf of all the candidates, and there was much speculation all day yesterday as to the probable result. It was quite evident that the choice would be either Mr. Martine, Zeruah Norman or Mr. Oliver, although there were a number of others whose names were mentioned. During the day Mr. Martine sent a personal message to the Governor, insisting that his name be not considered.

Some of the members of the Court favored the appointment of Mr. Norman, and his petition was endorsed by a number of the members of the bar.

Mr. Oliver's eminent qualifications and his personal popularity made him a strong candidate, especially as it was urged that the appointee would probably be made the party's candidate at the next election.

It is expected that the office of County Clerk will be less remunerative in the future, as there is the probability of the duties being divided by the creation of the office of a County Register.

WANT TWENTY THOUSAND.

Y. M. C. A. WORK CRIPPLED FOR LACK OF FUNDS.

A Portion of the Required Amount Subscribed, on Condition that the Balance Be Pledged.

A representative gathering of men met at the home of Charles J. Fisk, Seventh street, last evening, to consider ways and means to complete the Y. M. C. A. building, now in course of construction.

It was stated that $20,000 was needed to finish the structure. The sum of $7,000 was pledged by those present, on the condition that the balance be raised. J. W. Jackson, as treasurer, will receive voluntary subscriptions from anyone desirous of contributing.

It was the sense of the meeting, and so expressed, that the work should not stop until the building is completed.

Those in attendance last evening were: J. W. Murray, S. A. Ginna, J. W. Jackson, E. N. Erickson, Charles Potter, H. P. Newhall, C. J. Fisk, Pliny Fisk, Stephen Cahoone, C. W. McCutchen, H. A. McGee, S. F. Kimball, J. D. Runyon, W. D. Murray, H. O. Newman, D. E. Titsworth, W. T. Kaufman and A. B. Beers.

THE FLOUR FIGHT.

Plainfield People Getting the Benefit of Cut-Rate Grocery Competition.

Trade in flour has been lively the past few days, owing to the cutting of prices among the grocers. But a halt was called yesterday by the wholesale agents, who commanded the warfare to stop as it would unsettle prices and reduce the enormous profits of the big concerns. For refusal to obey this order the penalty threatened was withholding of future supplies, and some of the merchants yielded to the pressure. J. F. MacDonald, however, had the backbone to hold out, and Vincent L. Frazee also proved his independence of trusts and combinations by declining to be governed by outside dictation. Mr. Frazee holds that he pays cash for his goods and can do what he likes with them, and what he likes is to give the people the benefit of hard-times prices. He was the pioneer in cutting rates, and the result of his enterprise and public spirit is the tremendous cash business of $80,000 a year. This is really wonderful for so modest a store as Frazee's, but the success of the Councilman's Model Market shows that the public appreciates the advantages offered by cash business where all dealings are honest.

Charades in Chapel.

The Literary Committee of the Epworth League gave an interesting entertainment on Thursday in Vincent chapel. It was in the form of charades representing different books and their authors, which were acted out, it being left for the audience to guess the name of the book and who wrote it.

The committee, who arranged the affair and those taking part are as follows: The Misses Grace Barnes, Gertie Sharp, Lillie Chandler, Etta Raybert, Jennie Crosley, and Messrs. David S. Dunavan, Oscar Campbell, Robert Davis, Clarence Smith and James A. Stafford.

A Symphonic Orchestra.

The Young Symphonic Orchestra organized last night at P. Ludwig Conde's violin studio, as follows:

Director—P. L. Conde.
First violin—F. Goddard and C. Davis.
Second violin—S. Arms and E. Sorrell.
Cornet—McGill.
Flute—W. Sorrell.
Pianist—S. Smith.

Dunellen Gains an English Beauty.

(From The Bound Brook Chronicle.)

Miss Maria Twyname, a beautiful and accomplished young lady from Whitehaven, Cumberland county, England, arrived on the Majestic, last week, and will make her future home with her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dickson, of Dunellen.

Work Slack There Too.

Gideon Barnes, for many years coachman and gardener for the late Judge Boome, of Washington Park, and now employed in the Dover car shops, has returned from his visit to Plainfield. Mr. Barnes says most of the men in the D. L. & W. shops there are working on three-quarter time.

Friends Conclude Their Business.

The semi-annual meeting of the Society of Friends, held in this city, beginning Wednesday, came to an end Friday. Members and friends of the society were present from New York and Rahway, and business of a private nature was transacted at the business sessions.

A TRAVELER'S TALES.

ADVENTURES AND INCIDENTS FAR OUT OF THE ORDINARY.

The Story of a Traveler in the Wild Southwest—The Strange Ferryman and His Mexican Wife—The Host Proves to Be Jim Fraser, the Outlaw.

[Copyright, 1893, by American Press Association.]

It was growing dark when I reached the river and made out the cabin on the opposite shore with the smoke rising lazily from its wide throated chimney. A path from the cabin door led down to the water, where a big flat bottomed scow was floating, securely moored, but I could see no sign of human being moving about the place. However, by the time I had shouted until the echoes were aroused amid the crags that hung over the placidly flowing river on either side, a woman came to the door and looked across. She disappeared when I swung my hat to her, and three minutes later a man and a boy came out and stood looking at me. The man carried a gun, and I fancied he was doubtful about me, so I swung my hat once more, yelling for him to come down and bring me across with his big boat.

By this time the woman appeared again, and they held a brief consultation, which terminated when the man and the boy came slowly down to the spot where the boat floated at the river's edge.

AN ANXIOUS MOMENT.

"Hello, stranger," he called across.

"Hello, yourself," I returned. "I want to cross the river."

"Can ye swim?" he questioned.

"No. I want you to ferry me over with your boat. I'll pay you."

"Wher ye bound?"

"North, to Animas."

"How many of ye is there?"

"Only myself; I'm alone."

"Is that straight, stranger?"

"On my honor."

He seemed to hesitate a minute more, and then he shouted:

"I've got a rifle with me an a small gun on both hips. My little boy carries a colt's. We're mighty handy on the shoot."

Having volunteered this information, he stepped on the scow with the little boy, and releasing the boat began to work it across. The boy stood in the front end and watched me like a hawk, while I noticed the old man's rifle was close at hand, so he could drop the heavy sweep and grasp it instantly.

The shadows had deepened when the scow touched the shore, and the old man was forced to bring his face quite close to mine in order to scan my features closely. I was rather impatient, and I broke into a short laugh.

"Well, do you notice anything dangerous about me, sir?"

"I reckon you're all right," he deliberately said. "You're a tenderfoot—leastways, ye ain't western born. Never can tell about critters nowadays though. Git on an we'll take ye over."

I led my horse onto the boat, and we were soon on our way to the other shore, which was not reached until it was very dark. In the little cove up the bank I saw a light gleaming from the cabin window.

On my way over, I had made a bargain with the peculiar old man for a night's lodging, and we moved toward the cabin when the boat had been secured. I found the man very inquisitive, and I answered all his questions as fully and frankly as possible, which seemed to give him a great deal of satisfaction.

Having aided me in caring for my horse, after instructing the boy to tell the old woman to have supper ready, he led the way into the cabin. There was but one room below and a "loft" above, a ladder leading up to the latter. The woman had set a table in the middle of the floor, and she seemed to be awaiting my appearance with a great deal of anxiety. At a glance, I saw she was a Mexican, and although she had been pretty not many years before, she was fast growing wrinkled and haglike. Her black gimlet eyes seemed to cut clean through me.

All at once I began to feel uncomfortable. Who and what were these people? Why were they so suspicious of a stranger who was a white man? Why did they live in that wretched cabin hidden away down there by the sunken river? I soon decided there was a mystery about it all.

While the woman was completing preparations for supper, the man sat on a stool and continued to question me. He seemed eager to learn all the news from the outer world, and I gratified him as well as I could. Among other things, he asked:

"Ever hear anything 'bout Jim Fraser?"

"Fraser the outlaw?"

"Yep."

"Nothing lately. He seems to be laying low since he held up the Southern Pacific express and killed the engineer two years ago."

"What do you reckon has become of him, stranger?"

"Nobody knows. Some say he was killed in El Paso last winter, and some say he is in hiding."

"He's a desperate critter."

"You're right."

"Oughter been lynched years ago."

"That's so."

"I s'pose he'd cut a man's throat jest for the fun of doin it."

"I've heard so."

By this time supper was ready, and we sat down. The food was coarse enough, but I was ravenously hungry and I never ate with greater heartiness, although aware the woman's beady eyes were on me every moment.

When the meal was over, we lighted our pipes. The boy, with eyes like his mother's, seemed to take to me, and he hung on my knee, while I patted his head and talked to him. He was an unusually bright child. While I was chatting with him, I heard the man and woman, who were in a distant corner, speaking in Spanish, which they evidently thought I did not understand.

"What do you think, Pepita?" asked the man.

"He seems well," replied the woman.

"He is not an officer?"

"No."

"Then he shall go on his way unharmed."

Those final words were enough to bring me refreshing slumber that night, for I was exhausted with my long day's journey. In the morning breakfast was better than supper had been, as if the woman exerted herself to make it unusually good.

When I offered them money for what they had done, the woman looked at me scornfully, and the man shook his head, saying: "Keep it in yer britches, stranger. I know whar there's more good United States currency buried under ground than you ever saw, an when I want it all I've got ter do is dig it up."

The boy parted from me regretfully, and the man offered to accompany me until I had struck the trail to the north. It would have been no easy task for me to find my way out of that lonely retreat without his assistance, and I cordially expressed my gratitude at parting, offering my hand, at which he drew back.

"Stranger," he said, "you don't know who I am—you hain't even asked."

"I thought it was none of my business, if you didn't care to tell."

"If you wasn't new in these yer parts, you'd know who I be. Folks round hyar know, but they don't trouble me none whatever sence the sheriff come down with a posse, an I shot four of the crowd. I've told 'em all I want now is to be let alone to live an die in peace, an I reckon maybe I'll have my way if some other fool critter don't take it inter his head to gun for me so he can git the price on my head. Stranger, you 'lowed Jim Fraser was a miserable skunk as oughter be lynched, an you said you'd heard he'd cut a man's throat for the fun of it. For all that, you're livin today, an your gun, your money an your hoss ain't stole. I'm Jim Fraser!"

He looked me straight in the eyes for a minute, then wheeled squarely about and walked away without a word of adieu, never once looking over his shoulder until he had disappeared. I could have shot him in the back, had I been so inclined, without the least danger to myself. When he had vanished, I rode on to the north.

BESS.

Pausing on the highest point of the trail, we gazed fearfully down into the dimly lit gorge 500 feet below, from which there came to us faint sounds of life, the barking of dogs and a child's voice raised in shrill laughter. At this latter sound Bebe raised her small curly head from Duke's broad breast where it had rested during the last hour of the tedious ascent. The great violet eyes flashed open and gazed down, vainly endeavoring to pierce the gloom.

"Why, there's a child down there. How can a child live in the dark?"

From our elevation we could see, through a cleft in the sierras, flaming streaks of purple and crimson and gold, and the sun, like a great ball of fire, sinking into the gleaming waters of the Pacific. Pressing on, we made the descent into "Inferno," as Duke styled it, as rapidly as was consistent with the dignity of our stolid little burros. At every step the shadows deepened and broadened till at last, when we were lifted from our saddles, we could but discern the straight, slim figure of the doctor, who had preceded us, and pressed close against his knee the shadowy outlines of a sprite, a fay—clearly something uncanny—so small and frail it seemed.

As the doctor advanced into the mellow beam of firelight which streamed welcomingly from the open kitchen door, the small shape flitted from him and was swallowed up in the darkness. He must have seen in Bebe's wondering eyes the question which she was too much awe struck to ask, for, as he lifted her up into the light, he said in his gentle, tired voice:

"That was little Bess. She and I are great friends."

There was a subtle magnetism in the inexpressible sadness which enshrouded this dark eyed, tender voiced man, that drew to him the involuntary love and trust of all helpless, friendless creatures. Young as he was a great shadow had fallen between him and the sunlight, withering his affections, blighting his ambition. When he left home to attend lectures in a distant city, he was accompanied by a dearly loved friend, one whom he hoped in the near future to call by the still dearer title of brother. This friend fell ill, and, though after weeks of suffering he gradually recovered his physical health, his mental tone seemed to have been weakened. He became subject to fits of melancholy, and in one of these took his own life.

The doctor was with him, but noticed nothing unusual till the pistol shot rang through the room and the lifeless body fell with a dull, heavy thud to the floor. From that moment he was haunted by the horrible consciousness that if he had been more watchful the tragedy might have been prevented. The poor, half crazed sister of the dead boy refused to see or speak to him again. After an interval of despair he took up the broken thread of life again, placing it together with the harsh, stern lines of duty in the place of golden inclination.

After hours of balmy, refreshing sleep we awoke to find the sun gilding only the topmost crags, which, like watch towers, frowned upon us from above the stupendous walls which on all sides shut in the gorge. A small river tumbled headlong down the rocks, chafing and fretting impatiently at the huge bowlders obstructing its passage to the sea. Its banks were lined with aromatic bay which, gently stirred by the breeze, leaned over and tipped its rich green foliage into the clear water.

Our idle enjoyment of the scene was clouded by the apparition of small, scantily clad Bess, who dogged our footsteps and at last, when we paused, crouched at the doctor's feet, looking up into his face with the unsatisfied questioning of a dumb animal. He talked to her in his sympathetic, quiet way till the thin, grave lips unclosed, and the little creature told him all that she knew about herself and the unchildlike life that had been passed under the shadow of overhanging mountains. A sudden glow passed over the pallid face, the large eyes grew eager as she told of the one bright day of her life. "Mister Walker was a-goin' down an' he let me ride Juniata, an' then he tuk me to er show."

The words tumbled over each other in her haste to tell of the wonders that she saw. When Bebe, finding that they have one subject in common, slipped down to a level with her, and exhibited great familiarity with the tricks and antics of the monkey, Bess' surprise dashed forth: "Was yer thar, an' did yer see me?" Being answered in the negative she won from compliant Bebe a promise to "look out" for her at the next show.

As the two young faces were upturned we could not fail to notice the contrast—the one so full of life and health, with shining hair, clear, beautiful eyes and blooming cheeks, seeming the very embodiment of sunlight; the other with pale, drawn features, thin lips set about with lines of care, straight, dull white hair and complexion of a chalky white, a fit child of Shadow.

When we climbed the mountain side to look over at a beautiful fall where drooping ferns and [illegible] hid the rough walls of rock over which clear water dashed in silvery spray to lose itself in the dark pool beneath, the doctor burdened himself with Bess. Her raptures were intense, though she only said: "It is so pretty! I never saw it before." Afterwards she said to Bebe in a whisper: "I like that man. He takes me to places." From that hour she became his shadow, content to be unnoticed if she might but be near him. On the morning of our departure the whole camp gathered about to bid us farewell, but Bess was missing.

Search was made in vain for some time and we were about to ride away, when she was discovered hidden in a clump of bushes crying as if her heart would break. The doctor stooped and kissed the little white quivering face and whispered some words of consolation apparently, for a pale, wintry smile lit up the dull eyes. As we looked back before taking the turning, which hid the camp from view, we caught sight of the meager form, its thin dress fluttering in the wind, its tiny arms waving good-by. Poor little Bess! We passed away to the sunshine, leaving her to the shadows and gloom.

* * * * * * *

Over the purple mountains we journeyed once more, yielding to Bebe's whim that her bridal trip should be taken in the same company over the same paths which her childish feet had trod ten years before. The whole previous programme must be faithfully carried out, and as this included a visit to the "Devil's Gorge," its shadows closed about us again. It was difficult to recognize in the handsome, eager, impassioned bridegroom the saddened, hopeless doctor of the years of the past. His mourning had endured for more than a day, but it was impossible for any one exposed to the bright, joyous influence of Bebe to fail to recognize that "man was not made to mourn." His devotion to duty had met its reward, and now, at 32, he was not only one of the most distinguished surgeons of the day, but, as the husband of winsome Bebe, was, as he asserted, the happiest man in the world.

All day Bebe had been pretending to recall familiar landmarks, and as we gathered about the camp fire she suddenly exclaimed: "There was a child here! A small, pale child, just my age, and her name was Bess. I wonder what has become of her?" Out of the darkness there stepped the tall, lank figure of a girl. Advancing into the center of the group, she said laconically: "I'm Bess." Glad recognition met her from each member of the party, and I noticed that when her hand was clasped in that of the doctor a dull red flush passed over her face. She was unchanged, save that the ugliness of the type was intensified. After a few words she fell back from the light.

Guided by an enthusiastic young Englishman who had traveled around the world, we went to look at the "Moonlight Fall," which he declared to be the most beautiful sight "eye ever beheld." Leaning over to feast my eyes upon the incomparable beauty of the scene, I was startled by hearing a quick, hurried breathing near me. Looking around I saw Bess standing on the verge of the cliff, not looking at the waterfall, but gazing with a fixed intensity [illegible] at Bebe, who [illegible] the radiant moonlight.

How it happened no one ever knew, but with the suddenness of an electric shock we realized that Bebe was over the cliff, her heavy traveling dress caught in the branches of a sturdy manzanita bush that had forced a footing for itself within a crevice of the rocky wall. Her husband had but just left her side, but ere he could reach the spot, like a flash Bess had lowered herself to a narrow ledge of rock, grasping with one hand a rough, sharp spur jutting out from the wall, with the other she raised Bebe's slight, [illegible] form to the arms outstretched to receive it.

Looking into the doctor's face with eyes transfigured with love she [illegible]: "I saved her for you," then releasing her hold she fell with a [illegible] into the dark [illegible].

[illegible] seemed to shine the aureole of a saint. Thus she passed forever out of the shadows into the light of an eternal day.—New Orleans Picayune.

What is
CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

A Shoe Dealer's Observation.

I was in a State street shoe store yesterday when two ladies seated themselves and asked to be shown shoes, of course. A young man waited upon one of the ladies. A moment later he came to the proprietor, with whom I was talking, and said: "She has white hose." The proprietor made a reply that I did not quite understand, and the clerk departed. I returned to ask why it was that the clerk had made such an observation. "It is one of the tricks of our trade," answered the head of the concern. "A woman who will wear white hosiery don't wear fine shoes. You can gamble on that every time and win. So we know about what class of goods to show her and thus save time. I don't know whether you know it or not, as such matters do not interest outsiders, but we can tell by the sort of hosiery a woman wears what price shoe she wants. Now, take a woman who wears black silk hosiery or black balbriggan, she wants the very best shoe, as a rule, that there is in the house. I have made a study of this for years, and I am away up on the subject, I can tell you. Another thing I have noticed—a woman who wears black hosiery generally has small feet. That reminds me that the average foot of the Chicago lady—I mean good stock, the aristocrats—is not small, but long and slender."—Chicago Mail.

The Daft Motor.

The Daft Electric company continues their experiments with the large motor and trains of cars on the Ninth Avenue Elevated railway in this city. Some weeks ago a train of eight cars was taken up a grade of nearly 2 per cent. at a speed of seven miles and a half an hour. On several occasions a speed of thirty miles an hour, with three cars, has been reached. The regular train speed on the Ninth Avenue road is thirteen miles an hour, but with the electric motor no difficulty is found in maintaining a speed of fifteen miles an hour. A Science representative was one of a party, a few evenings ago, who were carried over the road from Fourteenth to Fiftieth street at a speed approaching twenty miles an hour. The motion was smooth and easy, and there was nothing but the entire absence of smoke, smell and cinders to indicate that the train was not drawn by an ordinary locomotive.—Science (New York).

Killing an Elephant.

By careful maneuvering, we had surrounded the elephant, and he finally turned at bay upon a rocky place where there were a few small trees. He was a monster, and it was plain he meant to make a savage fight. I was for putting a ball into him without delay, but Bongo remonstrated against it, saying the report of the gun might bring the Obbos down upon us to carry away the game.

Bongo was on foot, and he carried a keen, heavy sword, with which he proposed to dispatch the great beast. How he was to accomplish this was something I could not understand, but he directed me to take a position where I could witness every movement.

Bongo then hid himself behind some rocks, having first made a signal to Zinjal, who was mounted on a fine tempered, fiery little black mare. Zinjal was quite unarmed, but he did not hesitate to ride directly toward the waiting elephant, and the huge animal instantly faced him, prepared for a rush.

The mare was admirably trained, and she slowly moved toward the colossus, apparently understanding just what was required of her and just how perilous her situation was. She advanced until within 10 yards of the waiting monster, and then, all of a sudden, a wild cry came from Zinjal's throat. At that instant, the elephant charged.

I thought horse and rider would be crushed, but the little mare leaped away like a flash, and Zinjal clung lizardlike to her bare back, while, uttering mad cries, the elephant pursued. His trunk was extended in the air almost over Zinjal's head, and his jaws were wide open. A light that was perfectly fiendish showed in his small black eyes.

Zinjal's horsemanship was superb, as he seemed to keep just out of the elephant's reach, [illegible] the [illegible] Bongo [illegible] out, his weapon hissing through the air, its keen edge striking the monster's leg about a foot from the ground, sinking through flesh and tendon to the bone.

In a moment, the charge of the elephant was checked, for one foot was quite useless. It wheeled to get at Bongo, but the man with the sword had vanished amid the rocks. Then Zinjal sent the mare almost under the elephant's nose, attracting the monster's attention long enough for Bongo to dart out and deliver a blow at the other leg.

It was a death stroke, for the main artery was severed and the blood spurted forth. As a mighty tree, a monarch of the forest, falls crashing to earth, so fell the elephant and lay helpless. Within 30 minutes, the creature had bled to death, his end seeming to come painlessly.

Why He Failed.

Although he was plainly a "vag" and in unusual hard luck at that, I immediately noted something distinctive in his appearance, as he timidly approached me. His ragged black coat was buttoned close about his spare figure, and his long hair fell straight down upon his shoulders. There was about him, despite his tattered garb, an air of attempted refinement.

"I beg your pardon, sir," he said sadly, lifting his battered hat. "I have been unfortunate. It is far beneath me to solicit alms upon the street, but things have come to such a distressing pass that I have naught but a choice between such a course and starvation. Could you spare me a few pennies for a plate of beans? I am from Boston."

"Can you find no work?"

"My profession is overcrowded, sir."

"What is your profession?"

"I am an author."

"What have you written?"

"To confess the sad truth, my last book was a failure. It was entitled 'How to Make a Fortune In Literature.'"

"What made it fail?"

"I was unable to follow my own advice, sir."

"What was that?"

"To start a publishing house and never write anything at all."

I opened my heart and my purse and gave him a quarter. He had sized me up so accurately and touched my susceptible side so fairly that I am certain he deserved all he received, although he was a first class liar. GILBERT PATTEN.

THE FINANCIER.

Absolutely pure gold is said to be 24 carats fine.

Many Roman tin coins are known to be in existence.

English sovereigns were first minted in 1489. They were called by various nicknames.

The bronze cent and 2 cent pieces were first coined in 1864 and the nickel half dime in 1866.

During the reign of Numa Pompilius, 700 B. C., an experiment was made with wooden money.

The director of our mint says that the United States has $654,000,000 gold, $575,000,000 silver, $405,000,000 paper, or over $25 to each inhabitant.

The total amount of money issued by the continental congresses and the states to carry on the war of the Revolution was not short of $500,000,000.

Edward I forbade the circulation of foreign money in England and established an exchange at Dover where travelers might dispose of or purchase money.

During the hundred years' war between France and England every baron in both countries claimed and exercised the right to coin what money he pleased.

In 1840 Great Britain had £38,000,000 of paper money, in 1890 £39,000,000; at the former date France had £9,000,000, at the latter £115,000,000; Austria had £70,000,000 and £128,000,000 respectively.

The total coinage, gold and silver, of the reign of Henry III was £3,800; the total coinage of the reign of Victoria up to 1893 was £264,100,000, of which £203,300,000 were of gold and £261,800,000 of silver.

The Hebrews had no coins of their own until the days of the Maccabees, who issued shekels and half shekels, with the inscriptions, "Jerusalem, the Holy," "Simon, Prince of Israel." These bear no images.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

COUNCILMEN IN NO HURRY.

THEY WANT TO INVESTIGATE BEFORE THEY ACT.

Action Deferred on That Anti-Poster Ordinance—Councilman Fisk Hands It In, and Corrals It in Committee [illegible].

The special meeting of the Common Council Thursday was attended by Councilmen Bird, Erickson, Fisk, Frazee, Glenn, Millington and Roe.

The call was read by the Clerk, a number of bills were referred for payment, and the ordinance to widen West Front street two feet from Madison avenue to Central avenue was adopted on final passage.

Communications from the Plainfield Ministers Association and the W. C. T. U. were read, asking the Council to take what action lay in their power to prevent the posting of "indelicate" pictures.

Mr. Fisk presented an ordinance from the Corporation Counsel, drawn in response to the communications. It provided for the licensing of bill-posting, and prohibited the displaying by anybody of any obscene, vulgar or indecent picture, advertisement or sign, on any bill-board, fence, post, tree, the surface of any building or structure, or in any window, showcase, or any other place. The fine specified for each offense is $20.

Mr. Fisk said: "No doubt the petitioners are perfectly sincere, but I don't think it well to take any hasty action. It is easy to pass laws, and not so easy to undo them. We're all in favor of law and order, and opposed to having anything posted of an immoral tendency, but we ought to take time to look into this matter. I therefore move that this ordinance, together with all communications on the subject, be referred to the Committee on Laws and Ordinances."

This was unanimously adopted.

Corporation Counsel Marsh reported various city cases. The suit of Charles K. Moore, for $12,000 damages on water-works contract, he reported as in process of being discontinued of record. The Peace-street opening case of Jacob Miles, in which Miles had attacked the act as unconstitutional and fought his $1,600 assessment, had been argued and decision was expected in the February term. The case of Adeline Brock, H. B. Lounsbury, Ira Munday and Truman A. Long, also on the Peace street matter, was now being argued. John Cahill had been adjudged guilty on appeal, and his bondsman, Frank Schuck, was to be prosecuted for not paying the appeal. Lorenzo Paoli was to be tried Nov. 22, for Sunday selling. The report was received and filed. Council adjourned after paying the bills.

WHAT'S BEST IN NEW YORK.

Attractions in the Metropolis for Plainfield Theatre-Goers—"1492"—Eden Musee Specialties—Salvini's Return.

"1492," the reigning success in Palmer's Theatre, is rich in new specialties. John H. Keefe has scored such a hit as a hayseed that Messrs. Jones and Tayne must look to their laurels. The new "Daily Hints" are both pretty and graceful. Theresa Vaughn becomes a greater favorite every day. To all lovers of mirth and music and delightful spectacle, "1492" will be an attraction for many weeks to come.

The Eden Musee may now fairly be regarded as the metropolitan home of strictly up-to-date stage dancing. No less than three famous dancers are now appearing there, and crowded houses greet them every afternoon and evening. Delmore, the serpentine dancer, has no rival in America, and won an international reputation in London, Paris and other European cities. Lola Yberry, the Spanish dancer, has been pronounced greater than even Carmencita. She is as graceful as she is supple, and, what's more, she is both young and pretty. Ottilie, the French dancer, came to the Musee fresh from the Paris cafes chantants, and infuses a truly French vim and animation into all her songs and dances. Besides this remarkable dancing trio, the programme includes the wonderful magician, Delprade, and Miles Sara and Mariette, who perform all sorts of wonderful feats, Danko Gabor and his far-famed Royal Gypsy Band, and various artists of acknowledged standing in their several lines. Several notable additions will soon be made to the collection of wax-works, for which the Musee is famous the world round.

The management of the Star Theatre announces the engagement of Alexander Salvini at that house to begin next Monday night. The popular romantic actor will present for the opening bill Dumas's exhilarating and exciting romance "The Three Guardsmen". Salvini's production of this and other plays of the same school in the Manhattan Opera-House last spring aroused popular enthusiasm. A return engagement, therefore, with the same acceptable repertoire will be looked on with great favor. The dimensions of the Star Theatre stage, its earlier associations with the drama of romance, and the regular clientelle of the house being in such hearty sympathy with the robust actor of the Salvini type, give every promise that the elaborate productions to be presented by this ever-growing favorite, will keep up the extraordinary prosperity this house has enjoyed of late. Among the artists in the supporting company are William Redmund, John A. Lane, at one time prominent in the Booth-Barrett company, William Harris, from the Boston Museum, Eleanor Moretti, well-known in connection with the Boston Theatre and John Stetson companies, Miss Augusta de Forrest and Miss Maude Dixon. Regular matinees will be given Saturdays only, but there will be a special matinee Thanksgiving Day.

They Were [illegible] Off by The Press.

A New York publisher asked The Press to print a "grand Thanksgiving premium" coupon which with six cents would entitle a reader to a copy of a "magnificent" picture, entitled "An American Beauty". The Press looked at a copy of the picture and declined the offer. The picture is a cheap chromo of a rose, bears an advertisement on the back, and is not worth six cents. It is the same "grand Thanksgiving premium" which is now being offered by another paper. The public is warned of its worthlessness. The "Home and Country" offer, also advertised by that journal was previously rejected by The Press for similar reasons.

ONE DWELLING AND A SCHOOL.

THAT'S ALL THE TOWN MR. PENFIELD FOUND.

But Plainfield Christian Endeavorers Learn that Even on Fallow Ground the Gospel Seed May be Made to Flourish Like a Green Bay Tree.

The Y. P. S. C. E. and their friends gathered in large numbers in the First Presbyterian church Friday night to listen to an address from the Rev. Mr. Penfield of New York on the subject of "Home Missions". Mr. Penfield told of his experience in Dakota, and said that on one occasion he arrived, after dark, on a Saturday evening, in the town of [illegible], which consisted of one dwelling and a school-house. Next morning three young men started out to canvass the residents, and after a time so many people assembled together that it was necessary to hold an outdoor meeting, and they manifested the utmost eagerness to hear the Gospel. He described the weak churches in the West, and told how soon as a rule they became self-supporting. Last year no less than fifty churches had become self-supporting, and had begun to aid other churches, and also to contribute toward the cause of Foreign Missions. There were two great problems confronting the Board of Home Missions, namely: how to reach the immense foreign population that were pouring in upon us, and how to evangelize the cities. As to the first problem he said that the Board now had 30 missionaries preaching to the foreign element in their own language—a foreign mission work right in our own midst. He also spoke of the fact that in a prison in Illinois he had found that 75 per cent. of the convicts were either of foreign birth or the children of emigrants, so that it seemed clear that we must Christianize these people or they would destroy our land. As to the second problem they were working hard to reach the cities by various missions. He urged the young people to work and pray, for only thus could our liberty and our religion be preserved.

The Y. P. S. C. E. expected in 1895 to hold a great convention in San Francisco, and would go on to Portland, Oregon, and perhaps to Alaska, and he advised all to save up money for the trip and be ready to go.

Mr. Penfield's remarks were listened to with deep interest, and he made a most favorable impression on his audience.

Good Shooting by the Climax Club.

The members of the Climax Gun Club held their regular monthly shooting meeting Thursday. In addition to the regular club event, several minor sweepstakes and team races were shot with the following results:

CLUB SHOOT.	HANDICAP ALLOWANCE.
J. Darby	10 birds allowance,	broke 20
Scott	7 " "	" 20
Goodman	10 " "	" 17
Manning	4 " "	" 20
W. Terry	10 " "	" 21
Williams	4 " "	" 16
C. Smith	scratch, shooting at 25,	broke 24
Brantingham	" " 25,	" 22
Keller	" " 25,	" 22
D. Terry	" " 25,	" 19

As a preliminary event an interesting team race was shot. Keller and Brantingham being pitted against Smith and Manning, the first mentioned team winning, each breaking 13 out of 15 targets shot at, Smith breaking 11 and his partner 12, making a total of 23.

Event No. 3 was a sweep at 10 targets per man. Smith and Brantingham won first place with clean scores of 10. Keller, Scott and Gardner divided second, and Manning won third place.

The closing event was a "miss and out" affair. Scott dropped out on his first round, D. Terry on his second, Mack on his third, Smith on his fifth. Squier fouled on his tenth, and Keller won by a clean score of 10 successive breaks.

A CREDIT TO THE TOWN.

Terrill & Cole Move Into the New Cole Building and Engage in a New Venture.

A handsome addition to Plainfield's business blocks is the new building just completed by Geo. W. Cole, owned and now occupied by the firm of Terrill & Cole, funeral directors, formerly of 128 East Front street.

The building, situated at 200-204 West Second street, adjoining the house of Engine Company No. 1 and Trinity Reformed church is a three-story brick structure trimmed with gray stone and having a two-story addition in the rear. The first story is occupied by two stores having heavy plate-glass show windows and convenient entrances.

The east store is used by Terrill & Cole for a show room and office, and is equipped for the undertaking business in the most approved modern style. Back of these rooms is the livery stable and office. A large elevator lifts the coaches and carriages of the firm to the second floor. The stable is situated on the ground floor, with easy entrance on Exchange alley, and contains stalls for seventeen horses. The livery department is a new venture of the firm, and an elegant new outfit has been provided.

Two five-room flats are in each of the upper floors. The rooms are handsomely finished, and have all the modern improvements. One is being furnished for George Cole and his family. Both gas and electric fixtures are in use throughout the premises.

The designer of the building is William H. Olum, architect. The carpenters were Pierson & Gayle, the mason was Charles Bennett, and the plumbing by J. L. McVoy.

The building is a great improvement to real estate of the neighborhood, driving out as it did the old frame tenement and store.

Free Feasts for All.

Next Saturday, Dec. 2, the great sale of Aaron D. Thompson's property in White Sands will take place. 160 acres of fine land has been cut up into building lots 50x150 feet, and there will be sold at public auction Saturday at 1. Mr. Thompson has improved this property wonderfully, and a large number of buyers will undoubtedly be attracted to the sale. There will be good music and refreshments for those who attend. The Central railroad will run special trains to the sale. The terms on which the lots are to be sold are $50 cash and the balance $5 per month. For free railroad passes apply to Aaron D. Thompson, North avenue.

HYMENEAL.

HUFF—LORTON.

The marriage of Miss Ida Lorton to Horace Huff took place Thursday afternoon at 5, at the home of the bride, 400 West Fifth street, before a very large gathering of friends and relatives.

The wedding march was played by Miss Clinton Mosher, a cousin of the bride, as they proceeded to the parlor, where they were met by the Rev. C. L. Goodrich, who performed the ceremony.

The bride wore a costume of white silk and brocade satin, trimmed with Duchesse lace, and carried a beautiful bouquet of white chrysanthemums. The bridesmaid was Miss Grace Phillips, of [illegible], who wore a dress similar to the bride's; she carried a bouquet of pink rose-buds and maiden-hair ferns. Joseph Hankinson, of Newark, was best man. The ushers were Thaddeus Doane, Jr., and H. Victor Lorton.

It was a charming wedding, and the entire affair was carried through with promptness and precision.

Both the bride and groom have a large circle of friends who join in wishing them a very happy journey through life.

The groom holds a lucrative position with Garret Q. Packer, the furniture merchant. The presents were numerous, their many friends having remembered them handsomely.

Mr. and Mrs. Huff left on the 8:40 train for New York. Where they will spend their honeymoon, is known only them. Some of the wedding guests attached a lighted lantern and a pair of old boots to the carriage which conveyed them to the North Avenue station. This joke was not discovered till they reached the station.

Among those present were:

Mrs. Avis Laing and son, Mr. and Mrs. James Morrison, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Stryker, Mrs. Rachel Bogert, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Palmer, Mrs. John Lieberger, and family; Mr. and Mrs. Peter Bogert, Mrs. Jennie Hawkins and family; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Mosher, Miss Hannah Bogert, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dunham, Mr. and Mrs. Elias Mosher, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. WILLING WORKERS PROVIDE A TREAT

Social and Financial Success by Young People of Hope Chapel.

The Willing Workers of Hope chapel gave an entertainment Friday night which proved a success both financially and socially, as is always the case when these young ladies have anything in charge.

The entertainment opened with a song by a chorus of the entire talent of the evening. They sang "The Morning Invitation". "The Clothes-Pin Drill" was done to perfection by the following little girls dressed in white:

Laura Ayers, Laura V. Ayers, Carrie Hoffman, Maggie McComas, Fanny Coss, Retta Nash, Jennie Adleman and Edith Roseberry. The comic farce, "The Wrong Man", kept the people in an uproar of laughter. The parts were well impersonated by W. A. Leland, Alexander Muir, Bert Tallamy, and Miss Ada Nash, Mrs. Walter Magus and Miss Agnes Reid. The tableau, "Pocahontas and John Smith", with William A. Leland, Clarence Leland and Miss Lucy Westphal as characters, was a success; as was also "Over the Garden Wall", by Miss Agnes Reid and Alexander Muir; and the last tableau "Forgiven", by Miss Lena Coss and Margaret M. Page, was a most effective spectacle, enhanced as it was by the glare of red light.

Miss Florence Smith told "What they do at the Springs" and Harry Turner sang "The Girl I Left Behind Me", which was heartily encored. "Coming Through the Rye" was very well done by little Ray Roseberry and Anna Higgins.

The farce "Getting Ready", by Walter Magus, Wm. A. Leland, Mrs. Clarence Leland, and Miss Fanny and Lucy Westphal, was very amusing. A dialogue "Genius of Christianity", with Miss Olive Wyckoff as Genius, Laura Wyckoff as the Indian, May Williams as another Indian, Minnie Wyman as a Hindoo, Edith Huff as a Chinese, Miss Eva Ladue as a Mohammedan, and Miss Maude VanDyke as a Hebrew, was well rendered. After the other entertainment, refreshments were served in abundance. The young ladies comprising the Willing Workers deserve great credit for the way they managed the entertainment. Following are the members: Mrs. C. A. Leland, Miss Ada Nash, Miss Margaret M. Page, Misses Fanny and Lucy Westphal and Agnes Reid.

The Lyceum in the League.

The Diocesan Bowling League of Newark held a meeting in Newark last night to arrange a schedule of the games to be bowled. The C. Y. M. L. of this city, of which J. J. Lynch is captain, was represented. The following is the schedule of games to be bowled between the C. Y. M. L. and the various teams:

Dec. 18, C. Y. M. L. and St. Joseph Lyceum of Jersey City, at Plainfield.
Dec. [illegible], C. Y. M. L. and Institute of Newark, at Newark.
Dec. [illegible], C. Y. M. L. and Institute of Newark, at Plainfield.
Dec. [illegible], C. Y. M. L. and T. A. B. of Newark, 2 games, at Plainfield.
Jan. [illegible], C. Y. M. L. and St. Paul of Jersey City, at Jersey City.
Jan. [illegible], C. Y. M. L. and St. Joseph Lyceum of Jersey City, at Jersey City.
Jan. [illegible], C. Y. M. L. and St. Paul of Jersey City, at Plainfield.

DEMOCRATS TO ORGANIZE.

THEY INTEND TO DO GREAT WORK IN THE FUTURE.

Most Excellent List of Nominations—D. C. Ivins, R. L. Burnett and P. Casey for Councilmen-at-Large, E. C. Perkins for School Trustee—J. A. Smith and J. McCarthy for Freeholders—Other Nominees.

At the Democratic City Convention held in the headquarters, 104 West Front street, Friday night, the local ticket was completed, and arrangements were made for a meeting to form a permanent organization of city Democrats. With two exceptions the nominations were made unanimously.

L. F. Wadsworth called the meeting to order, and was chosen chairman. He said that the Democratic party had always risen after defeat and that after the recent adverse election care should be taken that well-known men of the best character should be nominated. L. W. Glover was elected secretary, and Cornelius Loughlin, William K. McClure, A. Saltzman and Ira Hurlburt were appointed a committee on credentials. W. L. Glenk, William W. Myers, Joseph W. Yates and T. A. McCarthy represented the wards as tellers.

Delegates not being present from the Third ward, J. W. Yates, Frank Vosseller and Samuel Wright were elected to fill the vacancies.

Three candidates for Councilmen-at-Large were chosen from the several nominations by the following vote:

DeWitt C. Ivins	38
Robert L. Burnett	36
Patrick Casey	36
Rowland Cox	5
Benjamin O. Bowers	1

Ira G. Hurlburt was mentioned as a candidate for Assessor, but declined. William E. Gardner and Henry Liefke were then named for the office. James E. Martine having stated that Mr. Liefke would probably not accept a nomination, Mr. Gardner was chosen by the vote of 16 to 9.

The following nominations were made unanimously:

For Collector—Joseph M. Harper,
For City Treasurer—Aaron W. Rand,
For Commissioners of Appeal—Jeremiah Manning, the Rev. J. P. Taylor.
For Chosen Freeholders—J. Augustus Smith, James McCarthy.

A discussion followed the suggestion of Edward C. Perkins, Peter Flynn, Jr., and the Rev. Wm. R. Richards for School Trustee.

W. K. McClure said that he believed the meeting was a Democratic Convention, and as Mr. Richards, being a Republican, had no vote in the primaries, the delegates had no right to put him on the ticket. W. W. Myers remarked that Mr. Richards had stated that he was a Democrat, and Mr. McClure said that Mr Richards had been in bad company for a good follower of Jefferson.

J. W. Yates then spoke at length in favor of Dr. Richard's candidacy. He considered himself as old and faithful a Democrat as anyone present except the chairman, and felt hurt by the intimation that he had offered the name of a Republican. At any rate, it was time for Democrats to feel that their party was weakening when they could not nominate a man for such an office as school trustee solely for his character and ability. He believed the party should choose men who would bring strength to the minority and safety to a public institution.

Mr. Yates, on nominating Mr. Richards, stated that he had no direct authority from the gentleman himself.

The vote stood:

Perkins	35
Richards	5
Peter Flynn, Jr.	1

On motion the chair appointed John Rafferty, W. Myers, F. Vosseller and Edward J. Harding a committee to fill vacancies.

Vincent L. Franze stated that the delegates of the Second and Fourth wards had arranged for a meeting at headquarters for the purpose of arranging for the forming of a permanent Democratic organization in the city.

Chairman Wadsworth spoke of the need of such an organization, the date of the meeting was made next Monday evening, and the meeting was adjourned, all the delegates being requested to attend on that night.

GRIST OF THE CITY COURT.

Michael Fox Saw Plainfield for the First Time in 17 Years, and Brought Up in Jail in a Dazed Condition.

Three cases were disposed of in the City Court Saturday morning by Judge Coddington.

Michael Fox, who was arrested for being drunk and disorderly on North avenue late last night, said that he had returned from Connecticut to visit Plainfield after an absence of 17 years; and that he remembered but little of his actions although he could not have been very drunk. His sentence was $3 or ten days in jail, but was reduced to a $1 fine on promise to make his visit short.

Frederick Durand was charged by the manager of the Sherman Outfitting Company with using profane language on November 14, and breaking the plate-glass window of the store at 241 West Front street two nights later. The first complaint was dismissed on the ground of insufficient evidence. On the second the plaintiff had no direct evidence, and Durand proved an alibi and was discharged.

The case of Mrs. David McLernon against Mrs. Mary English and Mrs. Ellen Hulsbech, who were charged with calling her names and otherwise abusing her, was apparently the result of a general neighborly quarrel. After a long examination of the witnesses and the parties concerned, the Judge imposed a fine of $5 each, stating that although the charge had not been fully proved a disturbance had been created by the defendants. All of the participants were reprimanded.

Plainfield Talent to Entertain.

An entertainment will be given in Voorhees Hall, Bound Brook, December 7, under the auspices of the Washington Guards. J. H. Carney, Carl Rudolph, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Vogland, and the Mandolin Society will participate.

TWO CANDIDATES TURNED DOWN.

FREEHOLDER VANDERBEEK AND SCHOOL TRUSTEE RICHARDS FAIL OF RENOMINATION.

Republicans Complete Their Ticket—J. B. Dumont, E. E. Erickson and Wm. A. Westphal Nominated for Councilmen at Large—Dr. Jenkins for School Trustee—John Tier for Freeholder—Other Officials Renominated.

The Republican City Convention Friday night was very harmonious save over the nomination of School Trustee and Freeholder. The following officers were elected without opposition:

Chairman—Ernest R. Ackerman.
Secretary—Eugene F. Murray.
Judge—C. B. Corwin.
Inspectors—E. R. Anthony, William Newcorn.

The ticket nominated is as follows:

For Councilmen at Large—John B. Dumont, E. E. Erickson, Wm. A. Westphal.
For Assessor—J. A. Hubbard.
For Collector—John Johnson.
For Treasurer—Alex. Titsworth.
For Commissioners of Appeal—Wm. C. Ayres, J. F. MacDonald.
For Chosen Freeholders—J. F. Hubbard, J. H. Tier, Sr.
For School Trustee—O. L. Jenkins.

The voting for most of these was unanimous, and in such cases Clerk Murray cast one ballot as the voice of the convention.

There were three candidates, however, for Freeholder, and only two were to be chosen. There was no discussion of the candidates. The vote was as follows:

J. Frank Hubbard	48
John H. Tier	34
A. Vanderbeek	26

The candidacy for School Trustee was earnestly discussed.

Rufus K. Case made a happy reference to its being a case of D. D. vs. M. D.—and "How happy we could be with either, were t'other dear Doctor away". He dwelt on Dr Richards's special qualifications for Trustee and argued that he should be continued in the office.

John B. Dumont and A. L. Titsworth also spoke warmly in favor of Dr Richards.

E. R. Anthony argued that Dr. Jenkins should be rewarded with the nomination for having withdrawn manfully and voluntarily for the sake of another man in a previous convention; and Wm Newcorn made a most telling appeal to the Fourth Warders to stand by Dr. Jenkins because it was for the Fourth ward candidate that he had previously stepped aside. He held that the ward owed Dr. Jenkins a debt of gratitude. Dr. Jenkins he held to be a man of zeal and fidelity, and one who would favor just economy in the administration of public funds. Furthermore, he held that there should be less sectarian representation on the School Board; it was better for the people at large that neither Jewish rabbi, Roman priest, nor Protestant clergyman, should be elected to guard such a cosmopolitan interest.

The reading of the ballots was close and exciting. The result:

Jenkins	31
Richards	24

On motion of J W. Murray, the Chairman and the chairman of each ward delegation were authoried to fill vacancies.

PROGRESSIVE EUCHRE DOVE PARTY

Delightful Entertainment Conducted by a Charming Hostess.

One of the pleasantest events of the opening was a "Progressive Euchre Dove Party," given yesterday afternoon by Mrs Eugene Gross of West Seventh street, in honor of her niece Miss Alice Crowther of Cincinnati, whose visit to the last is drawing to a close.

Mrs Gross was assisted in entertaining Miss Slevin of Franklin place, and the efforts of both hostesses in giving pleasure were more than successful.

The game enjoyed was "blind euchre," a variation of the old stand-by which especially invokes the aid of the blind goddess. To the delight of all present the very handsome first prize was won by the recipient of the party, Miss Crowther, whose golden stars were rewarded by a silver jewel stand. The second prize, a beautiful silver-cornered pocket-book, was won by Miss Honegar.

A delicious repast, followed by music closed an afternoon which everyone voted one of the pleasantest possible.

The guests were:

Miss Alice Crowther, of Cincinnati, the Misses Reilly, the Misses Miller of Park avenue, Miss Annie Slevin, Miss May Dumont, Miss Negley, the Misses Lord, Miss Annie Boone, Miss Florence Honegar, Miss Grace Langdon, Miss Marion Taggart, Mrs. James L. Slevin and Mrs. Conway of Ridgewood, N. J.

Princeton Concert in the Casino.

It is now definitely arranged that the Princeton University Glee, Banjo, and Mandolin clubs will give a concert in the Casino Thursday evening, Dec. 7. The Princeton Alumni of Plainfield have been actively engaged in arranging for the concert and everything will be done to make it an undoubted success both as to its musical and vocal features. A list of the patronesses will be published in the Press in a few days. The glee club this year contains many voices of exceptional quality and among the singers Plainfielders will be pleased to recognize Alfred E Holmes of this city. The music of the mandolin is always one of the features of Princeton musical performances as Princeton was the first college in America to have a mandolin club and it is today unrivalled by any organization of the kind in other colleges. Tickets will be placed on sale in about a week.

Capt. King Writes Again.

The complete novel in the December number of Lippincott's is "Sergeant Crœsus", by Captain Charles King. It is one of his most interesting tales of army life and Indian fighting in the wild West, and makes a new departure in having a private and a foreigner for its hero.

The tenth and last of Lippincott's Notable Stories, "When Hester Came", will be found to be one of the very best, as it is the longest, of the series. It is by an entirely new and very promising writer, Mrs. Bridie Neill Taylor, of Texas.

There are many other attractive features. Lippincott's leads.

Great Work by a Great Man.

The Visitor says that the Rev. Dr. J. L. Hurlbut is very busy this winter. In addition to his out of town engagements he supervises the Sunday-school lessons to three large classes of teachers, having taken Dr. Schauffler's place in the Broadway Tabernacle, Ralph Wells's in the Presbyterian church on Fourth avenue and Twenty-second street, and a large class in Brooklyn.

The Constitutionalist, A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY. A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor. PUBLISHED AT Plainfield, New Jersey. TERMS—TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

SHALL ELECTION BE CHANGED?

SUCH A REFORM RECOMMENDED BY CHAIRMAN MARTINE.

Democrats Make Excellent Ward Nominations—W. L. Glenk, C. P. Ralli and V. L. Franze the Councilmanic Nominees.

The Democratic primaries were held Thursday night as follows:

FIRST WARD.

In the First Ward the officers and nominations were as follows:

Chairman—L. F. Wadsworth.
Judge—C. Kerrih.
For Councilman—W. L. Glenk.
For Justice of the Peace—L. F. Wadsworth.
For Constable—Thomas Callahan.
Delegates to City Convention—L. F. Wadsworth, C. Loughlin, W. L. Glenk, John Rafferty, John Anglemann.

SECOND WARD.

The Second Ward primary was held in the Bryant school building last evening, as resulted as follows:

Chairman—J. E. Martine.
Secretary—L. G. Timpson.
Judge—James Morrison.
Inspector—L. M. Stover.
For Councilman—C. P. Ralli.
For Justice of the Peace—George N. Cortwright.
For Constable—Wm. Callahan.
Delegates to the City Convention—W. K. McClure, DeWitt C. Ivins, W. W. Myers, J. B. Guttridge, L. G. Timpson.

Chairman Martine favored changing the time of holding the city election from December to April or thereabouts. He said the best of one ballot had hardly died out when another one had to be engaged in. The delegates were authorized to bring the matter before the Convention tonight, with a view of having suitable resolutions adopted and presented to the Council, asking that body to apply to the Legislature for a change in the time of holding the charter elections.

The delegates were empowered to fill vacancies, and the meeting adjourned.

THIRD WARD.

Only four voters attended the Third Ward primary, which was officered by Chairman F. M. Bacon and Secretary William O'Connor.

A. Saltzman, W. O'Connor and George Mehl were elected convention delegates. No nominations were made.

FOURTH WARD.

The Fourth ward primary was called to order by Vincent L. Franze. Joseph Sheppard was chosen chairman, T. A. McCarthy secretary, William Smith judge, and Peter Flynn and Peter Bliem inspectors.

The following delegates were chosen to represent the ward in the City Convention to nominate candidates for city offices: Ira Hurlburt, Frank Cullen, T. A. McCarthy, P. J. Reville, E J. Harding, V. L. Franze, Nicholas Kelley, W. L. Bowman. The delegates were instructed to fill vacancies.

These nominations were made:

For Councilman—Vincent L. Franze.
For Justice of the Peace—Levi Hetfield.
For Constable—Edward E. Vail.

A resolution was offered by V. L. Franze that the delegates be instructed to confer with the delegates of the different wards of the city with the view of forming a permanent City Democratic organization and to report to the ward next Tuesday evening, November 28. The resolution prevailed. Mr. Franze thanked the meeting for the honor bestowed on him, and assured them that if elected he would do his utmost for the welfare of the city of Plainfield and particularly for the Fourth ward. He recalled to them the strong opposition he had to contend with, he being the only Democrat in the Council, to ten Republicans; and stated that he always voted for the best interest of the workingman.

He reminded them of the struggle he made to establish the nine-hour day for the city employes, and spoke in very glowing terms of the part taken by Councilman Weber in trying to have the measure passed.

Mr. Franze also told of how the other councilman tried to have the bill killed in the hand of the committee, and the struggle he had to have a vote taken on the bill by roll call, and how it stands on the record, two in favor of the bill and seven in opposition. He states that the man that is not in favor of nine hours a day, for the poor man who gets such small pay for the labor performed, is not entitled to the working man's vote, and he hoped that his friends would stand by him on election day.

A motion prevailed to adjourn until next Tuesday evening at the same place, at 8.

PRESBYTERIAN SCOTTICISM.

Caledonian Sociable by the Rev. Herring's People.

The Scotch sociable given by the women of the First Presbyterian church in the Sunday-school room, Thursday, attracted a large audience, who thoroughly enjoyed the excellent and novel programme prepared. It was an informal affair, and a general atmosphere of sociability prevailed.

The young people of the church took an important part in the entertainment, and provided all with amusing selections from the Scotch.

Mr. Lounsbury officiated, and introduced the various numbers in a very happy way.

Miss Josephine Petrie opened the programme with a piano solo, "Scotch Melodies", which was followed with a recitation by Harry Messerschmidt.

A piano duet entitled "Tam O'Shanter" was very well rendered by Olive Newell and Edith Hurlbut. A burlesque on "Young Lochinvar" was given and hugely enjoyed. Miss Jessie Mackellop read the selection, and the following young people acted the parts: The Misses Cave, Searing, Maggie Vermeule, Nora Williams, Lottie Messerschmidt, Helen Boice and Fanny Herring, and Messrs. Charles Hamilton, John Petrie, Frank Flannery, G. Searing, Guernsey Nevins.

"Bonnie Dundee" was sung as a chorus, concluding part first.

After a few minutes of intermission, Willie Mackellop rendered an excellent violin solo of Scotch melodies, accompanied by Miss Benson on the piano. "Cuddle Doon" was recited by Miss Jessie Mackellop in true Scotch fashion. "Comin' thro' the Rye" was an amusing sketch, given with the aid of a dark room and large white sheet, and a lamp behind it to represent the characters in shadow to the audience. Miss Benson followed with a piano solo, "Bonnie Doon". "A Gude Cup o' Tea" was the title of a pretty Scotch song, rendered by Miss Fanny Herring, Miss Flora Petrie, John Petrie and Charles Hamilton.

The programme concluded by all singing "Auld Lang Syne". Refreshments were served.

The Constitutionalist.

A. L. Force, Publisher & Proprietor.

The impression which obtained at the Republican City Convention that Dr. Richards was a member of the School Board at the time of the purchase of the Wadsworth property, is erroneous. He was not chosen to fill Dr. Hurlbut's place till after that purchase. But he was so unfortunate as to be included in the general condemnation of the Board for its extravagant notions and doings, inasmuch as he like the other Trustees has shown no disposition to undo that which Mayor Gilbert and the Council condemned.

As that anti-poster ordinance now reads, any prude taking offense at any picture displayed, either on bill-board or in art or book store, may put an entirely innocent man to the annoyance and injustice of arrest and trial before the City Judge. If such an ordinance is to pass, it should specify just exactly what may not be displayed, in no unmistakable language. This is not a matter in which decision should be left open as to just what is indecent and what is not. Specify, gentlemen, specify—or else kill the ordinance.

What shall be said of a paper which because a number of workmen from infected Elizabeth are hired to work on a Plainfield real-estate contract publishes as its leading article a sensational claim that the city is probably on the verge of a smallpox epidemic? The issue of The Evening News last night, with its picture of a death-head, and its glaring headline "Is Smallpox Here?" is the foulest blow ever aimed at Plainfield's public safety. In case of actual epidemic, a good newspaper's duty is to endeavor to keep the public mind free from alarm, yet here is a journal striving to create alarm when there is no cause whatever for it.

The turning-down of Freeholder Vanderbeek is attributed by Republicans to the fact that he, a man of possessions, held two offices, that he had been a Freeholder long enough to make good money from its income, and that he ought to give someone else a chance. Then what's the matter with giving someone else a chance at the office of Tax Collector? Mr. Johnson was originally elected because he needed the income. Now that he too has accumulated profitable possession, why shouldn't some of the poorer and just as worthy men of the town have a show? What's sauce for Vanderbeek should be sauce for Johnson. Voters will remember this election day.

"If there's one thing that more than another I detest in a man,"—says honest Jim Martine—"it's perfidy." What then must he think, and what must all honest men think, of the latest base treachery of which the local Republican organ is guilty? Freeholder Vanderbeek has been in the service of the people on the county Board eleven years. He has been a most active and faithful representative, free from partisanship, and satisfactory to Republicans and Democrats alike. But some one in the ring which rules the organ has an axe to grind, and so starts the organist turning the stone. And the burden of the effort is to grind down Freeholder Vanderbeek and grind in some other as his possible successor. The Republican candidacy for Freeholder belongs by all the rights of political precedent and performance to Mr. Vanderbeek, and the honest-minded Republican delegates in City Convention tonight should administer a fitting rebuke to this attempt to belittle his record and to retire him from office. As a newspaper and not an organ, The Press insists that the Republican nomination for Freeholder belongs to Mr. Vanderbeek.

DR. PARKHURST OF PLAINFIELD.

Fortunately for the self-respecting city of Plainfield, it is not to have after this year a clerk who will wilfully falsify the facts as recorded in the actual doings of the Council for the small and mean purpose of bolstering up his "moral" campaign of personal abuse and misrepresentation. The present City Clerk lobbied in the ante-room of the Council last night for the passage of the anti-poster ordinance. He evidently flattered himself that he had pulled enough wool to cover the eyes of the City Fathers. But the Plainfield Councilmen are a set of fair-minded and honorable men, and they were not to be fooled by the antics of the local Dr. Parkhurst. Like The Press, they are in favor of all honest efforts to extend the influence of law and order, but they declined to be drawn into any hasty legislation. They recognized that the ordinance as introduced was unfair to the legitimate business of bill-posting, unfair to the legitimate advertising of perfumes and what-not in drug stores, unfair to all dealers in art works and illustrated literature, all of whom would by its terms be in constant menace of arrest at the instance of any-one in whose opinion any poster, art work or piece of literature was "indelicate". And inasmuch as they did not wish to be a party to any unfairness and injustice they declined to act until a committee of good and true citizens should have investigated the matter.

That is the truth, as any Doubting Thomas may learn from the lips of Councilman Fisk, who made the motion as adopted, or any other of the Councilmen who voted for it.

That is the truth. But what does Mr.

The attention of the Parkhurst editor is respectfully directed to that unsightly statue over on the Park Club grounds. Hasn't he an old coat and a pair of trousers that he can give it?

As an exponent of true Democratic principles, The Press views with satisfaction the promise made by the local Democracy of effective organization. That is the one thing needful to make the Democratic party a power in Plainfield.

J. A. Smith, who as one of the leading men of the Board of Trade is aiding largely in the inauguration of a new era of prosperity for Plainfield, would make a most zealous and influential representative on the county Board of Freeholders.

The nominations made by the Democratic party for the coming charter election are most excellent, and deserving of the fullest support. The name of Henry B. Ely, who was chosen last night, adds weight to the ticket at large. Mr. Ely is a lawyer of marked ability, and just the sort of a clear-headed and clean-minded man that a city like Plainfield should have in its municipal government.

It is not improbable that the voters of Plainfield will decide next Tuesday that it is time someone else worthy of the emolument and competent to undertake the duties should have a chance to amass property through the income of the Tax Collectorship. Mr. Johnson has made his lands and houses, and ought to be satisfied. Mr. Harper would creditably fill the office, and it would put him on his feet again, where all good citizens would like to see him.

Councilman Frazee's success in business is the envy of the journal in which he declines to advertise. By low prices, honest dealing, and Daily Press advertising, Mr. Frazee has achieved a commercial standing, gratifying and deserved. His business is so great that he and his men cannot get through their work till long after many other stores are closed. But his men get paid just wages for their full time, and as long as they are satisfied to make overtime money nobody has a right to criticise. Mr. Frazee is the workingman's best friend in the Common Council today, and his business experience and ability make him a most valuable member.

LOCAL DEMOCRACY TO ORGANIZE.

REPRESENTATIVE COMMITTEE APPOINTED TO PERFECT PLANS.

Each Election District Elects a Member, Showing the Widespread Interest of the Awakened Leaders of the People's Party.

Substantial steps towards effecting a permanent organization of the Democrats of the city were taken last night at a meeting in the party's headquarters on West Front street.

The meeting was called to order by Judge L. F. Wadsworth, who was elected chairman. William Wright was chosen secretary of the meeting.

A motion was made that the chair appoint a committee, made up of one from each ward, to make plans for organizing and to report at a public meeting after the charter election. After some discussion the motion was carried, but was immediately afterwards reconsidered.

An amended motion was then carried, increasing the number of the committee to one member from each voting district, and permitting them to be selected representatively by the men present from each ward.

In accordance with the motion the following were chosen:

First ward, first district, John J. Kenney; second district, Wm. L. Gloak.

Second ward, first district—Frank Vosseler; second district, G. P. Kalit.

Third ward, William O'Connor.

Fourth ward, first district, Peter Flynn, Jr.; second district, Ira G. Hurlbut.

Henry B. Ely moved that in order to avoid misunderstanding the committee be instructed to draft a plan of organization which they should submit at a public meeting of Democrats to be called by the committee before January 1. The motion was carried, and the meeting was then adjourned.

A CREDIT TO THE TICKET.

HENRY B. ELY A MOST EXCELLENT NOMINEE.

This Talented and Progressive Lawyer Would Make a Most Earnest Champion of the City's Best Interests.

Henry B. Ely, candidate for Councilman at Large, was born in the city of New York in 1866, and until two years ago resided in that city. He received his education at Columbia College, from which institution he was graduated with the degree of A. B. in 1888; and two years later was admitted to the practice of law at the New York State bar, after completing the regular course at the Columbia Law School. Since that time he has been engaged in New York in the practice of his profession, having served his apprenticeship as a law clerk in the office of the well-known law firm of Carter & Ledyard.

ORGANIZING A CHARITY SYSTEM.

PROGRESS MADE IN THE MATTER OF SYSTEMATIC GIVING.

Local Philanthropic Workers Discuss the Situation—Influential Committee Appointed to Further the Cause.

The condition of the poor of Plainfield during the present business depression, and the best means for relieving the suffering existing among them, were thoroughly discussed at a meeting in the parlor of the Crescent Avenue church Monday night.

The Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards called the meeting to order shortly after 8. Mayor Gilbert was chosen chairman, and George Goddard secretary.

In explaining the reasons for calling the meeting the Mayor said there was great need of an awakening of public interest in the relief of the suffering prevailing among the poor by reason of the hard times. He believed that the people would be willing to contribute liberally during the winter if they were assured that the money would be wisely disbursed. Money was not lacking so much as system. The Ladies Relief Association had done and was doing excellent work, but their efforts should be supplemented by an auxiliary organization. It was practically impossible for the city to care for all the poor. Besides being controlled by the laws, the Overseer of the Poor has but a limited amount of money at his command. The appropriation is made by the Council at the beginning of the year, when any special need caused by sickness or commercial depression cannot be anticipated and provided for.

Mayor Gilbert further spoke of several schemes for providing work for the unemployed poor. The city had no public improvements under way, but many citizens could find odd jobs about their houses which they could have done by needy persons. He suggested the forming of an association to raise money to be expended by the Ladies Relief Association.

Rowland Cox proposed a committee of three to consider a plan carrying out Mayor Gilbert's suggestion and to report at the meeting.

Dr. Richards and Chas. W. McCutchen thought the sense of the meeting could be ascertained by debating the question at once.

L. N. Lovell favored a committee including the chairman of the meeting to arrange the details of organizing. The Relief Association had the means of disbursing money properly; the new society should simply investigate the cases brought before them.

The Chairman stated that the movement had been started to raise funds immediately and place them at the disposal of the Ladies Association.

Mr. McCutchen spoke of the necessity of immediate action and advocated consolidation or a system of supervision of the different societies.

William D. Murray thought that money should be raised at the meeting, and favored any system by which the funds could be properly disbursed, so that the different societies would not conflict by several giving to the same applicant.

L. W. Serrell advised the appointment of a committee to confer with one representative of each church charities society, the Overseer of the Poor and the Relief Association.

William T. Kaufman said that the Union County Country Club had recently taken steps to raise money for charity and were having circulars prepared to be generally circulated asking for contributions of a certain sum each week during the winter. The Mayor of Plainfield, the Mayor of North Plainfield, Pliny Fisk, the Rev. P. E. Smyth, and the Rev. G. K. Newell had been selected a committee to receive contributions and superintend the distribution.

Upon request, Mrs. Alexander Gilbert, President of the Relief Association, gave an account of the methods of the society. Applications are referred for investigation to "visitors" who report weekly to the Executive Committee. Cases requiring immediate relief are usually provided for personally by one of the officers. Records are kept of all the information obtainable in regard to persons so aided and are open for inspection by any who may desire to know if the society has already assisted an applicant for aid. The managing board contains two members from each of the church organizations in the city.

S. A. Ginna advocated the employment of the Relief Association as a means of reaching the destitute.

Charles Fisk advocated the raising of money at once and the appointment of the same committee as that of the Country Club to receive funds and disburse them through the different societies, and afterwards to consider plans of an investigating organization.

His motion to this effect was amended by D. O. Tiffany to confine the committee to the use of the Relief Association in expending money. The motion and the amendment were carried.

A. S. Patterson moved a reconsideration of the motion on the ground that the double duties of the committee might conflict, but the motion was lost.

The meeting then adjourned.

BOOKS AND READING DISCUSSED.

A Third Class of Book Handlers Discovered, the Book Returners.

A meeting of the Branch Alliance of

A PLAINFIELD FIANCEE.

Miss Maude Chilton and Her Engagement to the Junior Leonard W. Serrell.

(From The Jersey City Democrat.)

Perhaps, among the many engagements which it has been my special privilege to announce, there has not been one that will occasion more surprise than that of Miss Maude James Chilton, daughter of Bruce Chilton, to Leonard William Serrell, Jr. To make the announcement certainly gives me pleasure, and at the same time gives a subject of discussion to the circle to which both parties belong. Although Mr. Serrell is a resident of Plainfield, he is well-known in Jersey City, and during the past year has been one of the shining lights of many of the prominent social functions. He is the son of Leonard William Serrell, Sr., the celebrated patent lawyer of New York city. With the Class of '87 of Stevens Institute, of Hoboken, he graduated with honors. Having a taste for the study of electricity, he at once began to pursue it and is now one of the best of electrical engineers.

It seems quite unnecessary to tell much about Miss Chilton, for I think there are few maidens in Hudson county better known or more popular. That she is one of the most ambitious young women in society at present cannot be denied. It is generally understood she is clever in everything she undertakes. For several years she has been a powerful acquisition to all the amateur theatricals, and within the last year shone considerably in the literary kingdom. There is no disputing that this last year has been an eventful one in the history of Miss Chilton's life. Besides writing a serial which is being published in a local society magazine, she has also written a novel to be ready for publication early in January. The book will be known by the title of Society's Protege. It will contain one hundred and fifty pages and be published by the Cleveland Publishing Company, of New York. Miss Chilton's object in writing it is to show up society in all its phases. The characters are all realistic, and some of the fashionable set of Jersey City need not be surprised to find themselves vividly portrayed between its covers.

Miss Chilton positively declares being engaged will not end her literary career. She says she loves the work and her success as a novelist has spurred her on to greater efforts. It is her intention to write another society novel after her first attempt has been circulated. There has been no date set for the marriage, but Miss Chilton does not deny that it may possibly take place in the spring.

The Democrat being the paper preferred among the many local ones to publish the announcement, offers congratulations to the happy young couple and wishes them a bright future.

COMPETITION FOR COMMANDER.

Grand Army Nominations—New Overcoats Ordered.

Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., met in regular session on Tuesday and placed in nomination the following officers, the election to take place Tuesday Dec. 12:

Commander—M. C. Dobbins vs. S. W. Reese.
S. V.—Charles Stephens.
J. V.—Chas. Westphal vs. Wm. R. Moore.
Sergeant—Wm. Hand.
Chaplain—John Goodman vs. Chas. Graves.
Officer of Day—I. McVoy.
Quartermaster—Andrew Cox.
Officer of the Guard—Henry Drake vs. L. V. F. Randolph.
Drum Major—J. Bogert.
Council of Administration—W. C. Smith, John E. Stewart.
Delegate to National Encampment—W. E. Alpaugh.

Some discussion took place on the subject of procuring dark-blue military overcoats for the members of the Post, and as to whether the cost of the same should be borne individually or the money taken from the Post funds. It was decided to purchase the coats, and nine members signified their willingness to pay for their own.

For the Cremorne Mission Cause.

Services were held in the First Presbyterian church last evening by workers from the Jerry McAuley Cremorne Mission.

The speakers were introduced by the Rev. C. E. Herring. Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Ballou, mission superintendents, spoke of the methods they pursued. Two converts gave the stories of their lives, and Miss Wright, Mr. Ballou's niece, sang a solo and made an address.

An appeal was made for contributions of money and clothing to aid in carrying on the work.

Race Officials Tomorrow.

The racing committee of the Crescent Wheelmen met last night and appointed officers for the Cranford road race to be held tomorrow. They were as follows:

Clerk—Judy Fritts.
Judges—Dr. Fritts, A. Kline, C. Teel.
Timers—C. Vail, D. Stevens.
Starter—A. T. Hinricks.
Scorers—C. P. Leggett, G. Tobin, G. Stevens, J. Hackle.
Umpires—J. Hibbitts, Robert Mosher, J. A. Haynes, L. B. Woolston, Dr. Adams.

To Study Political Economy.

A class of women for the study of political economy has been formed to be conducted by Mrs. Maria Huntington Elwell. There will be five lessons all at the house of Mrs. J. K. Myers, 137 East Seventh street, beginning December 7. Members of the class are requested to study the opening chapters of the book recommended by Mrs. Elwell.

A Reader of Grace and Finish.

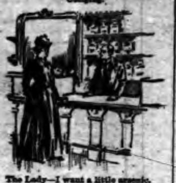
Among the artists engaged for Dec. 18 in the Casino is Miss Jean Wilson, of whom the New York Times says:

Miss Jean Wilson is a Washington elocutionist whose appearance in New York has been cordially avowed. At a recent gathering of women Miss Wilson recited several pieces, the rendition of which roused her listeners to the pitch of enthusiasm. Adelaide Proctor's "Message" and a poem of the "Spinning Wheel" were exquisitely given. Miss Wilson brings out every shade of the author's meaning with grace and finish.

Brilliant, and Coming to Plainfield.

"A brilliant young pianist" remarks the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. "A pianist of much delicacy and expression"—adds the Chicago Inter-Ocean. They were speaking of Wilbert R. Lewis, who is one of the artists booked for the Casino Dec. 18.

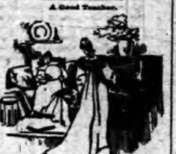
Obliging.



The Lady—I want a little arsenic.

"Yes, miss. Complexion or suicide?"—Brooklyn Life.

A Good Teacher.

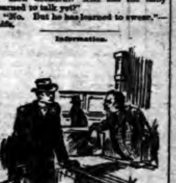


"I am afraid of waking baby, for poor Robert has walked the floor every night with him for the last three weeks."

"How dreadful! And has the baby learned to talk yet?"

"No. But he has learned to swear."—Life.

Information.



Young Man—I want an engagement ring.

Jeweler—Yes, sir. About what size?

Young Man—I don't know exactly, but she can twist me around her finger.—Tit-Bits.

CITY DEPARTMENT.

Walter Irving Clarke, City Editor.

—Times do not appear to be hard with Edward Love. Some of his men are working nights of late.

—James Guttridge of Netherwood is erecting an extensive new hennery, and in the spring expects to raise fowls by wholesale.

—Uncle Peter Wooden is nothing if not generous. A few days ago he drove about the borough distributing squashes and pumpkins among the poor.

—Hotel Albion has been closed temporarily, pending repairs. Col. King and family will remain in the hotel, to book guests for the renewal of the season.

—Andrew M. Vanderbeek has taken charge of the stock in Harper's store, 411 Park avenue, to sell for the assignee. The store is now open, and the bargains are great.

—W. H. Coombs, the Linden avenue grocer, has made a number of improvements on his premises. Noticeable among them is a brand-new coat of paint on his store and barn.

—Because of disgraceful charges against him, Janitor Walker, of the Irving school, has resigned, and Henry F. Pugh has been appointed by the Board of Education to fill the vacancy.

—It will cost you nothing to attend A. D. Thompson's real estate sale at White House, Saturday. Mr. Thompson is giving away railroad passes at his North avenue office.

—The new Westervelt avenue bridge is now open to traffic, and it's a beauty. It should have been built at a higher elevation, but the Somerset Freeholders would'nt agree to that.

—You'll be happier one year from to-day, and have more to give thanks for, if you invest a trifle in A. D. Thompson's White House real estate boom. The auction sale on Saturday is advertised in another column.

—The new barn being erected at Netherwood for Mr. Hinrichs, at a cost of $2,500, is about completed, and when finished will reflect credit on both the architect and builders. The masonry was completed last week, and the carpenters are now fitting up the interior.

—The Epworth League will hold its regular monthly business meeting in Vincent chapel, Friday evening, Dec. 1, after which Dr. Barnds will give the second of a series of Bible talks on "The Tabernacle". This was much enjoyed before, and was instructive. All are invited.

PERSONALIA.

James Huntington, of Pearl street, has been confined to the house for the past ten days.

Miss Hester E. Marsh, teacher in the Bryant school, will spend Thanksgiving with friends in New York.

The family of Charles Hyde will leave town the first week in December to spend the winter in New York.

Moses Carney has purchased from J. S Garretson the property corner of Central avenue and Third street.

J. S. Garretson and family are now domiciled in their new home, 502 Lee place, corner of Fifth street.

Mr. and Mrs. Horace Huff returned from their wedding trip Saturday evening. They were in Chappaqua, N. Y.

J. M. Bettman, of Willow avenue, North Plainfield, is laying a stone walk in front of his property facing Mercer avenue.

The engagement is announced of Miss Maude James Chilton, the Jersey City novelist, to Lemuel W. Serrell, Jr., of this city.

George M. Rittenhouse is engaged in his semi-annual business trip through the dairy regions of the central west. He goes as far as Iowa.

Miss Cecilia Staats, daughter of Postmaster Peter C. Staats of Dunellen, will spend Thanksgiving with friends in Clinton, Pennsylvania.

The Park Club will give an informal holiday dinner under the management of the Junior Entertainment Committee, Friday evening, Dec. 1.

Mr. and Mrs. John L. Darby will celebrate their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary Saturday, Dec. 23, from 3 to 10, at their home in Alton.

Mrs. Charles H. Schermerhorn returned from Lake Saranac Saturday, leaving her son Charles greatly improved. He will remain there during the winter.

Pending zero weather, Mr. Evans will have a fishing bee for a select few of the Park Club members on his new lake, back of the club-house, that is, as soon as he can get it to hold water.

Orville T. Waring, son of E. J. Waring of Willow avenue, who was recently stricken with diphtheria, as mentioned in these columns, has so far recovered that he is now able to be out.

J. E. Cobb having closed his school for Thanksgiving week, he and Mrs. Cobb are spending a most enjoyable week with Mrs. Cobb's father, Joseph B. Hurlburt, of the borough.

Halstead Compton leaves Saturday morning, by the Old Dominion Steamship Line, for Norfolk, Va., and goes thence by rail to Newberne, where he expects great shooting at wild turkeys.

The Rev. J. M. D. Gardiner, of St. Paul's College, Tokyo, will lecture on "Japan", in Grace church chapel, Friday evening, December 8, at 8, under the auspices of the Helping Hand Society.

Col. Theodore B. Hamilton, formerly of East Fifth street, died at the home of his son Thomas, Staten Island, last Friday. He was an old war veteran, and for years in the Custom-House, New York.

Contractor Finton Hibbitts was recently awarded the contract by the Somerset County Board of Freeholders to tear down and replace the old arch bridge in front of the Hillman property on Somerset street.

At their future residence, 64 Manning avenue, at 8 Thursday evening, will take place the marriage of Miss Emma Herlich and Rudolph Koerting. The Rev. Mr. Klonka will officiate. S. H. Schleif will be best man, and Miss Katie Williams bridesmaid. A reception will follow.

Hard Luck for the Ex-Policeman.

Ex-policeman Patrick Bergen, of this city, started in the early morning, a day or two ago, with a single-barreled shotgun for the purpose of killing all the game in Union and Passaic counties. He took along about one dollar's worth of ammunition, both wet and dry, and after tramping through Scotch Plains, New Providence, Summit and Passaic all day reached home at nightfall leg-worn and weary, not even getting a chance to shoot at a sparrow. Mr. Bergen says this is the first and last hunting experience he wants this season, as besides his other ill-luck he had to come into town by the back way, on account of torn pantaloons.

THE SEASON'S SOCIAL PROSPECTS.

NOT MUCH AMUSEMENT IN A THEATRICAL WAY.

Dearth of Projects Commented on by Free-Lance Pen—Congratulations that "As You Like It" Was Not Performed—Other Society Topics.

"What has become of all the theatricals that we were to have had this season?" That is the question one hears on every side when the prospects of the winter's amusements are being discussed. It would puzzle, I think, even those concerned in the proposed plays to answer it. There are several significant facts, however, which for persons who are adept at that mental process commonly called putting two and two together, may furnish a more or less satisfactory explanation.

In the first place it may be remembered by some that the erewhile propagator and manager of theatrical affairs of the Country Club swore a dreadful oath after his reception as a funny man last spring never to play or manage in Plainfield again.

This was really too bad as the aforesaid gentleman was a good coach an efficient manager and a pleasant fellow withal. That he should have made the mistake that he did last spring in his choice of stories and horse play was a mystery to every one as he had had an excellent demonstration of what would go down before a Plainfield audience when a very near relative of his played to a large and fashionable gathering in Music Hall. On that occasion one might have heard a pin drop when every one should have been laughing.

Deprived of their manager and coach the company began looking around for a substitute and found an excellent substitute in Charles Noe Daly, but Mr. Daly went to Canada this fall for Uncle Sam and is now coaching with a four-in-hand instead of leading ambitious Thespians through the intricacies of the drama. Added to these difficulties there has been the inevitable theatrical row and in that, of course, was concerned the best talent in the company; so take it all together we need not expect any performances in the immediate future.

We still have something for which to be thankful however. "As You Like It" was not performed. That catastrophe was barely averted as the parts had been assigned and the soaring ones had already succeeded in committing a few lines to memory. The reason given for "calling it off" was, as usual, the lack of anyone to take hold and run the thing as it should have been run.

It is rather early to say anything about it, but there is really some promise of a play in Easter week. Whether the propagators of the scheme have gone outside of French's catalogue, I know not, but it is consoling to know that the boards of the Casino stage will be walked at least once during the season.

The Melopoia Society is to be congratulated in making every possible effort to get Henri Marteau to perform at one of its concerts. It is a very pleasant thing for the subscribers to look forward to. But there are a great many music-loving people who do not care to subscribe to the series of concerts but who would take every opportunity possible to hear so distinguished a virtuoso as M. Marteau. They say that the Melopoia lost money last year and if that be true they will certainly lose it this season.

Now here is a very good chance for the society to add a few honest shekles to the treasury. Let its managers sell extra single tickets for the concert at which M. Marteau is to play. If there is not room in the Casino, there are larger halls in town that are used for musical purposes than the club playhouse. It would certainly pay if the fact were advertised a little, and many people would take that opportunity of hearing one of the greatest living violinists. I realize that the Melopoia is proud but we must all sacrifice that much maligned virtue in hard times.

Anyone from Plainfield chancing to drop in at the Waldorf during horse show week would have been surprised at the number of faces, familiar at home, that greeted him in that prince of all hostelries. No less than seven Plainfield and Netherwood families were stopping there for periods of from a day or two to two weeks, and one might imagine himself at home, so many nods and smiles would he receive in going into the dining room. Plainfielders are becoming more and more wedded to New York. And it is natural that it should be so. Many of them are Gothamites by birth and upbringing, and it would be strange indeed did they not long at times for the flesh pots of Egypt. Now that the horse show is over the opera will claim the attention of everyone, and a large delegation from Plainfield will undoubtedly be present at the first matinee of the season on Saturday when Faust will be presented by a company that is probably the finest that New York has ever heard.

There have been several attempts made to arrange another paper chase, the first on election day was so very successful. The beauty of the election day ride was in having it from such a charming house and among such pleasant people, and as no one seems to come forward and act as host I fear that the ride that has been arranged for tomorrow will not be as pleasant as the initial effort.

It may be remarked incidentally that the Yale-Princeton football game has in former years proved rather an attraction on that date and that many of the best and most enthusiastic riders will be watching the struggle on Manhattan Field, instead of tracking their way through the wilderness of the surrounding country by means of some rags tied on trees.

THE LOUNGER.

Thankful to the Editors.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—At the last meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary Board of Muhlenberg Hospital the following resolution was passed:

Resolved, To extend a vote of thanks to all who have lent their generous assistance at the fair recently held by the Woman's Auxiliary Board of Muhlenberg Hospital.

We feel especially grateful to the editors of our daily papers for their kind words expressed in behalf of our good cause, also to our merchants for their liberal contributions and to our many friends who have encouraged us with words and deeds and money, and to all others who have aided in accomplishing the result which by far exceeds our expectations.

Our treasurer reports that the net receipts amount to $1,519 18, but by the sale of some of the dolls which were left over and are now being sold at reduced prices we shall probably add a further small amount.

STRONG CANDIDATES FOR COUNCILMEN.

BURNETT AND RALLI SURE TO MAKE A STIRRING FIGHT.

The Gallant Major and His War and Grand Army Record—Mr. Ralli Risked the Loss of English Possessions for the Sake of American Citizenship.

The Republican party is fond of dwelling on the war records of its candidates all over the country, and is wont to assert that the Democrats never put up a soldier candidate for election because there are no soldiers in their party. The followers of the elephant in his devious paths have reasserted this statement to such lengths that many people believe it.

As a matter of fact, the Union Army in the War of the Rebellion had in its make-up a large percentage of Democrats. The Irish regiments that rendered such magnificent service were Democrats to a man, and great numbers of men whose fathers and grandfathers were American-born were of the same persuasion.

In Major Robert L. Burnett, a Democratic candidate for Councilman at Large, is seen a man of the latter class. A solid Democrat, believing thoroughly in the principles of the Democracy, he has a war record of which anyone might be proud.

Major Burnett was born in Newburgh, N. Y. Previous to the war he resided in Philadelphia. He was among the first to respond to President Lincoln's call for 75,000 men. As First Lieutenant of the Twelfth U. S. Infantry (regulars), he served through the entire campaign with McClellan in the Army of the Potomac. He was Acting Aide-de-Camp to Generals Hannibal H. Day and Romeyn B. Ayres. He was brevetted Captain U. S. A. June 27, 1862, for gallant services at the Battle of Gaines's Mill, and brevetted Major U. S. A. July 2, 1863, for gallant services at the Battle of Gettysburg. In 1863 he was sent with his regiment to New York to quell the draft riots. He was Post Commander, Fredericksburg, Va., 1866, and Military Commissioner of the counties adjacent thereto under the Reconstruction Acts of Congress, superintending all civil affairs, conducting elections, appointing all civil officers, etc., under said laws. In 1868 he was ordered to the Pacific coast, and commanded a post in Arizona, where the Apache Indians were giving much trouble. He resigned from the Army Sept. 2, 1870.

Major Burnett is a companion of the Loyal Legion of the U. S. Commandery of New York, and a comrade of George Washington Post, No. 103, G. A. R.

Every Grand Army man in Plainfield, no matter what his politics, should therefore cast a ballot for Major Burnett. His wide experience and knowledge of local government would be a valuable addition to the Common Council.

In nominating Constantine P. Ralli for Councilman the Second ward Democrats displayed much wisdom. Mr. Ralli is a strong man in the ward. He is, like his opponent, Mr. Frost, a naturalized citizen of the United States. He is an Englishman by birth, and took out his naturalization papers not only against the wishes of his people on the other side of the water but in spite of the threat of a large pecuniary disadvantage which his action involved. America and American institutions were dearer to him than all else.

Mr. Ralli was educated in England, going through the prescribed school and university course at Harrow and Oxford.

Mr. Ralli believes in advancing the city's interests in the way of improvements in every possible way. He is strongly in favor of a sewerage system. Improvements in the Second ward above Ninth street have been practically unknown under the government of previous councils, though the tax bills of this part of the ward form a very large proportion of the money received by the city. Every voter in the Second ward who believes in having the taxes of the city pay for improvements should support Mr. Ralli. Taxpayers are growing tired of putting their hands into their pockets and paying for this and that while their taxes are applied to improvements in other parts of town. Vote for Ralli, and get some good from your taxes.

Precaution Taken Against Possible Smallpox.

The North Plainfield Board of Health met Tuesday at Dr. Carman's home. Those present were P. M. French, Dr. J. H. Carman, the Rev. W. E. Honeyman and Frank Curtis, the new member, who gives indication of being a most excellent official. Andrew Love was absent. The Board received the official report of Marshal Pangborn concerning the emptying of sewage from a Plainfield store into the raceway, and it was found that the nuisance had been abated. The report was made that a building had been engaged for a pesthouse if necessary, and provision made for nurses in case smallpox should be brought from any infected district.

Major Pond 'Phones to Plainfield.

When a Plainfield newspaper man was called up on the 'phone a few days ago by Major J. B. Pond, the supreme authority on high-grade entertainment artists, he took occasion to ask of the Major what he thought of the booking of Miss Jean Wilson for the Casino Dec. 18.

The gallant Major was in raptures at once.

"Don't you make any mistake:"—he said emphatically—"Jean Wilson is bound to fill the Casino with the best society of the town. She's great, is Jean Wilson—simply and truly great."

The Wheel Lighted and in Motion.

The Ferris Wheel actually revolving, with its myriad of brilliant lights illuminating the fantastic scene, will be one of the novelties of Hart's Cosmorama in Music Hall Thanksgiving Day, matinee and evening.

The Hour Changed for Thanksgiving Day.

The Thanksgiving services in the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Clinton avenue, will commence at 10, instead of 11 as usual. The Rev. Dr. Page of New York will officiate.

Electric Light Improvements the Chief Theme of His Report, But He Also Records Bits of Gossip Afloat.

SPENCER'S GROCERY, }
NORTH PLAINFIELD, Nov. 28. }

"Dore" Vroom and "Dolph" Sanger are frequenting the walls of the Saengerbund Hall.

A small gathering of Socialists meets in the Borough, frequently. They belong in the city of Plainfield.

Wm. Waldron, of the Edison Electric Light Company, has moved to Pearl street from Watchung avenue.

Decorator James Honey has painted Peter Hansen's Emily street residence in the "yallerest" style of the art.

Mrs. Rhinehart and family have taken up their residence in the borough and now live in the house lately vacated by Edward Galley.

A big red poster from the New York Tribune now hangs up in the Cracker Barrel Club, seeking new subscribers for that "dark" sheet.

Aleta Spencer, of Rahway, a bright two-year-old, and a great-granddaughter of Grandma Spencer, is visiting the Spencers of Somerset street.

The two new marshals tread the streets with the mien of Napoleons. Both have gained 12 pounds and have only been on duty a trifle over a week.

The new bridge that is to take the place of the little culvert over the small stream that passes through Somerset street just above Uhrbahn's place, is about finished.

Everybody, including even the contractor, refuses now to say when they think the school building will be finished. But then it's only three months late "already as yet"!

The proper caper with the borough girls just now is to work their male friends' initials in the corner of handkerchiefs with their hair. Quite cute! Herbert Schutt has eight different designs.

On one of the registry lists of the late election there were two persons registered from asylums, while in the Third ward of Plainfield one person, Charles Blanchard, was registered from the graveyard. And they all voted the Republican ticket.

Watchung avenue is now opened from Jackson avenue to Regent street. Mr. Coddington, who owns the Hillman property, intends to open up that; and Mrs. Samuel Hudson will do likewise on her place, thus opening up the street from Jackson avenue to the edge of the mountains, considerable more than half.

The Edison Electric Light Company of the borough have a gang of men at work putting their lines in first-class shape for the winter, and when the marshals succeed in catching the boys who break the lamps no one will have cause to complain of the service. The brilliancy of the commercial light causes frequent comment, and they are constantly taking on new business. They are now furnishing light in Dunellen and Bound Brook, and have poles set in New Market. There is talk of large additions to the plant next year, and when completed application will undoubtedly be made to the Plainfield Council for an underground franchise in the city.

PAST AND PRESENT SUPPER.

Meals Served in Vincent Chapel in Both the Good Old Way and the New.

The women of the First M. E. church gave a most creditable old-fashioned supper in Vincent chapel Monday night and styled it "Past and Present". A faithful representation was given of days gone by and days that now are.

One room was furnished in the old-fashioned way, with rag carpet on the floor, and with a display of other old-time accessories, such as spinning wheel, open fire-place, bright wood fire, and string of peppers and pumpkin rinds hanging from the mantel, while the entire room was illuminated with candle light. Within this room were several pieces of old-fashioned furniture, books and valuable papers, all of which had a history of deep interest. In this room supper was served in the old-time way, and a good old-fashioned meal was prepared, including such homely but wholesome food as pork and beans, veal, ham, biscuit, rye bread, crullers, cider, apple sauce and pumpkin pie.

In the other room supper was served in the present style, and the difference was marked, everything here being up to date. Both rooms received large patronage, and the tables were constantly being relieved of the good things provided. In the main room fresh home-made candies and lemonade were sold, to ready purchasers.

The church will realize well from this unique and successful affair.

Tuxedo's Talent.

The company which will appear in Music Hall Saturday night in "Tuxedo" is an exceptionally strong one, and includes Hughey Dougherty, Burt Shepard, Arthur Rigby, Ed Marble, Chas. Guyer, formerly of the Madison Square Garden, New York; G. W. Dubelan, F. W. Oakland and J. W. Thompson, late of Primrose and West's minstrels; J. B. Martin the famous basso, Sam'l Compton, Miss Bonnie Goodwin the well-known soubrette, Miss Ida Fitzhugh the American nightingale, May Montfort the operatic contralto, J. Royer West and Alice Montague the famous musical duo, S. C. Blair, Alf Carroll, A. W. VanAuker, and a host of others, including the Grenadier Concert Band, which gives an open-air concert, with selections by well-known soloists. One of the distinctive features will be the Columbian Exposition first part, given by Hughey Dougherty's World's Fair Minstrels, representing every nation under the sun in a picturesque stage setting.

Has All the Features Claimed for It.

Concerning the World's Fair views to be produced in Music Hall, Thanksgiving Day, the Boston Herald says:

In Music Hall, last night, A large crowd attended the illustrated tour of the World's Fair. The scenes given were well displayed and were enjoyed with a keen relish by all present. Hart's Cosmorama of the World's Fair embraces all the special features claimed for it in the printed matter.

KILLED BY A RUNAWAY TEAM.

JOHN OVERLAND'S CHEST CRUSHED BY A WAGON WHEEL.

Part of His Load of Baled Hay Slipped Off and Started the Horses—He Was a Soldier in the Salvation Army.

A fatal runaway accident occurred near the freight-house, about 9, Monday.

John Overland, an employe of F. M. French, loaded the double truck of French Bros. with baled hay from a car on the side track. In going down the hill to East Fourth street the load slipped partly off, and one of the bales falling upon the team started them on a run.

Overland was thrown forward to the ground, the wagon wheel passing over him and crushing his chest. The horses ran on and were caught on Park avenue.

Charles VanNess and Charles Cooper, employed by Albert Seddon, carried the injured man into C. F. French's feed store and summoned Dr. M. B. Long of Park avenue. Overland died twenty minutes later. The body was taken to Undertaker Runyon's establishment.

Overland was nearly thirty years old, was unmarried, and had a brother residing on Grove street. He had been in Mr. French's employ about six months, and formerly drove a water wagon. He was one of the early converts of the Salvation Army. He spoke and sang earnestly in three of the Army meetings yesterday.

Edward M. Thorn, carpenter, of 418 East Second street, who is distinguished from Edward F. Thorn by the name, Big Ed Thorn, made the courageous stop of the runaway team. As they swung from East Fourth street into Park avenue the horses tumbled more of their load into the street. Several men grabbed unsuccessful at the reins, but in front of the coal office of Boice, Runyon & Co, Mr. Thorn snatched the bridle, stopped them, and turned them over to Sergeant Kiely, who came running up. The spectacle of the old man in his plucky act won admiration from all eye-witnesses.

Overland was insured for $684 in the Metropolitan Insurance Company.

Delightful Tours Arranged to Washington by Way of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

A more economical or pleasant way to spend three days could scarcely be devised than that offered by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company in its personally conducted tours to the Capital. $12 from New York, $11 from Philadelphia, and proportionately low rates from intermediate or contiguous points, will cover transportation and hotel expenses during the period of the trip.

The historic and contemporaneous associations of this beautiful city are numberless and render a visit replete with interest. The first tour leaves New York at 11 a. m. and Philadelphia 1:30 p. m., November 30. Other dates are December 14 and 28, January 18, February 8, March 1 and 22, April 12, May 3 and 24. A tourist agent and chaperon will accompany each party and materially aid in the general welfare of the participants.

PROVED HIS POINT.

Crescent Avenue's Congregation Emphasizes Dean Murray's Sermon.

The Rev. James O Murray, D. D., Dean of Princeton College, preached Sunday morning and evening in the Crescent Avenue church, large audiences greeting him on both occasions. The Rev. Dr. Murray is the father of Dr. Wm. H. Murray of this city.

During his morning discourse the Rev. Dr. Murray paid a high compliment to the Christian fortitude of women, and asserted impressively that Christianity always proved the superiority of woman's bravery over that of man's, and of her patient courage over his easygoing faith. If, when making this assertion, the Rev. Dr. Murray had glanced over his congregation, he would have seen all the comfortable ends of the pews occupied by men, while in the less comfortable seats in the middle of the pews were seated the women of the congregation.

Brit Martin's Promotion.

Under the energetic direction of Assistant Superintendent Alfred Norbury, the Plainfield business of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company has assumed such large proportions that no one man can handle it all, and so J. Brit Martin has been chosen as additional Assistant Superintendent to work in team with Mr. Norbury. The selection of Mr. Martin for this important office was made on the strength of his unexcelled record in the company's employ. Mr. Martin assumes his new duties next Monday.

John Bishop has been engaged to take Mr. Martin's place as collector.

His Plainfield Converts Will Follow Him There.

The Rev. Arthur Crane, who has been evangelizing Plainfield, has been secured by the Y. M. C. A. State Committee of New Jersey to give Bible readings and to address the men's mass-meetings, at the State Convention to be held in Montclair Feb. 8 to 11, inclusive.

SOCIAL EVENT IN THE CASINO.

ARTISTS OF EXCEPTIONAL TALENT ENGAGED FOR DECEMBER 18.

Eminent English and American Society Entertainers Preparing to Gratify Plainfield With a Programme of Whole Unequalled Worth—While a Forerunner of Other Delights to Come.

In recognition of the dearth of high-grade amusements in this city, and the demand for elevating entertainment, booking has been made of exceptional artists to present in the Casino the night of Monday, December 18, a programme such as will appeal with especially directness and force to all lovers of that which is choice and cultured in music and literature. The management decided at the outset that the cultured people of the town would appreciate a few select artists in a programme giving scope to their powers, in preference to a large array of mediocre talent; and after careful pruning of the lists Miss Emilie Jean Wilson and Messrs. Philip Ray and Wilbert R. Lewis were chosen; and they three are now at work on a most exceptional programme such as shall completely captivate the large audience that is sure to greet them in the Casino the night of Dec. 18.

Philip Ray, the eminent English society entertainer, humorist and impersonator, who has won encomiums from royalty as well as thunders of applause from the people, is now on his second American tour. He is a remarkably original and versatile artist, and draws tears or laughter at his will. In dramatic recital or laughable anecdote he is equally at home; and his delightful satires on social functions have secured him triumph everywhere. He has traveled twice round the world making people happy, and it is indeed time that Plainfield was favored with his coming.

Wilbert R. Lewis is a distinguished soloist and artistic accompanist. That he is a pianist of exceptional talent is attested by his prominent office as director of the Saxton Conservatory of Music in Denver. He possesses an exquisite touch, great breadth of style, and a keen susceptibility to the varied effects of tone-gradation. His playing is free from technical embarrassments; and from the delicate pianissimo to the sustained and powerful climax it reveals every shade of emotion which it is his design to express. As a special favor to Plainfield admirers of Paderewski, he will give during the coming entertainment that composer's great Minuet, in his own faultless execution.

Miss Emilie Jean Wilson is a great social favorite in Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington, and has for the past few years delighted the most select and fashionable audiences. The finish and naturalness of her style, the melody of her rich tone, the grace and ease of her manners, her facial expression, flexibility in motion, and distinctness in enunciation, are a continual delight to her listeners. The character of the selections chosen by Miss Wilson varies through a wide range, but it is in the ideal and beautiful that she surpasses.

Miss Wilson and Mr. Lewis, accompanying Mr. Ray, are sure to give Plainfield a programme that all will delight to applaud; and the management hope that the success rewarding the effort to afford such rare amusement will be so gratifying as to encourage other entertainment enterprises in the same commendable line.

THE OFFERING OF THE SCHOOLS.

Complete List of the Donations Made by the Children to the Poor.

Press readers will be interested in the list of provisions brought in by the school children Monday as a Thanksgiving offering to the poor of the city. There has been much enthusiasm among the children over their offering, and they have enjoyed deeply the pleasure of giving, some even going without butter that they might be able to give.

The gifts at the Irving school were distributed in that district by a committee of ladies from the chapels there. Some families were supplied by the other schools, and the rest were collected and delivered to the Relief Association free of charge by Lewis B. Coddington. Here is the list:

HIGH SCHOOL.

12 bags of flour, 22 pounds rice, 45 to 50 pounds sugar, 16 boxes cereals, 15 pounds tea and coffee, 10 cans of fruit, vegetables and meat, 2 bushel apples, 7 bushel potatoes, 10 bushel miscellaneous vegetables, a ham, and cabbages, herrings, prunes, crackers, cookies, meal and clothing unnumbered, besides $4.71 in silver and 20 pounds beef.

IRVING SCHOOL.

About 7 bushel potatoes, 1-2 bushel apples, 1-2 bushel turnips, 3 cabbages, 9 squashes, 45 cans vegetables and fruit, 1 pound butter, several packages oatmeal, 40 pounds sugar, 7 pounds tea and coffee, 2 dozen oranges, two packages of clothing, several large bunches celery, 3 cakes soap, 1 package macaroni, 3 barrels vegetables, dried fruits, crackers, etc., 6 bags flour, 3 bags salt.

BRYANT SCHOOL.

20 baskets vegetables, 43 cans jelly, fruit, etc., 24 packages cereals, eggs, chickens, cabbages, oranges, meal, salt, cake, in quantities unestimated.

FRANKLIN SCHOOL.

1 ton coal, 5 bushels potatoes, 1 bushel apples, 2 bushel vegetables, 11 quarts cranberries, 28 pounds sugar, 29 pounds tea and coffee, 40 packages cereals, 15 pounds rice, 17 cabbages, 12 squashes, 5 loaves bread, 4 quarts beans, 28 cans fruit, 24 cans vegetables, 5 cans salmon, 1 can corn beef, 10 glasses jelly, 4 dozen oranges, 1-2 dozen lemons, 1 package crackers, 2 packages gingersnaps, 2 packages cornstarch, 1 package macaroni, 5 pounds prunes, 28 pounds grapes, 1-2 dozen bananas, 1 basket mixed fruits, 2 pounds mixed nuts, 2 boxes candy, 2 bunches celery, 75 cents in money.

WASHINGTON SCHOOL.

25 pounds sugar, 3 baskets potatoes, 1 basket mixed vegetables, 1-2 bushel apples, 10 pounds rice, 6 pounds tea and coffee, 20 cans jelly, fruit, vegetables and meat, and a goodly amount of cabbages, pumpkins, flour, clothing, oranges, crackers, cake, prunes, raisins, beans and cranberries, 20 lbs. cereals.

DR. BOONE INJURED.

He Will Sue Carl Koerth for His Driver's Carelessness.

Dr. W. C Boone had a rib broken and was otherwise seriously injured, Saturday, at Fourth street and Central avenue. One of Carl Koerth's wagons crashed into his buggy from the rear. Driver Stewart's carelessness is held by the physician to be responsible, and suit will be begun against Mr. Koerth. Dr. Boone is suffering much pain.

A MOTHER'S SHOCKING DEATH.

MRS. MARY ENGLISH KILLED WHILE PICKING COAL.

Driven by Hard Times to Gather Fuel Along the Tracks, She Meets a Cruel Fate.

Mrs Mary English was instantly killed on the Jersey Central track near the Netherwood station at 5:50 Wednesday. Mrs. English was gathering coal from the tracks when she was struck by train 417, bound west. The body was taken to Casey's morgue on West Third street, and the County Physician was notified.

The deceased was the wife of J. W. English, an employe in the Scott Press Works, and resided on North avenue, near Netherwood. She was about thirty-three years of age, and leaves four young children. The woman became confused by the approach of two trains. She stepped from in front of one directly in front of the other.

CIGARETTES MADE HER ILL.

She Inhaled the Smoke on the Street, and It Gave Her Lung Trouble.

There are at present thirteen patients under treatment in the Muhlenberg Hospital.

Miss Bella Magraft, living with Mrs. Havens at 118 Watchung avenue, was brought to the hospital last evening, suffering from hemorrhage of the lungs, the result of a fit of coughing caused by inhaling cigarette smoke on the street. Dr. S. W. Hedges attended her and her condition was much improved this morning.

Nathan Crook, colored, underwent a successful operation for intestinal strangulation, at the hands of Dr. G. W. Endicott yesterday. While his condition is still very critical, it is thought he will recover.

CATARRH

[illegible]

ALL WENT MERRY AT THE BIG GREEN T.

ENTERTAINERS WERE A SIGHT TO SEE.

Young Men and Old Boys, Jolly Fine Chaps, in Green Mother Hubbards and White Lace Caps.

The big T that was hung in front of MacDonald's store in 1856 had never been taken from its conspicuous abiding-place till Friday, when it was removed to grace the Green Tea given by the men of Trinity church. The exposure of thirty-seven years had robbed its paint of lustre, so it was ornamented with a fresh coat of green, flecked with gold. Then it was suspended from the ceiling in the centre of the main Sunday-school room, and streamers of green were swung from this focus to every corner and side-wall. Long broad sashes of green were also draped along the walls, and every pillar was a graceful column of evergreen.

The idea of a Green Tea given by men only had been treated as a good deal of a joke, but the decorations were not a joke but an artistic success. A good job had been expected from Robert A. Meeker, with whose excellent work as Street Commissioner every one was so familiar. And it was a good job. Mr. Meeker is modest about his own share in the matter, and insists that his assistants Albertus Swalm and A. W. Demarest are entitled to most of the credit, but his helpers give him praise for his management and good taste.

The personal decorations of the men who ran the Tea were the most unique, however. Big bows of green, some plain and some spangled with gilt, hid nearly every shirt-front from view. Backs bent beneath the weight of big green T's. Ben LaVere wore a fanciful pale-blue coat with sweeping tails and big yellow buttons. The climax of adornment was the supper committee, but of that more later.

The gathering of guests was a large and sociable one. Many other congregations were well represented. Wraps were discarded on entering, and all were cordially welcomed by representatives of the reception committee, which comprised every male member of the congregation, headed by F. A. Church.

Sunday-school Superintendent E. E. Anthony, grand supervisor of the Tea, fled before the congratulations showered upon him, and took refuge on the platform, in front of a pretty display of ferns, chrysanthemums and other autumnal flora. He held up his hand in mock deprecation of the noise of the big crowd of people, and the hum of voices ceased. Mr. Anthony said he wanted to put the committees on display, and so called them up before the people. A good deal of fun was occasioned by his remarks and the comment on them. He said at the outset that as a foreman of the job of getting up the Tea they had wanted the greenest man in town, so spotted him. The choice of Chairmanship for the reception committee had been made as announced, because it was a Churchly affair. The warbling of birds was in itself an entertainment, so the programme committee had been made up of birds—there was a Martin, and another Bird, and Chippie Leggett. Bert Demarest staggered under the combined weight of a huge bouquet of paper water-lillies and the cash that voluntary contributors had bestowed on him as cashier for the Sunday-school fund. He looked his prettiest, and spoke his wittiest. Mr. Anthony called for A. Leader, and A. J. stepped forward. Mr. Anthony was at his best, and won great applause. His statement, when the Street Commissioner appeared, that they had sought for one as meek as Moses but had found one Meeker, brought down the house. The supper room was thrown open. on such a sight! A long table bore fruits and nuts and cakes, arranged most temptingly. The fruits and nuts were stacked up on crystal foundations. The cakes were a myriad, "with no two alike". A border of olive-green ribbon, its stiffness broken by sprays of evergreen, and standing out in relief against the snowy cloth, framed this attractive display. The effect was strikingly artistic. Surrounding this well-laden board was the funniest group of men that ever made the walls of a church ring with laughter. At the head was P. M. Demarest, his sedate dignity adding to the humor of his costume. His rotund form was buried in a big green apron, and a waiting-maid's cap was perched jauntily on his brow, its strings tied demurely beneath his dashing sidewhiskers. Peter A. Emmons was fully as grotesque, at the other end; his cap was surmounted by a vigorously vibrating T. Wm. A. Woodruff's green apron had gigantic shoulder bows, and his rakish beard combined to give him the aspect of a comic-opera pirate. Some of the aprons were as loose and flowing as Mother Hubbards; others were as abbreviated as a chorus dancer's. But all, from Elder VanEmburgh to Fred MacDonald, wore some such apparel; and when the sliding doors were first moved back, disclosing them to view, their ill-at-ease grimaces started roars of laughter. But how they did serve supper! In that they got right down to business, and whisked about like the hustlers that they are. The paper napkins were of a pale-green tint; the coffee was poured from a giant teakettle by P. M. Demarest; cream flowed from kerosene cans (new, of course), and Bert Swalm had to stand good-natured chaffing about "working the can"; the ice-cream was in white bricks with a green T in the centre. Everyone got his fill of the good

THE MAN ON THE CARS.

HE DISCUSSES THE MORAL ASPECT OF THE BILL BOARD BUSINESS.

Says a Spade Cannot Masquerade as a Shovel and Thinks the St. Gaudens Diana Would Never Do for Plainfield.

"Speaking of absurdities"—said The Man on the Cars the other night, as the conversation dropped from the sublime to the sub-cellar, and the train slid over the Elizabeth marshes "I think this crusade against the gentle art of bill-posting as seen in Plainfield is one of the most remarkable instances of inspired idiocy that ever struck town. It is seldom of any use to attempt a moral reformation in such matters, for the one great reason, if no other, that the thing is certain to be turned to ridicule. The New York papers have been funny about our late local queerness, and so it will always be.

"As to the merits of the case, I don't know. It seems from the ordinance proposed at the last meeting of the Common Council that no obscene or indecent pictures must be displayed upon our dead-walls, in our shop windows or anywhere else, which goes pretty far. Who is going to judge what is moral and what is immoral, and who is going to care for his decisions? Who is to come up me and say I must cull in the picture that ornaments my hall bedroom because it doesn't suit his fancy? There is a medium somewhere between that ordinance and common-sense which should be discovered at once. For my part, I have never seen a picture of any sort in our town that has been able to shock me, but I am aware that I am quite bad and hopeless, and therefore no criterion.

"One may generalize, however. Never, to my knowledge, has there appeared on our fences or in our shop windows (the kick was about these in particular, you know) anything so flagrant as to bring a blush to the cheeks of anyone but a fanatic. I presume that if St. Gaudens's beautiful, chaste but much undressed Diana of Madison Square Garden were put out here it would shock people, yet to me it is one of the loveliest, purest works of art that ever graced a city. I also infer that the Apollo Belvedere, the Venus di Milo, the Colossus of Rhodes, and all the other mighty and immortal, but undeniably unapparelled works of man, would cause the blushes to mantle and the pulses to beat in Plainfield. The Paris Salon would, of course, be here considered so scandalous that it would give up the ghost in contemplation of its own hitherto undiscovered wickedness.

"'Evil to him who evil thinks', is the gist of the whole argument, and ever will be. False modesty is one of the greatest curses of our times, but ideas, thank goodness, are better in this respect now than they were ten years ago, and the emancipation will go on, I hope, until we may call a spade a spade and not be constrained to term it a shovel or a wheelbarrow under penalty of excommunication from society. What is, is; we all know it, and why not say so? Man, if we are to believe Genesis, was made in the image of God, and yet we are asked to hold up our conventional hands in holy horror at the thought of God's image and handiwork? The whole thing is absurd, and makes me tired indeed. The only expression that seems both comprehensive and apropos is—pardon me—'rats!'"

And he arose and slipped away as the train stopped.

A Fact is Worth Volumes of Theory.

It should be known by the residents of Plainfield, that instruction which is given free at a large institution in New York city, costs more than equal or better instruction, obtainable in Plainfield, for which a small charge is made. A case in point is; a young man going to the Cooper Institute two evenings a week for one hour's practice in Free-hand drawing and perspective, being one of a class of thirty scholars he received two minutes instruction each lesson at a cost of one dollar and fifty-five cents car fare, and the inconvenience of being out until midnight twice a week in all weathers. He hears of the Plainfield Manual Training School, 209 East Front street, and enquiry elicits the information, that he can obtain ten hours tuition in fifteen branches of study, connected with the minor arts, for two dollars per week, between the hours of two and four o'clock five days each week, leaving his evenings free and receiving constant oversight and direction in his studies. It is a wonder that he is delighted with the progress he is making? John Dalziel has this work down fine.

Lord Ullin's Daughter a Hit.

A excellent programme is in preparation for the M. E. church sociable Dec. 15 The young people have been invited to repeat "Lord Ullin's Daughter" for the Dunellen chapter of the Epworth League, and a Flushing chapter is anxious to reproduce it. That's how fame spreads of the Plainfield Methodists.

The Pythians Are Backing Him.

(From The Jersey Knight)

The many Knights dispersed throughout the State will learn with pleasure that our popular Past Grand Chancellor, John Ulrich, is being strongly urged for the position of State Comptroller. The Republican party of New Jersey might look around the State for some time before it would find an abler young man to fill this important office. Should the party desire any proof of this statement they can find it in almost any city or town in the State where a Lodge of Knights of Pythias is established. As a thorough painstaking and competent officer he had no superior when he presided at the head of the Order of New Jersey. He is a man of exceptional executive ability, of varied experience and a close student in all matters in which he has an interest. The thousands of Knights in New Jersey would hail his election with pleasure and pride.

"WE KNOW OUR BUSINESS."

The Park Club Bowlers [illegible] the Jersey Boys.

The champion bowling team of the State, the New Jersey Athletic Club ten, had a hard struggle to defeat the Washington Park Club team, Friday night, and only succeeded in over-scoring the Plainfield boys by 14 pins. The local team put up a fine game from first to last, and if all the members had bowled their average game the visitors never would have defeated them. The two clubs ran neck and neck from start to finish, and at one time it looked as if the Parks would score a victory, but the pins didn't fall for their wishbone, but rather for their opponent's.

The Jersey boys are splendid fellows, with a slogan long enough to reach to Bergen Point and back, and they yelled it loud enough to awaken the Father of his Country were he asleep in his park. And the new yell of the Parks is not unhandy, but it didn't need right last night. "We know our business"—was the cry, but the score took the edge off its significance. Its author, therefore, concealed his identity.

A large number of club members and guests were present and enjoyed to the fullest extent the club's well known hospitality.

The score of the bowlers is as follows, Worth bowling for Chapman:

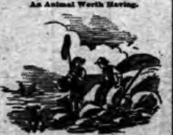
An Animal Worth Having.



A Slight Mistake.

As I was returning from Chicago over the New York Central last month I witnessed an incident that appealed strongly to my sense of the ludicrous and yet filled me with sympathy for the unfortunate chief actor in the little comedy. He was a rather handsome young man, dark and [illegible], with an air of comfortable self-satisfaction, as if he considered himself just about the proper caper, and I immediately spotted him as a traveling man who was possibly connected with some large dry goods or gentlemen's furnishing establishment. Everything about him, from his cravat to his patent leather shoes, was just about as near correct as it could be, and it was made known plain he thought himself simply irresistible.

The car was well filled, every seat being fully taken with the exception of one directly across the aisle from my drummer, and the sole occupant of that was a decidedly pretty and rather stylish young girl who seemed to be traveling alone. She was certainly not more than 18, and while she had the air and appearance of one city bred there was also about her a sort of shyness that was naive and charming. She was reading a paper covered book, and she had a way of now and then lifting her great innocent dark eyes from the printed page and glancing about in a half alarmed manner that seemed very natural and "fetching," even if it were assumed.

I saw the drummer watching the girl, and several times he coughed in a manner intended to attract her attention, but it was a long time before she favored him with a glance. He smiled, and her eyes dropped back to the book instantly, as if she had not seen him at all, but I saw a bit more color mount to her cheeks, while there was just the faintest movement of the muscles about her pretty mouth.

After this matters progressed with greater rapidity, for, although she gave him no open encouragement, I fancied the girl was rather struck by the appearance of the drummer. Their eyes met two or three times, and she did not seem to take any further interest in her book, although she made a pretense of reading. She moved about restlessly in her seat, and finally, with a sudden gasp, as if she were stifling, tackled the window. She couldn't move it. That was the masher's opportunity.

"I beg your pardon. Can I assist you?" He said it gracefully and courteously, and she sank back to the seat, murmuring something I did not fully catch.

"I'll not positively agree to open it," he laughed, as he prepared for the attempt, betraying the fact that he had struggled with car windows before, "but I'll do it if such a thing is possible." Then he took hold and opened it without any great effort.

She thanked him, and he lingered to ask her if there was anything more he could do. He was a decidedly "swift" young man, and before I could realize just how he had worked it he had transferred his grip across the aisle and was seated beside the girl, chattering to her in a courteous, easy manner that quite fascinated me.

They got along famously, for all of the girl's shyness, and within half an hour a casual observer would have declared them friends of long standing. His voice was musical, and she had the sweetest smile I ever saw. He talked, and she smiled and smiled. I envied him.

At length a strapping big fellow came sauntering through the swaying car on his way to the smoker. The moment his eyes fell on the drummer's face he uttered an exclamation of surprise and pleasure, and an instant later he gave the masher a resounding smack on the shoulder, crying:

"Why, hello, Jack Clifford! Thought you wouldn't be in for another month, but I suppose you couldn't keep away. How's Bess and the children? Been out to the fair three weeks, but I heard of your luck. Twins this time, eh? Well, you'll"—

The drummer's face was gray, and his voice was cold and harsh as he said:

"You have made a mistake, sir. I do not know you."

The big fellow looked surprised, glanced at the girl and then straightened up, with a sudden, knowing look, winking with the whole left side of his face, as he said:

"Guess I have made a mistake. Thought I knew you, but I see I don't. Excuse me." Then he bent down and added in a stage whisper that came distinctly to my ears: "Ned Blake, Bob Crawford and some of the other boys are in the smoker. They'll be delighted to see you, Jack."

He went on to the smoker, and saying something in a low tone to the girl the drummer arose and followed, blood in his eye. I scented excitement, and I followed the drummer. It didn't take him long to find the big fellow, and it didn't take him long to convince the big fellow he had really made a mistake, as the drummer was an absolute stranger to "Ned Blake, Bob Crawford and the other boys." He wanted to fight even after the big fellow had apologized, but he didn't dare tackle the crowd, and he returned to the other car in a badly demoralized condition.

While he was absent the girl had placed his grip in the aisle and settled herself fairly in the middle of the double seat, while she seemed once more deeply interested in her book. He looked awkward and attempted an explanation, but she flashed him a look that would have broken the heart of a grindstone, and I heard her say, "Sir!" in a tone that must have frozen him to the marrow, after which she resumed her reading as if he were not on earth at all.

The drummer's face turned crimson, and he gathered up his grip and fled from the car. Two hours later I saw him curled in a corner of the next car, his coat collar turned up around his face, on which there was a look that indicated he contemplated murder or suicide.

THE MODISTE.

Elegant tan jackets or capes are trimmed with astrakhan or sable fur.

Pink and very light green felt hats with dark velvet trimmings and narrow fur bands and veils are dressy favorites in millinery.

Cream white corded silk capes are lined with rose colored brocaded satin and trimmed with fluffy white fur. These capes are lovely additions to an evening toilet.

Stylish and serviceable traveling-wraps are made of fine camel's hair or ladies' cloth in Russian redingote form, with triple capes edged with mink fur an inch wide.

Kilt plaiting, accordion, box and knife plaitings all reappear on dressy toilets for the winter, rivaling the gored and bell skirt, with long Grecian or short apron overskirts.

Paniers are announced, and also for the short, stout woman if they become as generally fashionable as they were once. Tall, slim women will, however, score a distinct advantage by the mode.

Every conceivable shade of brown, mahogany, rosewood, nasturtium, brick dust, flame color, gray and green will be worn this winter, the various fresh dyes appearing christened with the most romantic names by the manufacturers.

For the tall women this winter are the fur bordered Russian gowns, which appear in two styles—one with a belted Russian

SKETCHES FROM LIFE

A TRIO OF REMARKABLE ADVENTURES AND INCIDENTS.

The [illegible] Old Fisherman Who Looked Like a [illegible] Pirate—How He Was [illegible] and Was Struck by Lightning. The [illegible]

[Copyright, 1893, by American Press Association.]

Last summer I spent several weeks at a pleasant hotel in a quiet town down on the Maine coast, and there I made the acquaintance of a great many "characters," not a few of whom would have furnished good material for a novelist. The one who attracted me most among them all was an old fisherman known as Sandy Griggs, a man who was rough as a bear, weather beaten and storm proof, with the voice and features of a ruffian and the piety of a monk. In all my life I never encountered a greater human paradox, for the man's character was diametrically opposite what any character reader or phrenologist would have supposed it to be. He attended church faithfully every Sunday and spoke and prayed at Tuesday evening prayer meetings. He never tried to join in any of the singing, but I am certain it was his good sense that caused him to refrain, as he must have known his voice was harsh and unmusical as the roar of a bull, and there was certainly no "music in his soul." Shakespeare says such a man is fit for treason, stratagems and spoils and is not to be trusted, but I found Sandy was considered as square and honest as the days were long, and no one dreamed of thinking him hypocritical.

The fishermen and sailors thereabouts could swear like corsairs, and it seemed strange that such a fierce looking fellow as old Sandy should never utter language that was otherwise than calm and placid.

"Ah! but he wasn't like this allus," said one, to whom I spoke of the odd fisherman. "They was a time when Sandy kerried a knife in that belt of 'hisn, an he was ready enough to use it. He had a way of ketchin little boys an girls an skeerin 'em aout of their senses with flourishin the knife an swearin he was goin to cut their throats. An when Bill Jones tried to have him arrested the sheriff got the knife in his shoulder, an Bill Jones' barn were burnt that night. Swear! Why, Sandy'd swear the bark off a hemlock! An drink! Wall, naow he just 'could! What changed him? Did you ever notice that right hand of hisn? That's it. If you kin git him to talkin, just ax him about it. He'll tell ye a story—yes, he will!"

BY A LIGHTNING STROKE.

I had noticed Sandy's right hand the first time I saw him, for it was certain to attract the gaze and wonder of any one whose eyes fell upon it. It was black, as if scorched and seared to a crisp, and it had withered to the wrist apparently. To look upon it gave me the shivers.

It was some little time before I could win the fisherman's confidence so he would talk with me freely, but I usually managed to saunter past his hut down by the beach almost every day, and I would often find him grinding "throw bait" or mending nets, upon which I would stop and chat with him. He was as pious when turning the crank of the "throw bait" machine as when kneeling in church, and more than once I heard him sternly rebuke boys and men who were using profane language.

One day I ventured to ask him about his hand. His leathery face twitched strangely, and he finally stopped his work to tell me the story concerning the withered member.

"There ain't no long yarn hitched to it," he slowly began. "It wasn't born on me that air way, not by a heap sight. Till I was 24 year old I had two just as good hands as yourn be—an better," he added as he somewhat contemptuously surveyed the size of mine. "I had a fist that could knock over an ox, an I had a nasty way of usin it on anybody I didn't take no shine to. An I kerried a knife an a pistol sometimes. I was turrible wicked in them days! Why, sometimes I uster even think it'd be fun to kill a man!

"I was just as good fisherman in them days as I be naow, an better, for I could handle that air right paw handier. You see I hain't much use of that fin. We uster go daown to Matinicus for deep water fish, an I usually sailed in Cap'n Dow's sloop. The cap'n could swear bad as I could, and with Jim File an Brad Moore for crew we was knowed as the toughest gang around.

"I had been through a good many blows an come aout all right, an I didn't cal'late I was born to be drownded, when, one day as we was making from Matinicus for Vinal Haven, they came up the awfulest slyclone or blizzard, or something I never saw. It just blowed great guns, the rain came daown in buckets, an the lightnin played all over the water. Thunder! I never heard anything like it!

"Wall, aour canvas was all blown aout an aour rudder ripped away in less than no time, an it didn't seem we'd last three minutes longer. Cap'n Dow fell 'on his knees an begun to pray and so did t'others; but I just swore an cursed God till I was black in the face.

"'Stop, Sandy!' screamed the cap'n. 'Don't swear at God!'

"'God!' I laughed. 'I don't b'lieve ther is any God! If there is, I hope he'll wither this air right hand!' an I held it right up over my head.

"Then there was the awfulest flash of lightnin an roar of thunder, and I fell daown as if I was dead on the deck. They said that storm passed on in less than a minute, an the sun came aout. Cap'n Dow swore there was a twistin streak of fire kem right daown an struck my hand. When they picked me up, it was scorched an withered just as you see it naow. I was sick for two weeks, an from that day to this I've never doubted the existence

What is

CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

DR. G. C. OSGOOD,
Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

DR. J. F. KINCHELOE,
Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

H. A. ARCHER, M. D.,
111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

ALLEN C. SMITH, Pres.,

The Centaur Company, 77 Murray Street, New York City.

boss, an kem raound an axed haow many brick I cal'lated I could karry up to the top stagin. 'Oh, abaout 50 ur 60,' says I, offhand. 'I mean to once,' says he. 'An I mean to once,' says I. Well, sir, he up an offered to bate $100 to $5 I couldn't karry up 60 brick to one load. I took the bate on the spot, an I beat him fair an square."

"How'd ye do it, Uncle Joe?" one of the listeners ventured to inquire as the old man paused and seemed to consider his story finished.

"Do it!" snorted the old man disgustedly. "Why, I karried 'em up! How'd ye think I done it? I just climbed right up with the brick."

"But a reg'ler hod won't hold 60 brick."

"Course it won't! Think I don't know that! Think I'm a diddly blinked fool! I had one built 'specially for this job. But I kem mighty nigh losin, arter all," he added reflectively. "Ye see, it wur like this: Them air ladders was hitched one top the other right up for eight stories just as straight as they could go, an they was nigh plumb perpendic'ler. I will say it was a powerful hard pull, an I wur blowin like a hoss with the heaves by the time I reached the top. An then, just when I was goin to step off the ladder, a raound broke. Well, you'd oughter seen me come daown that ladder with that tarnal big hod of brick on my shoulder! My feet went tipperty tap, tipperty tap, an they broke out every raound of the ladder fast as they struck 'em. Clean daown to the graound I went, an by thutter! I drov my feet right daown inter the hard earth purty nigh 10 inches! It likster brock my back, but I remembered the bate, an so I pulls out my feet an right up that air ladder I went at a run, an I never stopped till I dumped the hull 60 brick at the top, by gum!"

Having concluded, Uncle Joe began to gnaw away at a plug of black tobacco, apparently quite unconscious that the listeners were looking from one to another and holding back a roar of laughter with the greatest difficulty. After a moment Jed Smith ventured to say:

"Why, uncle, I thought you bruck aout ev'ry raound of the ladder when you kem daown? Haow'd you ever git up that ladder ag'in with that load of brick?"

"Shinned up the side pieces, you diddly hanged idjit!" squealed the old man. And everybody howled.

How He Won.

"We often played draw poker to while away the hours in the trenches before Vicksburg," said the old soldier. "I shall never forget one game I witnessed. There were but two players engaged, one of them being a mere boy, while the other was a man who had acquired the reputation of being tricky at cards. This gambler had fleeced the boy repeatedly, and every one considered the lad foolish to play with him.

"I was looking over the young fellow's shoulder and saw him hold up three deuces, drawing two cards. The gambler took three cards, which indicated he only held a pair to start with. The boy did not better his hand, and I saw the other man, who was dealing, steal a card from the bottom of the pack. I did not expose him then, meaning to do so when the game was finished.

The Deserted Mother.

I was walking through Central park when I observed a young woman who was wildly caressing a baby and weeping as if her heart were breaking. The child was rather daintily dressed, and the clothes of the young woman were of good material and well made. Struck by the tempestuous grief of the woman, I approached her and asked:

"What is the matter, young lady? Are you in trouble?"

She lifted a rather pretty face, from which a veil had been cast back, and then she brokenly sobbed:

"I can't do it—I can't! It will kill me!"

"What is it you cannot do?"

The question seemed to bring her to her senses, for she started away fearfully, exclaiming:

"You are not an officer? You won't arrest me? Oh, I know it was wicked for me to think of such a terrible thing—wicked, wicked! But what can I do? I have pawned everything of value I possess, and now we shall both starve to death! Why did he leave me like this! I was married to him a little more than a year ago. He had work then, and he could support us. We were so happy when baby came! Then he lost his work and could get no more. He took to drink and grew desperate. Three weeks ago, he went away and left us, saying he would never come back. And I did love him!"

Her grief was genuine. I could not doubt it. "My poor girl!" I said, choking in my throat and my eyes full of tears.

"When he was gone, I gave all my love to the child," she went on as she clung to the babe convulsively. "But we could not live on nothing in this great city. Were I alone, I could do something to earn a living, for I am not afraid of work, but I cannot leave my baby. Today I read in a paper how a woman had abandoned her child to the care of a stranger and disappeared. Then I made a resolve, although it nearly killed me to think of it. I came here to watch for some kind faced stranger to whom I would intrust my baby. I had invented a good story, but I could not do it, it was so horrible! If a stranger took my child, I would not know what became of it—I would never see it again! The thought broke my heart! Oh, my baby!"

"Would you give up your child to a kind lady who has none of her own and who would treat it as a mother should? You might come and see it sometimes."

She was sitting on one of the park benches, but she half started to her feet, then sunk back.

"Do you know such a woman? Will you get her to take my child?" hoarsely she asked.

"I know her, and I will get her to take your child."

"Thank God!"

Her head fell forward over the unconscious child in her lap, and she did not move. I touched her on the shoulder. She had fainted dead away, with her lips against the cheek of the sleeping babe.

TOWN TALENT MINSTRELS.

Professor [illegible], D. O., [illegible], Brings Down the House.

The Alabama Minstrels, composed of selected home talent, held forth in Reform Hall Wednesday night, when they successfully meandered through a long and wonderfully constructed programme.

At 8:20, after the audience had indicated their impatience by vigorously applauding the tuning of a banjo, the show began.

The orchestra—Oscar Nelson, L. Peterson and G. Campbell—started on "Swanee River", and after a little practice were joined by the company behind the curtain.

The singers then gave their entire attention to minstrelsy. Most of the "jokes" had a delightful local coloring—indeed, some of them were said to be heirlooms handed down from the time of the first settlers of Plainfield. The colored race came in for their share in the remarks, and the time-honored chickens, water melons, wool-pulling mistakes and razor disturbances were expatiated upon at length. The pronunciation and the accent were especially clever.

The "fun" was interspersed by such serious songs as "A Mother's Appeal to Her Boy", by George Barber; "Don't Tell Old Mama", by E. Thompson; "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep", by John Taylor. The singers were applauded until the dust rose.

The Silver Leaf Quartette, J. H. Mitchell, George Barber, E. Thompson and John Taylor, brought down the house and took the carpet sack with them, preparing the stage for part two.

Little Nute, alias Lewis Johnson, gave a fantastic frog dance. His motions were rather awkward, but produced the desired effect.

Charles Jefferson spoke and sang in a "stump speech", taking the part of a "black baby boy" very easily and naturally. He was attired in white with a becoming gray [illegible] hat.

The gray hat, with a different crease, next appeared on the head of John Taylor, who scraped the floor with his hands and feet, clad in a red and white duster and executing a nondescript dance.

S. Conway then borrowed the duster and performed a buck dance.

E. Thompson and G. Carr, both in elegant full-dress and canes to match individual size and shape, waded through a "plug" to the tune of "California" on a banjo.

Meanwhile stage manager and director James Scott had been carefully building up the gray hat into a new shape, and Locomotive Frisbie soon appeared beneath it. After sanding the track he proceeded as far as Dunellen and returned at once, with a trail of dogs behind him. In response to an encore Frisbie ran an extra at a high speed and disappeared.

Pandemonium reigned for several minutes, but Engineer Scott evidently misunderstood orders, or else Frisbie's steam ran low, for the locomotive was not again exhibited.

The closing number was a cake walk in which several of the company represented colored ladies. The use of canes with scythe like blades assisted in bringing the affair to a happy end.

Everyone of the performers, in response to the question whether he had received their money or not, invariably replied: "Gracious sake! You don' 'spose I don star for 'Fesser Frisbie without I'se paid in advance?"

The receipts were said to be quite large, there having been a heavy advance sale of tickets.

An Excellent Entertainment.

The performance given by Prof. Newman and company in Music Hall Thanksgiving Eve was an entertainment of real merit. The mind-reader himself did exceptionally clever work. Among his subjects were Asa Collier, G. Harry Squires and Judge E. French the [illegible]. By thought-transference through mere handclasp, the mind-reader quickly found various articles hidden by them while he was absent from the house and under guard of a committee. He had similar success in finding hidden articles, guessing ages, etc., in private exhibitions in the offices of City Judge Coddington and The Daily Press. By those who had seen both, he was said to be superior to Irving Bishop. He evoked admiration and wonder.

George and Maude Ricketts, sketch artists, amused the audience with laughable sketches and songs.

Miss Lottie Raymond, an attractive young woman who is to join "Tuxedo" next week, sang pleasingly and danced bewitchingly in costly costume.

Miss [illegible] Richards, one of New York's leading balladists, was a favorite of the evening. Her voice possesses remarkable richness, sweetness and power; and not only the beauty of her singing but her becoming gowns, the gracefulness of her attitudes, and the fascination of her personal charms, won sincere admiration from the people. She was compelled to respond repeatedly to recalls.

Thanksgiving at Heavenly Rest.

The Church of the Heavenly Rest, Clinton avenue, was most beautifully dressed for the Thanksgiving service, Thursday morning at 10. Great sheaves of wheat stood around the chancel with mounds of vegetables and fruit at their base. Every window was decorated and also the font and lectern. The Rev. Dr. Page preached a splendid sermon on the subject of "the Sower and the Reaper", to an excellent congregation.

The Women's Friendly Society gave a harvest home festival to their own members the night before, in the parish house. The evening was passed with music, recitations, etc., and closed with a New England supper.

Delightful Praise Service.

The union Christian Endeavor praise service in the chapel of the First Presbyterian church Thursday morning was a great success spiritually, although the number in attendance was not so large as it should have been. The testimonies and prayers offered were many, and all who attended went away feeling that they had been blessed.

The meeting was led by Pastor Herring, and the piano accompaniments were by Miss Poole.

New Coaling Station for Plainfield.

Beaty Bros., the Bergen Point coal magnates, will soon start in the coal business in this city. Preparations have already been made to erect a trestle and storage warehouse on their property, where stood the big ice-house, on West Front street near Grant avenue, and it is rumored that the Plainfield Ice and Cold Storage Company will operate the plant.

A Plainfield Inventor to Make Pipe [illegible].

THAT [illegible].

[illegible] Good Road [illegible], and Winning Prizes.

A twenty-mile handicap road race took place under the auspices of the Crescent Wheelmen Thursday morning. The course was 3 1-2 miles straightaway on Park avenue.

The road was in excellent condition and a strong breeze was the only disadvantage. The race was very close, the winner finishing but a few inches ahead of the second rider. The officials did their work to the satisfaction of all.

Two accidents occurred. Wilson fell in front of Ott, and caused him to lose two minutes. Lins was [illegible] and quite severely shaken up.

At a meeting in the club rooms last evening Aaron E. Kline made the presentation of prizes with very clever remarks. The prizes were: 1. [illegible], presented by W. R. Rogers. 2, field glasses. 3, rifle. 4, pair of pneumatic tires. 5, sweater. 6, lamp. Time prize, gold medal.

FREY'S SAD THANKSGIVING.

Distressing Occurrence in which Marshal Pangborn was Good Samaritan.

About noon Thursday Charles Frey, of South Second street, fell on the sidewalk on Somerset street, in a fit. Marshal Pangborn had him taken to French's barn, and summoned a hack to take him home. When in the hack another fit came on, and it was all they could do to get him out. It took the efforts of four strong men to hold him down. Dr. Carman was summoned, and gave him a hypodermic injection. As he then seemed quiet, they attempted to put him in an open wagon. Just then another fit came on, and they were compelled to wait again for half an hour and hold him down. Had he been left alone he would undoubtedly have killed himself, as he would bound into the air and fall heavily back. It was a most pitiful and distressing scene. Later he was again placed in a wagon and taken to his home. Marshal Pangborn deserves great credit for his earnest attention.

A SOCIETY FAVORITE.

Plainfield Will Be Delighted With This Entertaining Belle.

The evening of artistic mid-Lenten diversion for the entertainment of the fashionable world, given last season by Miss Jean Wilson, was one of the most brilliant and interesting occasions of the kind ever given in Washington. In fact, the Washington society correspondent of the Philadelphia Inquirer wrote of it as follows:

> The elocutionary genius of Miss Wilson has won for her a large circle of admiring patronage of the most distinguished and cultured persons at Washington. But on this occasion she far surpassed herself. The dramatic touches brought out in her reading of "The Romance of a Rose"; the highest histrionic gifts displayed in the rendering of one of the most difficult scenes from Shakespeare's "As You Like It", carrying two parts, the [illegible] complications of action, and reading in "The [illegible] Dinner Party", the pathetic tenderness and spirit of "Aux Italiens", and the laughing, farcical carrying of "A Browning Tea", displayed in this bright Pennsylvania girl a range of action, voice, gesture and facial expression from the depths of emotion and tragedy to the heights of ecstasy and joy which not only drew forth the most enthusiastic applause of the fashionable throng seated in the large ball-room of the Vice-President's Hotel, but at the close made Miss Wilson the central figure of quite an ovation.

And just such enthusiastic applause should come from just such an enthusiastic throng in the Plainfield Casino the night of Dec. 18, when Miss Wilson will appear with Philip Bay and Wilbert E. Lewis in a most cultured and delightful entertainment.

A Great Find in Plainfield.

"That the study of Forestry—that is, the study of Nature as she speaks to us through the trees—is interesting, and that a knowledge of all that the subject involves, is profitable, as well as interesting, was emphatically proved to me on an excursion we took recently, to the woods, armed with notebook and pencil, as a pupil of the Forestry class of the Plainfield Manual Training School, directed by Mr. Daniel.

"We went to a spot of interest near the foot of the mountain, and began at once to look about us. On every hand were trees, rearing their heads far above the leaf-covered ground. From the point at which we stood more than twelve different kinds of trees could be seen. There were oaks, cedars, beeches, birches, ash, elm, chestnut, hickories, maples, poplar, dogwood, and buttonwood, while close by, gracefully drooping over a brook, wherein was reflected the beauty of its form, a weeping-willow waved its branches in the wind.

"The commercial value of these trees was pointed out to us. The oaks and the chestnut from their strength and lasting qualities are extensively used in ship and carriage building, the cypresses are used in out-door work because they are least affected by climatic changes, and the common white pines are indispensable to the carpenter.

"Is it not interesting to study these trees, useful to such a degree and indispensable to man? Is a knowledge of their peculiarities, uses and adaptabilities not profitable? Is not the study of Nature ennobling? Are not the trees God's own handiwork and therefore full of lessons to us?"

The above is an extract from the notes made by E. Campbell, one of the pupils of the Plainfield Manual Training School; and as they give a just idea of the appreciation of the interest taken in this study by all the class, they are considered of sufficient public value to publish.

[illegible] of the Local Army.

The average attendance at the Salvation Army meetings last week was as follows: Monday, 90; Tuesday, 75; Wednesday, 100; Thursday, 350; Friday, 160; Saturday, 225; Sunday, 415, making a total of 1,[illegible] for the week. 18 soldiers in all marched in the two street parades.

So, through this dark defile, December, press

TAM O'SHANTERS TAKE A RIDE.

Royally Entertained Afterwards at the Handsome New Home of Mr. and Mrs. French.

The Tam O'Shanter Club, an organization of Plainfield's fairest young women, gave a Thanksgiving stage-party and [illegible] Thursday. Conover's big stage took them to Westfield, and the party returned to the West Seventh street home of Mr. and Mrs. John French, where they were handsomely entertained. The Tam O'Shanter Club is unique, in that its members never allow their escorts to pay for their entertainment. Not even in distant Westfield were the young men able to purchase anything for the club members, who accepted glasses of soda water and then calmly enjoyed the efforts the escorts made to pay for the fizz. The club committee had been in Westfield the day before and left money enough to defray all possible expenses.

The members of the club and their friends who were present were the Misses French, Miss Laura Emmons, Miss Nora Williams, Miss Margaret Vermeule, Miss Helen Boice, Miss Carrie Kellogg, Miss Ethel Holmes, Miss Bessie Cornwall, Miss Helen Hasbrouck, the Misses Needham, Miss May Woodruff, Miss Augustine [illegible], Miss Georgie Fountain, Mrs. R. F. R. Huntsman, and Messrs. Thiele, Church, French, McLoughlin, Kirkner, Terrell, Huntsman, Fuller, Hazeltine, Blair, Angleman, Harris, Richards, Martin, Reynolds, Hallock.

DANCE OF THE LIVERY.

Coachmen and Their Guests While Away Thanksgiving Eve.

The Coachmen's Beneficial Association held their first ball in T. A. B. Hall Wednesday evening, and it was successful in every way. A large number were present, and the dancing was heartily enjoyed.

Floor Manager Charles J. Lang and Miss Annie Brady led the grand march to music furnished by O'Reilly. The committees were:

Floor—James [illegible], Edward Delehanty, Thomas O'Connors, Thomas Dwyer, Patrick Kiley, John Waters.

Reception—Peter McDonough, Frank Burke, Daniel Dugan, Wm. C. White, Wm. Clawson, George Simon, Edward Ryan, John Curran, John Kyle.

The association has been in existence about six months, and is in a flourishing condition, with 75 members.

German War Veteran.

M. Weber, of East Third street has had considerable experience in war matters. He was wounded twice while performing service in the German Army, one of the shots piercing his left leg near the thigh, and another striking him in the fore head and glancing off. From the last wound Mr. Weber was laid up in the hospital for over two months, and when he came out he was bereft of his head of hair. Mr. Weber says he is entitled to a pension from the German Government, but he was glad enough to get away from home and come to this country, so he did not make application for a pension. He further says he has been in four battles, and is still ready and willing to shoulder a musket and fight for the maintenance of this country's prosperity and freedom.

A Social Party.

A pleasant social evening was spent at the house of Master Gerry Mattis, 300 Arlington avenue, Friday evening. About forty of his friends were present and fully enjoyed the evening playing games, singing, dancing, etc. Refreshments were served at 10:30. Mrs. Mattis was ably assisted by the Misses Maggie Shepherd, Lil Wyman and Minnie Boisterle. The merry-makers left for home at 12:30.

An Odd Coincidence.

A strange coincidence is the fact that John Overland, who was killed on Monday, had two life insurance policies—one for $700 and another for $150. Both policies would have expired at noon on the day he met with the fatal accident, and it is said he had remarked a few days before that he would not renew his policies.

Visits After a Sea Voyage.

Captain William Bird Calloway, of one of the vessels of the Allen Line, recently arrived in the Philadelphia Port from a southern port, and was the guest for a few days of his father William Calloway of South Plainfield. Calloway had not seen his father in many years, and the meeting was most pleasant. Wm. B. has followed the water the past seven years, and has been a captain three years.

Miss Wilson Gave Real Delight.

Speaking of the famous reader who is to appear in the Casino Dec. 18, the Cincinnati Commercial Gazette says:

> Of the many excellent entertainments given under the auspices of the Glendale Lyceum none have surpassed that of last evening in genuine enjoyment. * * * Miss Jean Wilson gave real delight by her fine recitations. [illegible] special pleasure in the graceful ease and real spirit of her style showing both talent and culture.

Adjusting an Estate.

Jacob, William and [illegible] Hatfield, three of the heirs of the [illegible] estate, were to have met a day or two ago to decide upon the apportionment of the 66 feet frontage on the southeast side of East Front street between Park avenue and Watchung avenue. [illegible] and William were present, but no final decision was reached.

Wanted, a Chemical Engine.

First Asst. Chief [illegible] reports that eleven of the thirty-two fires that have occurred this year were extinguished by the use of chemical apparatus. The purchase and use of a chemical engine would prevent considerable of the damage now caused by water at small fires.

STAY-AT-HOME VOTERS CONDEMNED

Preacher Barnes Says that Christians Only, Can Be Truly Thankful.

A union Thanksgiving service of the First Methodist, the First Presbyterian and Trinity Reformed churches was held in the First Presbyterian church Thursday morning.

A table before the pulpit was laden with the flowers, fruits and vegetables of autumn, making an attractive display. A large congregation was present.

Hymns appropriate to the day were sung by the choir. The Rev. Cornelius Schenck, of Trinity Reformed church, read the Scripture lesson and a Psalm; and the Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes of the First Baptist church, led in prayer. The sermon was preached by the Rev. C. E. Barnes, of the First M. E. church.

Mr. Barnes took as his text the 12th and 14th verses of the 116th Psalm, where the writer, in answer to the question—"What shall I render unto the Lord for all his benefits toward me?"—says "I will take the cup of salvation, and call upon the name of the Lord, I will pay my vows unto the Lord now in the presence of all His people."

In his sermon Mr. Barnes dwelt on the special benefits for which men, and especially Americans, should be thankful. He showed that all that contributes to our happiness comes from God; and as Christianity was the one great blessing, only Christians could be truly grateful.

Mr. Barnes deplored the lack of interest in the elections on the part of citizens, who allowed the political power to pass into the hands of foreigners. He condemned stay-at-home voters. The discourse was earnest and helpful, and made a deep impression on the congregation.

The service closed with the singing of "America", and the Rev. W. E. Honeyman pronounced the benediction.

SALVINI IN NEW YORK.

Last Nights of "The Three Guardsmen"—Preparations for the New Play "Zamar".

The engagement of Alexander Salvini at the Star Theatre, New York, is drawing the bulk of the theatre-going patronage outside of the Grand Opera and Henry Irving. "The Three Guardsmen", which is now being given even on a still more elaborate scale than during Salvini's last appearance in the metropolis, has been greeted with unabated enthusiasm, so much so that this popular play will be continued during the coming week. Salvini as D'Artagnan the prince of romantic heroes is more than ever the ideal musketeer as the great Dumas conceived him. Preparations are now almost completed for the presentation of an entirely new romantic play entitled "Zamar" which will have its first metropolitan production at the Star Theatre, Monday, December 11. The story deals with the early struggles of the Gypsies during the reign of Philip II. of Spain, and in action, incident and wealth of scenic effect it is said to possess all the elements so dear to all lovers of old time romance and chivalry. Considerable curiosity is evinced concerning the new play, as the author, Paul Kester, is comparatively unknown as a playwright, his last work being a one-act play produced by Madame Modjeska some few years ago.

Winter Tours via Pennsylvania Railroad.

The final arrangements are now made by the Tourist Bureau of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company for the running of its personally-conducted tours for the coming season. First and foremost in point of magnitude and attractiveness come those to California and Florida. The dates for the former are January 27 and February 22. The first date has been selected so that en route to the glorious westernmost State of the Union the Mardi Gras festivities at New Orleans may be enjoyed by the tourists. California will command unusual attention this winter by reason of the Mid-winter Exposition to be held at San Francisco. This exhibition promises almost to rival the late World's Fair in completeness. Many Eastern people have already decided to attend.

Florida, always a popular haven, still justly asserts its claim as the most delightful part of our country in which to pass the inclement months of the year. Five tours will be run there, January 30, February 13, February 27, March 13, and March 27, have been chosen as the starting dates. $50 from New York, $48 from Philadelphia, and an equally low rate from other points will cover all expenses en route.

Old Point Comfort appeals strongly to those not caring to journey further from home and on December 26 this historic spot will be visited by a special tour. Last come the tours to Washington, D. C., on December 14 and 28, January 18, February 8, March 1 and 22, April 12, and May 3 and 24.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company's guarantee that thorough and satisfactory methods will be pursued in conducting these trips needs no additional testimonial.

That Affair with the King.

Among the distinguished visitors soon to favor Plainfield is a young English-bred gentleman who has had the honor of presentation before crowned heads and royalty throughout the world, and who will favor Plainfield social circles with amusing and delightful stories of his experiences in entertaining these celebrities. Notable among the incidents of his career is the funny affair with the King of the Sandwich Islands, which he will recount to the Casino audience the night of Dec. 18. What Philip Bay tells and does, should not be missed by lovers of refined entertainment.

The Admiration of All Who Saw It.

Hart's Cosmorama of the World's Fair, in Music Hall, Thanksgiving Day, afforded great pleasure to both afternoon and evening audiences. The views were superb, and the ordinary photographic reproductions were enhanced by the exquisite color-effects and by the mechanism which caused gondolas actually to float along over the waters of the lagoons and search-lights in the pictures to revolve and throw their penetrating rays over the work in detail. Hart's Cosmorama is a splendid reproduction of the Fair.

Purchased Miller's Drug Store.

Ex-Congressman Roswell G. Horr of the New York Tribune has purchased through C. W. Hodges, of 178 Broadway, New York, the pharmacy at 13 East Front street, lately owned by Joseph G. Miller.

The ex-congressman does not contemplate going into the drug business himself, but has purchased the property for a member of his family who will move to Plainfield and contribute a valuable addition to its larger business and social circles.

"TRIPPING THE LIGHT FANTASTIC."

(To be sung to the tune of "Maggie Murphy's Home.")

On Front street West,
Where stale did rest,
There stands a building tall,
And all must know,
Save those "dead slow",
"The Hulett's Dancing Hall.

Some giddy girls both young and old,
Have formed a Dancing Class,
A "Daily Press" reporter is told,
Those winter nights to pass.

Each Monday night
'Tis our delight
And pleasure, don't you know,
To seek more grace,
In [illegible] carriage,
In body, heel and toe.

News of this class we will now tell,
For surely 'tis no "sell"—
Composed of youths and girls so fair,
Who weekly gather there.

The first of all
To give the call
To join this social hall
Was one termed "Min",
Who thought it no sin
To see her dear friends in.

Now she was helped by Lena and Lou
To rush the candidates through,
Our lists are very exclusive, too,
But of fine dancers few.

There's Master Vail—
How he does sail
Across the smooth-waxed floor!
While "Lu" and "Art"
Away they dart
With palpitating heart.

And Ada and Ida whirls around,
With swift and cat-like tread,
Displaying grace at every bound
Till it is time for bed.

But on we dance,
And round we prance;
The room is all awhirl;
And now we glide
From side to side—
Each fellow with a girl.

Oh how the time does fly!
Now homeward we must hie,
We've learned the dance, one and all,
At Hulett's Dancing Hall.
—THE LOOKER-ON.

A POWERFUL SERMON.

Dr. Lewis Hopeful for the Future of the Nation.

The union congregation in the Crescent Avenue church Thursday heard a powerful sermon from the Rev. Dr. Lewis. The central idea of the discourse was that God is the ruler of the nations, and that while we are tinkering along in our own little work He is running things just the same.

The American public he held to be the greatest exponent of self-government the world had ever seen. In extent of territory the United States was the empire of empires. In nationality the nation was a heterogeneous mass of nearly every other nation in the world. If it succeeds these elements must be unified and cemented.

The nation had conflicting elements, and among the evil forces were an indiscriminate ballot founded on sex and not character, extensive bribery at the polls, extensive and overruling commercial instinct, and the dominance of rum and gambling. But the hopeful forces were strong and mighty, and should prevail. Every tenth inhabitant of the nation was a Roman Catholic communicant, and every third either a Protestant or a Catholic. Grounds for hope were found in the power of the nation to react for the right when once aroused, as shown especially in the late election. The preacher said that as soon as any party catered to the lowest elements it must fall, and he held the power of the independent voter to be supreme. Over all the turmoil of our human life, God still reigned.

Mrs. Rutledge At Rest.

The funeral of Mrs. Thomas A. Rutledge, wife of the ex-Marshal, took place Friday in Grace M. E. church, North Plainfield, and was largely attended. The services were conducted by the Rev. Herbert Randolph. It was the first funeral ever held in the church.

Twenty-seven carriages followed the remains to the North Plainfield cemetery, where the interment was made.

The pall-bearers were: J. W. A. Bauersachs, Isaac Squiers, Jr., Julius Stahl, James Carson, Robert Carson, Fred Paech.

Mr. Randolph was summoned by telegraph from the residence of his parents, Thiele, N. Y., where he was spending a ten days vacation. He was compelled to leave the cemetery hastily to take the 4:01 train back to Thiele.

Among the beautiful floral tributes were: Large pillow inscribed with the word "Mother"; white cross with the inscription "Sister"; large bunch of lilies from Unity Lodge, K. of P., of which Mr. Rutledge is a member; bunch of chrysanthemums, from Mrs. P. M. French; wreath of flowers from Mrs. Robert Carson; large bouquet from Mrs. S. J. Carson, Brooks Carson and Joseph Carson; and a large bunch of callas from an unknown friend.

Another New Industry.

Albert Hamilton, of Pittsburg, the only flint-bottle manufacturer in the United States whose works are now running on full time, is a guest of Charles T. Nightingale, the patent bottle-stopper manufacturer, and is now negotiating with him for a large order for Climax stoppers for milk and beer bottles.

Mr. Hamilton was with Col. C. K. Moore yesterday on a tour of inspection relative to establishing a branch factory in Plainfield, and though not making a positive selection of a tract of land, is so much pleased with Plainfield as a location and shipping point that it is only a question of time when he will remove the greater part of his plant here.

Griffen Wins His Case.

The case of Morehouse & Potter against A. M. Griffen, to recover the contract of a horse sold by Morehouse & Potter to A. M. Griffen, which died on Griffen's hands, came up before Judge [illegible] of the District Court of Elizabeth today, after several postponements. F. C. Marsh represented Morehouse & Potter, and W. K. McClure represented A. M. Griffen. On application of Mr. McClure, the plaintiff was nonsuited.

They Think Marriage a Success.

Alice Stansberry and George [illegible] were married last night at the residence of George Lewis, 58 Manning avenue, by the Rev. W. A. Alexander, pastor of the Bethel chapel at Fifth and Washington streets. This is the bride's fourth husband, and the groom's second wife. The happy couple went to housekeeping at the bride's former home on Westervelt avenue.

30 Days Now, and More to Come.

The four tramps who were caught on a freight train Wednesday morning were brought before the City Judge yesterday, charged with disorderly conduct. They were sentenced to imprisonment for 30 days. Later on they will answer to a charge of stealing clothes in Middlesex county.

Freeholder Howard moved to adjourn, which was carried.

The Director declared the Board adjourned until Thursday, November 16, 1893, at 2:30 p. m. A. B. COOK, Clerk.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Nov. 16, 1893.

Pursuant to adjournment the Board met on Thursday, Nov. 16, 1893, at 2:30 p. m.

Present—Director Sauer and Freeholders Badgeley, Donahue, Ehrlich, Hubbard, Howard, Halliday, Kyte, Moore, Roll, Swain, Scudder, Trabon, Vanderbeek and Woodruff.

Absent—Freeholders Hunt, Winans.

By unanimous consent the regular order of business was dispensed with.

The Director called Freeholder Hubbard to the Chair.

Director Sauer moved that when the Board adjourns it be until Monday, Nov. 20, at 2:30 p. m., which was carried.

RESOLUTIONS.

By Director Sauer:

Whereas, Almighty God, in His infinite wisdom, has removed from our midst our most esteemed County Clerk, James J. Gerber, who for many years has faithfully and efficiently administered the different positions of trust confided to his care; and

Whereas, The Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union county feel deeply the great loss which the county has sustained; therefore be it

Resolved, That while we bow with submission to the will of our Heavenly Father, we feel that society at large has lost an esteemed and honored citizen, and the various associations with which he was connected a true and faithful friend.

Resolved, That we tender to the bereaved family of our departed friend and to this community our heartfelt sympathy.

Resolved, That we meet on Saturday, Nov. 18, at nine o'clock a. m., for the purpose of attending in a body the funeral of our late departed friend.

Resolved, That the office of County Clerk be draped in mourning for a period of thirty days.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this Board, and that, as a further mark of respect, that this Board do now adjourn.

On motion of Freeholder Howard adopted unanimously.

The Chairman declared the Board adjourned until Monday, Nov. 20, 1893, at 2:30 p. m. A. B. COOK, Clerk.

Wedding Bells.

Among the pleasant events of Thanksgiving Day was a wedding at 66 Westervelt avenue, the home of T. E. Hazell. The contracting parties were Miss Emma F. Brown, half-sister to Mr. Hazell, and the Rev. G. G. Lane of Riverhead, L. I.

The ceremony was performed at 6 p. m. by the Rev. Dr. Charles E. Barnes, of the M. E. church, assisted by the Rev. Cornelius Schenck of Trinity Reformed church.

After the newly-married couple had received the congratulation of their friends, all the guests, about twenty in number, were served with refreshments, and the evening was spent in social festivities befitting the occasion.

The happy couple will reside in Riverhead, whither friends will follow them with their best wishes, and brightest hopes for the future.

Miss Hattie B. Brown, a younger sister of Mrs. Lane, will remain with Mr. Hazell to take the place in his family which has for nearly four years been so devotedly and lovingly filled by the bride.

German Lutherans' Thanksgiving.

About twenty delegates from the German Lutheran church in New York came to Plainfield, yesterday, and attended divine services in the German church on Grove street. The Rev. Mr. Kuhn officiated. After the service the visitors were entertained at a Thanksgiving dinner at the residence of Mrs. Smith on Plainfield avenue. The entire party had supper at M. Weber's, East Third street, after which they went by stage to Mr. [illegible]'s residence in Washington Valley where they spent a few hours pleasantly, returning to Plainfield and taking a late train for home.

Artist and Gentleman.

In his tour around the world, nothing but high praise and honor greeted Philip Bay, who will entertain the Casino audience Dec. 18. From far-off China comes this brief and expressive statement, voiced by the Hong Kong Telegraph: "Mr. Bay is an artist and a gentleman".

GETTING NEAR THE END.

The Council at [illegible] Not Considering Any New Business of Importance—Suit Threatened Against the Water Company—Electric Railway Extension to Dunellen.

The Common Council session Monday was comparatively uninteresting, being devoted to routine work.

Townsend Rushmore and others petitioned for a crosswalk at Grant avenue and South Second street. The Street Committee was given power in the matter.

A petition from Wm. M. Stillman asked for a more comprehensible system of tax records, as by the present method it was hard to keep run of back taxes. The petition was referred to the Corporation Counsel.

Fred C. Lounsbery asked for a rebate of the interest and cost on back taxes on land which he had purchased at Second street and Johnston avenue and on which he thought the taxes were regularly paid. The petition was referred to the Finance Committee.

Chandler W. Riker, representing the Street Railway Company, petitioned for franchise to extend the trolley-car line on West Front street to the Dunellen boundary. The extension proposed was of a single track with turnouts, the rail was to be of the new T pattern, and the poles were to be octagonal wooden. The matter was referred to the Committee on Streets.

A. M. Griffen asked for the privilege of erecting a booth, 7x11, and 10 feet high, in the rear of his store at 113 East Front street, to be used as a forge-room for melting metals. The Committee on Fire and Buildings was given power to grant the request.

E. A. Laing, John R. Hartpence and others asked for a street lamp on Evona avenue between Second and Third streets. Patrick Whalen, William Firstbrook and others petitioned for two lamps to dispel the dense and dangerous gloom on Plainfield avenue opposite the cemetery, between Fourth and Sixth streets. In these matters the Committee on Police and Public Lights was given power.

On motion of Mr. Fisk, of the Finance Committee, $2,400 was transferred from the general fund to the fire fund, and three notes were renewed, aggregating $9,250.

Charles Conover was confirmed a member of the fire department.

Correspondence was read that had passed between Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh and the Water Supply Company, the purport of which on the part of the company, in reply to the counselor's demands, was that the company had been unable to procure pipe to lay mains demanded, and that the company did not agree with the city in its interpretation of the water-works contract regarding fourway hydrants. Mr. Erickson held the excuse of lack of pipe to be a lame one, and said that the request fulfillment of which was now staved off until spring had been made last April. He moved that the committee be empowered to have the Corporation Counsel ascertain what the company proposed to do, and that if a satisfactory agreement could not be reached, then the committee should proceed in the courts against the company. The motion was unanimously carried.

Mr. Erickson said that at the next meeting he intended to call up the ordinance fixing fire limits and regulating the construction of buildings and the work of a fire and building superintendent, and asked the privilege of having it set in type so that all might have a copy.

On motion of Mr. Fisk the Clerk was requested to have a list of all unfinished business prepared for the next meeting.

President Grimes asked if the Committee on Laws and Ordinance had not been instructed to report on the bill-posting ordinance. Chairman See reported progress.

At the request of the Mayor, $100 was appropriated for his use in police matters.

Council adjourned to Dec. 11.

The Story of Anthony Kent.

The December number of "Tales From Town Topics" presents, with its usual barrage of miscellaneous reading, a complete novel by Charles Stokes Wayne, entitled "Anthony Kent". It is a tale of love that is both bad and pure, and its scenes are laid in Venice, Monte Carlo, Paris and New York. Anthony Kent's experience in loving a beautiful adventuress, and afterwards meeting and losing his heart to the woman's innocent young daughter who had been deserted as a baby by her unnatural mother, is such as to hold the attention of most readers, and the author's bright and attractive style suffices to make the story admirable as a piece of literature. Mr. Thompson's Successful Sale.

White House, Hunterdon county, never saw such a crowd as that which gathered last Saturday at the sale of A. D. Thompson's building lots at that place. Many people went from Plainfield, and not a few purchased property. Those who did buy got bargains, for by next spring the lots sold Saturday will be worth double what was paid for them. The sale was very satisfactory in every way, and Mr. Thompson believes that the era of great prosperity for White House is begun. Mr. Thompson will sell more lots at private sale to those who are looking for

LONE STAR FRAZEE STILL SHINES.

HE ONLY VICTORIOUS ONE OF THE DEMOCRATS.

In Every Other Office, Republicans Are Elected by Majorities Above the Usual.

The Plainfield charter election Tuesday resulted in a complete victory for the Republicans, except in the case of Councilman Frazee, who was re-elected by a handsome majority.

The Republican triumph proved the futility of the local Democracy attempting to win a victory on the fall ticket. Even such magnificent candidates as those who sacrificed themselves on the altar of Democracy could not stand against the sweeping Republican majority that has so long prevailed. There was too much individual ambition on the part of all the candidates, and not enough concentration upon those for whom there was some hope. By concentrating their efforts, the Democrats might have elected one Councilman at Large and one Freeholder, but they tried for too much and lost everything but their intrepid Lone Star.

Mr. Frazee was re-elected by a majority nearly double that of two years ago, and returns in glory to the Councilmanic seat he has honored.

"NOTHING AT ALL" PROVES A FEAST.

Another Glowing Success to the Credit of Playwright Taggart and the Holy Cross Choir.

The first of the season's entertainments by the Holy Cross church choir, under the direction of Choirmaster F. H. Cheeswright, was given on Tuesday in the Sunday-school room.

A thoroughly appreciative audience was present, and enjoyed the excellent programme provided. The entertainment opened with a glee "The Boy and the Bee", by the choir. It was a very pretty song, and afforded excellent blending of the voices.

Mr. Cheeswright was then heard on the piano. His selection, a gavotte by Filoge, was a charming one, and its rendition was exquisite in every detail. In response to an encore, he played "Narcis", the execution of which was perfect. This was one of his own compositions.

Everyone applauded when the moment came for the new variety sketch by George Taggart. William Holmes assisted the author in the admirable performance. The scene was laid in a Chinese laundry, with all the accessories. Its owner has gone out for a while, and the merrymakers gain admittance and have a joyous time with the various things at hand.

During the performance Mr. Holmes was given scope for his excellent voice, and Mr. Taggart was seen at his best in clever impersonations. That of Henry Irving was especially good. Humorous songs and witticisms, brilliant with the genius of Mr. Taggart, brought forth warmest testimony of appreciation. The title of the sketch was "Nothing at All", but it proved a great deal of an entertainer.

Everyone was delighted to hear P. Ludwig Conde, who gave Musin's Mazurka, and as an encore "Vera Cruz". By special request Mr. Cheeswright sang "His Picture of Her." It was received with loud applause, deservedly given. A composition of his own, "One of Us Two", was his encore.

The Kinder Symphony, arranged for toy instruments, and given by the choir, was a novel affair, and everyone was surprised at the excellent music resulting from the burlesque. Especially commended was the violin playing of Mr. Whilton of Roselle and the 'cello playing of Fermin Ferrer.

Mayor W. L. Saunders followed with a recitation, "A Sailor Boy's Dream", which was given in his usual good style. The Mayor is always a favorite, and he was received warmly by his hearers. He also told one of his own excellent stories, convulsing his audience with laughter.

The closing number on the programme, "Tom, Tom, the Piper's Son", by the choir, was rendered in an excellent manner and brought to an end one of the best entertainments ever given by the choir. Clarence Eick was the accomplished accompanist of the evening.

Points on Metal.

Every man, woman and child uses pins in some way or another, and poor pins are not worth the paper they are stuck on.

MORRIS DALY'S SWIFT DEATH.

A NEW SECTION HAND KILLED BY DRILL ENGINE 30.

He Stepped from in Front of [illegible] Train, and Was Mangled by Locomotive and Car Which [illegible] Not See—Two Other Unfortunate Victims of the Rail.

(From The Press, of December 6.)

Morris Daly, who got a job in the section gang of the Jersey Central only three weeks ago, met a cruel fate this morning. He was working on the track near the Washington street bridge, about 8:30, when he saw a train approaching. He stepped from in front of it, not noticing that by so doing he was directly in the path of Drill Engine 30 and the car attached. In a moment he was stricken down, and ground under the wheels. His face was mutilated beyond recognition, and he was otherwise mangled. He died in a few minutes.

Daley was about 30 years of age, unmarried, and came from High Bridge. He had a brother in town and a sister working for James Clark. The body was taken to the Morgue, and County Physician O'Reilley was sent for. He promised by telegraph to attend to the case this afternoon.

Richard Hughes, on his way to Slatington, Pa., to work in the slate quarries, was struck by a train at Evona this morning, and badly bruised and shaken. He was taken to the Muhlenberg Hospital, and is resting easily.

A stranger was tumbled about by a train at Dunellen this morning, and assisted to Dr. Brakeley's for treatment. The doctor found no bones broken and no [illegible] injury. [illegible] pain, however, and with difficulty continued on his way.

Salvini's New Play, "Zamar" by Paul Kester.

"Zamar", the new play which Alexander Salvini will present for the first time in New York at the Star Theatre next Monday, December 11, is the work of Paul Kester. The scenes are laid in Portugal in the year 1521 in the days of King Manuel "the fortunate". The story tells that the old king Manuel first contracted a secret marriage with the queen of the Gypsies a numerous race at this time from which union a son was born and who was named "Zamar". The boy is brought up in ignorance of his royal parentage and as in most stories, of the kind the king contracts another marriage with one of his own class from which union another son is born who afterwards becomes Joam III.

The old king in his dying moments though he has long lost trace of his gypsy wife hears news of the presence of "Zamar" with his band in the vicinity of the royal palace. In a moment of contrition he sends for his first born to confer on him his parting blessing and confesses to him that he is his father. The confession is overheard by "Zamar's" half brother the apparent heir to the throne who breaks in upon the scene and of course causes high words. The old king

Respectfully,

GEORGE KYTE.

On motion of Freeholder Trabon received, filed and resignation accepted.

From Wm. M. Oliver:

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

Gentlemen:—I hereby tender my resignation as Collector of the County of Union, to take effect upon the appointment and qualifying of my successor.

Dated Nov. 30, 1893.

WM. M. OLIVER.

On motion of Freeholder Trabon received, filed and resignation accepted.

RESOLUTIONS.

By Freeholder Vanderbeek:

Resolved, That seven hundred dollars be paid to Wm. T. Kirk on account of contract on iron bridge over Green Brook, at Westervelt avenue, Plainfield, N. J.

On motion of Freeholder Moore adopted unanimously.

Freeholder Donahue moved to go into nominations for a successor to County Collector Oliver for the unexpired term, which was carried.

Freeholder Trabon nominated Wm. H. Hicks. No other nominations.

The Director appointed Freeholders Trabon and Hubbard as tellers.

On ballot Wm. H. Hicks received thirteen votes, and the Director declared him elected County Collector for the unexpired term.

Freeholder Howard moved to go into nominations to fill the vacancy of Freeholder of Fanwood township, which was carried.

Freeholder Hubbard nominated F. W. Westcott.

Freeholder Trabon nominated Geo. G. Miller. Same tellers.

On ballot F. W. Westcott received six votes, George G. Miller received seven votes.

The Director declared no election.

Freeholder Trabon moved that balloting be suspended, which was carried.

By Freeholder Hubbard:

Resolved, That the County Collector be and is hereby directed to pay to the Sheriff two thousand dollars, on account of court expenses.

On motion of Freeholder Moore adopted unanimously.

By Director Sauer:

Resolved, That the thanks of this Board be tendered to our retiring County Collector, Wm. M. Oliver, for the faithful manner in which he has filled the important duties of his office.

On motion of Freeholder Swain adopted.

By Director Sauer:

Resolved, That the thanks of this Board be extended to our retiring member, Mr. George Kyte, for the sincere manner in which he has filled his office.

On motion of Freeholder Howard adopted.

The Director appointed the following on committees in place of Freeholder Kyte: On publication, Freeholder Burtick; on Sheriff, Freeholder Vanderbeek; on Springfield county road, Freeholder Badgeley.

The following bills, audited and approved, were read and on motion ordered paid:

"Keeping Up With the Band."

[illegible]

He turned to look back from the trail that led over the ridge toward Nigger Gulch. Black Pocket lay behind him with its little collection of rough slab-plastered buildings around the creek where the placer diggings were, the largest building of all being the saloon in which he had nightly gambled away and spent for drink the dust earned by hard labor through the day. Last of all, he had wagered his claim on the turn of a card—and lost. Then he became a loafer, a sot, a shambling wreck. His former friends turned their backs on him as he sank lower and lower. In the poker game the horse he had grazed had long since [illegible] the only creature that seemed to [illegible] his company. And Bob [illegible], the new owner of the animal, drove him away whenever he was found lingering near the beast's tether.

It had come at last—he was driven out of the camp, warned that to return meant the same thing as signing his own death warrant. He felt a thrill of anger as he thought of this, looking down on the town and the men at work by their sluices at the creek. He saw a little knot standing in front of the saloon, evidently watching to see that he surely left the Pocket, and with a sudden burst of fury he shook his fist at them, snarling:

"Curse you all! You have drove me out, but I'll come back [illegible] some day an show ye I'm as good a man as the best among ye! Not another drop of liquor ever goes down my throat. I swear it! From this day I lead a new life!"

Then, with one more downward glance at the town, he walked on and passed over the ridge.

The men in front of the saloon had been watching his wretched figure, cut clear against the sunset sky, and a long breath was drawn when he vanished from view.

"Thar!" called Bob Bunker, "I reckon as how that's the last of the ornery, no 'count critter. I'm darn glad he's gone, for I was allus 'fearin he'd steal back that thar horse of mine what he used to own. Come in an drink on me."

There was no need to repeat the invitation, and the entire crowd filed into the saloon to drink and forget the poor wretch who was plodding along the trail toward Nigger Gulch.

When darkness came and he could walk no farther, the outcast crept down to a little hollow and slept on the hard ground, his only covering being the star bespangled sky. He slept better and more peacefully than for many a week, and no kind spirit warned him of what the morning would bring.

He was awakened by the sound of horses' [illegible] close at hand, and he opened his eyes to discover the new day had dawned fair and sweet. As he sat up and glanced around, to his unbounded amazement, not two rods away he saw a horse feeding in the little hollow. The animal wore no halter nor strap, being at liberty to wander as it chose, and he recognized the creature as the one he had once owned.

He was given no time to speculate how the beast came there, for, at this moment, led by Bob Bunker, a band of armed and angry men burst through the brush on the side of the hollow toward the trail, and the outcast recognized citizens of Black Pocket. As he arose to his feet Bunker roared:

"Thar's the ornery galoot, an thar's my horse!"

A dozen revolvers were turned on the outcast, and he was seen in the clutch of the mob, while the noose of a rope they had brought along was drawn tight about his throat. They dragged him beneath a tree, over the limb of which the rope was flung. Not a word came from his lips, for he well knew how useless it was to protest his innocence.

Ten minutes later the lynchers turned back toward Black Pocket, taking with them the animal that had strayed so far and thus brought about the death of a human being. The morning sun shot golden lances of light through the leaves of the trees down into the little hollow where a dark form swung, pulseless and silent, at the end of the rope. A sweet perfume, the breath of nature, was in the air, and a tiny bird trilled a joyous song from a branch above the dead man's head.

In all the world, no human being knew this man died innocent of crime or evil intention just as he stood on the threshold of a new life.

A Nice Tune.

Mrs. Slowcome—John Henry, I can't say I like the tune Mary's young man has been playing all the evening, but we can be sure there's no lovemaking going on between them.

But both Mary and her young man were pleased with the tune.—Puck.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

If you have not engaged your work, I should be pleased to do it for you.

I buy only first-class Marble and Granite and do not sell unless at prices that will enable me to put up the work with credit to myself and justice to the parties purchasing.

I employ no agents and therefore am enabled to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customer, of the commission generally paid to agents.

I am [illegible] a very small expense in running my shop, myself and my son doing the larger portion of the work, and we personally attend to the setting of all work, and look upon business in this light, that Good Work and Good Material, at Fair Prices, is a standing advertisement for my business, which will tend to build up trade, and I feel safe to warrant that no dealer can sell you the same work and same stock any cheaper than I can.

Hoping to be favored with your patronage, I am yours respectfully,

CITY DEPARTMENT.

Walter Irving Clarke, City Editor.

—The resignation of Borough Marshal Bronie has been accepted.

—A church sociable will be held in Vincent chapel, Friday evening, Dec. 8.

—Hallock says his sales on linen initial handkerchiefs for gentlemen are increasing every day.

—Officer Corwin is doing good work in keeping the smoking room at the North Avenue station clear of idlers.

—Daily America, New York's straight Democratic paper, has reduced its retail price to the public to 1 cent a copy.

—The Junior Christian Endeavor society of the First Baptist church will give an entertainment entitled "Mother Goose and Her Family", Tuesday evening, Dec. 12.

—C. T. Nightingale, of the Climax Stopper Company, announces that during the holidays he will sell coal to the poor at 25 cts. for 100 lbs. and 10 cts. for 40 lbs. This is at the rate of $5 a ton.

—Now that winter is really here, those handsome and inexpensive furs sold by the International Company at 114 Park avenue are in great demand among Plainfield people. The prices are lower than in New York.

—Mrs. Overland, mother of the young man who was killed a week ago, on Saturday received a check for $654 from the Prudential Insurance Company, that being the amount of the policy of insurance on the young man.

—"This is just the weather we have been waiting for"—is what those busy people Doane & Edsall paused long enough from their rush to remark this morning.—"We have two or three thousand dollars worth of rubber goods for which we would like to get the cash."

—For stylish, glove-fitting garments, Plainfield women can do no better than secure the services of Miss Hick, the fashionable dressmaker of 407 Park avenue (second bell), who is prepared to go out by the day. Her work is most highly recommended, and the prices are as satisfactory as the gowns she fashions.

A HAPPY COMBINATION.

This Distinguished Trio to Present to Plainfielders Graceful Eloquence, Sparkling Wit, Keen Satire and Bright Melodies.

In the introduction of Philip Ray, the eminent English monologue entertainer, the Plainfield public is offered an attraction that is without a rival in this country. Mr. Ray originated his entertainments in England in 1885. Since then he has traveled nearly twice around the world, having delighted large audiences in hundreds of cities in the different countries he has passed through. In England, South Africa, India, China, Japan, New Zealand and Australia he is remembered with keenest enjoyment by the society of the English quarters.

Immediately on his arrival in San Francisco from Australia, flattering offers were made for the American tour of this distinguished gentleman. His tour has been a continual triumph, and the demand upon his time has increased in such proportions as to prove that the glowing reports and ovations extended to him by both press and public in foreign countries were in no way exaggerated, and that America has been quick to perceive and appreciate the wonderful entertaining power, the magnetism and versatility of this great and original artist.

In his visit to Plainfield, in the Casino Dec. 15, Mr. Ray will be accompanied by two artists of reputation—Wilbert E. Lewis the brilliant young pianist, and Miss Jean Wilson the peerless young elocutionist. This trio forms one of the happiest combinations ever made; and Plainfielders who love a cultured entertainment are assured that in the programme now being prepared for the Casino Dec. 15, there will be an abundance of keen satire, graceful eloquence, sparkling wit and bright melodies.

Contesting for a Lot.

Gilbert S. Martin, of this city, is prominently mentioned by the Elizabeth Herald as a possible winner of the Lorraine lot being voted for in its columns. The Juniors should help him. The Herald last night contained this letter, under the heading, "Plainfield Threatens. Mr. Martin's Friends Want Him to Win that Lot":

EDITOR CENTRAL HERALD:

Enclosed find fifteen votes for Lorraine lot contest for Gilbert S. Martin. Would like you to say that he is a prominent member of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics, and he has great surprises in store for his opponents in the contest, as I understand that he has quite a number of coupons on hand. Enough to place him very near the top.

FRED. BOWERS.

The Herald asks if Mr. Martin is ambitious, and says:

The way to put Mr. Martin at or near the top is by voting for him. The ballot, freely used, indicates the only royal road to Lorraine.

Play Funny, Songs Great.

As an additional magnet to draw the public to "The Prodigal Father", Messrs. Jefferson, Klaw and Erlanger have engaged the "one and only" Maggie Cline, whose "Throw Him Down McCloskey" and other songs have had New York theatregoers wild with delight during the past two years. Maggie Cline has been aptly dubbed "The Irish Linnet" by the New York Herald, and the metropolis has claimed her as its very own fad for a good many moons. Her songs are unique, and together with so good a play as "The Prodigal Father" should fill out a most excellent evening's entertainment.

George W. Cable to Read.

George W. Cable will give a reading of selections from his writings Thursday evening, December 14, at 8, in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church. Among the works from which Mr. Cable reads are "Old Creole Days", "Dr. Sevier" and "The Grandissimes". Tickets may be obtained at Reynolds's drug store.

In Need of Repairs.

East Fourth street residents request the attention of the Street Commissioner to the dangerous condition of the walk on the northwest side of the street between Watchung avenue and Church street. The opposite side of the street, they say, is flagged and curbed, while at this particular point there is no improvement.

ITS WONDERFUL EFFICACY.

Newspapers Admit Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is All It is Claimed.

The intense interest taken in the almost miraculous cures made by Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy at Athens, N. Y., and other places, resulted in the Albany, N. Y., Journal, sending a representative to Athens to investigate the cases, and it was found that many of the cures were simply wonderful.

"I was very sick about two years ago; physicians said I was suffering from female complaints. Their prescriptions failed to benefit me, for I gradually grew worse until finally I was told that I could not live. At this critical period my mother persuaded me to try Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, which I did, and I began to improve steadily, and continued its use until I was completely cured. I now weigh 140 pounds, and never enjoyed such good health as at present. I prize Favorite Remedy higher than gold."

In speaking of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, one of our local physicians said: "It is undoubtedly the best medicine we have for renovating the entire system; it eliminates all poisons from the blood whether of scrofulous or malarial origin; for chronic dyspepsia, rheumatism, nervousness, all of which spring from an excess of poisons in the blood, [illegible]

PERSONALIA.

Samuel Wallace has gone to Baltimore to visit his brother.

John Voohl, of Somerset street, is confined to the house with a sprained ankle.

Edson L. Boice has returned after a visit of one week in Newark and Lorraine.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hyde leave town this week to spend the winter in New York.

A concert will be given Thursday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Marlowe, Dunellen.

Peter Hodge spent Sunday in Somerville with his wife and son. He returned this morning.

P. M. Jacques of New York spent Sunday with the family of E. J. Waring, Myrtle avenue.

The apparently well-founded report that Morris Higgins was married last week is denied by him.

F. S. Burgess of Westervelt avenue has returned from a ten-days trip to Boston and Fall River.

John M. Crane is now General Superintendent of the American Employers Liability Insurance Company.

Miss Josie Fritts and Miss Adrianne Allison have returned to Plainfield after visiting friends in New York.

Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Bushnell will make 124 West Eleventh street, New York city, their winter residence, after Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. William Brooks, of New York, spent a part of the week with Mr. and Mrs. William Shadier, of North Plainfield.

Andrew Vanderbeek and family, formerly of this city, have returned and are living with Dudley S. Miller of East Fifth street.

Ex-Judge and Mrs. John Ulrich are again receiving the congratulations of their friends, over the advent of a son, born Sunday.

George W. Rockfellow will attend the annual meeting of the State Board of Health in the Laurel House, Lakewood, Dec. 8 and 9.

A. D. Thompson, who has been confined to the house for several days suffering from a heavy cold, was able to be at his office today.

E. W. Conklin and family who have been absent from town since November 22, returned to their home, 325 First place, Saturday.

Miss Lillie Garretson of West Front street is entertaining her cousins, Miss Eva Smith and Miss Mahlon Smith, of Clinton, for a few days.

Miss May Cottrell and Miss Emma Barney, of Madame Alberti's Delsarte school, New York, are the guests of the Misses Lewis, Central avenue.

Wm. F. Trost is back from a week in Scranton. He reports things very dull in the coal and lumber regions, with no chance of a change very soon.

Mrs. John R. Kennett, of Baltimore, and Mrs. Thomas H. Kennett, of Virginia, are guests of their brother, R. Meredith Dryden, of West Seventh street.

Mrs. John Kelly, of 614 West Third street, is very ill, with little chance for recovery. Drs. Probasco and Hedges held a consultation Saturday, but could give the family no hope.

Madame Ira Leon will give the first quarterly reception of her school for dancing, in Hulett's Hall, West Front street, Friday evening, Dec. 29. Tickets are for sale in Hulett's music store.

Abraham Angleman, of 540 West Front street, is receiving numerous congratulations from his friends today, for he is quietly observing the 58th anniversary of his birth, and is looking as young as ever.

Mrs. John Sherwood was one of the many society leaders who expressed raptures over Miss Jean Wilson's rare ability. Plainfield social queens will have an opportunity to pass judgment on Miss Wilson, in the Casino Dec. 15.

Mrs. Frances M., wife of William Morris, died very suddenly of hemorrhage of the lungs at 9 Wednesday evening. Mrs. Morris was talking with her husband at their home on Morris avenue near Evona when she threw up her hands and fell backward. She died half an hour later. The deceased was in her thirty-fourth year.

Harry A. Thorne has returned to the Adirondacks with Mrs. Thorne after a visit of one month with his parents on LaGrande avenue. Mr. Thorne is the manager of the Mountain Lodge Club-House, the largest and newest of the three owned by the Adirondack League Club. He has conducted the house through its first season most successfully, and has been appointed manager for another year.

Chief Marshal Pangborn is being complimented on all sides on his fine appearance in his handsome new uniform and winter overcoat. He has very properly donned the gold letters "Chief Marshal" on his cap, and will have his two new assistants uniformed tomorrow. The staff of borough marshals will be a credit to North Plainfield, and Mr. Pangborn deserves full credit for bringing the borough police department from its old position to so high a state of perfection.

OBITUARY.

Peter Wyckoff.

In the death of Peter Wyckoff, which occurred at his late home, 519 West Fourth street, at 2:15 Wednesday afternoon, of heart failure, Plainfield loses one of her most esteemed colored citizens. Mr. Wyckoff had been ailing for a long time, but became helpless only a little more than a week ago. He leaves a wife, two sons and two daughters. One son, Smith Wyckoff, has charge of the Board of Trade rooms; and John, the eldest, is in the employ of the Erie Railroad as parlor car porter. One daughter is wife of Alonzo Hill, of the firm of Brown & Hill, the tonsorial artists, and the other is wife of Charles Scudder.

Mr. Wyckoff was sexton and member of Bethel chapel, and one of the founders of the Mt. Olive Baptist church on Liberty street. He came to Plainfield in 1866, and built his home in 1869. He was born Feb. 17, 1818, and his age was therefore 75 years, 9 months and 19 days. When he first came to Plainfield he was a broom manufacturer, and did a flourishing trade shaping native broom-corn into the useful household articles. He was also an expert kalsomine artist, and led a busy and useful life. His zealous workmanship will be remembered with pride by many Plainfield families. He was a very excellent and much appreciated man.

The funeral services will be held Friday afternoon from Bethel chapel, and the interment will be in the Baptist cemetery on Plainfield avenue.

Warren Chapel Meetings.

Mr. Crane's text last night was from John III: 18—"Condemned Already". "The sinner"—he said—"was a spiritual bankrupt. Men comparing themselves among themselves and having false standards remain in darkness. Men love darkness rather than light, because their deeds are evil. Unbelief in Christ was the sin of sins. The longer a man continues in sin the less he wants to get rid of it."

The stormy night prevented a large gathering, but it was a meeting of great interest. Three persons professed conversion.

Mr. Crane's topic tonight will be "Aggressive Christianity". Bible readings are held every day at 3 p. m.

NEW JERSEY MUST FALL IN LINE.

PLAINFIELD AGITATING TEMPERANCE LAW REFORM.

Leading Clergymen and Laymen from All Sections Engage in an Important Crusade.

The Presbyterian Synod of New Jersey, composed of over 400 ministers, and having in its bounds 300 churches, at its last meeting directed its Permanent Committee on Temperance, of which the Rev. W. R. Honeyman of this city is chairman, to use their endeavors to secure a scientific temperance law for our public schools. Accordingly a conference of prominent ministers and laymen was called to meet yesterday in Newark to take such action as should seem wise, and delegates appeared from Belvidere, Boonton, Paterson, Jersey City, New Brunswick, Burlington and other places, ready to push this important measure. The following denominations were represented, viz: Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterian, Congregationalist, Reformed, and Episcopalian. The Rev. B. S. Everett of Jamesburg was chosen chairman, and the Rev. Mr. Hare of Burlington secretary, after which a most admirable address was delivered by Mrs. Mary H. Hunt of Boston, who has been instrumental in securing more scientific temperance laws than anyone else in the land. She told some amusing stories of her work in other States, and also spoke of the fact that every Northern State except New Jersey and Indiana had such laws, while all the South, save four States, and all the Territories and the District of Columbia had placed them on their statute books. It was unanimously resolved to strive to place New Jersey side by side with her sister States, and a committee was chosen to carry out the wishes of the Conference. This committee consisted of about twenty men, and the Rev. Mr. Honeyman was made its chairman, while the Rev. Dr. E. M. Rodman and A. M. Powell, of Plainfield, were among its members. They held a meeting immediately after the adjournment of the Conference, and began work. They expect to have petitions printed and put in circulation very soon, and Mrs. Mary H. Hunt is already engaged to lecture in various parts of the State. An effort will be made to have her speak in Plainfield, and if such arrangements can be made a rare treat awaits the people. The Conference also resolved to ask for the repeal of the Excise Commission Act, and also for a County Local Option Law. The committee of twenty will hold another meeting at Newark next week to plan for further work.

FLIRTS WITH A SERIO-COMIC.

Amusing Story of Stanley Dodge's Escapade With Dolly Bond.

Maggie Cline, "The Irish Queen", will make her appearance in Music Hall Friday night, with Messrs. C. B. Jefferson, Klaw & Erlanger's splendid comedy company in Glen MacDonough's acknowledged success "The Prodigal Father", one of the jolliest of jolly plays. The remarkable songstress will be heard in all her most vivid and side-splitting descriptive ditties, and in conjunction with the comedy an exceptional treat is in store. Who has not heard of Maggie Cline and her mirth-provoking "Throw him down McCloskey!" Her name is known throughout the land, her remarkable characterizations and her humor need but be mentioned to conjure up the merriest thoughts of genuine comedy and the sure enjoyment of the heartiest laughter. Maggie Cline's smile is contagious. Let her but twinkle those laughing eyes of hers or pose in attitude a la combatant, and her audience fairly shrieks with laughter. Her descriptive powers are unique, full of varied coloring and versatility. There is but one Maggie Cline. Fun in abundance is also found in the comedy "The Prodigal Father". The play offers Messrs. Jefferson, Klaw & Erlanger's splendid company no end of merry work. Stanley Dodge, the witty old prodigal, gets into and scrambles out of his multifarious scrapes with all the keen acumen which naughty prodigals are supposed to possess. His flighty flirtations with the serio-comic, Dolly Bond, which are the cause of all his amusing troubles and tribulations, and the anxiety he shows in his endeavor to keep his secret from his family and admiring friends, hold everybody in the heartiest jollity throughout the play. The company is an excellent one, including such names as Harry Hotto, George Gaston, Cecil Kingston, George C. Boniface Junior, Frank Caldwell, J. J. Fitzsimmons, Blanch Chapman Ford, Cora Macy, Marion Keith, Marguerite Franklin and Little Irene Franklin, Mamma's Angel child.

TO BUY NEW HYMNALS.

German Christian Endeavor Entertainment for a Worthy Object.

The entertainment given in Reform Hall Monday night, under the auspices of the new Christian Endeavor society of the German Reformed church, for the purpose of raising funds for new hymnals, was largely attended, and a complete success. Those who went intending to enjoy themselves, were fully satisfied, as the programme was a genuine merry-maker, and continuously throughout the performance the audience expressed warmest appreciation. This society, which has just been organized, deserves credit for the admirable entertainment furnished.

Following is the programme:

Those Princeton Boys and Their Plainfield Concert.

In a company of gentlemen last night one expressed the opinion that the money returns to the Princeton and Yale teams were demoralizing to the men, supposing that they profited individually. When informed to the contrary he was much gratified and said "that ought to be generally known. It would change the views of many, and help the attendance at the coming Princeton concert at the Casino".

It is a condition precedent to inter-collegiate matches that the players shall not receive any compensation, nor do they. The same is true regarding the members of the various musical clubs. After the payment of all club and traveling expenses, the balance, always a handsome sum, is turned over to the general college interests in athletics and to the infirmaries and college charities. Many a worthy man is helped through college from these funds.

The Princeton Glee, Mandolin and Banjo Clubs will give a concert in the Casino Thursday.

Among the Princeton Class of '94 are: Alfred Holmes, Edward Tuttle and Edward J. Pinkerton, of Plainfield, and Kennedy Sykes, of Scotch Plains.

Holmes is a member of the Glee, and will sing here on the 7th. Sykes and Pinkerton are on the editorial staff of The [illegible]

MANUAL TRAINING MUST COME.

Only a Question of Time Before the Public Schools Adopt It—Better School-Room Ventilation Demanded.

The Wadsworth property came up in the School Board meeting Monday night. J. T. Vail, agent for the rental of a portion of the property to the Misses [illegible], sent his check for the rental of [illegible], less his commission of [illegible]. This method of securing his commission was not according to school law, which provides that the Board must issue its own vouchers for every payment. The matter was ordered adjusted.

The Assessor's bill was found to have a mistake in two items and was returned for correction.

The rest of the bills were ordered paid. Tuition fees were received amounting to $612. The report of the tax collector was received and filed.

The 6 per cent. interest of $540 on the $30,000 Irving school bonds due the Mutual Life Insurance Company Dec. 19 was ordered paid. A letter was received stating that this interest would be 5 per cent. after Jan. 1.

The resignation of Janitor Walker of the Irving school was accepted, and Henry Pugh was appointed for trial of one month.

Principal Maxson was on his request granted permission to dismiss early from school those pupils taking manual-training course. He said that at the rate the manual-training movement was growing it would have to be introduced into the public schools at an early date.

The Christmas vacation was fixed from Dec. 22 to Jan. 2.

The secretary was authorized to draw checks for salaries previous to the holidays, for December.

Wm. Thompson complained that one of his children was suffering from catarrhal pneumonia, the result of imperfect ventilation and draughts in the Washington school. He also complained of the dampness of the cellar, into which the children were obliged to go during recess on rainy days, and said that no doubt other complaints would be made to the Board but citizens were deterred by the locked doors which greeted them. Dr. Probasco, who served as chairman, said that people by ringing the bell could gain admittance, and he promised to investigate and remedy the matter of draughts.

A bound catalogue of the Public Library was ordered for each public school building.

The secretary was instructed to communicate with the Board of Health, asking for prompt notification of all contagious diseases.

Dr. Probasco reported that a new ventilator had been procured to take the place of one that had fallen, narrowly missing some of the students and teachers.

The Board adjourned.

A Leading Magazine.

Home and Country for December (Christmas number) is very attractive; even more so than usual, which is saying a great deal. Its table of contents comprises much that is enjoyable, the selected matter and illustrations being well calculated to please every taste. Among the prominent articles are: "How I Found My New Home", by Carmen Sylva, Her Majesty, Elizabeth, Queen of Roumania; "Moose-Hunting in Maine", by George E. Gonord; "Experiences in Central Persia", by Alfred Singerly; "The Journey from A to Izzard. How a Dictionary is Made", by Frank H. Vizetelly; "Piano Virtuosi", by Louise Newell; "Sword Practice for Women", by the Baroness Maria v. Feuchtwanger Erlenthal, and "Development of Metropolitan Journalism and Journalists", by Samuel Jarco. In fiction, "The Ghostly Rider. A Reminiscence of the Rockies", by Frederick K. Nostrand; "The Kiss of the Queen. A Legend", by Estelle Shaw; "Joseph in Egypt. How the Opera Was Written", by Julia Park Kimball; "A Fancy-Dress Ball, A. D. 2000", by Bella J. Rose; and "The Spirit of Christmas", by W. Delano Eastlake, will be read with pleasure. The poetry consists of "A Kiss", by Mary Stowell; "Without Intent", by Marion C. Smith; "For the Children's Sake", by Leon Mead; "A Christmas Wish", by Laila Mitchell; and "Some One", by Nell MacIntyre.

—The magazine is published monthly by Jos. W. Kay, at 53 East 10th street, New York.

Extending the Electric System.

The civil engineers of the New Jersey Improvement Company completed Saturday the survey of the electric road route from Westfield to Millburn, and their work was inspected by Mr. Chamberlain, chief engineer, and E. R. Collins. Mr. Holmes, of Millburn, has procured the necessary consent of property-owners on the end of the line, and Mr. Marsh, of Westfield, has nearly completed the work on his portion. Some slight variations may be made in the route as now laid out. Work will be commenced as soon as the weather permits in the spring.

Paralyzed and Frozen.

August Bittle, aged 62 years, of 408 West Third street, while at work chopping wood on the Beebe farm at Bound Brook, Friday, was stricken with paralysis. He fell on the ground, and when found some time afterwards was so benumbed and chilled that pneumonia set in and last night he was reported to be in a dying condition.

ORGANIZED DEMOCRACY INVINCIBLE.

The Hon. Thomas F. Lane of Elizabeth is agitating the need of effective reorganization of the Democratic party in Union county. Plainfield's leading Democrat endorses the idea in the following:

PLAINFIELD, Nov. 28, 1893.

HON. THOS. F. LANE,

DEAR SIR:—Yours received. I feel that your [illegible] organization of the Democratic party in the county, is very opportune. The need of a thorough and strong organization was most thoroughly demonstrated during the recent campaign, for no longer can success rest on the efforts of individuals, they but waste their effectiveness through failure of [illegible] concerted action. [illegible] "bosses", but a union of well planned effort would stimulate the weak and strengthen the strong to action, and be fruitful of general results for the advancement of our party's principles. As to the details of such organization [illegible] matter of deliberation and [illegible] should be put aside for the one aim, the good of our country and party's welfare.

Our party with solid phalanx, contending for the grand principles of "equal rights, equal laws and justice", would be invincible against any force that our enemy could send against us.

Respectfully,

J. E. MANNING.

Those Long Structures.

If there is any one object on the line of the Central Railroad that has caused more comment than another and about which more questions have been asked, it is the long structure built on spiles on the left hand side of the road, along the bank of the canal just before one reaches the local station called Clinton(?). Some of the remarks are: "It can't be intended for an advertising enterprise because they would not enclose it." "It can't be for work requiring much light, else they would put in larger windows." "It can't be calculated for heavy work or they would put foundations under it", etc., etc. What is it for? Well, it is simply a manufactory of patent plasters, and the process is something as follows: They take a sheet of light pasteboard and cover it over with a coat of plaster of paris, then another sheet of pasteboard is put on and pressed, then another coat of plaster and so on until the job complete is composed of five sheets of pasteboard and four layers of plaster, making a thickness of about one half inch and one yard square. The house is not lathed, but furred about every eight inches and the sheets of plaster about a yard square which are nailed to the furring and the local mason finishes the job with a hard finish coat. They claim that the paper, being a non-conductor, makes the house warmer in winter and colder in summer and that moisture is not conveyed to the lumber as is the case when the old style plaster is used.

A Mohammedan in Plainfield.

No honest man can read the reports in the late papers of India on the Religious Congress in Chicago, or peruse Mr. Webb's eloquent lectures, without a feeling of apprehension that perhaps after all there are other honest, devout and devoted men on the other side of the world doing their best to reach heaven by a route they sincerely believe to be the only straight one. It is a rude awakening for our dreams of monopoly of religious truth, and if Mr. Webb's mission does nothing more than teach us that there are other honest people on earth largely outnumbering the Christian world, he will have served his day and generation. Mr. Webb became a partial believer in Mohammedanism while serving at Manila, Philippine Islands, as United States Consul, and subsequently perfected his new allegiance by study in India. He has devoted ten years of his life to the study of Islam, and is one of the few Americans who have studied Mohammedanism from Mohammedan authorities. He can always count on a kind reception from all who are interested in the study of comparative theology, and all who think it desirable to dispel popular ignorance concerning a religion which one-third of the human race confess. Mr. Webb's appearance is that of a gentleman of sincerity and charm. He is earnest in all that he says, and what he does say reveals a wealth of knowledge upon the conditions of life of the Mohammedans in India. His plans seem to be most philanthropic, and his motives of the highest. He comes to Plainfield certainly with no desire for financial gain as he only asks that his traveling expenses be paid. He is not a Polygamist, nor does he believe in Polygamy, as has been wrongly stated. He is certainly entitled to a respectful hearing, which he will undoubtedly have from broad-minded, cultured people who are not afraid to hear what Mr. Webb has to say in regard to Islamism.

The New York Times has said: "In any case Mr. Webb and his Moslem World (the paper he edits in New York), ought to be instructive as showing the advocates of foreign missions by an impressive object lesson the nature and the difficulty of the obstacles they themselves have to overcome".

Mr. Webb will lecture in Reform Hall Dec. 11 at 8 p. m.

He Will Delight Plainfield Music-Lovers.

Wilbert E. Lewis, who is booked for appearance in the Casino Dec. 15, is a western musician of exceptional talent and ability. For the past few years located in Denver, Colorado, he there established his present enviable position as a public performer. Until his acceptance of the present engagement, he has occupied the prominent position of Director of the Scott Saxton Conservatory of Music and organist of the Unity church.

His chief characteristics as a pianist are an exquisite touch, great breadth of style, and a keen susceptibility to the varied effects of tone gradation. His playing is free from technical embarrassments, and from the delicate pianissimo to the sustained and ponderous climax, reveals every shade of emotion which it is his design to express. As an accompanist, Mr. Lewis stands absolutely without a rival in America.

They'll Worship on Fillmore Avenue.

Emmanuel Baptist church recently purchased a lot on Richmond street near Third for the purpose of placing a building, which was purchased, thereon.

The Land Improvement Company through Sheriff Kyte, offered to exchange a lot situated on Fillmore avenue, for the one they owned and move the building free of charge. It was accepted and they are now assured of a place of worship.

The building to be used was formerly used as an office and drying room for the oil-cloth business.

A Great Show.

Messrs. C. B. Jefferson, Klaw & Erlanger's remarkably merry production "The Prodigal Father", the comedy by Glen MacDonough, which has received the heartiest applause and enthusiastic praise throughout the length and breadth of America, will be presented in Music Hall Friday night. The great and famous Maggie Cline will appear between the second and third acts of the comedy.

[illegible] THEIR DEAD.

[illegible] Army Services [illegible]'s Death.

[illegible] in the Salvation Army Hall [illegible] held all day, [illegible] John Overland [illegible] in these services. "By [illegible]. At 7:45 the [illegible] "Jesus, I Love Thee" [illegible] the short prayers of [illegible] Comrades Mair and [illegible] Army songs were rendered.

The Captain then called for [illegible] and President [illegible] chapel Christian Endeavor society [illegible] brief review of the life of Mr. Overland.

This was followed by the singing of the hymn "When the Pearly Gates Unfold", by four comrades. Captain Mixon at this point read the Scripture lesson and also told what she knew of the life of the deceased, and of his death and funeral.

Mr. Overland's favorite hymn "All Free Grace and Never Dying Love" was then rendered effectively.

During the consecration service thirty-three persons renewed their allegiance to their Master and seven expressed conversion.

In closing the meeting there were thirty or forty testimonies given.

Among those present were the mother and brothers of the deceased and his fellow-workmen.

Relief Corps Election and Visitation.

The Women's Relief Corps, No. 10, held their regular meeting Friday evening for the election of officers, resulting as follows:

President—Mrs. Angleman.
Senior Vice—Mrs. M. C. Dobbins.
Junior Vice—Mrs. McVoy.
Chaplain—Mrs. Corwin.
Conductor—Mrs. Ballin.
Guard—Mrs. Mattox.
Delegates to Convention—Mrs. Woodruff and Mrs. I. Brokaw.
Alternates—Mrs. Moore and Mrs. Ballin.

About 18 members of Barry Corps, of Rahway, were present, and were entertained.

After the business was transacted the members of Winfield Scott Post and their friends were invited to join the gathering.

The Misses Westphal, Miss Nash and [illegible] entertained the audience with vocal music, which was vociferously applauded.

Remarks by Commander M. C. Dobbins and Comrade Milligan were enjoyed.

Mrs. Runyon, of Barry Corps, recited "How to Train a Husband" in excellent manner.

Mrs. E. F. Cox then gave a recitation "As Mose Counted the Eggs", which brought down the house.

Comrades Stephens, Smith, Nash and Morse gave a few pleasant remarks, which were fully appreciated.

Cake and coffee were served to all, and the company dispersed.

A Well-Merited Honor.

(From the Bound Brook Record.)

The report that John R. McPherson is to lead the fight for the reform of the tariff, in the United States Senate, is an assurance that the Democratic cause will have a champion who is equipped for the fray as are few men in that imposing body.

Every citizen of New Jersey remembers with pride the matchless fight that Senator McPherson conducted against the McKinley bill in 1890, when the burden of opposing that measure was borne almost exclusively by the senior Senator from this State, and every Democrat recalls with pleasure the magnificent manner in which the voters of New Jersey rallied to his support and endorsed the course he so ably represented, in the Congressional elections of 1890.

In the coming struggle Senator McPherson will prove the right man in the right place.

Plainfield Talent in Bound Brook.

The Washington Guards of Bound Brook gave an excellent entertainment last Saturday evening in Voorhees's Hall, assisted by several well known artists from this city.

The hall was well filled with the best people of the town. Those taking part in the programme from Plainfield were Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Vogiard, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. A. Westphal, Miss Maggie Page, Mrs. Fred Canfield, Miss Lizzie Duvier, John H. Carsey, Carl Rudolph, Bert Tallesry, Wm. Tallesry and Albert Ford. The entertainment consisted of dialogues, vocal and instrumental solos, recitations, duets, etc. The entire affair was most successful, and proved very enjoyable.

New Society of Christian Endeavor.

The young people of the German church on Craig place have organized a Christian Endeavor society, with a membership of 30. The following officers were elected:

President—Fred Bach.
Vice-president—Miss Amelia Kistor.
Treasurer—Miss S. Bliem.
Secretary—Miss Schierlein.

This evening an entertainment will be given in Reform Hall, to raise money to buy hymnals, etc. An excellent programme has been prepared.

Christian Endeavor Anniversary.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Seventh-Day Baptist church will celebrate their [illegible] anniversary next Sunday. The morning service will be conducted entirely by them, and will consist of responsive readings, music, and an address by the Rev. Mr. Cottrell of Kansas. Other Christian Endeavor societies throughout the city will be invited. Miss Mabel Maxson is Chairman of the Committee of Arrangements.

The World-Famed Comic Singer.

"The Prodigal Father" by Glen MacDonough which created such furore the whole of last season from New York to California will be seen in Music Hall Friday night in conjunction with the inimitable character singer Maggie Cline, who will be heard in all her great songs. Messrs. C. B. Jefferson, Klaw & Erlanger have engaged the world-famed comic singer at a fabulous salary.

The Freeholder's Blooded Stock.

Freeholder Vanderbeek is having two chicken coops of the most approved style erected from plans by an eminent Plainfield architect. When completed they will be occupied by the thoroughbred stock which the Freeholder has recently purchased. Among them is a rooster which its proud owner claims can lick anything in the vicinity of Second place.

Exquisitely Rendered.

The fashionable world of Washington is resounding with praise of the success of the Shakespearean pantomime, The Portia of Miss Jean Wilson, in the "Merchant of Venice", was exquisitely rendered, and called forth rounds of applause.

So writes the Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia Times. Miss Wilson will win just such encomiums in the Casino Dec. 15.

MYSTERIES!

The Nervous System the Seat of Life and Mind. Recent Wonderful Discoveries.

No mystery has ever compared with that of human life. It has been the leading subject of professional research and study in all ages. But notwithstanding this fact it is not generally known that the seat of life is located in the upper part of the spinal cord, near the base of the brain, and so sensitive is this portion of the nervous system that even the prick of a needle will cause instant death.

Recent discoveries have demonstrated that all the organs of the body are under the control of the nerve centers, located in or near the base of the brain, [illegible]

Borough Councilmen Receive a Visit from a Princeton Color-Bearer.

The business occupying the attention of the Borough of North Plainfield was quickly transacted at the regular monthly meeting held Friday night.

Mayor Saunders called the session to order at 8:25. Clerk Vetterlein, and Councilmen Needham, Neal and Fountain were present. Messrs. Howell, Hummer and Edwards were absent, and the diligent search of Chief Marshal Pangborn did not bring them to light.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

Mr. Needham of the Sewerage Committee reported progress.

The monthly bills, including salaries, etc., were read by the clerk and referred to the proper committees, and later were ordered paid, as were also the bills of the previous meeting, which had been found to be correct.

An ordinance relating to sidewalks and to the maintaining of the same was read by the clerk and adopted on first reading. Its purport is to have the walks flagged.

Mr. Fountain reported the bill of the North Plainfield Electric Light Company as being correct, $14 being deducted, for bad service, from the whole amount. It was referred to the proper committee and afterwards ordered paid.

A communication from the Rev. Mr. Honeyman was received, and Mr. Fountain reported that he had visited the place where the light was located and found it burning all right. It was decided to inform Mr. Honeyman of the quick work at repair done by the company.

Chief Marshal Pangborn reported through Mr. Fountain that four lights were not burning during the month, and pay for the same was deducted.

Mr. Fountain said he had held an interview with Dr. Cooley in reference to the Electric Light Company, and the latter said the company was willing to do anything to give satisfaction, even to the changing of the system. The company was not prepared to give its figures for another year's lighting of the borough but would report in a few days.

Dr. Cooley's son, who by his appearance showed that he was in sympathy with the Princeton foot-ball team, created quite a stir by bringing the shade of an electric lamp into the room and presenting it to the Councilmen. It was riddled with bullet holes, and showed how tenderly this necessary part of the lamp was treated by the hoodlums.

The lamp exhibited had been in the far outskirts, and the Mayor thought it best to investigate the matter with a view to withdrawing the light. It being near the mountain, he thought it useless to pay for it.

Mr. Fountain said that Chief Marshal Pangborn would have 200 bills placed throughout the Borough, offering a reward for the detection of anyone breaking electric lamps or interfering with them.

Mr. Neal moved the adoption of the ordinance on sidewalks on the second reading, which was carried. It is to take effect April 1, 1894.

Mr. Neal also moved that before the next regular meeting, the ordinance be advertised in the usual way. The motion was adopted.

Mr. Neal offered a resolution that the promissory note of $1,000, which was due Nov. 26, 1893, and met by H. N. Spencer, be returned, and a warrant in favor of the First National Bank be drawn and charged to the general road account. It was adopted.

Mr. Fountain moved that the promissory note of $600 be renewed for one month and charged to the street light account; so ordered.

Council adjourned at 9:10.

SEGUINE WENT AWAY.

The Goods He Had Mortgaged Went Too, But the Police Found Both.

A. M. Seguine, Jr., left the city last night after carefully disposing of mortgaged goods which he had kept in his stables near Music Hall.

A chattel mortgage was held by City Judge Coddington on five carriages, and another by French Bros., on four horses and four sleighs.

On Saturday the Judge began legal proceeding to have the goods sold and sent Constable Mattox to replevy them. The stable was found empty.

After telegraphing and telephoning in every direction Judge Coddington and the police found that the horses and carriages had been secretly sent away in advance of Seguine's disappearance.

Most of those on which French Bros. held's mortgage were found at Netherwood. Part of the rest were divided up between North Plainfield, Westfield, Fanwood and Jersey City.

As Chief Grant was coming from New York on the 12:43 train he saw Seguine going east toward Newark with a wagon load of the missing articles. He telegraphed to Newark and had Seguine detained by the authorities there.

The Chief and Judge Coddington went to Newark on the 2:30 train.

He Was a Plainfielder.

Jacob Kline, who was killed by the cars in North Amboy, recently, was formerly a carpenter living in North Plainfield, and worked for Contractor John Chandler. He went to Amboy to take the place of one of the Lehigh Valley Railroad strikers. While at work he was caught between the bumpers of two cars and badly crushed, so that he died soon afterward. Mr. Kline was well known in the city where he had many friends and acquaint-

FIVE HUNDRED ATTENDED.

Funeral Services Held Over the Remains of Unfortunate John Overland.

The funeral of John Overland, who was killed in a runaway accident Monday, was held at his former residence in Germantown at noon on Friday. One hundred were present from Plainfield and four hundred from the surrounding country.

The Rev. Oesters delivered an address in German in the Germantown church. Members of the Salvation Army then sang "Nearer My God to Thee". Pastor Oesters read from the Bible in German and Captain Kimme followed with a sketch of Overland's life.

The hymn which the deceased sang on the Sunday night before his death—"Free Grace and Never Dying Love" was then rendered. "Shall We Meet Beyond the River" was also sung. The remains were interred with an Army badge pinned on the breast.

The pall-bearers were Thomas Moir, George Belcher, Fred Leland, Thomas Price, Orrin Holmes and Mr. Miller.

Rare Programme Promised.

The programme of the entertainment to be given in Holy Cross parish building Tuesday evening under the auspices of the choir promises one of the most thoroughly enjoyable events of the season. The choristers, besides singing a number of new and fetching glees, will render a novelty in the way of a Kinder-symphony. There will also be a piano solo by Choirmaster Cheeseright, his first concert performance here; a violin obligato by the justly famous P. Ludwig Conde; a reading by Mayor William L. Saunders; and a new comic dramatic sketch by George Taggart and William Holmes. A few tickets are still to be had at Barker's pharmacy.

Bailey Surprises The Homestead.

On Thanksgiving Eve, Charles W. Bailey, chef at The Homestead, Fanwood, led to the altar Miss Bertha Toney of Plainfield. The Rev. William Alexander of this city tied the knot, at 527 East Sixth street. A reception by the happy couple then followed, after which they tripped out on their tour and returned to Fanwood yesterday morning. Many were the congratulations on their arrival, and Charles says he will still retain his position at The Homestead, as married life will not interfere with duty.

You Remember This from Last Year.

"The Prodigal Father" which will be seen in Music Hall next Friday night abounds with good things, and one of the most amusing and delightful bits of comedy in the play is where Oatesley Duff tells the story of his life with the aid of his own piano accompaniment. The act is charmingly novel, and, while intensely droll, so perfectly artistic that George Gaston, who appears as Oatesley Duff, never fails to receive two and three calls every evening.

—Street railway business is not very brisk.

—The fair of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, and the W. R. C., No. 10, will be held during the week beginning Dec. 11.

—The death of John Overland was the first in the ranks of the Salvation Army since the barracks were established in this city three or four years ago.

—Being anxious to find out the prospect for work in various parts of the country, a journeyman employed in a local hat shop, wrote to the International Hat Finishers Association at Newark a day or two ago, and received an answer that there is "No work, nowhere".

Jonathan and His Continent.

By Max O'Rell, Author of "John Bull and His Island," "John Bull, Jr., Etc.," and Jack Allyn.

[Translated by Mme. Paul Blouet. Copyrighted by Cassell & Co., New York, and published by special arrangement through the American Press Association. Paul Blouet (Max O'Rell) is a remarkably clever Frenchman, who has devoted his talents mostly to satirizing the Anglo-Saxon race. The book from which the following extracts are made is his latest production, and material for it was gathered during his recent visit to America.]

CHAPTER I.

The population of America is sixty millions—mostly colonels.

If the earth is small, America is large, and the Americans are immense!

Yes, sixty millions!—all alive and kicking! From east to west, America stretches over a breadth of more than 3,000 miles. Here it is well to put some readers on their guard. In case an American should one day put to them one of his favorite questions: "Where is the center of America?" I myself imagined that, starting from New York and pushing westward, one would reach the extremity of America on arriving at San Francisco. Not so, and here Jonathan has you. He knows you are going to answer wrongly, and if you want to please him, you must let yourself be caught in this little trap, because it will give him such satisfaction to put you right. At San Francisco, it appears you are not quite half way, and the center of America is really in the Pacific ocean. Jonathan more than doubled the width of his continent in 1867, when for the sum of $7,200,000 he purchased Alaska of the Russians.

In America, everything is on an immense scale: the just pride of the citizens of the Young Republic is fed by the grandeur of its rivers, mountains, deserts, cataracts, its suspension bridges, its huge cities, etc.

Jonathan passes his life in admiration of all that is American. He cannot get over it.

I have been through part of the country, and I cannot get over it either. I am out of breath, turned topsy-turvy. It is pure conjuring, it is Robert Houdin over again—occasionally perhaps Robert Macaire too—but let us not anticipate. Give me time to recover my breath, and set my ideas in order. These Americans are reeling with unheard-of-ness, I can tell you that to begin with. My ideas are all jostling in my poor old European brain. There is no longer anything impossible, and the fairy tales are child's play compared to what one may see every day. Everything is prodigious, done by steam, by electricity; it is dazzling, and I no longer wonder that the Americans only use their adjectives in the superlative.

As an illustration of what I advance, here is a letter that I received from an American, in the month of May, 1887, and which finally decided me to go and see America. It is dated from Boston:

"DEAR SIR—I was on the point of taking the boat at 12 today, to go and have a talk with you about an idea which occurred to me yesterday; but as I have already been across three times, and in a month or six weeks shall have to set out for St. Petersburg and Japan, I am desirous, if possible, of arranging the matter I have at heart by correspondence." * * *

"Good heavens!" I exclaimed, "this is a man I must make the acquaintance of; I must go and see Jonathan at home one of these days."

And as soon as circumstances allowed, I packed my trunks, took a cabin on board one of the brave "White Star" liners, and set out to see Jonathan and his continent.

CHAPTER II.

When a man of average intelligence returns home after having made a voyage to a foreign land, he cannot help having formed a certain number of impressions, and he has a right to communicate them to his friends. They are but impressions, notes taken by the wayside, and, if there is an error committed by any one, it is by the critic or the reader, when either of these looks for a perfect picture of the manners and institutions of the people the author has visited, instead of simple impressions de voyage. Certainly, if there is a country in the world that it would be impossible to judge in six months, that country is America, and the author who, in such a little space of time, allowed himself to fall into the error of sitting in judgment upon her would write himself down an ass. To form a really exact idea of America, one would need to live twenty years in the country, nay, to be an American, for I may add that, in my opinion, the best books that exist upon the different countries of the world have been written by natives of those countries. Never has an author written of the English like Thackeray; never have the Scotch been painted with such fidelity as by Ramsay; and to describe Tartarin it needed not only a Frenchman but a Provencal, almost a Tarasconnais.

It must be allowed that Jonathan has good reason to mistrust his critics. Most books on America have been written by Englishmen. Now the English are, of all people, those who can the least easily get rid of their prejudices in speaking of America. They are obliged to admit that the Americans have made their way pretty well since they have been their own masters; but John Bull has always a rankling remembrance, when he looks at America, of the day that the Americans sent him about his business, and his look seems to say to Jonathan: "Yes, yes, you have not done at all badly—for you, but just think what the country would have been by this time if it had remained in my hands."

The Englishman, on his side, has no antipathy whatever to the American. For that matter the Englishman has no antipathy for any one. He despises, but he does not hate, a fact which is irritating to the last degree to the objects of his attention. When a man feels that he has some worth, he likes to be loved or hated; to be treated with indiffer- [illegible]

A new minister had been employed in a little Kentucky town. No [illegible] had he taken possession of his new [illegible] than he set about ornamenting the church with stained glass windows of gorgeous hues. This proceeding aroused the suspicions of several parishioners, who imagined that their new pastor was inclined to lead them to Rome. A meeting was called, and it was decided to send a deputation to the minister to ask him to explain his conduct, and beg him to have the offending windows removed.

The head of the deputation was an old man of Presbyterian proclivities, whose austerity was well known in the town. He opened fire by addressing the reverend gentleman thus:

"We have called upon you, sir, to beg that you will remove those painted windows from our church as soon as possible. We are simple folks. God's own light is good enough for us, and we don't want to have it shut out by all those images"—

The worthy man had prepared a fine harangue, and was going to give the minister the benefit of it all, but the latter, losing patience, thus interrupted him:

"Excuse me, you seem to be taking high ground; who are you, may I ask?"

"Who am I?" repeated the good old spokesman. "I'm a meek and humble follower of Jesus, that's what I am, and,—— d——n you, who are you?"

Without traveling very far, without even quitting the eastern coast of America, you will see a complete difference in the spirit of towns that are almost neighbors.

In New York, for instance—I am not speaking now of the literary society, of which I shall speak later—in New York, it is your money that will open all doors to you; in Boston, it is your learning; in Philadelphia and Virginia, it is your genealogy. Therefore, if you wish to be a [illegible], parade your dollars in New York, your talents in Boston, and your ancestors in Philadelphia and Richmond.

Scarcely has a foreigner set foot in the United States before they ask him what he thinks of the country. Nine persons out of every ten you speak to put these three questions to you:

(1) "Is this your first visit to America?"
(2) "How long have you been over?"
(3) "How do you like our country?"

There are even some who push curiosity further, and do not wait until you have arrived to ask for your opinion on America.

I had only just embarked on board the Germanic, at Liverpool, when the purser handed me a letter from New York. I opened it and read.

"DEAR SIR—Could you, during your voyage, write me an article on the United States? I should be happy to have your preconceived notions of America and the Americans, so as to publish them in my journal as soon as you arrive."

An Englishman or a Frenchman will never ask you what you think of England or France. The Frenchman does not doubt that his country is beyond competition. If he enter into the subject at all, it is to congratulate the stranger upon coming to visit it.

The Englishman is perfectly persuaded that his England is the first country in the world and that everybody admits it, and the idea of asking an outsider for his opinion of it would never enter his head. He would think it so ridiculous, so amusing, so grotesque, that any one should tell him England was not at the head of all nations, that he would not take the trouble to resent it. He would pity the person, and the matter would go no further.

CHAPTER IV.

The American men are generally thin. Their faces glow with intelligence and energy, and in this mainly consists their handsomeness. The features are bony, the forehead straight, the nose sharp and often pinched looking in its thinness. At times one seems to recognize in the faces something of the Indian type, the temples indented, the cheek bones prominent, the eyes small, keen and deep set.

As for the women, I do not hesitate to say that in the east, in New York especially, they might perfectly well be taken for French women. It is the same type, the same gait, the same vivacity, the same piquancy, the same amplitude of proportions.

The beauty of the American woman, like that of the men, is due much more to the animation of the face than to form or coloring. The average of good looks is very high, indeed. I do not remember to have seen one hopelessly plain woman during my six months' ramble through the states.

American women generally enjoy that second youth which nature bestows also on numbers of French women. At 40 they bloom out into a more majestic beauty. The eyes retain their fire and luster, the skin does not wrinkle, the hands, neck and arms remain firm and white. It is true that in America hair turns gray early, but, so far from detracting from the woman's charms, it gives her an air of distinction, and is often positively an attraction.

The New Yorkers and Bostonians will have it to be that Chicago women have enormous feet and hands. I was willing to believe this up to the day I went to Chicago. I found the Chicago women, and those of the west generally, pretty, with more color than their eastern sisters, only, as a rule, quite slight, not to say thin.

That which is lacking in the pretty American faces of the east is color and freshness. The complexion is pale, and it is only their plumpness which comes to their rescue after 30 and prevents them from looking faded. Those who remain thin generally fade quickly; the complexion takes the color of whity brown paper, and wrinkles freely.

If American women went in for more out door exercise, if they let the outer air penetrate constantly into their rooms, if they gave up living in hothouses, they would have some color, and their beauty need perhaps fear no competition in Europe.

ON SEA AND BY LAND.

ADVENTURES AND INCIDENTS FAR OUT OF THE ORDINARY.

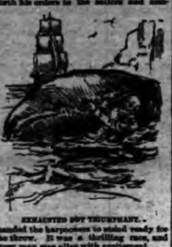
An Exciting Race For a Whale In Which the Vessels of Three Nations Join—Although Captured by the Yankee, It Was Lost Through Trickery.

[Copyright, 1893, by American Press Association.]

The Nomad, whaler, 400 tons burden, was beating to windward under easy sail along the edge of an ice pack, with an English schooner to port and a Russian bark to starboard, when, almost simultaneously, lookouts on the three vessels sighted a dead whale amid some loose ice.

I was sleeping when the cry of the lookout and a stamping of feet brought me out of my berth and rushing to the deck. The Nomad was pointed toward the whale without delay, and the Englishman and the Russian lost no time in putting down their wheels and heading for the prize, which, being loose, according to the laws of Greenland, would become the prize of whoever secured it.

It was soon discovered that the Englishman was the swiftest sailer, but she was farther from the game than the Nomad and the Russian, which made her chances about even. Old Captain Brown thundered forth his orders to the sailors and commanded the harpooners to stand ready for the throw. It was a thrilling race, and every man was alive with excitement.



EXHAUSTED BUT TRIUMPHANT.

The first mate, Ben Toole, a wiry little man from New Bedford, ran as far forward as he could go without making his way out upon the bowsprit and seemed to be measuring with his keen eye the distance from the Nomad to the dead fish. He was cool as an icicle, to all outward seeming, but there was a grim look of resolution on his weatherbeaten face.

In among the loose ice plunged the Nomad, with the Russian close to starboard and the Englishman hard aport. Regardless of the danger from the ice, all three vessels drove straight ahead. The friction of the ice slackened our speed somewhat, but we were still under good headway.

And now the eyes of every man were on the whale, the harpooners having their iron lances poised ready for the cast. And then, just as the throw was made, there came a crashing, grinding shock, the headway of the ship being checked almost immediately. The Russian harpooner had his cast at that instant, and not expecting the shock any more than our own man he made a miscalculation, for the Nomad and the Russian had crashed together.

A second shock followed the first, for the rebound had flung us around into the course of the Englishman, and she struck us a glancing blow on the port quarter. I was knocked from my feet, and I sprang up just in time to see Ben Toole take a headlong plunge from the rail. Rushing forward with others, I was in time to see him come up and strike out for the whale.

When Toole's object was understood by the Yankee sailors, a cheer broke from their throats. The brave fellow paid no heed, but swam through the water with a strong stroke, avoiding any floating blocks of ice. In a short time he reached the whale and grasped a fin, where he clung, exhausted but triumphant.

Then, seeming to forget the position of Toole, the skipper began to look around for a place to make the ship fast to a large piece of ice.

In the meantime, the Englishman, apparently defeated, lowered and manned a boat. It is a strange thing that no one on board the Nomad observed or seemed to understand the object of the British skipper. The boat picked its way through the ice toward the whale, which was already in our possession.

Toole was nearly frozen, and his benumbed fingers could scarcely cling to the slippery fin of the whale, but he grinned in a triumphant yet sickly way as he saw the English boat approach.

The skipper of the English schooner was in his boat and, as he came close to Toole, he observed:

"Well, my lad, you have good courage, and you've got a fine fish. But the water must be very cold?"

"It is pretty cold for me," chattered the first mate, "as I happen to be a married man, and my wife keeps me in water of another temperature when I'm at home."

"You Yankees can joke under any circumstances," laughed the Englishman. "But you'll freeze to death before your captain gets out a boat. Shall we take you in?"

In fact, Toole felt that he could not hold out much longer, and so he allowed them to pull him into the boat. This released the whale, which was again out of possession, and the tricky English skipper at once struck his harpoon into it, hoisted a flag and claimed the prize.

A madder man than Ben Toole never sailed the north seas in search for whales, but, despite his denunciation of the scaly trick, the Englishman stubbornly clung to the fish.

When Captain Brown understood what had happened, he raved like a pirate. He called the English skipper some very impolite names, and, for a time, it seemed that a pitched battle would surely result. The skipper tried to put a portion of the blame on Toole, but he knew he had himself to blame for not lowering a boat without delay. There was nothing more than a battle of words, and the Englishman [illegible]

What is
CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
Dr. G. C. Osgood,
Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
Dr. J. F. Kincheloe,
Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. Archer, M. D.,
111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

"Wall, I be hanged!" Then he turned to the elevator man, reaching into his pocket and producing the foot of a wool en stocking, in which some money jingled. "That air's the slickest way of gittin down stairs I ever seed," he nodded knowingly. "It jest beats all nater! Haow much ye charge a trip? I want to pay for me an Mandy Ann."

When he was told there was no charge, he gave a long whistle indicative of his surprise, picked up the carpet bag and walked out, his wife following. When they were on the street, he turned on her triumphantly, sneering:

"Wall, you're smart, I swanny! Tell me abaout keepin my maouth shet! Ev'rybody in that air thingamajig knowed we was green just 'cause you squawked when she commenced to go down. You're so darn smart"——

She snapped him up short. "That'll do, Ephraim! You was the one that made a fool of yerself when you tried to pay for ridin daown. Ev'rybody laffed at ye. That capped the hull thing. Don't you talk to me if you don't want to hear from it later!"

Evidently he had no desire to hear from it later, for he kept still, and they wandered away in search of a policeman who could direct them to Cousin Jed's.

The Land of Rest.

Here lies an old woman who always was tired,
For she lived in a house where help was not hired.
Her last words on earth were: "Dear friends, I am going
Where nothing ain't done, nor churning, nor sewing,
And everything there will be just to my wishes,
For where they don't eat there's no washing of dishes!
I'll be where loved anthems will always be ringing,
But having no voice I'll get rid of the singing.
Don't mourn for me now, and don't mourn for me never,
For I'm going to do nothing forever and ever!"

SUDDEN DEATH OF C. J. TAGGART.

STRICKEN WITH APOPLEXY IN A CIGAR SHOP.

Stopped in for a Smoke, on His Way to the Train, Was Stricken With Apoplexy, and Fell Dying to the Floor When About to Make Change for Payment.

(From The Press of December 7.)

The sudden death of Charles J. Taggart, of 12 Sycamore avenue, North Plainfield, which occurred about 7:30 this morning, caused a shock to the community.

Mr. Taggart arose quite early, feeling exceptionally well, and left his home in the best of health, for the North Avenue station, to take a train for New York.

On his way he stopped in M. C. Dobbins's cigar shop on Park avenue, to purchase some cigars.

John Gaub, a clerk, was in charge, Mr. Dobbins not having yet arrived.

Mr. Taggart told the clerk what brand of cigar he wanted, received the cigars, and put his hand into his pocket for the money to pay for them.

With his hand still in the pocket, he fell to the floor, and expired in a few minutes.

The clerk was very much frightened, thinking that Mr. Taggart had a fit, and was at a loss as to what was the best thing to do.

A Swede living at Mt. Pleasant happened in the store, and he at once went to Mr. Dobbins's residence on Elmwood place, and told him of the sad affair.

In the meantime, word was sent across the street to Reynolds's Pharmacy, and John Powers of that establishment ran in. He found that Mr. Taggart was still breathing, with a heaviness that indicated apoplexy. The breathing soon stopped, however, and when A. W. Demarest held a looking-glass to the mouth no moisture of breathing was discernible.

Drs. Long and Rushmore had been sent for, and when they arrived they pronounced it a case of apoplexy.

County Physician O'Reilly, of Elizabeth, was notified by telephone from The Press office, and on hearing the circumstances deputized Mr. Force to have the body removed. It was therefore taken to the undertaking establishment of A. M. Runyon & Son. Mr. O'Reilly said he would arrive later and give a burial permit.

Mr. Taggart was not immediately recognized, but T. B. Green, of 166 East Front street, was passing shortly after Mr. Taggart fell, and at the solicitation of Sergeant Kiely he crossed Park avenue and went into the store. As soon as Mr. Taggart's head was raised, Mr. Green recognized the body as that of Mr. Taggart.

Very soon after Mr. Taggart's death, his wife was notified by friends.

George Taggart, his son, who is connected with the United Press, New York, went to business earlier than usual this morning, and a telegram was sent to him.

Mrs. Taggart was nearly prostrated by the shock. Kind and consoling friends offered valuable assistance to the family.

Mr. Taggart was 60 years of age, and had been a highly esteemed resident of the borough about 20 years. He was a valued member of the Holy Cross church, being one of its most ardent supporters, and serving as Senior Warden. He was a member of the Royal Arcanum of this city. For years he had been with the firm of Faulkner, Page & Co., commission merchants, 66 Leonard street, New York, having full charge of the business for them. In the financial world he was widely respected, and his sound judgment and excellent advice were often sought. As a Christian man he ranked nobly, for he lived faithfully the life which he professed. He was prudent in his habits and manner of living, and had never complained of illness. He will be greatly missed as a husband and father, and by a very large circle of friends.

GREAT SPORT IN THE PARK.

Which We Wish to Remark, that the Home Club Left Newark Quite Out in the Dark.

Big, brawny bowlers from the redoubtable Newark Bay Boat Club were laid low in the borough snow by the dandy Parks Friday night, to the chagrin of the crack visitors themselves and the discomfiture of the fair representatives of the gentler sex who accompanied the Newarks into the country to cheer them on in their play of scalp-pulling. But it wasn't play for the Newarks; instead, they had to hustle, and even by hustling their liveliest they couldn't keep up with the Park torchlight procession. The spectators were many, and a large percentage was feminine. The game was enlivened with good-natured chaffing, and the Park Club cry "We know our business" was dead right this time.

The score:

JEPTHA MUST GO.

In Spite of the Dead Heroes He Conjures Up, the Old Man Must Leave His Farm.

The scene in the town hall at Mt. Bethel Thursday was an interesting one. Not since the days when Daniel Cory's eloquence stirred the natives, had there been such a turmoil. The occasion was that Jeptha Wagoner, of world-wide fame, was the principal in a very peculiar trial.

Herbert G. Torrey, a wealthy man of New York, and one of the head men in the Sterling Metallurgical Works, owns a farm on the road between Sterling and Washingtonville which he rented to Jeptha Wagoner in 1886, for five years. After the expiration of the lease in 1891, Wagoner continued to live on the farm without a renewal of the lease, and without the consent of Mr. Mr. Torrey. The landlord notified Jeptha that he must vacate, but he refused to do so.

Notices were served but to no effect, and for the past two or three years litigation has been in progress. Jeptha remained on the place and used the live timber, etc., and claims that during his occupancy he expended $7,000 for fertilizing.

Sometime ago Mr. Torrey came to Plainfield and consulted Judge Coddington, and was advised that Jeptha had no right to remain. Effort was therefore made to put him off peaceably and without damage to him or his property, but without avail.

Judge Coddington was retained by Mr. Torrey and legal proceedings were commenced.

The case came up before Justice Austin at Mt. Bethel one week ago, but was adjourned till yesterday, when the plaintiff moved that the case proceed.

On cross-examination Jeptha admitted by his own words that he was wrong, but he said in giving his testimony that he wanted Mr. Torrey to tell the truth, as he was there in the memory of George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, Andrew Jackson, Daniel Webster, Henry Clay and the lamented casket of Abraham Lincoln. He also claimed that he had lost $7,000,000 through fraud, and called upon the Constitution of the United States, and asked the court to nonsuit the plaintiff as he had not been notified in the legal way.

Jeptha claimed the farm and was holding it to pay for the fertilizing material, to the amount of $7,000, which he had lavished on it. Since living on the farm, Jeptha said he had lost a child by death which was buried on the place and because of that he was not going to leave.

For the plaintiff Judge Coddington replied that the numerous statesmen, fertilizer, money and dead child mentioned were not on trial. Whether Jeptha was holding over wrongfully, was the question. After citing two or three cases, he demanded that the court give a verdict in favor of the plaintiff. This was granted, and a warrant of removal issued. The defendant still refused to move, and the justice appointed a deputy to assist the officer to remove him.

Jeptha had engaged several lawyers from different places, but not one appeared. He will now vacate the premises.

HELPS TO TALK.

Amazing Growth of the Public Telephone Service in Plainfield.

The telephone, under the surpassing local management of Charles Runyon, has come to be the chief means of communication not only between people in Plainfield but between Plainfielders and out-of-town persons whom it is desired to reach. The Plainfield telephone service is today the best in the world. Manager Runyon sees to it that the equipment is maintained at superior standard. He finds that the business is growing continuously, and to meet its demands has established five convenient public pay stations, fitted with superb long-distance instruments. They are situated as follows:

J. H. Leggett, No. 116, Park avenue and Front street.

Telephone Exchange, No. 173, North avenue, opposite station.

Horsley Barker, No. 86, Grove and Front streets.

G. W. V. Moy, No. 62, Fourth street and Park avenue.

Frank Bowley, No. 112, Somerset street and Craig place.

The "Central" pay station is provided with a luxurious sound-proof booth, from within whose muffled walls one may order a spool of thread from Edsall's or a keg of beer from Milwaukee without slightest interruption or the most trivial annoyance.

ORANGE BLOSSOMS GALORE.

CHARMING HOME WEDDING ON WEST SECOND STREET.

A New York Belle Becomes a Plainfield Wife—The Bride and Her Maids Were a Perfect Dream of Loveliness, and the Ceremony Was a Delightful Event to All.

(From The Press of December 7.)

At the home of Mrs. Wm. J. Lockey, 320 West Second street, last evening, took place the marriage of William H. Addis of this city and Miss Theresa B. Heidt of Sullivan county, N. Y.

As the clock chimed the hour of 8, the usher, Chas. Barnes of Elizabeth, cousin of the groom, announced the coming of the bridal party. As the Rev. Cornelius Schenck, who performed the ceremony, took his place, the groom, accompanied by his best man, John Daly of this city, entered, and took his place at one corner of the room, where the ceremony took place. Following the groom came the bridesmaid, Miss Carrie Heidt, sister of the bride, and the maid of honor, Miss Maidie E. Addis, sister of the groom; then came the bride herself leaning on the arm of her uncle, Edwin Dobbs, who gave her away. As the bride entered the room all exclaimed what a picture of loveliness; she wore a white silk dress, en train; her long veil was caught up at the crown with a wreath of orange blossoms, with pendants; her corsage bouquet was of orange blossoms; and she carried a bunch of white bride roses. A diamond necklace encircled her throat. The maids' dresses, too, were charming, the maid of honor being dressed in cream cashmere trimmed with pale-blue silk, and handsome silk lace, the entire front of her dress being covered with pale cream roses and smilax. She wore roses in her hair. The bridesmaid wore a very pretty dress of cream cashmere, trimmed with lavender silk. She carried white chrysanthemums and wore similar blossoms in her hair.

As the party took their places they made a fine sight. The groom in the conventional black; and the dresses of the young ladies; appeared in relief against the bank of evergreens.

After the ceremony a supper was served, and the bride and groom left on the 10:17 train for New York State, where they will remain about two weeks. On their return they will take up their residence in the handsome home which the groom has furnished for his bride at 150 East Second street.

Among the invited guests were: Mrs. P. J. Heidt, C. Heidt, the Misses Carrie A. Heidt, Nettie Heidt, Annie Humbolt, Lizzie Humbolt and Mrs. G. Miller, of Kenoza Lake, N. Y., Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Dittmore, Miss M. Oberan, Mrs. M. Heidt, J. Heidt, the Misses M. L. and C. Heidt, of New York city, Charles Miller, of Staten Island, Mr. and Mrs. C. THEIR SECOND YEAR ENDED.

Interesting Review of the Seventh-Day Christian Endeavorers' Past.

The Y. P. S. C. E. of the Seventh-Day Baptist church celebrated their second anniversary last Friday. The congregation nearly filled the church, members of other Christian Endeavor societies being present.

The programme of the Brookfield series entitled the "The Gracious Invitation" was followed. Responsive reading from the Bible was conducted by the Rev. A. H. Lewis and Miss Ida Randolph, President of the society. The young people's choir sang.

A report of the work of the society was presented by the secretary, Miss Lulu Lewis. The organization was formed at a meeting December 9, 1891, at which sixteen members were present. There are now enrolled sixty-one active, four associate and twenty-five active members.

Two new committees have been appointed during the past year in the department of mission and temperance work. The Mission Committee have organized a mission band to interest the children of the Sunday-school in charity.

The Junior League recently organized by Mrs. H. M. Maxson has twenty-eight members and meets every Sunday.

The report of the treasurer, also read by the secretary, showed that $131.77 had been raised during the year. Of this $25 was sent to the Missionary Society, $25 to the Tract Society and $81.77 to various other associations.

Last Christmas a box of useful articles was sent south and one is now being prepared for distribution in the same section. Other gifts have been sent to various missions.

The society conducted the services on Easter of this year.

Miss Lewis's report contained many valuable suggestions on the continuance of the work so well started, and expressed the belief that the new impulse that the society has received would be of lasting benefit.

The Rev. G. M. Cottrell of Kansas was then introduced and delivered an interesting and forcible address. He spoke of the Gospel invitation to a perfect physical, spiritual and intellectual life; and closed with useful advice and well wishes for the society.

After repeating the parting verse of the Christian Endeavor, the congregation was dismissed with the benediction by Pastor Lewis.

DIME SOCIABLE.

Methodists Have a Pleasant Evening in Vincent Chapel.

The Ladies Aid Society of the First Methodist church gave the first dime sociable of the season in Vincent chapel Friday night. The receipts were for the treasury of the society.

Quite a number of the members of the congregation attended and enjoyed a pleasant social evening. Coffee and cakes were served, and several selections were rendered by the Ausfeldt Orchestra.

The committee in charge were Mrs. C. C. Cokefair, Mrs. L. M. French, Mrs. Davis, Mrs. C. T. Pond and Miss Brown.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. Henry McGee, Mr. and Mrs. Howell and Mr. and Mrs. George Rogers acted as a reception committee.

A similar sociable will probably be held each month during the winter.

Lots of Fun at the Lyceum.

One of the jolliest entertainments ever given in this section was that of the Watchung Lyceum in the Washingtonville school-house Wednesday night. The Lyceum is composed of young people of the borough. There was a large attendance, and all greatly enjoyed the affair. A two-act play was given entitled "Dr. Cure-All", in which Robert Clark made a most proficient physician, and Will Morrison was a dandy dude. Maggie Miles, a woman with a bashful child, wanted the doctor to give her something to make to make the child sociable. Edith Miles desired blonde hair in exchange for gray. Ida Lewis wanted to be thin; Edward Clark wished to be fat; Belle Lewis asked to be made two inches taller; and Lena Smalley was in search of a husband. All these characters made a very funny time.

Banjo solos by Fred VanEps helped pass a lively evening.

Chief Ranger John Allen.

Court Plainfield, No. 1144, Independent Order of Foresters, met in Firemen's Hall, Friday night, and elected the following officers:

C. R.—John Allen.
P. C. R.—David Nuttle.
V. C.—Charles McIntosh.
R. S.—Francis Whitely.
F. S.—Henry Hanson.
Chaplain—George Smith.
Treasurer—Louis Reigel.

HILLSIDE CLUB CHANGES.

CONTROL OF AFFAIRS VESTED IN A GOVERNING BOARD.

Radical Amendments to the Constitution—The New Committee to Have Full Sway, Subject Only to After-Criticisms of the Club—Winter Skating Rink Proposed.

The Hillside Tennis Club held a meeting Thursday in the club-house, at which much important business was transacted. President Geo. P. Mellick was in the chair.

The committee on revision of the constitution made its report which was accepted after much discussion and some radical amendments.

Under the new constitution the management of the club is vested in a Governing Committee composed of nine members including the officers of the club ex-officio. The Governing Committee has the power to manage all the club's affairs, elect new members, expel or suspend members for cause, and to elect all committees save only the Committee on Nominations which shall be elected by the club.

The Governing Committee, however, is at all times subject to the will of the club at large, as the club will have the right to "disapprove or annul" any action of the Governing Committee that may seem against the interests of the club.

This proviso is of course only putting into words the spirit in which all governing committees act, and it only reserves the power to the club of calling the committee to account should its action seem ill-advised.

A vote of thanks was tendered to the committee on revision for its painstaking and careful work in preparing the new articles in the constitution.

It was suggested that the tennis courts be banked up and flooded for the use of those who desired to skate. The matter was left to the Governing Committee for investigation and action.

A committee of three on nominations was elected from the club to prepare a ticket for the annual election of officers. Those chosen were C. W. Opdyke, W. A. Lord and J. S. Anthony. The meeting then adjourned.

IN THE DAYS OF HALF-CENTS.

The Sort of Programme Provided in the Old Days of Temperance Hall.

Freeholder Vanderbeek is in possession of a relic in the shape of a tattered programme of a concert and musical festival of miscellaneous vocal and instrumental music, by the Plainfield Odeon Society, given in Temperance Hall, West Front street, Monday evening, March 26, 1855. GRIST MILLER TURNS DETECTIVE.

SPEEDY CAPTURE OF SOMERSET FLOUR THIEVES.

Constables Find Booty in a Hovel Where the Six-Year-Old Daughter Curses at Them and Where There Is Nothing to Eat But Stolen Flour.

SOMERVILLE, Dec. 7.

For the past two months the farmers living in the vicinity of Millstone and Griggstown have suffered severely from the depredations of a gang of robbers, who have looted hen coops, entered houses and stolen food and clothing, and burglarized the general stores in each place. The last robbery was on the night of Nov. 28, when John Busby's mill at Blackwell's Mills was broken into and five hundred-weight of flour stolen. Next morning when the theft was discovered, Busby determined to find out if possible who the perpetrators were, and having some idea that they knew his place, set about it in a systematic manner. He went down behind the mill, where a small boat was moored in the Raritan river, and found it unfastened. Jumping in, he saw traces of flour. Calling the mill hands, he pulled up the river half a mile, carefully searching the banks. When he reached a point where the river and the Delaware and Raritan canal nearly join, he found more traces of flour on the bank, as if the stolen goods had been transferred from one boat to another. Continuing the search up the canal until the tumble-down shanty of Reuben Strickland was reached, he again found flour traces on the bank. Now positive that he had located the goods, Busby swore out a search warrant, and placed it in the hands of Constable Dennis Wyckoff, who searched the house and found all of the flour packed away in barrels and bags. When questioned, Strickland said first that his father had bought the flour in New Brunswick, but afterwards confessed and told how he had gone down the canal in a small boat and waited until Will Dayton had gone to the mill, stolen the flour and brought it to the canal bank in the mill boat. Strickland and Dayton were both arrested and taken before Squire Harry McDonald, of Millstone, who held Strickland for the next grand jury, but released Dayton, the real culprit, because his name did not appear in the search warrant. The next day when Constable Wyckoff went to arrest young Dayton, the lad's father, Jesse Dayton, in some way heard of the intended arrest, and together with Joe Blowers dashed past the constable on the road, reached the boy first, and got him out of the reach of the law. Thereupon Wyckoff arrested both these men for interfering in the arrest of a prisoner and brought them to Somerville, where they were lodged behind the bars of Castle Dilts, to keep company with Strickland.

When Constable Wyckoff went to remove the stolen flour, Strickland's little six-year-old daughter swore roundly at him because of his inhumanity in not leaving it for them to use this winter. This fact so unnerved the officer that he did leave a bag containing twenty-five pounds, as it was the only thing in sight to eat, and the house could boast of but one bed for a family of six.

It is said that a revolver which was stolen from "Gat" Garretson's store in Millstone was found in Joe Blower's house. The real thief, Will Dayton, has not been seen since.

He some time ago married a woman whose first husband is serving time in a Pennsylvania prison for horse stealing. She thought her husband's conviction gave her a divorce and so she married Dayton. The Mayor of Harrisburg gave the woman money enough to take her to take her to Millstone, so as to get her out of the city. All of those arrested are poor, but heretofore have borne good reputations. The farmers are jubilant over the arrest of the gang, which they charge with all the robberies, but they say Strickland is but a tool in the hands of more diabolical villians. The trio now in jail will be tried at the next term of Court here late this month, and so will young Dayton if he can be found.

Christmas Vacation Outings via the Pennsylvania Railroad.

Following its yearly custom, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company proposes running a special holiday tour to Old Point Comfort on December 26, leaving New York at 8 00 and Philadelphia 10:20 a. m. $18 from New York, $15 from Philadelphia, and proportionately low rates from intermediate and contiguous points will cover hotel accommodations, railroad fare, meals en route, and, in fact, all necessary expenses during the period of four

The Constitutionalist.

Walter Irving Clarke, City Editor.

Were the fat fee system abolished, some public functionaries would perhaps find unnecessary much of their exercise of power which they now exert.

In a case of accidental death like that of Morris Daley, where the facts are so apparent, it is a useless waste of citizens' time and of public funds to hold a coroner's inquest.

At last Plainfield is to have systematic charity. This is a good thing, a blessing for the deserving poor. It is another of the successes which Daily Press agitation has accomplished.

That's a loose system that permitted prisoners to escape from the Somerset jail so easily. It would seem as though reform was urgently needed in the warden's department.

Absurd customs remain on the statute books. A coroner's juryman gets the munificent sum of 25 cents for his service. A Plainfield witness summoned to Elizabeth is paid 50 cents; and the carfare of the trip, alone costs him 55 cents. Both the juryman and the witness are of real public service, and are made to pay for the privilege of serving.

The proposition of the Common Council to adopt and enforce an ordinance whose object is to lessen Plainfield's fire risk, thereby materially benefiting the insurance rate, is admirable. An official with the powers proposed to be vested in the Chief Engineer has long been needed in the city. Altogether, this ordinance is along a line of public progress that all citizens will commend.

The Press is inclined to the opinion that Borough Magistrate Crosley is much too lenient in the disposition of serious cases. The prisoners captured in the gambling-house raid Sunday morning deserved heavy penalty. Such slight punishment as a nominal fine will tend to increase the willingness of law-breakers to run risk of detection. The gamblers might expected to be fined heavily, and they deserved to be. There is no encouragement for the marshals to continue their excellent work, when the presiding judge gives culprits the gleeful satisfaction of knowing that if caught they won't get much of a sentence.

The individual who is making such frantic effort to decry public amusements in Plainfield has involved himself in another muddle. He now comes forth with the claim that under the law each show should be compelled to pay a license, his idea being to make the production of shows so expensive that none can be produced. The fact remains that Music Hall Association is not required to take out a license, because it pays taxes of $800 to $900 a year. And as Manager Demarest pays the same and besides pays the Music Hall license fee of $40 a year to the State Treasurer, any fair-minded person would say that he should enjoy the same exemption as the Music Hall corporation. But if the anti-amusement person in his attempts to close Music Hall should insist on a strictly technical construction of the ordinance which he thinks he has discovered, Mr. Demarest would of course claim that the performances given by him in Music Hall are all of them either "artistical, literary or scientific". All such are expressly allowed to be given without a license, in spite of the protests of persons who cannot see any art in dramatic productions.

Justice Crosley evidently does not believe in the freedom of the press, and holds that newspapers have no right to criticise his judicial decisions. The Press is a particular friend of the gentle-hearted Magistrate, and has the kindliest appreciation of his motives. But The Press isn't going to wear a muzzle on that account. Good citizens who feel that Magistrate Crosley has been too weak in the treatment of serious cases, freely condemn the license which such light sentences as he imposes accord to the baser element. Here were seven men caught in a most disgraceful violation of the law and order on which the borough of North Plainfield prides itself. Yet they were let off with fines which "common drunks" in the police courts would treat as trivial. One of them was an old offender, and had forfeited his bail, yet he was given the same leeway as the rest. Today the seven culprits and the rowdy element are harmonious in their glee over Magistrate Crosley's leniency. The Press repeats that such trivial sentences put a premium on disorder and lawlessness. There is such a thing as mercy doing injustice; and the public official who is superior to criticism is a menace to the public's best interests. The Press purposes to maintain its character of a public institution, and to exercise the prerogatives granted to it by the United States Constitution.

And She's Only One of the Brilliants.

[Correspondence of The Philadelphia Inquirer.]

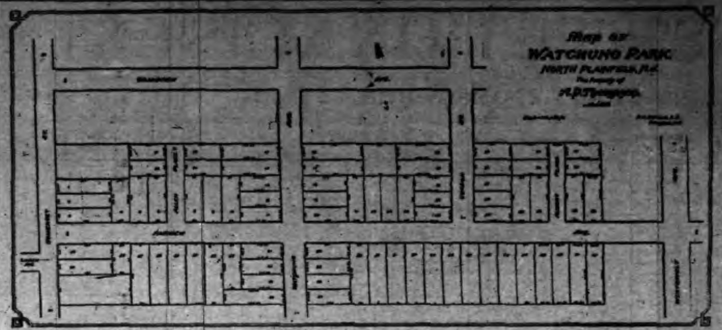
The evening of artistic diversion for the entertainment of the fashionable world, given by Miss Jean Wilson, was one of the most brilliant and interesting occasions of the kind



The Press presents herewith a map of Watchung Park, the handsome new residence section being developed by that energetic and public-spirited proprietor, A. D. Thompson. This is destined to be one of the choicest locations for modern houses in either borough or city; and by Mr. Thompson's plan people for whom there is now lack of suitable homes in this section will be well provided for, at a not excessive cost.

EVERYTHING GOOD BUT THE SUPPER.

FIRST OF THE ASSEMBLIES AFFORDS MUCH DELIGHT TO SUBSCRIBERS.

The Lateness of Subscriptions Responsible for the Caterer's Shortcomings, But the Dancing Was Good to Exquisite Music, and the Remaining Three Assemblies Will Doubtless Be a Great Success.

In spite of the predictions of many that the first Assembly Monday night would be very small and rather slow, it was a decided success, and there was a very good showing at the Casino. The number of subscribers surpassed the limit set by the croakers by many dozen. Subscriptions poured in the latter part of last week, and even yesterday many new names were added to the list. As it stands now there are nearly one hundred regular subscribers with a chance of adding at least a score more between now and the New Year dance.

The patronesses for this year are Mrs. Charles E. Brooks, Mrs. Harry G. Runkle, Mrs. Charles Fisk, Mrs. Pliny Fisk, Mrs. Robert L. Burnett and Mrs. William T. Kaufman.

No attempt was made to redecorate the Casino, and the Princeton pennants of victory that were put up for the Glee Club concert still reminded the friends of Yale of the crushing defeat on Thanksgiving Day.

The dancing was enthusiastic, but was not at its height until about 10. No one can be expected to get to a dance of this kind much before 9:30, and last night people came in at all times of the evening. The floor of the Casino sadly needs scraping, and early in the evening it was very sticky, but the stickiness soon wore off and left nothing but the lumps, which were only slightly annoying.

The music was remarkably good, and many of the dances were vociferously encored. Elliott responded with his usual good humor. The two-step was danced almost entirely to the exclusion of everything else except the waltz, and it is deservedly popular. It is the least tiring of all the round dances and decidedly the most fun.

Excursions to the lemonade bowl were frequent, and the wish was expressed by many that some mild punch should be substituted for that really deadly drink. The opinion was freely uttered that "few people can use lemonade to quench their thirst without running a good chance of being made ill by the stuff, while a mild claret or white-wine punch is just as harmless on one hand, and far less liable to have a bad effect on the digestive organs."

It was very warm dancing, but it is to be presumed that for the sake of effect there was a wood fire in the open fireplace, and people who looked as if they would have been more comfortable in an ice box stood about it. It certainly was very pretty, and as people could have stayed away from it if they chose it could hardly be called a drawback.

As usual, the gallery was transformed into a dressing room, so that one of the most attractive parts of the Casino was rendered practically useless. When the reception room, which no one ever uses, was made into a temporary dressing room by the use of screens, it seemed to be satisfactory; and it was certainly pleasanter than having the gallery made entirely useless.

Supper was served shortly before midnight, and it was meagre and poor. The meagreness was the fault of the subscribers, who waited until the last moment to put in their names, so that those who had the ordering in charge had no means of telling how many people would be there, and did not feel justified in preparing an elaborate spread.

Dancing was resumed after supper until 1, when the strains of "Home, Sweet Home" warned the dancers that their last chance was in loud applause which they made use of and succeeded in wringing another two-step from the good-

MUTUAL AID, THAT'S THE IDEA.

THE WORD CHARITY LIKELY TO CAUSE PREJUDICE.

Col. Tyler Elected President of the Charity Organization Council—Other Officers Chosen—Tales of Sad Distress.

The first regular meeting of the Council of the Charity Organization of Plainfield was held in the parlor of the Crescent Avenue church Tuesday night.

Mayor Gilbert was chosen chairman pro tem, and Dr. William H. Murray secretary.

A committee was named to make nominations for officers of the Council. Those selected were: Col. Mason W. Tyler, Mrs. H. B. Opdyke, Rowland Cox, Mrs. Alex Gilbert and Miss Edith R. Leonard.

The committee withdrew and returned with the following ticket:

President—Col. Mason W. Tyler.

Vice-presidents—H. B. Newhall, Mrs. H. B. Opdyke, Mrs. Dexter Tiffany, Mrs. C. S. Lewis, the Rev. G. K. Newell, Mrs. F. G. Mead, Mrs. Walter A. Haviland, Wm. L. Saunders, C. W. McCutchen.

Secretary—Miss E. R. Leonard.

Treasurer—H. P. Reynolds.

David B. Titsworth moved that as there was no constitutional direction that could apply in the case, the whole ticket be elected at one vote.

It was decided that a quorum consisted of those present at any meeting, and the motion was carried. The chairman and secretary of the meeting retired and were replaced by the new officers.

Rowland Cox moved and it was carried that the constitution be amended by the addition of "Article V. Every resident of Plainfield who shall contribute $1 per year to the treasury of this society shall be entitled to membership in the organization."

Walter McGee, the member from the First M. E. church, stated that, although he belonged to that church, his work was chiefly connected with the Monroe Avenue M. E. chapel. He asked that he be transferred to that organization and that a new member be chosen from the church. The request was granted.

Mr. Newell moved that the Council should endeavor to make arrangements to secure the rent of a room in the building on the corner of Park and North avenues. He understood that there was a room used in the evening for the Boys' Club which might be found suitable.

A. Vanderbeek said that a room might be secured free in the building belonging to the citizens of Plainfield.

On motion Mrs. H. B. Opdyke and Mrs. F. G. Mead were chosen a committee with power to secure a room for the temporary use of the organization.

Mayor Gilbert moved that a committee of three be appointed to consider the constitution and suggest such amendments as they thought would aid the society in accomplishing its work.

Mrs. Opdyke read and recommended for the consideration of the committee a short article by Mrs. Lowell, a prominent worker in the New York Charity Organization. Mrs. Lowell said that she was not satisfied with the name of the society, but thought that there should be no mention of the word "Charity", as the most deserving poor would not apply to it when the name included the word.

There should be used instead an expression conveying the idea of mutual aid among the citizens.

On motion the Rev. Mr. Newell and the secretary were appointed a committee on printing and publication.

There being so many representative Plainfielders present, A. Vanderbeek, overseer of the poor, took advantage of the opportunity and gave a few examples of poverty as he finds it. He stated that there were three families who were literally starving as he spoke.

The Mayor asked if the city appropriation for the poor was exhausted.

Mr. Vanderbeek replied that it was not but that the parties in question did not come under the law.

voted to the politics of the State, now to advocate the thunder storm that was ready to burst over New Jersey, the city of Brooklyn and the State of New York.

I have no desire to criticise my own party of which I have been a life-long adherent, and to which I am strongly devoted, but I do trust that whatever may be the action of the party in the future, that the tendency may be squarely in the direction to advance the best interests of the people of the State and that so far as it is consistent with the constitution of the State to follow the good old Democratic doctrine and endeavor to give every township, borough and municipality the right to regulate their own internal affairs.

I am invited to go to Elizabeth this evening for some purpose in connection with the subject you introduce. I do not think I can be there, and trust to the good judgment of those present not to take any hasty action that will not meet the approbation of the party as a whole.

Yours very truly,

JOSEPH W. YATES.

New School Being Pushed.

District Clerk B. B. Joseph of the North Plainfield School Board is a man of push, and when he begins a thing you can depend on its being done. In conversation with him, The Press is led to believe that one room at least of its new school building will be occupied by the graduating class by the 15th of this month. This will be not only good news to the class and to the Board, but will be a saving to the taxpayers, as the Board is now paying rent for Saengerbund Hall.

"The Greatest of all our Periodicals."

The foremost men of the world write the literature of contemporaneous activity for THE FORUM.

Every great subject is taken up by The Forum when it naturally comes into public attention and is treated by the best authorities, without regard to parties or sects. It will keep any thoughtful reader informed on the tasks and progress of the time, as no other periodical does.

To many thoughtful people, the price of The Forum has hitherto been prohibitory; indeed all the great Reviews have been too high in price for the masses of intelligent readers. But now the number of readers of thoughtful literature—men and women who wish really to know what is going on in the world outside the narrow limits of particular sects and parties—is great enough in the United States to warrant so revolutionary a reduction in price. The Forum discusses important subjects, but it is not dull. The literature of contemporaneous activity is, in fact, the most interesting of all literature. American citizenship implies that a man shall know the opinions of the foremost men and the latest great achievements in every direction of activity.

TOWNSEND'S Marble & Granite Works,

30 SOMERSET STREET, PLAINFIELD, N. J.

If you have not engaged your work, I should be pleased to do it for you.

I buy only first-class Marble and Granite and do not sell unless at prices that will enable me to put up the work with credit to myself and justice to the parties purchasing.

I employ no agents and therefore am enabled to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customer, of the commission generally paid to agents.

I am under a very small expense in running my shop, myself and my son doing the larger portion of the work, and we personally attend to the setting of all work, and look upon business in this light, that Good Work and Good Material, at Fair Prices, is a standing advertisement for my business, which will tend to build up trade, and I feel safe to warrant that no dealer can sell you the same work and stone any cheaper than I can.

Hoping to be favored with your patronage, I am yours respectfully,

ONE DEAF, THE OTHER DEAD.

CURIOUS HAPPENINGS TO TWO PLAINFIELD CANINES.

How Tom Smith Met Retribution for His Fourth of July Recklessness—A Dog that Talks in Deaf and Dumb Alphabet, and One that Dropped Dead from Fright.

Last Fourth of July the boys in the vicinity of East Front street and Sandford and Westervelt avenues aroused the neighbors at 2 in the morning with the operation of a large toy cannon.

One of the innocents was Tom Smith, who had his pet dog with him. The dog examined the cannon previous to its discharge, and when the report came completely lost the proper use of his ears.

The dog henceforth was a great annoyance to Smith. Dearly as he loved the creature, Tom was almost tempted to shoot him when he disregarded his orders to go home and to stop lingering with him wherever he went.

With infinite patience, however, he succeeded in teaching the dog a deaf and dumb language, and now young Smith converses fluently with his pet to the satisfaction and profit of both.

Walter Bass tells a sad and remarkable story concerning the fate of his valuable dog.

Bass went fishing for his namesakes in the New Market pond, and took his dog along. A Lehigh Valley train and the dog happened to meet on the track.

His owner shed a few tears, and left the injured dog on the bank. Fearing a visit from a member of the S. P. C. A., he left a tag on the collar bearing the inscription "This dog is valuable. Please do not shoot him. He may recover."

At dinner time next day the dog came home as much alive as ever.

Afterwards when the two went fishing together the dog never ventured upon the track in question until one day when his master coaxed him on.

The fisherman met a track-walker, and to scare the dog said "Here comes a train. Look out for it!"

A train actually did come, with a whistle blast, around the curve, as he spoke. The dog gave a last look at his master, gazed in fright at the engine, yelped once, and fell dead.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—Sylvester Sharkey has assigned to Charles B. Clifton.

—Van Emburgh & Son have issued a fine lot of illustrated calendars.

—The Common Council will meet again Dec. 21 at 8 p. m., and pay election bills.

—The annual meeting and election of officers of the Camera Club will be held December 19.

—The Christian Endeavor society of the Presbyterian church of Dunellen will hold a fair the evenings of Dec. 20 and 21, in the chapel adjoining the church.

—You can't pluck the fruit when the vine is bare, and you can't expect to get good seats for the Casino Dec. 18 unless you hustle down to Leggett's and choose your tickets. Every seat is reserved, and the sale is in progress.

—John P. Emmons, the borough contractor, recently purchased from John A. Thickstun the lot situated on the corner of Duer street and Greenbrook road. Mr. Emmons intends building four neat frame houses which will beautify that portion of the borough.

—In the dearth of really good, commendable and elevating entertainments in Plainfield this season, it is gratifying for lovers of high-class performances to realize that in the Casino Dec. 18 an exceptionally meritorious programme will be presented. This company was secured for that date against the strong opposition of the Century Club of Philadelphia, who were striving for it. The date was the only one the company had open for engagement till spring. The manager of the entertainment will doubtless be rewarded by a full house, for his enterprise in favoring the people with this opportunity of enjoying something worth going to.

"The New South", Saturday.

"The New South", one of the most successful American plays given in the past few seasons, will be seen in Music Hall Saturday night, coming direct from its one-hundred-nights run in New York city, with original cast and scenery.

The leading interest of the piece is carried by Georgia Gwynne, a charming girl of the new south, with all the inherited grace and beauty of the ancient aristocracy and all the liberal intelligence of the modern culture. In the creation of this role Miss Phoebe Davies achieves the triumph of the evening. Miss Davies has the advantage of a fine figure, an elegant bearing, a sweet voice, and a most winning smile, and in the expression of pathos, tenderness and the power of love to overcome prejudice, conventional barriers, and even maidenly reserve, she displays dramatic ability of a very high order.

SINGULAR RESULT OF INDISCRIMINATE ALMSGIVING.

Philanthropic Citizens Determine that Good Haul So Longer Be Cast Unwarily on the Waters, and Organize a Charity Council to Centralize the Work of Poverty-Relief.

In response to an invitation from Mayor Gilbert calling for a public meeting of citizens interested in organized charities, a number of the residents of Plainfield gathered in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue church, Saturday evening.

Shortly after 8 the meeting was called to order, and Mayor Gilbert was elected Chairman and George Goddard Secretary of the meeting.

The Chairman said that the purpose of the meeting was the formation of a charities organization which should be able to commence work at once. Both those who gave and those who received charity were interested in the formation of a perfected charity system. He understood that some of those present had drawn up a plan, and he thought that the quickest way for the meeting to arrive at a conclusion would be to have some scheme presented.

L. N. Lovell offered a resolution that Rowland Cox, Isaac Miller and William Wadsworth be appointed a committee to consider a plan of organization. Col. Mason W. Tyler seconded the resolution and it was adopted.

The committee withdrew for consultation, and returned with the following report:

The committee recommend the adoption of a constitution as follows:

CONSTITUTION.

Article I. The name of this society shall be the "Charity Organization of Plainfield".

Article II. The objects of the Society shall be to be the centre of inter-communication between the various public, private and individual charities in the city of Plainfield, to foster and promote harmonious co-operation between them, and to check the evils of the over-lapping of relief.

Article III. The management of the Society shall be vested in a Central Council which shall have the control of all matters relating to the work of the Society.

The Central Council may consist of one or more representatives from each of the religious and charitable organizations of the city of Plainfield, the Mayor of Plainfield, the Mayor of North Plainfield, the Chairman of the Alms Committee of the Common Council of Plainfield and such other persons as may be deemed expedient.

The officers of the Council shall consist of a President, Vice-Presidents, a Secretary, and a Treasurer. And the officers of the Council shall be the officers of the Society.

The Council shall have power to increase its membership, to fill vacancies occurring in its membership, and generally to direct the management of the affairs of the Society.

Article IV. This constitution may be amended by a two-thirds vote of a meeting of the Council at which not less than ten members of the Council shall be present.

The committee respectfully recommend that if the foregoing constitution shall be adopted, the following named persons be chosen to constitute, with the ex-officio members, the Council of the Society:

H. R. Newhall, of the Crescent Avenue church.

Mrs. S. St.J. McCutchen, of the First Baptist church.

Mrs. Howard A. Pope, of the First Presbyterian church.

Walter McGee, of the First M. E. church.

William R. Wadsworth, of the Congregational church.

Father Smyth, of St. Mary's R. C. church.

Mrs. Dexter Tiffany, of the Grace P. E. church.

Col. Mason W. Tyler, of the Holy Cross P. E. church.

David E. Titsworth, of the Seventh-Day Baptist church.

Mrs. J. W. Johnson, of the Park Avenue Baptist church.

Miss Edith R. Leonard, of the Unitarian church.

Mrs. Francis Wood, of the Society of Friends.

Mrs. Walter A. Haviland, of the Society of Friends.

L. N. Lovell, of Warren chapel.

E. A. Ginna, of Bethel chapel.

The Rev. G. K. Newell, of Hope chapel.

Mrs. F. G. Mead, of the King's Daughters.

Mrs. Alex. Gilbert, of the Plainfield Relief Association.

Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, of the W. C. T. U.

Mrs. Horace Kimball, Children's Home.

Dr. W. H. Murray, Boy's Club.

A. Vanderbeek, Reform Club.

W. D. Murray, Y. M. C. A.

Officer in charge of Salvation Army.

John W. Murray, Jr., Fireman's Relief Association.

Father Miller, St. Joseph's R. C. church, North Plainfield.

Mrs. C. S. Lewis, Church of the Heavenly Rest.

Mrs. C. S. Gulon, Church of Our Saviour; and Fitzy Fisk, Mrs. H. B. Opdyke, Mrs. J. K. Myers, J. T. Closson, H. P. Reynolds and C. W. McCutchen.

It is recommended that the Council select representatives from the following organizations:

Trinity Reformed church, Muhlenberg Hospital, German Reformed church, German Lutheran church, Hospital Board, Emmanuel Baptist church, First Church of Christ, Plymouth Brethren, Woman's Relief Corps, G. A. R., Mt. Olive Baptist church, Grace M. E. church, North Plainfield, and the Y. W. C. T. U.

Col. M. W. Tyler moved that the committee's report be adopted and the constitution and recommendations included therein. The motion was carried.

On motion the name of Rowland Cox was added to the list of the Council.

In explanation of the object of the plans adopted it was stated that the idea was the same as that advocated by Mr. DeForrest at a recent meeting. It was simply a combination of already organized charities. The Council was to assist the old societies in doing the best possible almost starving. Centralization makes this impossible, as thorough investigation can be made and a black list kept. It is also desirable that societies should send for preservation memoranda of cases in which aid has been given.

In regard to the numbers of the needy in Plainfield, Mr. Vanderbeek said that there were eight or ten families each week whose applications he could not grant. He thought strict rules or regulations would keep people from being imposed on, but too much 'red tape' would not be beneficial. The establishment of charity restaurants to offset the saloon free lunch counter might be successful.

Mayor Gilbert did not think any attempt to furnish cheap or free meals or lodging would succeed. The plan of lodging the homeless at the police station had once been tried. It brought about no good result except an increase in the population of the city, every tramp in the northern part of the State having headed for Plainfield when the announcement was made. He favored the continuation of the present methods of the Relief Association.

The meeting was then adjourned.

A meeting of those members of the Council of the new charity organization who were present at the meeting in the Crescent Avenue church Saturday evening was held afterward. It was decided that a meeting of the Council should be held next Tuesday evening.

FANNED IN FANWOOD.

Bad Man Adams Finds Other Men Who are Worse.

William Adams and George Shay, two residents of the better portion of Terrill road, went visiting Sunday afternoon. At 5 they found themselves drinking hard cider in a Fanwood ranch.

In spite of the peaceable intentions of all parties a serious altercation was soon commenced between the Plainfield visitors and the colored proprietors of the place. When one of the latter seized a club, Shay ran away, but Adams stayed to see the fun.

Adams was taken to the Muhlenberg Hospital shortly afterward. His head grew surprisingly large under the treatment of the colored clubber, and he can scarcely see. He is making a careful estimate of the time which will elapse before he will be able to return the compliment.

Looking Forward, Next.

The sermon of the Rev. Charles E. Herring in the First Presbyterian church Sunday night was on the subject "Looking Backward".

Mr. Herring contrasted the Christian religion with that of the Chinese. The doctrine of Confucius was founded on the traditions of the past, thus being on a directly opposite basis from the Christian, which is built on faith in the future.

In speaking of the power of the Spirit, Mr. Herring said: "One can no more convert himself by his own power than he can jump over a fence by lifting on his boot straps. The man who does not believe in anything he cannot understand is narrow-minded."

The church was crowded, and the discourse was closely followed by the congregation.

The sermon was the first of a series of sermons on religious doctrine, the second of which will be given next Sunday evening, on the subject "Looking Forward".

The title of next Sunday morning's sermon will be "Fundamental Problems of Religion".

Charming Christmas Gifts.

There are few things so essential to the comfort of a home as a good lamp, hence unusual care should be exercised in making a choice, for upon the selection much of your happiness depends. If the lamp proves a poor burner, or is not made upon advanced principles, there will be times when you will be tempted to think life is not worth living. To insure getting the best, both from an artistic and practical standpoint, buy The "Miller" Lamp. Edward Miller & Co., 10 and 12 College place, between Barclay street and Park place, New York, are the manufacturers; they are the oldest and the largest manufacturers of lamps and so have a complete assortment of staple and fancy designs in lamps. It is worth your time to visit their showroom to see such a rare collection of art in lamps.

BILL-BOARD ORDINANCE TABLED.

COUNCILMEN SATISFIED WITH EXISTING AFFAIRS.

State Law Fully Covers Any Possible Abuses—Bill-Board Proprietor Commended As One Who Can Be Trusted to Use His Own Discretion.

Councilman Fox of the Committee on Laws and Ordinances on Monday reported back to the Common Council the proposed bill-board ordinance, together with the opinion of Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh that no such ordinance was needed, as the State law fully provided for the punishment of any such offence as the posting of indelicate pictures. The Committee pointed out objections to the ordinance, and further reported that the bill-boards of Plainfield were all owned by one man, "who has appeared before the Council and given them his word that no objectionable matter will be allowed on the boards owned by him; and the high character and standing of this gentleman, and the simple remedy provided by the State law if invoked, are sufficient safeguard against the abuse of the privilege of posting bills without further action by the Council."

The ordinance was thereupon unanimously tabled.

GRAND OFFICERS COMPLIMENTED.

Delightful Evening in the Lodge Rooms of Mercy Arcanumites.

One of the greatest demonstrations of the strength and sociability of the Royal Arcanum in Plainfield was the combined initiation, election and collation of Plainfield Council, No 714, in Coward's building Monday night. The lodge room was crowded, over sixty members being present.

The gathering was particularly noteworthy from the fact that the attendance of grand officers of the State of New Jersey was the largest ever witnessed in Plainfield.

A new member was initiated with ceremonies conducted by the following officers:

Grand Regent S. J. Kallman, Grand Vice Regent F. S Potter, Grand Orator Charles Starr, Supreme Grand Secretary Robert H. Alberts, Deputy Grand Regent J. Day Otis, Supreme Deputy Grand Regent F. B. Harbert, Supreme Deputy Grand Regent Wm. McCulley, Jr., Supreme Deputy Grand Regent Wm. C. Strong, Supreme Trustee F. H. Charlock, Alternate Supreme Representative Wm. H. Miles, Past Regent and Committee on Finance Supreme Council A. W. Rand, and [illegible] Regent Noble of Fanwood Council.

The Council also elected their officers for the ensuing year as follows:

Past Regent—Frederick S. Green.
Regent—Peter A. Emmons.
Vice Regent—Adrian M. Bee.
Orator—Henry R. Ely.
Secretary—Henry A. Thorne.
Collector—Henry S. Mason.
Treasurer—Daniel W. Littell.
Chaplain—John Valiant.
Guide—James F. Ritchie.
Warden—Frederick J. Pope.
Sentry—Emil Hummerscheidt.
Trustees—Aaron W. Rand, Seymour Marsh, Thos. H. Bartindale.
Representative to Grand Council—Fred. S. Green.
Alternate—Edwin W. Conklin.

Two applications for membership and one card were presented. Four applicants are at present under the consideration of the medical examiner.

After the business of the evening had been transacted, the attention of the guests was turned towards social pleasures. While the collation was being served, the Arcanum orchestra entertained the company with excellent music, and gifted Henry R. Ely made a decided hit with his recitations.

The Council now consists of 157 members, and new ones are constantly being initiated. The increase in size and strength has been particularly noticeable during the administration of Regent Green. His work was very favorably commented on by the grand officers last night.

THREE BAD MEN UNDER THE BED.

THEY WERE HIDING THERE FROM THE BOROUGH MARSHALS.

Seven Sports Who Shuffled Cards Sunday, Captured in Little Africa—Startling Termination of a Social Game, in Which Clubs Were Trumps.

(From The Press of December 11.)

Chief Marshal Pangborn and assistants, of the borough, raided a thriving gambling house in "Little Africa" early yesterday morning.

About three weeks ago the marshal learned that William Jackson, of Race street, was entertaining gambling parties every Saturday night. Early Sunday morning a week ago he watched the place and saw several sad and weary revelers leave the house. Through the shutters he noticed a game of cards in progress.

At 2:30 yesterday morning the Chief and his two assistants silently entered Race street and halted before the suspected den. One man was stationed in front and another in the rear. Chief Pangborn then began to amuse the dog and pushed his way into the house when the watchful host came to quiet the noise.

The lamp was instantly knocked over and a pot of $45 quickly disappeared. One of the gamblers thrust a leg through a rear window but retreated when he felt several hearty blows from the rear guard.

When the marshal had obtained a light he found four men on their feet and three under a bed. The color line was drawn in like proportion. A pack of cards and $1.75 in change remained on the table. The men were Charles Southard, Peter Schneiderwinn and Charles Case, white; and Thomas Bowser, Henry VanLiew and Wm. Laing, colored.

As soon as the news became known, shortly after daylight, a crowd of 200 persons surrounded the lockup and expressed their sympathy for the prisoners.

Southard, Bowser, VanLiew and Wm. Laing were brought before Borough Magistrate T. B. Crosley this morning, when Chief Marshal Pangborn explained the manner of arrest.

Attorney George DeMeza appeared for them and asked for leniency as the men were not professional gamblers but laborers who had gathered for a social game. They had made no disturbance and as this was the first offense the Judge should not deal harshly with them. The men pleaded guilty and declared their innocence up to the night of the raid.

The magistrate said the men should be indicted under the State law, but that under the circumstances it was thought best to hold them under the borough ordinance. He cautioned the men against gambling during these hard times and imposed a fine of $3 each, with an alternative of five days. The fines were paid.

William Jackson was then brought into court and charged with violating the borough ordinance concerning the keeping of a gambling house.

He pleaded guilty but claimed that he had only allowed a few friends to gather for five Saturday nights, at their earnest request. He never gambled himself. His fine was $5 with a choice of twenty days. The money was paid.

Peter Schneiderwinn had been released on bail of $50 furnished by John Rafferty.

It was claimed that three of his ribs were broken, but as no doctor's certificate to that effect was presented Marshal Pangborn, in the absence of the Corporation Counsel, asked that the bail be forfeited. The Court allowed the request if it could be shown that his illness was imaginary.

Schneiderwinn was a lingering visitor at The Press office this morning. His appearance gave no evidence of his having broken a rib, but it was plain that he had broken his pledge. He was much alarmed when he found his bail had been forfeited.

Charles Case was liberated on bail to appear before the Magistrate at 7 this evening.

Students' Frolics, and Young Lovers.

Two plays have made fashionable conquests of New York. They are "The Councillor's Wife" at the Empire Theatre, and that inimitable farce comedy "Charley's Aunt" at the Standard Theatre. These plays have been filling their respective houses to overflowing for the past few months. There is an immense future demand for seats for both plays, not only by New Yorkers but by out-of-town people who will visit the city during the holidays and have naturally selected the leading theatrical successes for their patronage. Seats for Christmas and New Year's weeks are selling so rapidly that it looks as if they would all be gone before the holidays get here.

"Charley's Aunt" is one kind of fun; "The Councillor's Wife" is another kind. Either of them would make anybody know the value of a hearty wholesome laugh. "Charley's Aunt" is a college students' frolic, with five rattling love stories completely told. One of the students personates the Donna Lucia d'Alvadorez, to further the love-making of two of his chums. It goes with shouts of laughter from the first rising of the curtain to the finish. The critics and the public have declared it the funniest play ever produced in New York. It has beautiful young women in it and handsome young men, and is very handsomely staged. The 300th performance takes place December 26. It will be a souvenir occasion.

"The Councillor's Wife" is a pure comedy, and it has a charming setting in the beautiful Empire Theatre. Jerome K. Jerome, the English novelist, is one of KNOCKED SENSELESS BY PRISONERS.

DARING RUFFIANS ESCAPE FROM THE SOMERVILLE JAIL.

While Deputy Jailer Felled Senseless by a Brutal Blow—All the Other Prisoners Could Have Freed Themselves, But Preferred Not to Run the Risk.

(Special to The Press.)

SOMERVILLE, Dec. 11—Two prisoners escaped from the jail here at 6 last night, and although constables and detectives have patroled and searched the county ever since but little trace of the fugitives could be found. The escaping prisoners were Pearl J. Rodgers, a young colored man who was serving time for a robbery committed some months ago, and Reuben Strickland of the Millstone robber gang, in whose house the flour was found one week ago.

Yesterday afternoon Deputy Sheriff Oakey went away leaving old Henry Hoffman, a trusty prisoner, in charge of the jail. This the prisoners in some way found out, and thereupon the two who got out made ready to escape when the daily quota of tramps were locked up for the night.

The jail is two stories high, divided into four rooms containing in all 32 cells. The lower portion is filled with twenty-two prisoners awaiting the action of the Grand Jury. Into the corridor of this section the tramps are locked. When Hoffman went to the jail door at 6 last night and opened it to let the dozen odd tramps in, Rodgers and Strickland were crouched by the door inside, all ready to make their dash for liberty. As the old man swung the iron door open, Strickland leaped forward and struck him a blow on the head, knocking him senseless. Rodgers, who was just behind him ready with a club to finish the job, dropped the club and both men rushed away. Neither the tramps nor the other prisoners attempted to prevent the escape and no alarm was raised until Hoffman came to his senses a moment later. All of the prisoners, including Edward, who killed a man in Bound Brook some two years ago, could have got away but they did not try.

When the alarm was given, Deputy Sheriff Oakey and two constables went at once to the house of Rodgers' mother and found that the prisoner had left there but a few moments before. Going, from there to Strickland's home in Blackwell's Mills, the deputy sheriff was again told that both prisoners had been there but had gone on towards New Brunswick. Word was sent to New Brunswick to catch the fugitives, but up to noon today no trace of them had been found. Rodgers is a light-colored negro, and Strickland is about 25 years of age. Hoffman is injured quite severely.

A RETIRED BUSINESS WOMAN.

A Page From Her History.

The important experiences of others are interesting. The following is no exception: "I had been troubled with heart disease 25 years, much of that time very seriously. For five years I was treated by one physician continuously. I was in business, but obliged to retire on account of my health. A physician told my friends that I could not live a month. My feet and limbs were badly swollen, and I was indeed in a serious condition when a gentleman directed my attention to Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, and said that his sister, who had been afflicted with heart disease, had been cured by the remedy, and was again a strong, healthy woman. I purchased a bottle of the Heart Cure, and in less than an hour after taking the first dose I could feel a decided improvement in the circulation of my blood. When I had taken three doses I could move my ankles, something I had not done for months, and my limbs had been swollen so long that they seemed almost petrified. Before I had taken one bottle of the New Heart Cure the swelling had all gone down, and I was so much better that I did my own work. On my recommendation six others are taking this valuable remedy."—Mrs. Morgan, 589 W. Harrison St., Chicago, Ill.

Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, a discovery of an eminent specialist in heart disease, is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. It is positively free from all opiates or dangerous drugs.

"GOOT ENOF FUR ENY BOTY."

Marksmen with National Reputations Have a Go at Plainfield Traps.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Dec. 2, 1893.

There will be a Live Bird Sweepstake Shooting on the Climax Gun Club Grounds, Thursday, Dec. 7, 1893, rain or shine. The main event will be 10 Live Birds—$10 Entrance—All monies divided as follows: Six entries or under, two monies; over six, three monies. Shooting begins at 11.30 a. m. sharp. The birds will be furnished by your humble servant and they will be "goot enof fur eny boty".

CHAS. SMITH, "Dutchy".

In response to the above card, a large delegation of the crack pigeon shooters of the country appeared Thursday upon the grounds of the Climax Club, near Fanwood. Among the prominent marksmen present were: J. A. R. Elliot of Kansas City, M. F. Lindsley of Hoboken, W. Fred Quimby of Newark, John Rothacker of Philadelphia, Chas. Zwerlein and Edward Hill of Trenton, Ferd. VanDyke of New York, Arthur DuBray of Cincinnati, and the cream of our local talent. The birds furnished for the occasion were pronounced by all as the best and fastest flyers that had been seen at a similar shoot for a long time, and in consequence clean scores were at a premium.

The main event of the day was at 10 birds, and none of the 13 entries had an unbroken score; taking into consideration the fact that many of the shooters have national reputations, it can be readily seen that "Dutchy" had made good his promise in his cards of invitation that the birds would be "goot enof fur eny boty". The scores in the several events were as follows, the rules governing being those of the American Shooting Association:

Event No. 1, 4 birds—DuBray, 4; Zwerlein, 4; Keller, 4; Hill, 3.

Event No. 2, miss and out—Keller 3; DuBray 4; Hill 4; Zwerlein 1.

Event No. 3, 5 birds—Quimby 5, Elliot 5; Hill 5; VanDyke 4; Zwerlein 4; Keller 4; Smith 4; Lindsley 3; DuBray 3; Campbell 3.

Event No. 4, 5 birds—Elliot won first alone with a straight score of 5. Quimby, Lindsley, DuBray, Rothacker, Hill and Smith 4 each. VanDyke, Campbell and Zwerlein being third with 3 each.

Event No. 5, was the main event and was at 10 birds per man—Elliot, Lindsley, DuBray, Zwerlein and Rothacker, divided first money, each killing 9 birds. Apgar, Hill and Woodruff did the same with second on scores of 8. Third went to D. Terry, Quimby and Campbell with 7. C Smith lost several birds that fell dead just outside the boundary and scored 6 and Dorsey killed 5. The last event was a miss and out—W. Terry, "Williams", DuBray and Campbell, dropped out on the first round, and as the supply of birds gave out Apgar, Rothacker, Lindsley, Hill and Zwerlein were compelled to divide, each having killed 2.

Those of the shooters who returned to the city were entertained by mine host Charles Smith, and thus ended a pleasant day's outing.

THE WILL TO BE CONTESTED.

And Just How Much the Estate Is Worth, Mighty Uncertain.

The newspaper reports of the will contest over the estate of Catharine Craig are wide of the truth. There is a contest, however, which is likely to be of the liveliest sort. Mrs. Craig while on her deathbed called in her nephew, Morgan Turton, and his wife, and said she wanted to make her will. She called for pen and ink and paper, and asked for witnesses. Then she dictated these words, which were at her request written down by Mrs. Turton: "All I have and possess, I give to Morgan Turton and his wife, to do as they please with." Then she had it read over to her and signed it and asked the witnesses to sign, telling them that it was her will. Later on, another neighbor called in and she told him what she had done and asked him to sign as a witness. This witness read the will over to Mrs. Craig and asked her if that was her will and the way she wanted to have it, and she said it was and that it was her sincere wish. He then signed as the third witness.

The paper was submitted to Craig A. Marsh for his legal opinion. He said that the facts stated constituted a substantial compliance with the law, and the will could be established as valid if the testatrix was in her right mind and was not unduly influenced. The failure to have an attestation clause and to name an executor he said did not invalidate the will. All the witnesses and the doctor say that her mind was perfectly clear, and she was not the kind of woman to be unduly influenced.

The will was only admitted to probate by the Surrogate on Monday last. Later, John A. Young of Jersey City, another nephew, applied to the Surrogate to prove another will which gave everything to Mr. Young. He was told that he came too late, and that he would have to take an appeal if he wanted to attack the will already proved. His lawyer took an appeal to the Orphans Court.

It is not known how much the estate is worth, the estimates varying all the way from $6,000 to $60,000. Mr. Turton scored first by reason of taking legal advice and acting promptly.

THE SAUNDERS DINNER.

Delightful Social Event at the Country Club.

Mr. and Mrs. William L. Saunders gave a dinner of fourteen covers at the Country Club Friday night. The dinner was served in the ladies' dining room of the club. The table was beautifully decorated with pink carnations. The favors for the women were bonbon baskets, ornamented with pink carnations; those for the men were boutonnieres of the same flowers.

The dinner was an elaborate one, and the guests did not leave the table until 10:30. One of the most enjoyable features of the affair consisted of the toasts proposed by Mr. Saunders to the various guests.

After the dinner the party took carriages to the Park Club, where they danced until past midnight.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Saunders, Mr. and Mrs. Hageman, Mr. and Mrs. Evans, Mr. and Mrs. Scott, Maj. and Mrs. Burnett, Mrs. Charles Reed, Mr. Boome, Mr. Reynolds of New York, and Peter Matthews.

Merry-Go-Rounds Have a Social.

The Merry-Go-Round Club of North Plainfield met at the residence of Miss Grace Clark of Grandview avenue, Friday evening, and held their regular monthly sociable.

Among those present were Ida Randolph, Grace Godwin, Sadie and Achsah Holmes, Emma, Bertha and Mabel Stevens, Sarah Toms, Jennie and Gracie Coddington and Lucetta Clark.

Time passed very enjoyably in games and music, and refreshments were served.

Jonathan and His Continent.

By Max O'Rell, Author of "John Bull and His Island," "John Bull, Jr., Etc.," and Jack Allyn.

[Translated by Mme. Paul Blouet. Copyrighted by Cassell & Co., New York, and published by special arrangement through the American Press Association. Paul Blouet (Max O'Rell) is a celebrated French lecturer, who has devoted his talents mainly to satirizing the Anglo-Saxon race. The book from which the following extracts are made is his latest production, and was [illegible] during his recent visit to America.]

The large cities do not constitute the real America. To gain a correct idea of this country one must go and see those hundreds—I had almost said those thousands—of flourishing little towns which spring up day by day on that immense continent.

It is no use looking in New York for monuments in the sense which we attach to the word in Europe. There are massive buildings, a few handsome churches, but nothing which arrests your gaze. The houses in the best part of the city are built of brown stone in the English style. In the populous quarters many are of red brick, with green shutters on the outside.

The streets are horribly ill paved. From my windows, which looked on Madison square, the carriages appear to rise and fall as if on a troubled sea. Drunkards have had to drop their habits, they could not reach home from the beer saloons.

Three fine squares alone break the monotony of all these parallelograms of streets: Washington square, Union square and Madison square.

That which strikes the visitor to New York is not the city itself, but the feverish activity which reigns there.

Overhead is a network of telegraph and telephone wires, on the ground a network of tram car rails. It is estimated that there are more than 12,000 miles of telegraphic wires suspended over the heads of the passers by; almost enough to go half round the world.

The whistles of the boats that ply between New York and Brooklyn on the East river, and between New York and Jersey City on the Hudson, keep up, day and night, until 1 in the morning, a noise which is like the roar of wild beasts. It is the cry of Matter under the yoke of Man. You fancy you are living in a menagerie.

In almost every street tram cars pass every few minutes. It is an incessant procession. In Broadway alone there are more than three hundred. The cars, as they are always called in America, are magical, like everything American. Built to carry twenty-four persons inside (there are no seats on the top), they are made to hold sixty and more. In fact, no matter how full they are, there is always room for one more. The conductor never refuses to let you go on board. You hang on the rail beside the driver or conductor, if it is not possible to squeeze yourself inside and hold on to the leather straps provided for the purpose; you gasp for breath, it is all you can do to get at your pocket to extract the five cents which you owe to the car company; but the conductor cries in his imperturbable nasal drawl: "Move forward, make room."

In Third avenue and Sixth avenue, you find the overhead railway called the "Elevated." It is supported on iron pillars, and the trains run along on the level with the upper windows of the houses. This company carries every day the fabulous number of 500,000 passengers.

All the existing means of transit are acknowledged to be insufficient, and an underground railway is talked of. There will soon be travelers underground, on the ground, and in the air. Poor Hercules, where are you with your "Ne plus ultra?" You had reckoned without your Yankee.

The streets, ill paved and dirty, are dangerous in winter. Coachmen do not check their horses for foot passengers, but neither do they try to run over them. They strike the middle course between the London coachman, who avoids them, and the Parisian one, who aims at them.

The populous quarters, such as the Chinese quarter, the Italian quarter, the Jewish quarter, with their tenement houses, those barracks of the poor which I visited one day in company with a sanitary engineer, remind one of some of Dante's descriptions: it is a [illegible] I spare the reader the [illegible] left upon me. Horrible! A populace composed of the offscourings of all nations, the [illegible] one can imagine.

Hard by this frightful squalor, Fifth avenue, with its palaces full of the riches of the earth. It is the eternal story of large cities.

As in London, hundreds of churches and taverns (called beer saloons), it is the same ignoble Anglo-Saxon mixture of Bible and beer, of spiritual and spirituous.

New York is probably the most cosmopolitan city in the world. To give an idea of it, I may tell you that there are newspapers published there in English, French, German, Russian, Italian, Spanish, Swedish, Dutch, Hungarian, Chinese and Hebrew.

I received one day a circular of a meeting of the "Knights of Labor." It was printed in six different languages.

Nothing is more diverting than to hear the dwellers of each great American town criticize the dwellers in the others. All these cities, each almost in its infancy as yet, are jealous one of another. At Boston, for instance, you will be told that the Chicago people are all pig stickers and pork packers. In Chicago, you will hear that Boston is composed of nothing but prigs and "precieuses ridicules."

The English spoken in Boston is purer than any to be heard elsewhere in the north. The voices are less harsh and nasal, the language ceases to be "varry, varry Amurrican." If you think yourself in England as you walk along the streets, the illusion becomes complete when you hear the well bred people speak.

All the anecdotes told in America on the subject of Boston are satires upon the pretentious character of the Bostonian, who considers Boston the center of the universe.

Here is one out of the many hundreds I have heard.

A Boston man has lost his wife. As soon as telephonic communication is established between that city and Paradise, he rings and cries:

"Hello!"

"Hello!" from the other end.

Such is America.

In less than twenty years Omaha, Denver, Kansas City, Minneapolis will be as many Chicagos. Cleveland, St. Louis, Louisville will rival her in five.

Chicago is, in my eyes, the very type of the American city, the most striking example of what Jonathan calls "go-aheadism."

The streets are twice as wide as the Parisian boulevards; the houses of business are eight, ten and twelve stories high. Michigan avenue is seven miles long; the numbers of the houses run up to 4,000 and something. The city has parks, lovely drives by the lake shore, statues, including a splendid one of Abraham Lincoln, public buildings imposing in their massiveness, fine theatres and churches, luxurious clubs, inside which four good sized Parisian ones could dance a quadrille, etc., etc.

Michigan avenue and Prairie avenue are extremely handsome. Picture to yourself the avenue of the Bois de Boulogne, prolonged for seven miles in a straight line, and imagine the effect, the beautiful vista, when this is lit up at night, or when the trees, with which both these grand roads are planted, are in all their fresh spring beauty.

In these avenues, American eccentricity has been allowed free play. The houses are built in all imaginable styles of architecture: some of them are Florentine, some English, others Moorish, others a mixture of all three; others again look like Greek temples, while here and there you come across what looks like a little Gothic church, and close alongside mediaeval castles in miniature, or imitation mosques; some have the look of villas in the Paris suburbs, some have been modeled upon Swiss chalets, others upon the residences of some pasha on the borders of the Bosphorus. There are styles for all tastes.

The American may be eccentric, or what you will, but he is never monotonous.

Enter one of these houses, and you will see handsome furniture, not only rich, but in good taste.

I was not astonished to find Chicago society genial, polished and well read. Riches begot the taste for literature and arts, perhaps one day it will beget the taste for simplicity.

You find here still more warmth and much less constraint than in the east. You feel that you have quit the realms of New England Puritanism. No frigidity here; people give free play to their sentiments. If I had to name the most sympathetic of my American audiences, the warmest and promptest to seize the significance of a look or gesture, I should name the one which I had the honor of addressing in Chicago.

At 7 in the morning every man is astir and at work, whether he be millionaire or poor clerk. Only the idle are outside the pale of respectability in Chicago.

I do not think it is possible for a European to imagine the activity which reigns in Chicago without seeing it.

"You will soon be inventing," I said to a resident, "a machine that will take a live rabbit at one end and turn out a chimney pot hat at the other."

"We have done something very like it already," he replied.

And next morning he took me to see the famous pig killing and pork packing premises of Philip Armour & Co.

Picture to yourself a series of rooms connecting. In the first, 5,000 pigs a day are killed; in the second, they are scraped as they come out of a caldron of boiling water; in the third, the heads are cut off; and so on, and so on. The process is somewhat sickening, and I will not enter into any more details. At the end of the establishment the poor pigs are presented to you under the forms of bacon, sausage, gelatine, etc. The various processes take place with all the rapidity of conjuring.

CHAPTER VIII.

American houses are furnished very luxuriously, and for the most part with exquisite taste. Here you see the influence of woman in the smallest details of life. Indeed, at every step you take, you see that woman has passed that way.

The luxury displayed at receptions, dinners and dances surpasses European imagination. At a ball given in New York in the month of February, 1888, the walls were covered with roses, which did not cost less than $10,000. When one considers that the supper, and everything else, was on the same scale, it becomes doubtful whether such luxury is to be admired. I was present one evening at a dinner given in the large dining hall at Delmonico's restaurant, in New York. We were eighty-seven guests at an immense round table. The center of the board was covered with a gigantic star of flowers—roses, arum lilies, and heliotrope. At that season, lilies were worth a dollar each, and all through the winter the price of roses was from a quarter to two dollars apiece, according to kind. The Americans at this feast estimated the star of flowers at six or seven thousand dollars.

At a dinner party given recently at Delmonico's, I heard that each menu had a chain attached, consisting of pearls and diamonds, and valued at $1,000.

In houses, in clubs, in offices one cannot help admiring the ingenious forethought, the wonderful care with which the smallest wants and the slightest conveniences of life have been studied. It seems as if there were nothing left to desire.

It is impossible, however, in speaking of American interiors, to pass over in silence a certain eyesore, which meets your sight at every turn.

The most indispensable, it appears, the most conspicuous at any rate, piece of furniture in America is the spittoon. All rooms are provided with this object of prime necessity, you find one beside your seat in the trains, under your table in the restaurants. Impossible to escape the sight of the ugly utensil. In the hotel corridors there is a spittoon standing sentinel outside every door. In public buildings the floors are dotted with them, and they form the line all up the stairs.

The Americans, used to these targets from the tenderest age, are marvelously adroit at the use of them: they never miss their aim. I saw some really striking feats of marksmanship; but perhaps the best of all at the Capitol, in Washington.

The supreme court of judicature was sitting. As I entered an advocate was launching thunders of eloquence. All at once he stopped, looked at a spittoon which stood two yards off, aimed at it, and Kerrrrr—crack—plop! right in the bull's eye; then on he went with his harangue. I looked to see the [illegible]

[illegible] Of such are the Astors, the Vanderbilts and company. Three-quarters of "nobility" are the currency key of this little world. The first generation makes the million, the second generation is parvenu, the third is arrives. In the eyes of these people to have from thirty or forty to fifty thousand dollars a year is to be in decent poverty. To have two or three hundred thousand dollars a year is to be in easy circumstances.

The third aristocracy is the aristocracy of talent, literary and artistic society. This third aristocracy is incontestably the first, if you will excuse the Hibernicism.

I do not think that one could find anywhere, or even imagine, a society more refined, more affable, more hospitable, more witty or more brilliant. I should like just here to indulge in a string of adjectives after the fashion of Mme. de Sevigne.

One of the consequences of the position which woman takes in the United States is, that in good American drawing rooms conversation is never dull.

"If I were queen," exclaimed Mme. Recamier one day, "I would command Mme. de Stael to talk to me all day long." One would like to be able to give the same order to plenty of American women. In their company conversation never flags and always remains within the domain of causerie; they glide lightly from one subject to another, extracting something fresh from each, pass from the serious to the gay, even to the frivolous without becoming commonplace, soar again to lofty heights, but do not disdain to come down to gossip for a minute or two; all this without a grain of affectation, but with a charm of naturalness that is delightfully winning.

French women are the only ones I know who can compare with the American lady in charm of conversation, and even then I am obliged to admit two things: that the American women of intellectual society are often more natural than their French rivals, and that they make less effort to charm. In a word, with them you are amiable without having to be gallant, and none of those stereotyped compliments, which so often spoil the charm of a conversation between a man and a woman, are expected of you.

The Americans, and that in every station of life, have almost always three names: one Christian name and two family ones: George Washington Smith, Benjamin Franklin Jones, William Tell Brown. I should not have been astonished to make the acquaintance of a Mr. Napoleon Bonaparte Robinson. The celebrities do not escape it any more than the rest: Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, John Greenleaf Whittier, Oliver Wendell Holmes, Thomas Bailey Aldrich, Richard Watson Gilder, James Russell Lowell, Ralph Waldo Emerson, Henry Ward Beecher, etc., etc. Can one not see in these double names a title which the father thinks he confers on his child at the baptismal font?

All new societies have the same weakness. On the morrow of the Revolution, did we not call our children Epaminondas, Leonidas, Darius, Napoleon, etc.?

Every American with the least self respect is colonel or judge.

Few escape it, as Mark Twain once remarked of the decorations of the Legion of Honor. We are quits, Mark. America has a hundred times as many colonels as we have knights of the Legion of Honor.

When you are presented to a gentleman, in an American drawing room, and you have unfortunately not caught his name, there is no need to try and repair the evil, call him "Colonel," nine times out of ten it is safe, if luck should be against you, call him "Judge," and you are pretty sure to be right.

If, however, pursued by the fates, you should discover that your interlocutor is neither colonel nor judge, you have another resource; call him "Professor," and you are out of the difficulty; an American always professes something, an art, a religion, and you are risking nothing.

I met a few American colonels who had recently been promoted "majors." They were so proud of their new title that they insisted on being addressed thus.

I am afraid it will make my readers' lips water, but here is a list of some American fortunes as I have heard them stated.

Name.	Capital.	Revenue at 5 per cent.
J. Gould	$275,000,000	$13,750,000
J. W. Mackay	250,000,000	12,500,000
C. Vanderbilt	[illegible]	[illegible]
G. F. Jones	100,000,000	5,000,000
J J Astor	90,000,000	4,500,000
A. T. Stewart	40,000,000	2,000,000
J. G. Bennett	30,000,000	1,500,000

These are the princes of the Land of the Dollar. The largest English fortunes fall short of these figures. The Duke of Westminster's is reckoned at only $80,000,000, that of the Duke of Sutherland at $30,000,000, the Duke of Northumberland has $20,000,000, and the Marquis of Bute $20,000,000.

It is in mines and railways especially that the colossal American fortunes have been made.

I have not seen the town house or the country house of Mr. Gould; but I know that in the grounds of the latter stand conservatories estimated to be worth $800,000. I trust this will give an idea of what the rest may be.

I cannot guarantee that Mr. Gould is a happy man. Concerning immense fortunes a witty American friend, rich in moderation, and a great philosopher, said to me one day:

"No man can own more than a million dollars. When his bank account outgrows that, he does not own it; it owns him, and he becomes its slave."

The Americans, having no king in our sense of the word, make the most of those they have, republicans though they be. To read the pedigrees, published in full every time a death occurs in one of these rich families, is highly entertaining. A Mrs. Astor died while I was in America, and, after the enumeration of her charms and virtues, which were many, came the list of John Jacobs from whom her husband had sprung. The Astors were all John Jacobs apparently, and were mentioned as John Jacob I, John Jacob II and John Jacob III. The line does not go back very far. John Jacob I having gone to America as a poor emigrant early in this century, I believe, and laid the foundation of the present grandeur of his house by trading in furs.

It will not do to inquire too closely into the way in which some of America's millionaires have amassed wealth. Strange stories are told of men so grasping that they stopped at nothing, even to the ruining of their own sons. When I saw Mr. Bronson Howard's clever play, "The Henrietta," in which he [illegible]

What is
CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhoea and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
DR. G. C. OSGOOD,
Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
DR. J. F. KINCHELOE,
Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. ARCHER, M. D.,
111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

make the law on these matters. "Why should I not go to the theatre alone?" she says again; "if your streets are impure, it is for you to cleanse them. Why should I not receive my ball partners who please me? If one of them were to profit by my seeing him alone in the drawing room to take a liberty with me, he would be an ill bred fellow, and I should have him properly shown out of the house, and certainly it is not for such as he that I should change my habits."

In trains, where the seats are constructed to hold two persons, you will see the American seek a place from one end of the train to the other before he will go and seat himself by the side of a young girl. He will only do so when there is no help for it. I have many times noticed men standing up in the local trains, rather than run the risk of incommoding a young girl by sharing a seat with her. And I am not speaking now of gentlemen only, but of men belonging to the middle, if not lower, class—if the word "class" may be used speaking of Americans.

With what pleasure I remember the young American girls whom I occasionally met at Parisian parties in my youthful days. Their pretty, bright faces, their elegance, their unconventional charm of manner and animated, natural conversation—all these enchanted me. One never felt awkward with them. Whereas with a French young girl I could generally find nothing but absurd commonplaces to say, in the presence of Jonathan's merry maidens I lost my timidity, and could chat away with as little embarrassment as I would with a young brother officer of my regiment.

The American girl is still without rivals in Parisian drawing rooms, where she is more and more sought after. Men seek her for her gayety, wit or beauty; mothers look favorably upon her for her dollars; the younger women fear her [illegible]—nothing is wanting to her success.

And what spirit there was in their dancing! What animation! What eyes lit up with pleasure! Not a moment's flagging; they danced with as much suppleness at 6 in the morning as at the beginning of the evening. And why not, indeed? Such pleasures are harmless, and it is not because a woman has danced much in her girlhood that she should lead her husband a dance, when she has one.

Good scholars are as easy to discover in the recreation ground as in the class room. The morality of a youth is in direct proportion to the delight he takes in play; that of a girl may be measured by her gayety and high spirits.

I shall never forget a young American girl who sat at the same table as myself on board the steamer. The dear child, who was about 17, performed prodigies. I could scarcely believe my eyes, and watched her with never flagging interest. What appetite! What a little table d'hote ogress! I trembled for our supplies and wondered whether the company [illegible] women the English aristocracy counts in its bosom, and that that most Tory and most powerful political association, called the Primrose league, originated with Lady Randolph Churchill, the young and handsome daughter of Mr. Jerome of New York.

That passion for rich marriages, which hangs in the heart of so many young American women, often leads them to disastrous results.

If one may trust one's eyes, American law allows young girls to marry their grandfathers, or at least the contemporaries of these worthies.

It is not rare, I may say it is quite common, to see girls of 18 and 20 married to men of 60 and over.

An American told me that he once made a long journey in the same railway car with an infirm, hoary old sage of 80, who was accompanied by a girl of scarce more than 20. This young woman was strikingly beautiful. My American friend admitted to me that the [illegible] paper is it a joke?

"A bachelor lately advertised for a wife. A typographical error changed his age from 37 to 87; but it made no difference, for he received over 200 applications from ladies ranging from 16 to 60, and all promising love and devotion to the rest of his existence."

Here is another which I extract from a comic paper. The author seems to believe that the American mother does not look on such marriages with displeasure:

"Mother—So you have engaged yourself to Mr. Jones. You must be a goose. He has neither fortune nor position. I know he may one day be well off, his grandfather may leave him part of his fortune, perhaps.

"Daughter—But, mamma, it is his grandfather I am engaged to.

"Mother—Kiss me, my child, you are an angel."

The real American girl admires male qualities in man. The perfumed dandy, dressed in the latest fashion, the "dude," as he is called in the States, is not her admiration. She prefers a little roughness to too much polish. At a large reception given in the New York Union League club in the early part of the year, I asked a young lady who were ten or a dozen young men who did not take a single dance.

"Oh!" she replied with an air of sovereign contempt, "a few young dudes who have been invited by the club just to keep up the dancing; marionettes, you know."

In a country where woman is a spoilt child, petted and made so much of, who can do and dare almost anything, it is strange to find women who are not content with their lot, but demand the complete emancipation of their sex.

American women asking for complete emancipation! It makes one smile.

I was talking one evening with Mrs. Devereux Blake, the chief of the movement—a middle aged lady, of a fluent, agreeable con-

A VOYAGE FOR A GOLDEN IMAGE.

BY E. H. T.

The twentieth day of October came effulgent in its life, health and vigor-giving power, and the passengers as well as officers and crew were impatient for the steamship Eureka to start on her voyage to Alexandria. Upon her list of cabin passengers appeared the name of Benjamin Ord, the well known traveler and explorer, who was going to Egypt in search of a long-hidden treasure.

The lower deck of the vessel was crowded, while above on the promenade deck were a few people who still lingered to bid a final farewell to their friends. On the port side stood Benjamin Ord looking proudly and happily at his fair young daughter, who had come from London with Mrs. Winter to wish him "un bon voyage" and to impress on him once more the importance of a speedy return on account of her graduation in the spring. Mr. Ord having lost his wife when Dorothy was very young, had placed her at Mrs. Winter's Young Ladies Seminary in London to be educated. She was a lovely and lovable girl with golden hair and great blue eyes, and a face that clearly showed a life as free from care and trouble as the field daisy that gleams in the summer sun. Mrs. Winter, on the other hand, appeared the true woman of the world that she was, but with a heart of love and tender watchfulness for her charge.

Once more and for the last time the gong sounded as a signal for all visitors to leave the ship, and within thirty minutes the vessel was moving upon her way.

The voyage to Alexandria was enjoyable, except to those poor mortals upon whom Old Ocean's caresses to the ship proved too much when crossing the Channel, and the time passed uneventfully until the last day on the Mediterranean, when towards sundown as Benjamin Ord sat on deck smoking his manilla, he saw a figure approaching wrapped so completely in a long ulster it was quite impossible to decide whether it was a man or woman, but as the figure advanced, he saw the face of a young man and when within hearing distance, the young man addressed Mr. Ord saying: "This is Mr. Benjamin Ord, I believe? May I take the liberty of asking in what course your journey lies? I am Leonard Brooks of the London Observer and having been privileged to publish many of your interesting articles on Egyptian Travels, have long desired to meet and talk with you about them and now that an opportunity has presented itself, like the other representatives of my profession, embrace it and consider myself the lucky dog."

After a half-hour's conversation the two men found their journeys lay so similarly, that by a few alterations in the course they could pursue their travel together.

That evening Ord told his companion-traveler the object of his search. He was going to Egypt to find the sarcophagus of Rameses II and then to open it (at a risk of his life) and gain possession of a golden image which was worshipped during the reign of the great sovereign.

It was past midnight when the two men went to their state-rooms. Brooks was the first lost in slumbers but they were disturbed by strange dreams, of mummies and golden images, which were broken by the porter knocking with vigilant perseverance upon his door, and announcing the fact that Mr. Ord would breakfast at eight o'clock, and would Mr. Brooks join him.

Leonard Brooks was never before known to appear so soon after rising, but that morning, fifteen minutes later, he was seated with the distinguished traveler.

From this time, until they reached Egypt in safety their doings were so like all the other travelers, that it would add nothing to relate the ordinary instances which occurred. So we will next hear of them at their hotel in Egypt, where they arrived at nine in the evening.

To a little inn, where accommodations were extremely limited, the two men, so different, were driven to share alike. Upon their arrival a supper was served after which Ord said: "And now to work! A small party of English laborers are waiting for me to head them. Tonight, I start in search, under cover of the darkness, to find my goal, and it may be late when I return, so shall not see you then. If you will not think eight o'clock too early, shall order breakfast for two at that time tomorrow."

The thought that Leonard Brooks went to sleep with that night was—what if a party of Arabs should discover Ord's party and his purposes, tonight? Heaven protect them! Then after writing some letters he retired, and the next morning awoke early and took a short walk, returning to the hotel at the appointed hour for breakfast. Eight o'clock passed and yet Ord did not appear. Finally, taking out his watch a little nervously just as the hands indicated nine, Ord presented himself with a wan pale face and sank exhausted into the nearest chair exclaiming: "I have found it!" "What?" cried Brooks eagerly. "The image!" Ord fairly shouted in delight—"and it is now on its way to the British Museum, and look, Brooks!" holding up a roll of parchment, which had been found with the image, "Did you ever see such hieroglyphics? In an hour I shall expect an old sage, who I am told is the only one about us, who can decipher them."

Excited and interested as poor Brooks was, just then he could think of nothing more appealing than that vital factory answers, it was decided that he should see Miss Ord. A silver bell was rung and immediately a maid appeared to summon the young lady.

It must be said that Mr. Brooks cared little for the society of the fair sex, but a few minutes later when the daughter of his newly-made friend entered the room, he felt his heart for the first time, captivated by the dainty creature and wished the image back in Egypt, or anywhere else, that he might remain in the same city to catch the occasional glimpses of Dorothy fate might grant him. But alas for him! In this minute of their meeting he must bid her farewell—perhaps forever—who can tell?

The next day he set out again upon the same journey he had so recently taken only a short time before, and yet how much had happened since then. He then left London with a freeness and pleasure, now it was with the intention of returning as soon as he had safely deposited the old image where he knew its evil power, perhaps over Dorothy, would cease.

As he was leaving his hotel in London that night for the steamer a messenger rushed up to him bearing a telegram from Mrs. Winter telling Mr. Ord to return at once, Dorothy was very ill and her recovery was feared hopeless.

Realizing that speed alone could save her life, and that he was the only one who might save her life, strung every nerve to its highest tension, and the thought seemed to burn its way into his bewildered brain. His reward was the saving of a few hours on the voyage, and reaching Egypt he looked years older than when he left it. Without first seeing Ord or even asking for him, he went to the sarcophagus and replaced the image, then rolled the stone with a sigh of relief and thankfulness.

His next thoughts were for Dorothy's father, so going to the inn, asked for Mr. Ord. The clerk looked amazed and said: "Why, sir, two days after you left us the poor man died very suddenly and strangely too, and we had him buried near the river." So with a few men, Brooks started with a saddened heart in search of his friend's grave. But upon reaching the place where he expected to find it, there was not a trace even of the mound over the grave or the white wooden cross which marked it. One of the men inquired and learned that that region had been visited by a sand storm, which cut and swept everything in its path, and thus part of the image's curse had been fulfilled, that the disturber of its rest should die a sudden death and his bones scattered to all points of the compass.

From a letter written by Benjamin Ord, Brooks learned that he had been appointed guardian of Dorothy, so he at once felt his next best duty was to return to London to break the sad news and take charge of his newly-made ward. And leaving Egypt with a vow never to return, he hastened back to London, and going immediately to Mrs. Winter's found that from the hour he had replaced the image in the sarcophagus, Dorothy had commenced to recover.

During her convalescence Mr. Brooks was a regular visitor and an anxious guardian to this lovely girl alone in the world now, but he determined she should not be alone in the world if he could prevent it.

The old uncle—editor of the London Observer, with whom Leonard was a great favorite, died while on a trip to the south of France for his health, leaving Leonard a handsome fortune and the editorship of the Observer, so now he felt his position worthy of asking for Dorothy's love. A few weeks later many of the London fashionable mammas were surprised to read the following startling announcement in one of the daily papers:

FROM SCHOOL ROOM TO THE ALTAR.

The marriage of Mr. Leonard Brooks to Miss Dorothy Ord, daughter of the late Benjamin Ord, is said to take place in June at the residence of Mrs. Henry Winter from whose seminary Miss Ord graduated with high honors this spring. The wedding will be a very quiet affair as Miss Ord is in mourning for her father, who died suddenly in Egypt last March. It is believed that the young couple will travel extensively, and finally settle at Mr. Brooks's charming London home, which is now being remodelled for the reception of its new mistress within its spacious walls.

That Fanwood Sunday Row.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—It appears in The Press that Mr. Adams was badly wounded last Sunday, Dec. 10. But in whose house?

It appears he went to a colored man's house with the intent to raise a fight, and succeeded in driving them out of doors, and swore he would kill that big nigger. The colored man's wife called for assistance. Soon after, the fight commenced. Finally Adams procured a post axe, but in the fight it was taken from him and he was struck with a club, by a person to me unknown. This happened in Fanwood township, and the colored man's name is Israel Willis.

MARRIED TEN YEARS.

Anniversary of the Wedding of Mr. Newton R. Smalley.

Mr. and Mrs. Newton R. Smalley celebrated the tenth anniversary of their wedding at their residence, 61 Grandview avenue, North Plainfield, Thursday.

The host and hostess entertained their guests in a most pleasant way and all spent an enjoyable evening. Mr. Smalley was kept busy for a time in answering the door bell by the acts of practical jokers, who sent packages containing tin whistles and articles of like value. The small boy messenger in each case demanded a munificent reward for the errand.

The guests included: Mr. and Mrs. Horace J. Martin, Mr. and Mrs. George F. Randolph, Miss Louie Smalley, Harry McDonald, Mr. and Mrs. William Day, Mr. and Mrs. D. W. King, Attorney George W. DeMeza, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Strohaw, Mr. and Mrs. Smith, William McLoughlin, R. K. Spencer, Jed M. Smalley, Mrs. Grifson, Charles Sebring, Mr. and Mrs. A. I. Smalley, Miss Irving of Westfield, Miss Phoebe Mills, John McLoughlin, George Bird, Miss Lena Smalley and Miss May McLoughlin.

There were many handsome gifts. The dancing was to Sam Frazee's excellent music.

GENEROUS COAL MAN.

He Buys a New Stove for the Man Whose Home His Explosive Black Diamonds Damaged.

The coal dealer from whom William Crook bought his last lot of coal has given him a handsome new parlor stove.

As was reported exclusively in The Press of last evening, Crook's stove was completely shattered by the explosion of a cartridge which also damaged the walls and nearly caused the death of a child.

Although the blame could not be placed it is supposed that the cartridge was one from the mines which had been brought on with the coal. The chances of such a cartridge's enduring the rough handling on the way and reaching the consumer's stove unexploded are very slight.

THOROUGHLY SOUND INSTITUTION.

Excellent Officials Elected After a Period of Extraordinary Prosperity.

A meeting of the Managers of the Dime Savings Institution was held Tuesday evening, at which time the regular semi-annual interest declaration was made.

The treasurer reported that the Institution had passed through the late financial panic without the loss of a dollar on any investment.

J. F. Hubbard was elected Vice-president in place of the late William White, and Jeremiah Manning was elected to fill the vacancy on the Investment Committee in Mr. White's place.

The vacancy on the Auditing Committee, caused by the death of the late Francis H. Gardner, was filled by electing George W. Rockfellow.

An Education and a Delight.

The world now recognizes the Columbian Exposition as one of the most stupendous of educational influences, especially for the young. Very early in the day its originators and its builders, decided to avoid all such sensational features as would merely arouse wonder, without leading to inquiry and improvement of the mind. The choice of the attractions offered by all the nations and peoples of the world, the classification of the exhibits, and the work of organization, from first to last, were all guided by this motive, a determination to present a great object lesson to the world in its departments of art, science, industry, intellect, and religion.

But in order that education should derive the greatest advantage from this storehouse of human knowledge, a textbook is necessary, and fortunately there is one work which has clearly earned its title to that distinction. The Book of the Fair, by Hubert Howe Bancroft (The Bancroft Company, Publishers, Auditorium Building, Chicago), is for all educational purposes better than the Fair itself, just as one can learn more from a good book on geology than from even the everlasting hills. The Book of the Fair presents the entire Exposition within reasonable limits, in a clear and condensed manner, and in permanent form. He who has this book has the Fair always with him, and may draw from it as from a living spring of learning.

We understand that there is an opportunity for a few more competent persons to canvass for the superb book, and we know of no more praiseworthy or profitable occupation. Those interested can write to Rhule, Thomas & Co., 24 Park place, New York City.

You'll Find Such, Even in Plainfield.

DIED FOR HIS FAMILY.

Out of Work and Despondent, John Grobiensky Killed Himself for the Sake of the Lodge Insurance His Wife Will Get.

John Grobiensky was found dead in his bed at his home, 237 Manson place, Friday morning. He leaves a wife and two small children. For two months he has been out of work at his trade of machinist and had recently been despondent. He was formerly employed in the Potter Press Works, and had been seeking work last week in New York, Philadelphia and Newark without success.

A short note in German addressed to his wife was found in a book. It stated that he had given up the struggle and intended taking morphine.

Grobiensky retired last night as usual and no sound was heard from him during the night. His wife awoke this morning and found him apparently dead, although the body was still warm.

She brought Dr. Simpson of Liberty street to the house. The doctor found the man dead, and decided that the cause was poison. He locked the room up and sent the key to Chief Grant. The county physician was notified by telephone from the office of The Press at 9:45

County Physician Reilly came this afternoon and issued a burial permit. Undertaker Casey took charge of the remains.

Grobiensky was a member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen, and his wife will receive $2,000 from that order. A few days ago he started a discussion as to whether the death benefit was payable in a case of suicide, and probably decided to kill himself when he was told that it was.

THE FIRE WAS FAR AWAY.

Last Night's Alarm Caused by a Blaze at Scotch Plains.

An alarm of fire was rung from box 12 by Officer Cooney at 3 on Thursday. He had seen a blaze in the east and supposed there was a fire in the vicinity of Front and Church streets. An alarm was also sent in to the borough headquarters.

Both fire departments turned out with the apparatus and started in that direction. By this time it was found that the fire was a considerable distance away, and all but Hose No. 2 turned back. The borough firemen went as far as the city limits.

Chief Engineer Doane drove on and found that the blaze was in J. R. Brittan's livery stables at Scotch Plains. The Chief was able to assist the local firemen in saving adjoining buildings, although they had arrived too late to save the contents of the barn.

Flames were first discovered by Miss Emma Clark who awoke her brothers Fred and George. She hastened to Wm. Lowe's hotel near the barn and aroused the proprietor. By this time the whole building was in flames.

In the barn were a fine Jersey cow, with calf five weeks old, a trotting horse, three wagons, a sleigh, four tons of hay, a large quantity of corn, a lot of cabbages, tools and harness.

The rear of Lowe's hotel took fire and was badly blistered and the roof was burned through in several places. Mr Lowe had a trifling insurance on the stock, but nothing can repay him for the loss of his mare, which he had raised and trained himself.

No one was home at the time but the proprietor and his little brother-in-law, the women of the family being away.

The origin of the fire has not been ascertained, but was probably the result of accident and not design.

After the fire Mr. Low opened his house for the benefit of the firemen, who greatly appreciated his action on account of the severe cold.

The loss to Mr. Low is about $2,000. An insurance of $600 on the stock had been placed through VanBuren & Timpson, of Plainfield.

HIS SIGHT ENDANGERED.

Grocery Clerk Stryker Mutilates an Eye by Too Much Hustling.

John G. Stryker, of 434 West Sixth street, received a painful injury to his eye Tuesday evening. He is the senior clerk in Rockfellow's grocery, and was delivering orders at the time. He entered the house of General Negley at West Seventh street and Plainfield avenue, and on coming out hastily jumped into his wagon, not thinking of a pair of skids which he had left therein. The end of one of these struck one of his eyes and injured it so that it is feared he may lose the sight of it.

The Drowning an Accident.

It is now the general opinion in Bound Brook that the drowning of Barney Farmer, whose body was found in Green brook Wednesday, was accidental.

As there was none of the money which he had received from the sale of several head of cattle in his pockets, it was thought at first that the milkman had

J. W. Reinhart, Just Home from Europe, Talks About the Great Road of Which He Is President—Success of His Mission Abroad.

J. W. Reinhart, of Netherwood, President of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railroad Company, who returned from Europe on the Teutonic, which arrived late Thursday, gave the following statement in regard to the finances of the company:

"The interest on the general mortgage bonds of the Atchison Company due Jan 1 will be paid. It seems hardly necessary to make this statement, because doubts as to its payment have, in my judgment, been created solely by speculators who have no substantial interest in the property. The Atchison Company, owing to the magnitude of its system, has large payments to make from time to time, and I have noted that whenever operators for the short account have discovered the dates of these payments they have circulated reports calculated to throw doubt upon the ability of the company to meet them. The public knows that since the reorganization the Atchison has met all of its obligations promptly and every statement I have made in relation to such payments before they matured have been confirmed by the fact."

As to his mission abroad, Mr. Reinhart said: "It has been a success in every respect." When asked as to the negotiations he had made in behalf of the company, he declined to give particulars. He said, however: "When it is considered that the Atchison system operates 10,000 miles of railroad, which earn upward of $50,000,000 a year, its floating indebtedness must appear to be infinitesimal. It should be borne in mind that when the Atchison Company acquired the St. Louis and San Francisco Railroad it assumed its floating debt of about $4,100,000, and also the unsecured obligations of the Colorado Midland Railroad Company. We have not as yet experienced any difficulty in financing these obligations. As to the stock of our own company, all but $26,000,000 of the $103,000,000 outstanding is held by bondholders, who, in my judgment, will not part with it in any circumstances. The $26,000,000 of floating stock was issued by the company under the contract which resulted in the acquisition of the St. Louis and San Francisco system, before the present management was placed in charge. In my judgment this stock is practically all that there is available for speculative purposes."

A PLAINFIELDER'S GREAT WORK.

John Ward Stimson's Consecration to the Cause of Vital Art Culture.

A recent number of the Revue des Arts Decoratifs has some pretty good things to say about the Institute for Artist Artisans of New York conducted by John Ward Stimson, of this city. It says of that instructor: "Mr. Stimson has all his life been an opponent of servile imitation of foreign art, as well as of affectation or mannerism in art. He has sought to impress decorative art with a certain stamp of originality. His method is excellent, for it consists in leading artists to recognize for themselves the principles of beauty. It develops in them judgment, imagination, and sentiment, and finally teaches them to prefer to create for themselves rather than chain themselves to servile and mechanical imitation. All intelligent spirits in America have comprehended that the only way to prevent a decadence of national industry was to assure it superiority in conception and quality over foreign products. In order to protect American artists against foreigners it is necessary to give them qualities to which the latter cannot lay claim. Mr. Stimson has consecrated body and soul to this work. His ideas begin to diffuse themselves. It is evident that the universal exposition in Chicago will create a movement of opinion in their favor, very important. We do not doubt that this movement of opinion will result in certain useful foundations. We should not be astonished, for instance, to see founded a university of applied arts, which will have upon the national artistic education a most happy influence. Taste will purify itself and despise the present works that are simply imitative."

THE TRUTH OF THAT REPORT.

Here Is the Black and White Official Councilmanic Utterance Which the Council's Clerk Has So Widely Perverted.

The spectacle presented by the ungrateful City Clerk in his infamous and continued attacks on the Councilmen at whose crib he has so long been fattening, must be a pleasant one for himself to contemplate in his lucid intervals. The Clerk has through his organ so infamously misrepresented the facts of the committee's report on the bill board question, that The Press complies with the request of many to publish the true report in full. Those who have been following the [illegible] may now see for themselves just what a shameful distortion of his own official record the City Clerk has been guilty of. His recent display of venom has been from his same old motives—spite, envy and malice. The latest spasm is the result of the frustration of his self-[illegible], his failure to get promise of reappointment, and his enforced withdrawal from the race for the City Clerkship of next year. Here is the true report on the bill-board matter, as unanimously adopted by the Common Council which the Council's Clerk has so violently traduced:

To the Honorable the Common Council of the City of Plainfield:

GENTLEMEN:—Your Committee on Laws and Ordinances, to whom was referred the petitions of the Ministers Association and of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and the ordinance respecting the licensing of bill posters, would respectfully report that they have given the same careful consideration and have caused inquiry to be made in numerous cities throughout the State respecting similar ordinances. Answers have been received from Elizabeth, New Brunswick, Jersey City, Morristown, Orange and Rahway. In only two of these cities, viz: Jersey City and Morristown, are bill posters licensed, and in none is there an ordinance attempting in any manner to prevent the posting of obscene or indecent posters. The laws of the State (Section 44 of the Crimes Act), fully cover all that the ordinance herewith returned seeks to prevent, in that it makes the offence a crime against the State and punishes any violation of its provisions, upon conviction, with imprisonment for one year or a fine of $1,000. This is a more severe and drastic remedy than can be inflicted by any ordinance this Council can pass and is undoubtedly the reason for the absence of similar ordinances in other cities, and your committee deems it unwise to pass such an ordinance, when the penalty for its violation, under the limitations of our charter, is less than the penalty already provided by law. That the offences complained of in the petitions have occurred, lies not in the fact that there is no ordinance upon our books seeking to prevent the same, but rather that the laws of the State have not been invoked to punish the offenders.

Your Committee is also of opinion, that, if the Council sees fit to pass an ordinance upon this subject, it should include the distribution as well as the posting of bills, etc. Your committee would state that all the bill boards at present in the city are owned and controlled by one person, who has appeared before the committee and given his word that no objectionable poster will hereafter be allowed upon the boards owned by him, and the high character and standing of this gentleman and the ample remedy provided by the State law, if invoked, are, in the opinion of your committee, a safeguard against the abuse of the privileges of posting, etc., without further action by the Council, and we therefore return the ordinance with a recommendation that it be laid upon the table.

Respectfully submitted,
WM. G. E. SEE,
CHAS. J. FISK,
Com. on Laws and Ordinances.

The Press is glad that the Plainfield Democrats are getting together.

The Jersey Central Railroad Company is doing a most commendable work in endeavoring to break up the abuse of the commutation-ticket system. The use of a commutation ticket by anyone else but its purchaser is an injustice to regular commuters and a fraud on a public-spirited and honorable corporation. Illegal traffic in these tickets has become a great evil among some Plainfielders, and The Press is glad to see the dishonesty detected and deservedly punished.

Congressman Dunn has introduced a bill directing the Secretary of the Navy to adjust and finally settle the accounts between the Samuel L. Moore and Sons' Company, of Elizabeth, and the Navy Department, arising out of the contract for the construction of the steel practice vessel Bancroft. The company claims $45,000 for additional speed developed by the Bancroft, at the rate of $5,000 for every quarter knot above the contract stipulation. Mr. Dunn is certainly looking after the interests of his people at home.

Word comes from Congress that the entire New Jersey delegation, with the exception of Mr. Cornish, is now said to be arrayed against the new tariff bill. Mr. Dunn of this district went so far as to say yesterday that he could not expect to be returned if he voted for the bill as it stands at present. Careful inquiry shows, however, that when the bill comes to a vote a handsome Democratic majority will be found for it. When the measure goes to the Senate there may be some combinations which will effect changes, but in the House the bill will pass substantially as it has been reported.

The energy of such a man as Mayor Saunders is sure to carry to successful consummation the plan first presented to the public through these columns, of establishing a special fund to relieve the needy poor by giving them employment on a great public improvement like the macadamizing of Grove street. This is [illegible] charity intelligently directed. Mayor Saunders truly says that "To provide useful work for the unemployed is a higher duty and a more commendable charity than to give alms to the idle poor." The meeting he calls for deserves the personal attendance of every high minded, thoughtful and earnest citizen.

The flags on the Plainfield public schools droop at half mast, for upon their head death has set its seal. The passing away of George H. Babcock is a sorrow to every heart, and a loss to financial, educational and religious interests. George H. Babcock was one of the best citizens because his energies were devoted to the betterment of his commonwealth. Even on his deathbed he proved himself one of Plainfield's best friends, by making provision for the fulfilment of those plans which mean so much for the progress of the town. His large wealth he used as a means for developing local interests and putting Plainfield in advance of its times. Riches under his control were a blessing, and he was a beneficent guardian of the public weal.

Plainfield, which supports its newspapers properly, will be interested in the extraordinary revelations as to the newspaper business in the State of Washington, made in a recent issue of the Tacoma News. The positive statement is made that "There is not a city of this State which supports its daily papers, not one." One case is cited where a young man from a Pennsylvania city went to Washington a few years ago with a certified check for $350,000, and sank practically the whole amount in publishing a newspaper. A lawyer and a financier in the same town lost $110,000 in another newspaper before they decided to abandon the enterprise. A third case is mentioned, where a similar experiment cost another brace of young men over $100,000. The reason given for these sacrifices is the pride of the sufferers in the reputation of their city. As one of the victims used to say, "My city would suffer in name, fame, and standing among the cities of the country if I should cease to support this enterprise". Indeed, The News goes so far as to declare that "if the newspaper proprietors of the State were to unite in an agreement that they would give the people only the sort of newspapers they paid for, there is not a city from Idaho to the ocean that would not lose caste and credit within a week; the whole State would suffer the most severe blow it could feel." There are truly astonishing revelations, but there is a ring of sincerity about them.

PRACTICAL RELIEF FOR THE POOR.

THE COMBINATION PLAN ADVOCATED BY MAYOR SAUNDERS.

Proposition to Give Needy Men Employment on Macadamizing Grove Street—North Plainfield Citizens Urged to Meet with the Borough Council and Advise in the Matter.

MAYOR AND COUNCIL OF THE BOROUGH OF NORTH PLAINFIELD.

Citizens, taxpayers and all persons interested in the welfare of the borough and in providing work for the unemployed are urgently requested to attend a special public meeting of the Borough Council to be held in Spencer's Hall, Somerset street, on Friday next, December 22, at 8 p. m. The purpose of this meeting is to consider and determine whether or not it is best in the interests of the citizens and taxpayers to inaugurate and carry to completion during this winter the grading of Grove street from Greenbrook road to the mountain.

Grove street is one of the most important highways of the borough. It is centrally located, running parallel with Somerset street, and if maintained in good condition it would be the widest and most popular highway connecting the mountain roads with Front street, Plainfield. Now that the electric railroad is on Somerset street it becomes almost a necessity that a parallel avenue of traffic be provided. This will relieve Somerset street and at the same time provide a means by which horses that are not accustomed to the trolley may be driven with safety through the borough.

Grove street is in excellent condition at all points, except between Greenbrook road and the mountain. This portion of the street was graded several years ago, and put in condition so that the borough accepted it. Before acceptance the expense of grading was duly assessed upon property owners directly benefited, and they have now a right to ask that the borough authorities maintain the street in proper shape. As it is at present the street has been practically destroyed by erosion from floods so that it is impassable. Stony brook which crosses Grove street has changed its course to such an extent that the water tends to undermine the bridge abutment. During heavy rains the water from the brook overflows its banks near the bridge so that that portion of Grove street between Stony brook and Greenbrook road will eventually be flooded. It is proposed to give Stony brook its true direction of flow by deflecting the course of the water a short distance above the bridge.

It appears that this work if done under ordinary circumstances would cost about $3,000. There are no funds available for the purpose, as the money which the Council is authorized to expend is only such as may have been voted by the people for road work. The sum of $2,500 voted last year for this purpose has been expended in macadamizing and other improvements. The streets of the borough are now in better condition than ever before, as nearly all of the main thoroughfares are macadamized. It seems natural therefore that we might ask that a portion of next year's appropriation be devoted to the Grove street improvement.

Notwithstanding the fact that we have no money for road work, yet the present time seems to me to be so opportune for public work of this kind that I am disposed to advise that a small sum of money, say not to exceed $800, be borrowed on a note of the borough in anticipation of approval by the people next year. By doing this work now we may avail ourselves of assistance which can be procured because of the hard times and the charitable disposition of many people who are seeking to aid the poor by providing work. I have already received assurance that all the stone and earth for filling, the engineering, superintendence and nearly half the labor cost of the work will be given free. It is expected that we will receive still further contributions in labor.

The figures in the case are as follows:

Estimated cost of work in carts (12 one horse carts at $2.25 per day for 50 days)		$1,350.00
Proposed appropriation by Council	$700.00
Contribution of two carts by Smalley Bros	$225.00
Total amount contributed		$925.00
Balance, cartage expense		$425.00
Estimated cost of the work in labor	$1,500.00
Contributions already assured	$400.00
Balance, labor		$1,100.00

I have estimated that a cart, horse and driver can be procured during the months of January and February for $2.25 per day, and it is proposed to ask the property owners who may be directly benefited by this improvement to contribute one, two or three carts for a term of, say 50 working days.

For further contributions in labor it is proposed to issue printed cards as follows:

To the Mayor of North Plainfield:

I (or we) will contribute $1.00 per day for .... days toward the wages of ...., provided he renders satisfactory service on public work. On receipt of his time duly certified by you, I (or we) will pay this amount to the Borough of North Plainfield.

Signed ....

We have now to face the fact that here is an important piece of public work which must be done in the near future. By doing it now we can get more than half of it done for nothing, and can at the UNITED DEMOCRACY A SUCCESS.

UNDER THIS FLAG, PLAINFIELD JEFFERSONIANS HAVE A FUTURE.

Plan of Organization Adopted, and Sentiment London Selected—Each Ward to Have an Association, and the Four to Combine in One—Permanent Headquarters Next.

The Democratic voters of this city were called together in the Democratic committee rooms, on Tuesday, for the purpose of perfecting a permanent organization. The party was well represented, and the meeting was most harmonious. Councilman V. L. Frame called the meeting to order, and served as chairman. Timothy McCarthy was secretary.

The chairman asked for the reading of the report of the committee on organization. It was adopted with slight amendments, as follows:

Mr. Chairman and Democrats of the City of Plainfield, Your committee which was appointed the latter part of last November to take steps towards the reorganization of the Democratic Association of this city, have met, and after an exchange of opinions and consultations with the members of their party from their respective wards, beg leave to report the following:

1. That the said association shall be named the Democratic Association of the City of Plainfield, New Jersey.

2. That the said Association shall be composed of four ward organizations and a committee which shall be called the Democratic City Executive Committee.

3. That the said City Executive Committee shall be made up of two members from each ward association.

4. That the members of said committee shall be elected yearly at the city ward primaries.

5. That the officers of said City Executive Committee shall be considered as the acting officers of said association.

6. That said City Executive Committee shall take general charge of all elections occurring during their respective terms of office.

This committee recommends that after the election of said City Executive Committee, they, the said City Executive Committee, take steps immediately towards securing permanent headquarters, and that after such headquarters have been secured the said City Executive Committee take immediate steps toward the forming of ward organizations.

Ira G. Hulbert, Chairman.
William Gloak,
Constantine F. Balli,
Frank Vorhllas,
Peter Flynn, Jr.,
William O'Connor,
John J. Kenney.

The City Executive Committee decided on is: First Ward—H. B. Ely, W. L. Gloak. Second Ward—C. F. Balli, D. G. Ivins. Third Ward—G. A. Booth, James Clark. Fourth Ward—P. Flynn, Jr., P. Revelle.

THEY ENJOY LIFE AND DO GOOD.

These Merry Young People Have a Knack of Spreading Sunshine and Dispensing Sobriety.

The first regular sociable of the Friendship Social Club was held in the Sons of Temperance rooms in the Stelle building last Monday; and the entertainment which consisted principally of vocal and instrumental music, was very largely attended. Both the playing and singing were loudly applauded, and encores were the order of the evening. The programme follows:

Overture—
Messrs. Zeiss, Spencer and M. Angleman
Clothes Pin Drill... Miss E. Nash and assistants
Song .... Jessie Ayers
"How to Cure a Growler"—
Miss A. V. Scribner and Mr. Hartpence
Vocal Music .... Zeiss and Spencer
Recitation .... W. R. Mattox
"Mr. Snubblegrass's Courtship"—
Miss Mary Clum, W. Mattox, W. Wyckoff

T. Mattox, Bertha Clum and Laura Radin
Song .... Edna Clum
Duet .... E. Angleman and Laura Radin
Recitation .... T. Mattox
Recitation—"Kate Shelly" .... Bertha Clum
Music .... Zeiss, Spencer and Angleman

The club was organized about a month ago, and now has twenty-three members. Its object is to furnish and promote social amusement for the members, and it is also identified with the temperance cause. The officers are:

President—W. Mattox.
Vice-president—Wm. Wyckoff.
Secretary—S. R. Scribner.
Treasurer—Mrs. S. A. Mattox.

THE SCHOOL BOARD MEMORIALIZES.

Worthy Tribute by Educational Fathers to the Late George H. Babcock.

A special meeting of the School Board was held Monday afternoon at 5:30. The members present were Dr. Probasco, Mr. Finch, Mr. Lounsbury and Dr. Richardson. Dr. Probasco was made President pro tem. The following memorial was adopted by the Board:

The Board of Education having learned with deep sorrow of the death of its President, George H. Babcock, adopts the following resolutions:

That while expressing our submission to an all-wise Providence, we feel the death a grievous loss to the community in all its interests, and especially to the cause of education in this city. A member of this Board for eight years, and its President for the last two years, Mr. Babcock had always shown a most wise and generous interest in the welfare of our schools. Their continuous prosperity has been due in no small measure to his broad, comprehensive and practical judgment. His failing health of the past year, though preventing his attendance at some meetings of the Board, could not interrupt or diminish his interest in a cause to which he had shown so much devotion.

Resolved, That in token of respect, and of our public loss, the schools of the city be closed on the day when the funeral services are held.

Resolved, That these resolutions be engrossed on our minutes, and that a copy be sent with expressions of our deep sympathy, to the bereaved household.

THE CITIZENS' ORGANIZED AID.

THAT'S THE NAME DECIDED ON BY THE CHARITY COUNCIL.

Further Progress Made in the Plan that Relief Enterprise—Leading Citizens Appointed on Important Committees, and a Name Provided for the Society.

The Council of the Charity Organization of Plainfield met in the lecture room of the Crescent Avenue church on Tuesday. President Mason W. Tyler called the meeting to order shortly after 8, and took the chair. The minutes of the last meeting were read by the secretary and approved.

The committee on revising the constitution reported. Mrs. H. B. Opdyke read the constitution as revised. It was similar to that of the New York Charities Organization, with the omission of several committees unnecessary in a city the size of Plainfield. It suggested a change of name to "The Citizens' Organized Aid Association of Plainfield and North Plainfield", and provided for the details of membership, appointments of committees and various other necessary matters. By-laws for the central council to be formed in accordance with the new constitution were also presented. The report was accepted.

Mayor Gilbert proposed that the adoption of the constitution be postponed to some future meeting. In the meantime, he thought, the Committee on Printing could have the proposed constitution printed and copies sent to the persons interested so that the various articles could be thoroughly criticised before the time for adoption.

Dr. Murray said that the constitution should be adopted at that meeting, so at any future meeting a quorum of ten could easily change any unsatisfactory articles. The society should have laws to start work by, and so learn by experience whether any change from the New York plan would be advisable.

Mayor Gilbert spoke of the difficulties of amending a constitution, once it were adopted, and thought an opportunity for examination of its measures should be granted. His motion to have the Printing Committee circulate copies of it was carried.

The committee on renting an office for the Council reported the engagement of the room occupied by the Boys Club, on the corner of Park and North avenues.

The Committee on Printing announced their intention of issuing a circular describing the aims of the society, and also "householders' tickets".

On motion of Mayor Gilbert it was decided that the president appoint such committees as were named in the constitution proposed by the Revising Committee, so that the work might be started at once.

The following were named:

Committee on Finances and Membership—C. W. McCutchen, H. P. Reynolds, Mrs. Cox, Mrs. J. K. Myers, J. M. Whiton.

On Co-operation—Mrs. Dexter Tiffany, Mrs. F. O. Mead, Mrs. A. Gilbert.

On Legal Matters—Rowland Cox, Isaac L. Miller, S. Huntington.

On Printing—H. B. Newhall, Miss Edith R. Leonard, H. P. Reynolds.

On Employment—Mrs. H. B. Opdyke, Walter McGee, Mrs. Haviland, Dr. Murray.

On the Arrangement of Districts—The Rev. G. K. Newell, Miss Tweedy, Mrs. J. K. Myers.

The Committee on Vacancies reported the appointment of the following representatives:

Muhlenberg Hospital—George R. Goddard.
Y. W. C. T. U.—Miss Amy Green.
Provident Savings System—Miss F. Tweedy.
First Church of Christ—The Rev. Benjamin W. Hand.
Plymouth Brethren—Dr. Edward Rushmore.
Hicksite Friends—Mrs. A. M. Powell.
First M. E. Church—Mrs. F. M. French.
Grace M. E. Church—H. K. Carroll, LL. D.
At Large—David F. Hall, Walter G. Haviland, Mrs. Lawrence Myers, the Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, the Rev. E. M. Rodman, the Rev. Charles E. Barnes, the Rev. William R. Richards.

The committee recommended that Trinity Reformed church, the German Reformed church, Mt. Olive Baptist church, the Woman's Relief Corps, G. A. R., and the Emmanuel Baptist church be asked to select representatives in the Council.

Mrs. H. A. Pope having declined to serve from the First Presbyterian church, H. B. Opdyke was appointed in her place.

On motion the Treasurer was empowered to audit and pay bills until the adoption of a revised constitution. He had $65 on hand.

Mrs. Opdyke said that the name of the Society should be permanently decided on before the printing of circulars and tickets. A motion that the name be changed to "The Citizens' Organized Aid Association of Plainfield and North Plainfield", as Article I of the proposed constitution suggested, was carried.

Dr. Murray moved that a meeting of the Council be held next Tuesday evening at the same place. The motion was carried, and the meeting adjourned.

In Memoriam.

Saturday afternoon, Dec. 16, between the hours of 4 and 5, a happy home was saddened by the untimely death of the eldest son, a boy of sixteen. Death, and under any circumstances, was particularly sorrowful in this instance as it resulted from a contagious disease and the grief-stricken mother and father were denied the consolation of friends. Neither were the relatives and friends allowed to look upon the dear, dead face.

JOLLY NIGHT WITH THE RED MEN.

Plainfield Indians Impersonate Entertaining Characters, and Give a Supper and Dance.

The entertainment given by the Miantonomah Dramatic Company on Tuesday was attended by the largest audience that ever assembled in Red Men's Hall. There was no unoccupied standing room inside, and the balconies and the hall outside were packed.

The first part of the programme was an original farce entitled "Gilhooly's Reception to Lord Mandeville".

The cast was:

Daniel Gilhooly	W. A. Westphal
Mrs. Gilhooly	Mrs. Fred. Canfield
Jacob Dunderbeck	John H. Carney
Mrs. Dunderbeck	Miss Lillie Davery
Col. Bill Scoot	E. H. Neal
Mrs. Scoot	Mrs. W. A. Westphal
Wanamaker	John Holland
Mrs. Wanamaker	Miss Ella Schring
Cleveland	Charles L. Hossman
Mrs. Cleveland	Mrs. William Newcorn
Lord McAllister	William Newcorn
Josephus Johnson	W. A. Kline
Dinah Westle	Mrs. W. A. Kline

Gilhooly, a retired grocer who is led into society by his wife, and his friend Dunderbeck, caused much amusement by their efforts to disguise their lowly origin. During the reception the members of the company entertained the audience with the following programme:

Piano Solo	Mrs. Canfield
Recitation	E. H. Neal
Solo	Mrs. E. H. Neal
Remarks of welcome	W. A. Westphal
Duet	Mrs. Newcorn and Miss Davery
German Combination	J. H. Carney
Song	John Holland

John H. Carney was especially applauded for his quaint and original remarks on the animals of Plainfield.

The close of the farce was a tableau which followed the reappearance of Gilhooly and Dunderbeck in their natural state after a trip outside during a quiet part of the reception.

The second part was a short comedy full of humor. The parts were:

Hans Kroemmeyer	J. H. Carney
The Landlord	E. H. Neal
The Groom	W. A. Westphal
The Boarder	W. A. Newcorn
Mrs. Kroemmeyer	Miss Davery
Assistant	William Kline
Coroner	C. L. Hossman

The operations of Shoemaker Kroemmeyer and his profitable "deals" were well presented and fully enjoyed.

Following the entertainment, refreshments were served. The affair closed with a dance.

DEAR OLD MOTHER GOOSE.

She Develops Most Capable Devotees in Baptist Christian Endeavorers.

An entertainment realized $26 for the Junior Christian Endeavor Society of the First Baptist church Tuesday night.

The programme began with a "Rathskinized School" in which Miss Elsie Brokaw was the teacher, and Walter Sherwin, Charles Wilson and the Misses Miriam Sherwin, Ella Serrell and Miriam Thompson were scholars. A song entitled "Old Melodies" was given by Misses Delia Grant and Edna Smith.

A Mother Goose entertainment followed. Those who participated were: Raymond Garver, Fred Bonny, Walter Sherwin, Arthur Denton, Edward Neal, Charles Wilson, Larry Bennett and Misses Elsie Brokaw, Miriam Sherwin, Bessie Wilson, Hattie French, Delia Grant, Edna Smith, May Batchelor and May Serrell.

The parts were well taken and evidenced careful management by Norman Probasco, Superintendent of the Society. Part of the money will be divided among the Baptist Missions, the Muhlenberg Hospital and the Children's Home.

To Celebrate Crusaders' Day.

Dec. 23 is the twentieth anniversary of the Crusade of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

The National President and officers have sent out a call requesting all unions to celebrate the day, to seek a renewal of the Crusade spirit for our members, and to prayerfully reach out for new members.

In accordance with this call the Union of this city will hold Crusade meetings Saturday evening at their rooms on Watchung avenue, and on Sunday at 4 p. m. All are cordially invited to be present.

The President especially desires to meet, at these meetings, those members of the Union to whom she is as yet a stranger.

We are well aware that these days are very full, and upon first thought this call seems inopportune. If "by their fruits ye shall know them" be applied to this organization, the outgrowth of the crusade, then we must say God chose His own time and put it into the hearts of the women to do that which cost them so dearly, and which has passed into history as one of the most remarkable events of the nineteenth century. The spirit of the crusaders and of Christmas tide are one and the same.

We shudder now over the records of witchcraft and slavery. So before another twenty years roll by all will shudder over a legalized saloon, and wonder that all Christians were not arrayed against it as one man.

Church Gifts for the Poor.

The regular Christmas Sunday-school entertainment in the Crescent Avenue church will be held Friday, Dec. 22. The primary class entertainment will be at 3:30 and the main school function at 8 in the chapel. Parents and friends are cordially invited to attend.

FORGERY.

Friday Vail's Signature Successfully Imitated.

Aaron E. Vail, known as Friday Vail, was astounded on Wednesday to find his City Bank account overdrawn by $55. On investigation it was found that two checks had been forged to that amount, payable to Frederick C. Langer. The forgeries were surprisingly clever, to pass undetected, even in the rush of business at the close of the year. Investigation is in progress.

Mr. Vail lives on Greenbrook road, back of Dunellen, and was a North Plainfield Town Committeeman.

Noble Grand Charles DeGraw.

Queen City Lodge, No. 236, I. O. O. F., held their semi-annual election of officers last Monday. Over fifty members were present. The following were chosen:

Noble Grand—C. W. DeGraw.
Vice Grand—J. R. Mosher.
Recording Secretary—Lewis R. Blackford.
Permanent Secretary—Gilbert VanNess.
Treasurer—J. P. Ellis.

New Officers for Plainfield.

Plainfield Lodge, No. 44, I. O. O. F., met in the lodge rooms last Monday and elected the following officers:

N. G.—S. H. Schlaff.
V. G.—E. Kersting.
R. S.—Joseph Shepherd.
P. S.—E. H. Bird.
Treasurer—Thomas Young.

The newly-elected officers will be installed at the meeting early in January.

A Visit to Jerusalem.

An installation of the officers elected in Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, F. and A. M., last evening, will take place the evening of January 2. Invitations are issued, and the event will be socially delightful.

Commutation Caught.

A number of the Plainfielders who buy commutation tickets and sell rides to their friends—a practice against which The Press has frequently warned the amateur scalpers—have at last come to grief.

A Central Railroad detective has been quietly investigating during the past month, and on Monday eleven commutation cards were taken up. Others who have been trading in tickets fear a like result if they try to use them.

Plainfield vs. Sheet Brooks.

A pigeon match will be shot off between Charles Smith of Plainfield, better known as "Dutchey", and Noel Apgar, of Evona, in Norfolk, Va., Jan. 18, in the new building of the Ariel Athletic Club. Apgar is backed by the Norfolk sportsmen. The match is for $200 a side and the conditions are 100 birds, American Association rules to govern. The event will probably draw a representative crowd of sportsmen to Norfolk Jan. 18.

TOWNSEND'S Marble & Granite Works,

30 SOMERSET STREET,

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

If you have not engaged your work, I should be pleased to do it for you.

I buy only first-class Marble and Granite and do not sell unless at prices that will enable me to put up the work with credit to myself and justice to the parties purchasing.

I employ no agents and therefore am enabled to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customer, of the commission generally paid to agents.

I am under a very small expense in running my shop, myself and my son doing the larger portion of the work, and we personally attend to the setting of all work, and look upon business in this light, that Good Work and Square Dealing, at Fair Prices, is a standing advertisement for my business, which will tend to build up trade, and I feel safe to warrant that no dealer can sell you the same work and material any cheaper than I can.

Hoping to be favored with your patronage, I am yours respectfully,

J. E. TOWNSEND,
Manager. 8 11 tf

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—The newly-elected city officers have been sworn in.

—The public schools will close Friday for the usual holiday vacation and reopen after New Year's Day.

—The Salvation Army will give a grand banquet and musical demonstration Dec. 26, in their hall on Second street.

—During the past four weeks Vanderbeek & Sattele have sold five pianos and three organs, and rented seven pianos.

—Ex-Mayor Lang, of Newark, has suffered a loss in the destruction by fire of his delightful country residence at Union Village.

—Garret Hammeal has been "broken in" as motorman on Car No. 5 of the street railway, running on the Somerset street branch.

—The Young Workers for Christ, of the First Church of Christ, are planning to transform themselves into a Christian Endeavor society.

—As Christmas and New Year's Day both come on Monday, the next meeting of Plainfield Lodge, No. 44, I. O. O. F., will be held January 8.

—Stoutenburgh & Co., the Newark clothiers, hatters and furnishers, will keep their store open evenings this week until 9, and on Saturday till 11.

—A cantata entitled "The Birth of Christ" will be given in Grace M. E. church next Monday evening, under the auspices of the Epworth League.

—The 19th annual meeting of the New Jersey State Horticultural Society will be held in the State House, Trenton, Wednesday and Thursday, January 3 and 4.

—The U. S Express Company has put into service a handsome new two-horse wagon, and driver John Carney skillfully handles the reins over a spirited team of horses.

—The Christmas issue of the Somerville Messenger is attractive and creditable to the paper which has so long been a favorite stand-by of the Somerset people.

—The front wall of the new McNabb building on Watchung avenue is said to be settling fast, and it was found necessary to "jack up" the iron girders spanning the front.

—Last week's attendance at the Salvation Army meeting was as follows: Monday, 40; Tuesday, 175; Wednesday, 125; Thursday, 225; Friday, 140; Saturday, 145; Sunday, 955; total, 1,805.

—The Independent Fife and Drum Corps will give a reception in Hulett's Hall, Monday evening, Jan. 1. The committee consists of J. H. Adams, W. C. Force, S. C. Terry, F. Blatz, F. M. Lunger and A. Allen.

—Charles H. Hand and J. D. Runyon have sold two lots in Lorraine to A. D Thompson, and have bought several in Watchung Park. They are planning to erect some choice houses, and are prepared to supply lots or buildings to suit purchasers, and on excellent terms.

—Sensational scandal has been gossiped about for days concerning residents of a fashionable Plainfield thoroughfare. The injured wife of the case did her own detective work, watching the visits of her husband to the house of another woman, from the windows of an accommodating neighbor's house across the street. A divorce suit is threatened, but as the case may be quietly adjusted The Press refrains from telling the names and facts until the matter comes into court.

—That The Art Amateur was the only art publication to receive a medal at The World's Columbian Exposition is not surprising when one looks at the superb Christmas issue just received. The forty-eight pages are crammed with good things for the connoisseur, the artist, teacher and art student. The exquisite color plates continue to be a great feature, but the magazine would still be worth much more than the price charged for it even were they omitted. The whole number has a cheery, Christmas look, and the issue is, perhaps, the best that has ever appeared. The price is 35 cents, and Montague Marks is the publisher, at 23 Union Square, New York.

THIS TRAMP HAD A NERVE.

He Demanded a Man's Overcoat, at Mid-day in the Borough.

The many tramps in and about Plainfield are causing much trouble, and are a great nuisance. A person can hardly go out in the evening without being accosted by one of the fellows.

John Gaub, who lives on Duer street, had an experience Monday noon which is probably the most brazen attempt thus far made.

While returning to town from his home, he was met by a burly footpad, who asked him for his overcoat. This being refused the tramp demanded it under threat of violence.

The fact that it was in the middle of the day, perhaps accounts for the mild treatment received. At any rate, Gaub escaped with his overcoat.

This is only one of many similar cases. Something should be done to rid city and borough of these menacing fellows.

That New McNabb Building Perfect.

Fire Marshal Doane Tuesday examined the new building being erected at Watchung avenue and Fourth street, and found the statement untrue that the wall was settling. The reason for the wall being temporarily jacked up was that one stone had cracked because of a flaw and it was deemed prudent to replace it with a sound one.

Mr. McNabb has built many buildings in his time, including 24 in Bound Brook, and all of them are models of soundness and stability. Mr. McNabb is a builder of the best reputation and his new

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Herring, once residents of Plainfield, and now residing at 25 Cornelia street, Brooklyn, are rejoicing in the birth of their first child, a daughter, which was born Saturday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hyde, of East Front street, who are wintering at the Buckingham Hotel, New York, have a fresh supply of choice flowers sent them every day from a Scotch Plains conservatory.

McCready Sykes, of Scotch Plains, who won the Baird poetry prize of $50 at Princeton this year, was formerly a member of The Press staff, his first poetic efforts reaching the world through these columns.

John W. Armstrong, a native of Jersey, but an enthusiast on California, is in town from Oakland, the guest of his nephew, Manager T. S. Armstrong of Reynolds' Pharmacy. He and his nephew had not met since 1879.

B. A. Hegeman, Jr., will captain the Benedicks the evenings of Dec. 23 and 30 in their annual bowling contest against the Bachelors as captained by P. B. Mathews. If a third game is necessary, it will be rolled Jan. 6.

Mrs. A. E. Hall died at her home, 715 Plainfield avenue, at 2:20 yesterday from pneumonia. She leaves a husband and several grown sons. Mrs. Hall was a member of Trinity Reformed church and of the Ladies Christian Work Society of that church. Funeral services from her late residence Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

S. H. Patterson, of East Seventh street, arrived home from Texas, Saturday night, to spend the holidays with his parents here. Since he has been away he has frequently been a guest of George and Will Craig on their ranch near Graham, and he has also met George Steiner and David French, all former residents of CRAZY ASSAULT ON CITY JUDGE.

W. A. CODDINGTON ATTACKED BY JEPTHA WAGENER.

Furious Over His Loss of a Lawsuit, and Plagued by His Neighbors, the Queer Old Freeholder Man Commits a Public Outrage.

Jeptha Wagener, whose vagaries have long been the laughing-stock of the community, is at last in serious trouble.

Jeptha was ejected from his farm in the mountains a short time ago, as a result of litigation conducted through City Judge William A. Coddington. The old man, naturally excitable and queer, was goaded into frenzy by the taunts and jeers of his neighbors.

He called at the office of the City Judge several times Tuesday afternoon, and caused a disturbance by his abusive language.

Shortly after 5 the Judge went to his office. Jeptha followed him on the street as far as the door and called him down stairs. Judge Coddington went down the stairs to quiet the man. As he came out the door Jeptha asked him if his name was Coddington and without any warning whatever drew a horsewhip from behind him and gave the Judge two heavy blows with the butt.

Mr. Coddington warded off the blows as best he could, and managed to strike Jeptha once in the face. The whip crushed in his silk hat, and left its mark on his neck. Meanwhile the wielder of the whip was swearing loud enough to be heard a block away.

Jeptha swore "by the body of Abraham Lincoln" to land the Judge and George DeMeza in State Prison for 25 years.

The Judge then started for a policeman but by the time Sergeant Kiely came Jeptha had crossed the brook and could not be found.

Sergeant Kiely saw Jeptha walking along East Front street at 3:15 yesterday and arrested him. He made an attempt at resistance but was finally induced to go peaceably to the station, where he was locked up.

Jeptha is thought to be crazy, and an effort will be made to send him to the asylum. He has a young wife, and a large family of small children, all of whom are named after crowned heads or great Americans.

Jeptha's great schemes to make millions include the erection of a mammoth hotel and monument at Washington Rock.

A CHINAMAN STOPS A BLAZE.

While Mrs. Godschalk Was Enjoying a Show, Charlie Moon Saved Her Property.

WESTFIELD, Dec. 19.—A fire broke out near the chimney in the millinery and candy store of Mrs. Frank Godschalk on Broad street, at 10 last night. Mrs. Godschalk was at an entertainment, and the fire would have gained great headway had it not been for the alertness and presence of mind of Charlie Moon, the little Chinese laundryman. He held the fire in check until the arrival of the firemen. The damage will be small.

Gideon E Ludlow and Miss Lillian Long will be married in Union Wednesday evening.

Rev. Frederick J. Stanley of Plainfield gave his lecture, "God's Footprints in the Orient", in the Presbyterian church, Sunday evening, to a large audience.

Miss Anna D. Cooper gave an entertainment entitled "A Christmas Drama; or, Santa Claus in Peril", in Etta Hall Monday evening. It proved a success, as is usual with Miss Cooper's entertainments.

The Advance Club, a bright literary circle in the Presbyterian church, holds a meeting once a month—this week at the residence of E. B. Hoadley.

A strong chess club has recently been formed in Westfield, holding meetings every Monday evening.

A number of Westfield people are attending the Mills meetings in Rahway.

THEY TOO WILL FLOAT A FLAG.

Maple Grove School to Enjoy a Presentation from the Jr. Order.

On Thursday afternoon at 2:30, at the Maple Grove school-house, Clinton avenue, between Evona and Samptown, Friendship Council, No. 61, of New Market, will present to the trustees a bunting flag 6x10 feet in size. There will be exercises by the school, under the direction of the teacher, Miss Ludlow, of Duer street, North Plainfield; music by the Council band; an address by the Rev. Frank Fletcher, and short speeches by several others.

G. W. Day of Dunellen will present the flag, and one of the trustees will accept it. A red-letter day in the history of this little school is looked for.

And the Cat Came Back—

Not the very same day, but about three weeks after leaving in disgust upon ascertaining there was a rival in the household.

How it happened no one can tell, but the Fanwood mascot, a large, beautiful Maltese cat called "Tom", disappeared immediately after the advent of station agent Fisher's baby boy, and did not return till a few nights ago, when with a gentle purr it rubbed its sleek sides against the agent's legs and apparently begged for pardon. It was forgiven, and now the baby is not happy when the sedate "Tom" is out of sight.

AFTER BASE-BALL.

Follow the Path of the Crescent Team, and You'll Own a House and Lot.

The various base-ball diamonds in Plainfield where the Crescents have won championship honors seem destined to become building sites for beautiful Plainfield homes. Where, not long ago, the McCutcheons, McMurrays, McLoughlins and other Macs played ball on open fields, up East Front street, there now are situated two beautiful avenues, Sandford and Westervelt, with scores of homes lining both. It is related that the land where these remarkable improvements were made cost originally about $12,000, and that not long after the streets were opened the sum of $8,000 was paid for one single plot of land, in itself but a very small part of the whole tract.

Now another ball field has been opened up by improvements of a nature that will in time make it fully as valuable as the other. Aaron D. Thompson, who now is a resident of Plainfield, having rented the handsome Farragut avenue place of Henry Opdyke, has laid out last year's Crescent ball grounds in wide streets and avenues, and will sell building lots at private sale.

IS NORTH PLAINFIELD TREATED FAIR!

Under This New Apportionment, She Would Seem to Have Been Unjustly Rated.

A meeting of the Somerset County Committee to change the basis of representation in the county convention was held in the court-house in Somerville Saturday. The following resolution was passed:

Resolved, That the basis of representation to all Democratic conventions to be held hereafter in the county of Somerset shall be as follows: All townships having one polling-place shall have six delegates. All townships having two polling-places shall have three delegates from each polling-place. All townships having more than two polling-places shall have two delegates from each polling-place. The delegates thus allotted to each polling-place shall be elected by the Democratic voters residing in each of the respective districts. The chairman of the County Executive Committee is authorized to call the next county convention on this basis of representation.

Under this rule all the townships in the county will have six delegates, with the exception of Bridgewater, which includes Somerville, Raritan and Bound Brook with their six polling-places, and which will elect twelve. Bridgewater has 1,267 Democratic votes. North Plainfield, which contains considerably more Democratic voters than Branchburg, Montgomery and Warren, is left on the same basis as are these townships.

The next convention will contain 60 delegates instead of 45 as heretofore.

GRATEFUL TO THE JUDGE.

A Fanwood Woman Who Appreciated Her Lawyer's Services.

The late Rebecca A. Judah of Fanwood township was well known to many in this city, who will be interested to know of her will. In 1888 she consulted Wm. A Coddington in regard to several important cases. Mr. Coddington was successful in the settlement of them, which greatly pleased her. Some time later she secured Mr. Coddington to make her will, at which time he was made sole executor under the will. The bulk of her property she left to her grandson, Charles W. Park.

It is not known how much she was worth, but it is believed to be considerable.

Mrs. Judah lived in a quiet, unassuming way in Fanwood, and was 73 years old at the time of her death.

Mr. Coddington will offer her will for probate in the Orphans Court in this county in a few days.

Four Centuries of Silence.

"Four Centuries of Silence" was the attractive title of an absorbingly interesting sermon yesterday morning by the Rev. Cornelius Schenck in Trinity Reformed church. The congregation was large and appreciative of the eloquent discourse. The four centuries referred to by the gifted preacher were comprised in the period between the last prophet, Malachi, and the coming of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ.

Mr. Schenck read and explained the eighth chapter of Daniel, preceding his sermon, in a very interesting and instructive manner. His text was Daniel 8:20 21.

The sermon showed careful, prayerful preparation. It was delivered almost wholly without notes, and showed that there must have been a vast amount of research for the information it disclosed. It was not only intensely interesting, but highly edifying.

OBITUARY.

GEORGE H. BABCOCK.

After weeks of intense suffering, sometimes sinking until death appeared to have won, sometimes rallying until hope of his recovery was restored, and sometimes lying unconscious while doubt held possession of his watching friends, George H. Babcock passed away Saturday night.

His death appeared certain during the first part of the week, but he fought bravely for life and passed through the operation of Friday so heroically that his death Saturday was unexpected by his friends and relatives.

Mr. Babcock rested peacefully during Friday night, and awoke with the daylight Saturday—his Sabbath morning. For a moment the light of the rising sun shone in glorious colors through an opening in the clouds. The nurse drew back the curtains, and the patient gazed at the light until it disappeared.

"How beautiful!"—he murmured, as he sank back. These were his last words save answers to questions about his medicines.

He was in a semi-unconscious state through the rest of the day. Towards night the action of his heart became weaker, the vital organs ceased unable to do their work, and at 10:30 he peacefully sank to rest. There was no struggle, no protest against death, no sign of reluctance at going; life gradually stopped, and the sufferer passed on to the Beyond. His brain power was not diminished, but his heart was too weak to stand the strain which the body put upon it.

Mr. Babcock's faith in the future never lessened. His Christianity was, like his business, a part of him. A few days ago when he was near to death he called his wife, his son, his servants, to him, and spoke of the future. As calmly as if he were arranging for an earthly journey he asked them to join him on the other side. No shadow of doubt crossed his mind.

He said he had made plans for the next ten years which he should like to live to fulfil, but his resignation to divine will was childlike and sublime. The memory of his perfect faith is a tender consolation to the bereaved ones.

The birthplace of Mr. Babcock was Unadilla Forks, near Otsego, New York, where he was born June 17, 1832. His parents were poor, his father Asa M. Babcock working by the day at the machinist's trade. On his mother's side he came from a family famous for mechanical skill. His grandfather, Ethan Stillman, was a manufacturer of guns during the war of 1812. William Stillman, a brother of his grandfather, was a celebrated lock and clock maker of Westerly, R. I. His celebrated "unpickable bank lock" was the antecedent of all the great inventions in that line.

Mr. Babcock's education was partially gained in the common schools and during a year at an academy. The rest was developed by study and travel throughout his life. The family afterward removed to Scott, Cortlandt county, New York and several of the younger members, among them the late Mr. Babcock subsequently went to Westerly, R. I., where he worked in a woolen mill. Soon he was forced to stop work on account of lung troubles, which were aggravated by the nature of his employment.

At this time experiments in photography were attracting much attention in this country. Mr. Babcock took up the study and for some time supported himself by taking daguerreotypes. The work effected a most remarkable cure in him. It will be remembered by photographers that a few years ago a discussion in a trade journal brought out the fact that several cases of consumption, among them that of Mr. Babcock, had been suddenly cured in the time of daguerreotypes by the sufferers having taken up photography. It was decided that the remedy was the fumes of the collodion developer. Whatever the cause, the fact remains that Mr. Babcock regained his health.

Photography not presenting much of a field for financial success, he started in Westerly the first printing office in that section of Rhode Island, and founded The Literary Echo, a paper which was afterwards merged into The Narragansett Weekly, now being published.

His mechanical genius would not be idle, however, and he left the newspaper business to study out with his father a job press for printing colors. The invention was perfected and patents were taken out, but neither had the means to begin manufacturing, and nothing was done until Mr. Babcock met Charles Potter, then Treasurer and Manager of a Westerly iron works. A partnership was formed and work commenced. The firm was fairly successful, although the invention was far ahead of the times. To this venture can be traced the origin of many of the great printing press works of the day. Another company was started in opposition, however, and although both of the partners were sure that they could show that the new men were infringers, they could not afford to prosecute. The partnership was therefore dissolved, Mr. Potter taking the plant and using it in the manufacture of cylinder presses, and Mr Babcock going to New York, taking with him his wife, formerly Miss Adelia Stillman, whom he had married shortly before.

There he entered the office of J. D. Stetson, a patent lawyer, and for three years investigated the intricacies of the patent laws. During this time he taught mechanical drawing to night classes in Cooper Union.

It was while he was in New York that Mr. Babcock became acquainted with the attractions of Plainfield. His wife was in poor health and he was recommended to the sanitarium of Dr. Utter, on Somerset street. Here Mrs. Babcock recovered her health, her husband in the meantime through Mexico and the West during which Mr Babcock became ill and hurried back to Plainfield.

Mr. Babcock has during his residence here, taken an active interest in the affairs of Plainfield, especially in regard to the public schools. He has served several terms as a member of the Board of Education, and was re-elected President at the organization a year ago.

As Vice-president of the Plainfield Camera Club he has done much to encourage amateur photography. His studio at his house is filled with views taken in all parts of this continent and Europe.

He is well known in the field of engineering literature, having often contributed to periodicals. His advertising book "Steam" has attracted much attention in the trade. For two years he was President of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

Last fall Mr. Babcock began the erection of the enormous business block on West Front street, the exterior of which is now nearly completed. It is estimated that the cost will be $200,000.

Mr Babcock had been identified with the Seventh-Day Baptist church in Plainfield since his coming here. His gifts to the church and its institutions were characteristic of his generosity. The new church about to be dedicated is largely the result of his efforts. He and Charles Potter agreed to give jointly as much as could be raised among the other members. Each man's share was $17,000 Mr. Babcock gave considerable attention to the designing and erection of the building.

Mr Babcock left instructions for his will to be opened ten days after his death. It is understood that all of the work he was engaged in is provided for and that all his plans will be carried out.

DEATH OF A GOOD OLD QUAKER.

Abel Vail Shotwell, Former Clerk of the Plainfield Meeting, Dies in Rahway at the Age of 80.

Abel Vail Shotwell died at Rahway Sunday at the age of 80 years.

He was sixth in descent from the Pilgrims of the Mayflower. He was born in Milton, a suburb of Rahway, October 18, 1814. He was a son of Abel and Elizabeth (Vail) Shotwell. He received a common school education. In 1834 he started life as a merchant, amassed a fortune and retired from active business in 1863. He has since, however, engaged in banking and insurance business. In 1868 he assumed charge of the Rahway Fire Insurance Company. From 1867 to 1882 he was Vice-president of the Rahway Savings Institution, and when the National Bank of Rahway was established in 1865 Mr. Shotwell was elected secretary to the Board of Directors, which he held until poor health compelled him to resign. He was the first official of Rahway when the town was incorporated in 1858. He was a member of the Hicksite branch of the Friends' Society and was for many years clerk of the Rahway and Plainfield meeting. He was an authority on matters pertaining to the early history of New Jersey, and possessed many valuable papers in relation thereto. He was married in 1859 to his second cousin, Rosetta Shotwell Ebert, of Hamilton, Ohio, who survives him. Mr. Shotwell came from an old and prominent family.

His father, Abel Shotwell, was a direct descendant of Abraham Shotwell, who was driven from England in 1655 by Lord Carteret. His mother, Elizabeth Vail, was born in Somerset county, and the fifth in descent from Fitz Randolph, of Nottingham, England, who was born in 1617 and came to Plymouth, Mass., in 1630.

WOULD N'T THAT BE GLORIOUS!

Think of an Electric-Lighted Speedway Clear from Elizabeth to Plainfield!

Silas D. Drake, Mayor of Lorraine, writes as follows to the Elizabeth Herald:

Recognizing your paper as one of progressive ideas, I drop a few lines to suggest an idea if carried out, would make a new boom for Union county. Its county roads are world renowned. They have enhanced the value of all properties throughout its borders. I suggest that Westfield avenue, running west to Plainfield, be lighted by electric light—an arc light say every 800 feet apart. It would cost about $700 per mile or $6,000 per year to do so, and with the lights extended up Newark avenue and the boulevard toward Newark it would make a beautiful drive of seventeen miles, second to none in the world. If this idea was carried out it would attract new residents, and the additional tax could be assessed and collected that no one would feel. After trying this avenue, have it extended from Elizabeth to Rahway. Let your paper lead in this movement. Let some progressive Freeholder bring up the subject in their session, and soon the plan will be adopted.

Quality Hill on the Move.

It is hinted that another resident of Quality Hill will in the spring join the emigrants to the west end of Fanwood, as he, complaining of the extreme cold on that elevated spot, and interrogating the latest removal from there the other morning, after an exceedingly cold night, was informed by the emigrant that his new quarters were so warm that the refrigerator doors were flung wide open to enable his family to sleep comfortably.

In Elegant New Quarters.

George W. Rockfellow has moved into his elegant new store on the corner of Park avenue and Fourth street.

The store is sixty feet long and thirty wide, and is ceiled with yellow pine with ash trimmings. The whole equipment is of the best and most convenient style. The salesroom is heated with steam and lighted by electricity.

Among the new fixtures is a pair of balance scales, a delicate piece of mechanism with agate bearings, made by F. Troemer of Philadelphia.

REVIVAL OF INDUSTRY.

Important Electric Concern to Move from New York Towards Plainfield.

Fortunately for the town of Garwood, which is situated just below Westfield on the Central Railroad of New Jersey, there is soon to be employment for the workmen who were left destitute when the American Steel Wheel Company Works were closed. The Press learned from a reliable source, Saturday afternoon, that these idle works at Garwood have been secured by the C. and C. Electric Company of 404 Greenwich street, New York, and that in about a month that immense corporation will begin the manufacture at Garwood of their electric appliances, including motors and dynamos. All citizens of Central New Jersey will be glad to know that such a wealthy corporation as the C. and C. Electric Company intends to locate here, and the merchants of towns near to Garwood will undoubtedly rejoice at their prospects for increased business.

Funeral of Joseph Laing.

The funeral of the late Joseph Laing, who died at his home in Dunellen, on Thursday evening, after a short illness, took place from the house at 1:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon, in the presence of a large number of the relatives and friends of the family. The Rev. A. L. Martine, pastor of the Presbyterian church, officiated and took his text from Acts XVII: 28: "For in Him we live, and move and have our being".

A quartette from the Presbyterian church choir rendered beautiful and appropriate music. The pallbearers were: W. H. Coles, F. Quick, T. C. Bodine and R. J. Swackhammer. The floral display consisted of a bunch of callas and a sheaf of wheat.

Interment was made in Hillside cemetery, in a plot just recently purchased by Mrs. Laing.

"Seeing is Believing."

Simple, Beautiful, Good—these words mean much, but to see "The Rochester" will impress the truth more forcibly. Its marvelous light is purer and brighter than gas light, softer than electric light, and more cheerful than either. The choicest bric-a-brac in the palace of a Vanderbilt reveals nothing finer. We have 2,700 artistic varieties, in brass, bronze, silver and black iron.

Ladies often like to go down among the large wholesale houses to buy of first hands. They will find at our salesroom (the largest in the world) a rare collection of Art in lamps. A catalogue to send you if you cannot come.

FROM SPRING TO MILLSTREAM.

An Earnest Seventh-Day Endeavorer Draws Lessons from Nature's Handiwork.

All Plainfielders will be interested in the admirable talk on "The Nobility of Service" given by Harold Tomlinson of this city before the recent Yearly Meeting of the Seventh-Day Baptist churches of New Jersey. The following is an extract:

The day invites us to a walk. We wend our way toward the mountain. We reach its summit. We stop to look at the peaceful scene which lies at our feet. Everything is in harmony. The sun smiles warmly on the quiet valley below. The birds raise their sweet cadence to heaven in honor of Him who made all things great and beautiful. A small spring, with its clear and crystal water, bubbles at our feet. We quench our parched lips at its fountain. It finds its outlet in a small stream which flows down the mountain side. We follow it to the foot of the mountain, where it has so increased in size and volume that we find we are unable to cross it. Then we begin to realize the value and greatness of this small spring, now far up on the mountain top. A rich and verdant field lies before us. Cattle are quietly feeding on its banks. We continue to follow its path. Fields rich in corn and wheat give evidence of its value. Now we come to a mill which has utilized the power of its current. So we might follow its course till at last it empties itself into the sea. We stop to ask, What significance can such a spring have? The only answer we can find is that it serves the wants of man.

Consult with me your Latin lessons and find the true meaning of the word serve. The verb servio, to be a slave, to obey, to be subject to—definitions which, perhaps, are not pleasant to us—is not antagonistic with any of the laws of freedom, except those laws that have been made by ourselves, and not by God. The stream follows its own course, but is made to serve the wants of man. We follow our own volition and have our highest freedom in the service of God.

It is not a pleasant thought for us to think of ourselves as slaves, sold to a cause, bought with a price, without freedom of action, common workmen in one large field, without variety of life, with no compensation for labor. No: such a thought is not a pleasant one, so do not entertain it, for in this Christian slavery there is every variety of life, plenty of freedom and great remuneration. Paul considered himself under bondage to God, and his life testified to the nobility of his service.

I like this word serve, for it implies so much life, so much activity. It really is a condition in itself. If we work we shall receive. If we work not, we shall lack. The results of labor depend upon the capabilities of the workman, but the nobility of labor depends upon the impulse or motive which impels one to work.

Now, as Christian Endeavorers, we are all desirous of attaining this nobility—noble manhood and noble womanhood. You who have signed the pledge as active members have placed yourself under bondage to serve the cause of Christ. You have taken important positions in the line of battle. You have assumed the responsibility of the lives of others. You are indeed your brother's keeper. A marked characteristic of this pledge is that nothing impossible is required. God does not demand responsibilities of us. We too often make a negative of an affirmative.

In this progressive age, when science has made such advancement, when a great distance can be traveled in a comparatively short time, when the lightning has been tamed, we ask, What is impossible? I truly believe that if one of our ancestors of two hundred years ago should by some miraculous power be permitted to come to earth again, he would become immediately demented when he saw the strange things occurring, which were to him impossibilities. Mr. Edison worked from fourteen to twenty hours a day for seven months on his phonograph, endeavoring to make it reproduce the word specia. The s would remain silent. But at last he succeeded. There is no nobility of service without success, and there is no service which may not attain to success.

LIVE LYCEUM.

High School Gentlemen Pause and Reflect, on the Threshold of Another Year.

The third anniversary of the High School Lyceum was observed by the presentation of a musical and literary programme in Assembly Hall at 3:30 Thursday afternoon. About fifty attended.

The roll having been called, President C. B. Morse made an address on the purposes and present work of the society. The Lyceum has thirty members in the high school, and holds meetings every Friday afternoon at which either a debate is held or a literary programme given.

An "Opening Glee" by the Lyceum Quartette—S. N. Marsh, Edward Clark, T. D. Blair, J. C. Whiting—followed. Secretary Riley then read a paper on the history of lyceums, tracing them back to those of ancient Greece. He spoke particularly of Emerson's membership in a lyceum, and of the essayist's high opinion of the value of the work of such societies. In ending he praised the members for their work and concluded with a promise of great results from the use of their ability. "For we must remember that it is no common Clay that rivals a Webster."

C. M. Smith's paper was on the history of the Plainfield lyceum and of the similar work in the different classes, but particularly of that in the class of '95. A serenade by the quartette, entitled "Sleep on Thy Pillow", was heartily encored.

"The Future of the Lyceum" was an excellent paper by J. C. Whiting, a post graduate, in which he prophesied great results from the society, and closed with a clever valedictory poem in which he introduced the names of most of the members.

The programme closed with the song "Good Night" by the quartette and a round in response to an encore.

Surprised in Elmwood Place.

A most pleasant surprise party was that arranged by Miss Annie Burk and Leonard Beam, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Robinson, 125 Elmwood place, Friday night. After the grand march, which was led by Miss Maggie Allen and Frank Vreeland, of Westfield, a collation was partaken of. The dancing was to the music of the veteran Samuel D. Frame.

The Plainfield guests were: William Kiely and Maggie Canfield, John Daily and Katie Rogers, William Barry and Mamie Moore, William Fiering and Katie Storr, Miss Lillie Wooden, Polly Moorless, Mr. and Mrs. George Goodwin, George Scherling, Florence Scherling, Albert Boe, Mr. and Mrs. Mason, Mr. and Mrs. McCarty, Miss VanDyke, Mr. Lowery, Mrs. Anglemen, Emma and Clarence Angleman, Mr. and Mrs. Cavanaugh, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Apgar, Louis Donovan, Miss Hubert, Miss Mamie Kiely, Mrs. S. Beam, Miss Emma Lopt and Tessie Laffe. Those from Westfield were George Vreeland, Mrs. Casey, Miss Susie Ackerman, Miss Hall, Mrs. Susie Brown, Miss Hattie Wyckoff, Frank Massey, Carl Rolle, Edward Townley.

Rabbits and the Rabbits.

James Babbitt has shot and killed 172 rabbits since the season opened. The season for sport, he says, has been a good one, and a total of four in all he got.

SOCIETY SLUGGERS.

Religious Harmony Existing Among Westfield Clubmen.

The troubles of the Westfield Athletic Club at Westfield culminated Friday in a row in which the fist of Ike Seeley played a prominent part. The trouble came about through the consolidation of the Union League and the Westfield Athletic Club. The members of the two clubs are not friendly. Henry Sergeant, who held a mortgage on the Westfield Athletic Club-house, threatened to foreclose unless the members consented to the consolidation.

Then he put the Westfield Athletic Club men out of office. The Westfield bowling team retaliated by resigning.

In talking matters over last night, Ike Seeley, a Union Leaguer, threatened to smash the face of W. Arkell, an Athletic Club man, and struck at Arkell with his clenched fist. Arkell refused to have Seeley arrested. The affray will result in the disbandment of the Westfield Club.

SOME SOCIAL SQUEEZING.

Having Had Other Fun, Methodists Guess for Prizes.

A lemon sociable was given in Vincent chapel by the Social Department of the Epworth League of the First Methodist Episcopal church, Friday night. The inclemency of the weather interfered with the attendance and the programme.

The play "Hiring Help" was cleverly presented by the Misses Florence Barnes, Ada Woolston, May Lenberger, Edna French, Sadie Douglass and Maud French.

The admission fees of one lemon per head were soon turned into lemonade and served with cake. A portion of the seeds was placed in a glass, and guesses were taken as to the number, which was found to be 321. Miss Anna Smalley, whose guess was 340, received a butterfly stamp box as a prize; Wilbur Cornwall, 333, a fancy calendar; and Miss Elsie Holmes, as a consolation prize, a lemon squeezer.

The weather did not interfere with the enjoyment of those who attended.

LOAFERS GET THEIR DESERTS.

Regular Policeman Accomplish a Public Good Which a Paid Special Neglects.

John Benford and James Watts, two young men of the "tough" variety, were arrested by Policeman Frederickson at 10:30 last night for throwing garbage into and otherwise amusing themselves at the entrance to Music Hall.

Benford is an old offender, and was sentenced to sixty days in the county jail by Judge Coddington this morning. James Watts, who was arrested for the first time last night, was fined $10 with a choice of thirty-days board.

The actions of the mob which assembles in the Hall entrance every show night are a disgrace to Plainfield. Special Policeman E. F. Schimer, who is hired by the management to keep the place clear, seems to think that his chief duty is to stay inside and see that he doesn't miss any of the play, while the annoyance outside goes on unheeded by him.

Buried in Plainfield.

Bernard Farmer, who was found drowned at Bound Brook Wednesday, was born in the parish of Killala, County Meath, Ireland, in 1833. He came to this country when a young man, and had been engaged in the milk business in Bound Brook for many years. He leaves a widow.

He was one of the founders of St. Joseph's church, Bound Brook, and claimed the special privilege of erecting the cross on the old edifice, which still stands on the parochial school building.

The funeral was held in St. Joseph's church, Bound Brook, yesterday, and was largely attended. The bearers were Thomas H. Riley, Thomas Cullen, Daniel Cusick, Edward Shea, James Reagan and Lawrence Mulvey. Interment was made in St. Mary's cemetery, Plainfield.

Her Friends Surprised Her.

A number of the friends of Miss Lottie Messerschmidt, of Washington street, gave her a surprise party last evening. The affair was planned and arranged by Harry Jenkins, and was a complete success in every respect. After becoming thoroughly acquainted, dancing was indulged in, for which O'Reilley furnished the music.

It was early in the morning when the following happy young people left for home: Miss Eva Jenkins, Miss Florence Dodge, Miss Mabel Moore, Miss Hockridge, Miss Sadie Heenan, Miss Cora Shepard, Miss Dottie Sears, Miss McKillup, Miss Fisher, Miss Henrietta Cumins, Miss Etta Raybert, Harry Jenkins, Frank Dodge, Will Moore, William Morrison, Mr. Haven, Bert Littell, Fred. Deitz and Charles Messerschmidt.

Salvation Holiness and Banquet.

Staff officers from the Salvation Army headquarters in New York, about sixteen in number, with brass band, will visit the post here Dec. 29, and, besides holding a holiness meeting, will muster in new candidates.

A banquet will follow, and subscriptions for defraying the expenses of the same are now being received by authorized solicitors.

Jim Donahue Takes a Bath.

Jim Donahue, of 158 East Front street, went fishing in Green brook in the rear of ex-Postmaster Vail's house at Evona. He successfully landed two suckers, but the third proved too much for him, and he lost his footing and went in up to his shoulders. Other fishermen pulled him out, and Mr. Vail took him to the street railway in his buggy.

Having changed his clothes, Jim hurried back and was soon fishing again.

No Room for Him in Plainfield.

Stephen Howlett, colored, is wanted by the police for insulting two girls in Battle Row on Tuesday. Howlett is said to have left town.

Physicians and Scientists Fail to Help Mr. E. Whitney.

HILLSBORO BRIDGE, N. H.—There is no more highly respected resident of this village than Mrs. N. E. Whitney. Her long and serious illness and her remarkable recovery through the aid of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, has made that medicine a necessity in every New Hampshire household.

Mrs. Whitney in speaking about her sickness, said: "I had been gradually failing in health for a number of years, and was told by my physicians that I was in the last stages of Bright's disease. I had been under the treatment at various times of six physicians, two clairvoyants, and a Christian scientist, but received no benefit from any of them. It seemed to me that every means of ever being cured had been tried except to use Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, which had been recommended. I purchased a bottle, and by the time I had used the second bottle I was greatly improved, and from that on I gained daily, and it was not long before I was doing my regular household work. No tongue can tell how I suffered for the three years before I used Favorite Remedy. My age is 68, and I now weigh 20 pounds more than I ever did. Favorite Remedy restored me to health and strength."

As a prominent physician recently said: "Anyone suffering from kidney troubles, rheumatism or dyspepsia, should use Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. It will cure them if their disease is within reach of medicine."

Jonathan and His Continent.

By Max O'Rell, Author of "John Bull and His Island," "John Bull, Jr., Etc," and Jack Allyn.

[Translated by Mme. Paul Blouet. Copyrighted by Cassell & Co. New York, and published by special arrangement through the American Press Association. Paul Blouet (Max O'Rell) is a remarkably clever Frenchman, who has devoted his talents mainly to satirizing the Anglo-Saxon race. The book from which the following extracts are made is his latest production, and was [illegible] during his recent visit to America.]

Only a few days after I set foot in New York, a friend took me to visit the offices of the principal newspapers of the city. Passing along a corridor in The World's offices, I perceived a lady writing in one of the rooms. My friend led the way in, and presented me to her. I found her to be a pretty brunette of about twenty or twenty-two, delightfully piquante, and with most distinguished manners. I was struck with her simple bearing and her intelligent expression, and, on leaving the room, naturally wanted to know to whom I had had the pleasure of being introduced. I then learned that this young American girl did all the literary reviewing and gossip for The New York World, and [illegible] as large a salary as one of the best writers on the staff of The Paris Figaro.

The St. Nicholas Magazine is conducted by a lady, Mrs. Dodge.

Since her husband's death, Mrs. Frank Leslie has carried on, under her own management, the numerous magazines which issue from the house founded by that gentleman.

The largest newspapers and all the principal reviews, have ladies on their staffs.

Mrs. Mary Louise Booth, who directs The Harper's Bazar, receives a salary of $4,000.

The two editors of The Critic are Miss Jeannette L. Gilder and Mr. Joseph B. Gilder, sister and brother of Mr. Richard Watson Gilder, poet, and chief editor of The Century Magazine, who himself has for colleague Mr. Bud and a talented lady.

I might name many more.

The education of the women being in America very much the same as that of the men, ladies naturally may aspire to many employments which, in Europe, are looked upon as being the monopoly of men.

The New England descendants of the Puritans have inherited a more than British prudery.

The word "leg" is improper, you must say "lower limb." Trousers have become "lower garments." Instead of going to bed, people "retire," so that the bedroom becomes the "retiring room."

A lady having said not long ago in a Philadelphia drawing room that she felt cold to her back, created a veritable panic among the hostess' guests.

I read the following piece of information in a New York paper among the news from a New England city:

"The authorities have begun a crusade against the nude in art. One of the wealthiest gentlemen in the city will be proceeded against for keeping in his house copies of the Venus of Milo, the Venus de Medici, Canova's Venus, Powers' Greek Slave, the Laocoon, and other works."

During my stay in New York, I was constantly hearing of a certain Mr Anthony Comstock, who had attained celebrity by a campaign he had undertaken against nudities. Mr. Comstock visited the museums, galleries, exhibitions and shops, and, whenever he found a bit of flesh portrayed in paint or marble, he went before the magistrates and had a grand field day. I must say, for the credit of the New Yorkers, that Mr. Comstock had earned for himself a reputation as grotesque as it was noisy. To take up such a line of censorship is, it seems to me, to publish one's own perversity, and the individual whose mind is so ill informed that he cannot look at an artistic counterfeit presentment of the human form divine without thinking evil thoughts, is to be pitied, if not despised.

But I suppose there will always be quack doctors with the cant of virtue on their lips and filthy imaginations in their hearts.

Meanwhile, the American newspapers seemed to look upon Mr. Comstock as a legitimate target for their jokes and satire.

The New England ladies have the reputation of being the most easily shocked women in the world. An American gentleman told me that a Philadelphia lady, at whose side he was seated one day at table, grew red to her very ears at his asking her which part of a chicken she preferred, the wing or the leg.

Are the New England women Saintes-Nitouches?

Jonathan is the cousin german of John Bull, but yet not so German as one might imagine, for, if Germany supplies America with two or three hundred thousand immigrants yearly, these Germans do not Germanize America; on the contrary, they themselves become Americanized, thanks to that faculty of assimilation which they possess in such a high degree.

One strong proof of this is the way in which women are treated from one end of the United States to the other. And here I may say that in this matter Jonathan sets John Bull an example which the latter would do well to profit by.

Whilst English justice gives merely one or two months' imprisonment to the man who is found guilty of having almost kicked his wife to death, an American town is in arms at the mere rumor of a man having maltreated a woman.

Sometimes the chastisement takes a comic form. There are few distractions in the little American towns, and native humor finds an outlet in strange fashions. A man who ill treats his wife, or forsakes her for another woman, is often tarred and feathered. The operation is curious and satisfies the vengeance of the populace, while procuring them an hour's amusement.

The delinquent is led, sometimes to the sound of music, to a retired spot. There he is stripped to the skin and coated over with tar from head to foot. This done, he is rolled in feathers, which of course stick to him and give him the appearance of an immense ugly duckling. To give a finishing to the operation, his clothes are sometimes carried off, and the mob wish him good luck.

This chastisement is often applied to a woman whose conduct is known to be immoral. In such cases I need not say it is the women who operate on the culprit. They want their husbands and sons to be able to get about without danger, and they take upon themselves the task of keeping the moral atmosphere of the neighborhood healthy. The idea appears primitive, but morality thrives by it.

The susceptibilities of American women are sometimes very easily wounded.

A paper having announced a man's death under the heading: "John K. gone to a better home," the widow brought an action of libel against the editor.

The further west one goes the more apparent becomes the power of the women, the further west one goes the rarer does woman get. Is this the reason?

To every American hotel there is a ladies' entrance. This is to prevent contamination from the possible contact of men. When it rains or snows an awning is thrown out over the pavement; but I dare say a permanent triumphal arch will ultimately be demanded by the ladies.

Here is a little story which would supply a very good subject to the novelist or the dramatist.

Idaho territory lies very far west indeed, and there is an alarming scarcity of women there. This has been curiously illustrated of late in the town of Wagon Wheel.

Recently two young ladies traveled to that remote region to attend to their dying brother. The poor fellow did not long require their services, and immediately after his death the sisters prepared to return home. Before, however, they could get away, nearly the whole population of the town—headed by the mayor and other high officials—were making matrimonial overtures to them. Feeling ran very high during five or six anxious days, and the mayor's chances, despite his mature years, ruled the betting at six to one. At the end of the week both young ladies had capitulated, and were duly engaged. The mayor was, however, cut out by a handsome young miner. The wedding day was fixed, and the mother of the young ladies was summoned upon the scene. Here trouble began. She duly arrived, but was hotly indignant with her daughters for the scant respect which they had manifested toward their brother's memory by such indecent haste to wed. The girls explained that they had literally been besieged, and had yielded to the overwhelming force of circumstances. At most, explanations between the officers, and the mother vowed that neither of them should be married anywhere at all—that, in fact, the engagements were "off," and that they must be off too. The [illegible] her to surrender her resolution. The mayor, with rare magnanimity, considering the cruel blow his own hopes had just received, placed himself at the head of the deputation, and in the name of patriotism implored the good lady to grant the petition, which he ardently urged. She, however, stood firmly on her parental rights, and declared that she would not leave the town without her two daughters. Then the genius of the mayor shone forth like the sun, and proved equal to the occasion. He blandly proposed a compromise. Why need she leave at all? He drew her attention—of course in most delicate terms—to the fact that she was fair, plump, and fifty odd, and that similar language might be taken as descriptive of himself. There and then he offered her his hand and heart, and the young ladies a kind father and protector.

That settled the matter, and three marriages took place with a great flourish of trumpets at Wagon Wheel.

In America gentlemen's dress is plain, even severe, a high hat, black coat, dark trousers. Fancy cloth is little used, even in traveling.

I remember well the sensation I created with a pair of light gray trousers in a small Pennsylvania town. Every one seemed to look at me as if I had been a strange animal; in the hotel the waitresses nudged one another, and scarcely repressed a giggle; and the street urchins followed me as if I had been a member of the Sioux tribe in national costume. The day after my arrival, one of the local papers announced that a Frenchman had landed in the town the day before "in white trousers," and that his popularity had been as prompt as decisive.

American ladies dress very well as a rule, but there a great number who cover themselves with furbelows and jewels, and so long as each item is costly, trouble themselves little about the general effect.

American women have plenty of style of their own, and also a great deal of distinction and grace, but they always look dressed for conquest. It is well to be it, but not well to show it. They are apt to laugh at the toilet of English women, and model their own dress on French lines. For my part, I think that nothing can surpass a fresh, young English girl in a cotton dress and simple straw hat.

The fashionable headgear, during my sojourn in the states, was a high, narrow construction, perched on the top of the head, and surmounted with feathers. At a certain distance, it gave its wearer the look of an irate cockatoo.

There are French milliners in New York, I believe. Dr Oliver Wendell Holmes pretends that they deteriorate on American soil. I remember we got upon this subject, during a pleasant chat about his early days in Paris, and he said: "By the time a French milliner has been six months in New York, she will make a bonnet to frighten a Choctaw Indian."

At the theatre, women wear silk, which prevents one from hearing, and hats a foot high, which prevent one from seeing.

American ball toilets are ravishing. Here the diamonds are in place. I do not know any gayer, more intoxicating sight than an American ball room. The display of luxury is on a gigantic scale. The walls are covered with flowers, the rooms artistically lighted, the dancing animated, and the true spirit of gayety everywhere visible. The young women are ideal in beauty and brilliancy, and if it were not for the atmosphere, which is hot enough to hatch silk worms, you would pass the evening in an ecstasy of enjoyment.

The wives of men with middle class incomes imitate the luxury of the millionaire's wife. I expected to find it so, in a democratic country frogs try to swell into oxen. They puff themselves out until they burst, or rather until their husbands burst.

In France always, and in England when he will let her, a wife keeps an eye on her husband's interests. In America, she often lays hands on his capital.

There is no country where you hear so many good anecdotes, and no country where they are so well told.

The Americans are delightful raconteurs; they are past masters in the art of making those light, graceful, witty little speeches, which give to their dinners such a unique charm. Then the humor is delicate, the wit of the brightest. Irony and elegance combine to make these discourses veritable little Watteau gems.

Here is a specimen of Gen. Horace Porter's drollery—a portrait of an old typical Puritan, given at a "New England" dinner:

"The old Puritan was not the most rollicking, the jolliest, the most playful of men. He at times amused himself sadly. He was given to a mild disregard of the conventionalities. He had suppressed bear baiting, not, it is believed, because it gave pain to the bear, but because it gave pleasure to the audience. He found the Indians were the proprietors of the land, and he felt constrained to move against them with his gun, with a view to increasing the number of absentee landlords. He found the Indians on one side and the witches on the other. He was surrounded with troubles. He had to keep the Indians under fire and the witches over it. These were some of the things that reconciled that good man to sudden death. He never let the sun go down upon his wrath, but he, no doubt, often wished that he was in that region near the pole where the sun does not go down for six months at a time and gives wrath a fair chance to materialize. He was a thoughtful man. He spent his days inventing snow plows and his evenings in sipping hot rum and ruminating upon the probable strength of the future prohibition vote. Those were times when the wives remonstrated with their husbands regarding the unfortunate and disappointing results of too much drink, particularly when it led the men to go out and shoot at Indians—and miss them. These men generally began drinking on account of the bite of a snake, and usually had to quit on account of attacks from the same reptiles."

Gen. Porter was kind enough to introduce me to a New York audience on one occasion.

"Ladies and gentlemen," began the general without relaxing a muscle of his face, "I claim your indulgence on behalf of the speaker who is going to address you. He has to speak in a language not his own, and, besides, he has not the resource of some of our countrymen, who, when their throats are tired, can speak through their noses."

American women run their husbands and fathers very close in the matter of wit. Their wit is apt to be a little more sarcastic, perhaps. They are not women for nothing.

Humor only springs in simple, unaffected characters. You find it in the Scotch. It overflows in the well bred American, who is the prince of good fellows.

The Americans are so good at taking a joke, so good tempered that, even in public, they enjoy to banter each other and serve as butts for each other's sarcasms; it is on these occasions that American humor is allowed free play. There are even "Gridiron" clubs, clubs where guests are invited only to be put on the grill. The most famous of these is the Clover club at Philadelphia. Outside Paradise there is no place where men are treated with so little regard to their rank.

"Gentlemen," says the president, "I have the honor to propose the first toast of the evening. Let us fill our glasses and drink to the honorable member of congress on my right. I doubt not you will push your amiability and patience so far as to listen to his speech in respectful silence. He will be all the more proud to have an audience tonight, because, as we all know, when the honorable member gets up to make a speech at Washington the benches begin to empty by magic. Gentlemen, give him a chance."

The congressman takes the joke merrily, and then commences his speech.

"Gentlemen—I mean members of the Clover Club."

The members punctuate the satire with a hearty laugh.

Presently comes the turn of the second speaker.

This one speaks in a scarcely audible voice.

"Raise your voice!" cry the members.

"I'm sorry you cannot hear," quietly answers the speaker, "come nearer."

The cries of "louder!" continue.

"If I speak low," says the interrupted man, "it is in order to get down to your level."

This convulsed the assembly with laughter.

I was aghast.

Can it be possible, I thought, that they will stand that? The joke may be new and funny, but surely it is being carried beyond the bounds. If such things were so in France, one would see duels going on in all the retired spots of the neighborhood until morning.

The president rises once more.

My turn has come.

Scarcely have I heard the word "Gentlemen," when a volley of shouts and whistlings greets me.

I see that I am not going to be spared.

"Excuse me," I continue, "perhaps I had better explain to you why I accepted your invitation. Since I got to America I [illegible] to study the manners and customs of the people. With this object in view, it would not do for me to [illegible]

[illegible]

"That's right," whispers my neighbor in way of encouragement, "continue in that strain and you will do."

For hours the Americanizing goes on, mixed with toasts, recitations, songs and anecdotes.

At 2 in the morning hosts and guests separate, declaring that they have had a "real good time."

The Clover club is a first rate leveler. Any man, whose self esteem has been over cultivated, can be supplied by this club with wholesome physic.

I think the following anecdote illustrates the delicacy of western wit:

Philadelphia, whether justly or not, has the reputation of being very dead and alive, and many are the jokes on its dullness. A Bostonian was doing the honors of his native city to a friend from Philadelphia. Having shown him all the points of interest in the place, he asked if he did not think Boston a fine city.

"Yes, it is very nice," said the Pennsylvania man, "but I do not think it is as well laid out as Philadelphia."

"No," replied the Bostonian, "but it will be when it is as dead as Philadelphia."

By his discovery of America, Christopher Columbus has furnished the old world with an inexhaustible source of amusing novelties. You pass from the curious to the marvelous, from the marvelous to the incredible, from the incredible to the impossible realized.

But it is to American journalism that the palm must be awarded.

The first thing that attracts your attention is the titles of the articles. The smallest bits of news cannot escape your notice, thanks to these wonderful headlines. It requires a special genius for the work to be able to hit upon such eye ticklers.

The death of Mrs. Garfield, mother of the late president, was announced with the heading:

DEATH OF GRANDMA GARFIELD.

The marriage of M. Maurice Bernhardt:

SARAH'S BOY LEADS HIS BRIDE TO THE ALTAR.

The execution of a criminal was announced by a Chicago paper under the heading:

JERKED TO JESUS.

The reports of two divorce cases at Chicago were entitled respectively:

TIRED OF WILLIAM.

MRS. CARTER FINDS FAULTS WITH HER HUSBAND'S KISSING.

An article on Prince Bismarck was headed in large letters, BISMARCK WITHDRAWS. Just underneath in very small print was: "His resignation as chancellor of the German empire."

The marriage of young Earl Cairns, who had been betrothed several times, was announced to the American ladies thus:

GARGOYLE CAUGHT AT LAST.

While I was in the United States the papers were constantly speaking of a certain financier named Jacob Sharp. Accused of fraudulent dealings, this gentleman had been arrested, but subsequently released untried. The press indulged in much comment on the matter, and such remarks as: "All mortals have their trials except financiers."

One morning the newspapers were obliged to desist from their attacks; poor Jacob had passed away from earth.

The same day I met the editor of one of the large daily papers.

"Well," I said, "here is a fine occasion for a grand head line to-morrow; you are not going to let it slip, I suppose?"

"What do you mean?"

"How can you ask! Why, Jacob gone up the ladder, of course."

"Splendid!" he exclaimed.

"Shame on thee, my dear editor, thou didst not find that one."

"I must have it. How much will you take for it?"

"I'll make you a present of it," I said.

Next morning the death of the financier was told in two columns, headed:

"JACOB GONE UP THE LADDER."

If ever I wanted to apply for a journalistic post in America this would be my most weighty recommendation in the eyes of my future chief.

This is how one American reporter made a reputation at a bound. The Chicago people are still proud to tell the story:

The young fellow was taking a walk one evening in a retired part of the town, on the lookout for what adventure history does not say. All at once a human form lying motionless on the ground attracted the sight of our hero. He drew near to it, stooped down, and found it to be a corpse. His first impulse was to immediately seek a policeman and tell him of the discovery. But a second idea came; it was more practical, and he adopted it. This was it:

His paper comes out at 2 in the afternoon, so that by running straight to the police station he would be making the matter public, and furnishing his brother reporters with a column or two for their morning papers. It is a catch, this corpse, and not to be lightly given away. What to do? Simply this. Our journalist drags the body into an empty building near at hand, and carefully hides it. At 11 next morning he discovers it by chance, goes as fast as possible to make his declaration to the police, and then hastens away to the office of his newspaper with two columns of description written over night. At 2 o'clock the paper announces: "Mysterious murder in Chicago; discovery of the victim by one of our reporters!"

The morning papers were outdone, the evening ones nowhere.

An American newspaper is a conglomeration of news, political, literary, artistic, scientific and fashionable, of reports of trials, of amusing anecdotes, gossip of all kinds, interviews, jokes, scandal, the whole written in a style which sometimes shocks the man of taste, but which often interests, and always amuses.

A literary celebrity of Boston said to me one day: "I am ashamed of our American press. We have only two papers in the country that I do not blush for, and these are The Boston Post and The Evening Post, of New York."

I must say that, if you want to hear America and everything American severely criticized, you have only to go to Boston. There you will hear Boston and England praised and America picked to pieces.

"Are you an American?" I once asked of a gentleman I met in New York.

"Well," he said, after some hesitation, "I'm from Boston."

You must visit the offices of the great New York papers in the evening if you would get an idea of the colossal enterprises. There you see about fifty reporters with their news all ready for print in their hands. [illegible] pass before the heads of the various departments, political, literary, dramatic, etc.

"What have you?" asks an editor to the first reporter who presents himself.

"An interview with Sarah Bernhardt."

"Very good. Half a column. And what have you?" he says, turning to the second.

"A report of John Smith the banker's case."

"Right. One column. And you?"

"I have an account of the president's forthcoming journey to the south."

"What have you for us this evening?" says the editor to his correspondent in Berlin.

"Bismarck threatens to send in his resignation."

"One column."

"Boulanger has just received an ovation at Lille. A riot is feared in Paris," wires the Paris correspondent.

"Capital! Send two columns."

"A scandal in Rome. The Marchioness of N. has run away with her husband's secretary."

"Good. Where are they gone?"

"No one knows."

"No matter. Send a good stirring column all the same."

"What's-his-name, the financier, has made off," states the wire from Chicago.

"A column. Send report and start an account of the fugitive."

When the telegraph has ceased ticking and the crowd of reporters have departed, the chief editor, like a ship's captain, the last to leave the deck, works on. He reads over everything, sifts, corrects, cuts down, adds to, puts all in order, and towards 3 o'clock in the morning gives the order to print, and goes home.

But, once more, all this is nothing. It is in the Sunday's issue that you have the crowning feat of journalistic enterprise—thirty or thirty-two pages of telegrams, articles, essays on politics, the drama, literature, [illegible] the fashions, anecdotes, love tales, interviews, stories for children, poetry, biographies, chats on science—the whole illustrated with portraits, sketches of interesting places mentioned in the text, caricatures, etc., etc. All this for the sum of three cents.

Every little town of a thousand to fifteen hundred inhabitants has its two newspapers, one Democratic, the other Republican. [illegible]

Paralyzer, The Rustler, The Cyclone, The Prairie Dog, The Bason, The Lucifer, The Bundle of Sticks, The Thunderer, The Earthquake. I saw and read a copy of the sheet which rejoiced in the name of Bundle of Sticks. The first article contained advice to a certain Joseph Muller, who, instead of working, had taken up street preaching and house to house prayer: "We give Joseph Muller a fortnight to find some honorable employment. If at the end of that time he is still leading an idle life, we will find an exalted position for him." The joke makes one shudder when one thinks that, if Joseph should turn a deaf ear to the warning, he is quite sure to be hung by his townsmen to the highest branch of some tree in the town.

The characteristic of new societies is freedom of speech as well as of action. I read in some Thunderer the following lines about the editor of The Lightning, the other newspaper of the town: "We wish to use moderation and to keep within the limits of good breeding. We will only go so far as to say that personally he is a sneak, and that as a journalist he is a liar and a scoundrel." The Lightning replies in the same strain, and the public gets amusement for the moderate sum of one or two cents.

During the whole time I was in America Mr. Pulitzer, proprietor of The New York World, and Mr. Charles A. Dana, editor of The Sun, one of the most accomplished journalists, were day after day calling each other such names as "robber," "liar," "mortgaged," "dirty Jew."

Do not, however, draw hasty conclusions from this. I do not know Mr. Pulitzer personally, but I have the pleasure of knowing Col. Cockerill, chief editor of The World, and Mr. Dana, of The Sun. In private life they are perfect gentlemen and men of great talent (Mr. Dana is one of the greatest scholars in America). In public life they are in the swim, they go with the tide. As a study of English the polemic of The World and The Sun was most interesting.

The American press was divided into two camps, the partisans of Pulitzer and the partisans of Dana. Whenever the combatants were driven up for want of fresh epithets of the requisite strength, their supporters suggested some to them. Here are some congratulations, addressed to Mr. Dana, which I read in The St. Louis Globe:

"It was from beginning to end The Sun's stiletto against The World's meat ax, and, as is always the case, the meat ax came out second best. The literature of invective contains nothing finer than some of The Sun's attacks on The World, and the literature of the gutter contains nothing more feeble than The World's defense. The Sun dealt out prussic acid by the drop, and The World replied with rough on rats by the pound. The flatulent anger of Pulitzer was completely overwhelmed by the concentrated venom of Dana."

If I were asked to name the most amusing papers published in the United States, I should not hesitate to award the palm to The Detroit Free Press and The Omaha World. In these two, American humor reveals itself in all its spontaneous gayety, and their drolleries are reproduced from New York to San Francisco, from Montreal to New Orleans.

"Journalism has killed literature, and reporting is killing journalism. It is the last gasp of the dying literature of an epoch; it is the man of letters replaced by the concierge." So exclaims M. Albert Millaud, in one of his witty articles in The Figaro.

In America, reporting has simply overrun, swallowed up journalism. It is a demolition of the wall of private life, the substitution of gossip for chronicle, of chatter for criticism.

For the interviewer nothing is sacred. Audacity is his stock in trade; the most private details of your daily life are at his mercy, and unless you blow his brains out—which is not lawful in New York state—you have no means of getting rid of him.

There is no question too indiscreet for these enterprising inquisitors; they would have interviewed St. Anthony in his hut.

Do not shout victory either because you have succeeded in getting rid of the interviewer without replying to his questions. It is in such cases that the American journalist reveals himself in all his glory. To your stupefaction the newspapers next day will have an account of the conversation which you might have had with their reporters.

If my advice be worth giving, the best thing you can do, when the interviewer presents himself and says, "I am a reporter, sir, and I have come to ask you for a few minutes' chat," is to say to him:

"Glad to see you, sir; pray be seated."

On the 11th of November, 1887, at 9 a. m., the Germanic, after a terribly rough passage of nine days, entered the magnificent harbor of New York. The sun had risen resplendent in a cloudless blue sky. We had just passed Bartholdi's statue of "Liberty Enlightening the World," and it seemed as if France were not far off. It was a sweet sensation, and instinctively I had raised my hat. All at once the Germanic stopped. A little steam tug drew up alongside, and there stepped on board a few custom house officers, followed by several other persons.

"Look out!" cried one of my fellow passengers, seeing that I appeared to be unconscious of danger.

"What is the matter?" I asked.

"The interviewers!"

"[illegible], and here surely," I exclaimed.

No sooner were the words out of my mouth than two young [illegible] that they were journalists.

"We have come to present our respects to you," they said, "and to wish you a pleasant time in our country."

While they uttered these words they scanned me from head to foot, jotting a few strokes on their note books. They were taking my portrait, which appeared next morning at the head of the articles that the press of New York thought fit to devote to me.

Oh! that first afternoon in New York, spent in the company of the interviewers! I shall never forget it!

The office of my lecture manager, Maj. Pond, was situated on the ground floor of the Everett house, where I had put up. Thither I repaired after lunch to undergo the operation of tapping by eight interviewers at once.

"Ah!" said one of them, after the usual salutations, "we are going to bore you, so let us begin at the beginning."

This made me smile.

"I know your first question," I said; "you are going to ask me whether this is my first visit to America."

"You are right; that is generally our first question; but I have another to ask you before. You have just eaten your first meal in America; what did you have?"

"Gentlemen," I replied as seriously as I possibly could, "I have just been in for a piece of turbot, a beefsteak and potato chips, a celery salad, and a vanilla ice."

"And now," remarked another reporter, "I have an important question to put to you. I hope it will not astonish you."

"Oh!" I replied, "I am in America, and quite ready not to be astonished at anything."

"Well, then," said he, "I want to ask you what are your impressions of America."

"Excuse me," I exclaimed, "I have only been in it three hours, and those three hours have been spent in this hotel. You must really allow me to abstain for the moment from telling you what I think of America; for you will admit, I hope, that one must have passed a whole day at least in America, in order to judge it with any accuracy."

Here I rolled a cigarette and rang for a lemon squash.

The reporters immediately made an entry in their note books.

"What is that you have put down?" I asked.

A young fellow, with a face beaming with activity and intelligence, replied: "I wrote that at this point of our conversation you rolled a cigarette and rang for a lemon squash."

The questions they asked really appeared to me so commonplace, so trivial, that I was almost ashamed to think I was the hero of this little farce.

With the idea of giving them something better worth writing, I launched into anecdotes, and told a few to these interviewers.

This brought about a little scene which was quite comic. If I looked at one reporter a little oftener than the rest, while I told an anecdote, he would turn to his brethren and say:

"This story is for my paper, you have no right to take it down, it was told especially to me."

"Not at all," would cry the others, "it was told to all of us."

Next day I procured all the New York morning papers, more from curiosity, I must say in justice to myself, than from vanity, for I was not at all proud of my utterances of the day before.

Judge of my surprise on opening the first paper to find nearly two columns full of amusing details, picturesque descriptions, well told anecdotes, witty remarks, the whole cleverly mingled and arranged by men who, I had always supposed, were mere stenographers.

Everything was faithfully reported and artistically set down. The smallest incidents were rendered interesting by the manner of telling. The major, for instance, who, accustomed to this kind of interview for many years, had peacefully dropped asleep, comfortably installed, with his head on the sofa pillows and his feet on the back of a chair; my own gestures, the description of the pretty and elegantly furnished office—all was very crisp and vivid. They had turned everything to account, even the arrival of the lemon squash was made to furnish a little paragraph that was droll and attractive. You might have imagined that the whole thing was the first chapter of a novel, commencing with the majestic entry of a steamer into New York harbor.

Well, I said to myself, the American journalist knows, at any rate, how to make a savory hash out of very little.

What is
CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

Dr. G. C. Osgood,
Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

Dr. J. F. Kincheloe,
Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

H. A. Archer, M. D.,
111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

SOCIAL SEASON NOW AWAKENS.

HOLIDAYS BRING HAPPINESS FOR THE YOUNGER GENERATION.

Brilliant Prospects of the Bal Poudre and New Year Assembly—Plainfield's [illegible] Unconventionality Compared with the Lively Merrymaking of Our Cousins Over the Brook.

The mails for the last few days have been burdened with invitations for luncheons, teas and dances to be given Christmas week, and the collegians and boarding-school girls who are returning by the dozen will have plenty to occupy their time during vacation. There is not a day from Christmas until after New Year's but has its list of entertainments of one sort or another, and it certainly will not be the fault of the entertainers if Plainfield does not prove an extremely attractive spot during the holidays.

The younger set alone is to be thanked for these gayeties, as the young hostesses are nearly all from the ranks of next year's debutantes. To be sure there are two dances to which everyone will go, the Bal Poudre of the Park Club and the New Year Assembly in the Casino, but the private dances are given by girls not yet out, and their guests are naturally drawn chiefly from the younger set.

The Park Club dance promises to be an unusually pretty affair, and every effort is being made by the committee to insure its success. Powdered hair and patches are always attractive, and as some of the women have decided to wear the costume that matches these accessories the picture will undoubtedly be one long remembered. It might be well to utter a note of warning here. Do not use cornstarch on your hair, be you man or maiden. It has been tried with results suggesting all sorts of unpleasant things.

There was once a man who used cornstarch for the purpose of whitening his head in a minstrel show. As his hair was very thick and long he was unable to wash it out before going to bed, but he brushed it out as well as he could and turned in. In the middle of the night a little mouse came out of its hole, and, attracted by the cornstarch, nibbled off a large lock of the man's hair directly on his forehead. The loss of the lock caused the man to have his hair cut, and while his friends said he was improved he himself was terribly grieved and swore never to use cornstarch again. This is only one of the bad effects of its use.

The New Year Assembly is bound to be a great success, as it always is the best dance of the season. People all the fall have said that they were going to the New Year Assembly if they went to nothing else. Large numbers of people will undoubtedly be imported for the occasion, and if the very excusable defects of the last dance are remedied, the strangers will have cause to remember Plainfield very pleasantly. As to the supper, it may be suggested at the risk of seeming officious that if a diffident male of a rather nervous temperament could secure a demitasse of cafe noir when the rest are regaling themselves on ices he would deeply appreciate it. He would not venture even this suggestion, which is made in all meekness, did he not feel sure that he was voicing the sentiments of many another who would give all his stray nickels for a cup of coffee about 11:30 p. m.

Nothing has been heard lately of the concert which the Melopeia announced for this month, and whether it will eventually materialize or not is a matter of conjecture, though a knowing member said yesterday that the concert was sure to come. The prominence of the soloists spoken of for the concert would make the possibility of their being engaged so late in the season very doubtful, so that unless they have already been secured it might be safe to give up the idea of hearing them. The genuine music-lovers of Plainfield feel the lack of the Philharmonic concerts very much, and it is to be hoped that Mr. Newman will feel justified in engineering them again next year.

Our neighbors over the brook seem to get much more out of life in a social way than do our staid society people in Plainfield proper. Perhaps the secret lies in this being Plainfield proper, very proper, so proper, in fact, that they never think of bursting the iron bonds of their own particular conventionality. This conventionality allows men to go to everything and anything except an Assembly without putting on their evening clothes, but in other respects it causes society to hold so closely to formality that people do not feel justified in making anything but formal calls; and anything like rational social intercourse, except between intimates, is unknown.

Now in North Plainfield the squeal of the Welsh rabbit as it jumps from the chafing dish on to the smiling toast, and the popping of beer corks are heard in the land many evenings in the week, nor is anyone [illegible] by the fear of dyspepsia. They are a jolly lot over in Somerset county, and they have a great deal better time than we do. Another thing that they have something to do with the sociability of this great, good-natured family is the

SOCIABILITY AT LAST.

Westfield Has Another New Club, an Offspring of the "Recent Consolidation."

A new club was organized in Westfield Tuesday night under the name of the Westfield Social Club. It starts off with fifty members and prospects of increasing the number to seventy-five within a few days. Nearly all the members belong to the Westfield Club. The new organization is partly the outcome of the strife recently developed in the Westfield Club between the members of the old W. A. C. and the Union League. The wives and daughters of some of the members refused to go into the Westfield Club after the consolidation, saying they did not receive courteous treatment from new members.

The club's chief aim will be to promote sociability among its members, and to that end it has appointed an entertainment and dramatic committee as large as the entire governing board. Women will be especially welcomed two nights in the week and will have the club-house to themselves every afternoon in the week.

Gale's club-house has been secured and the club will go into its new quarters Jan. 1 with an opening reception.

The President is T. D. Bucknell; Vice-president, A. L. Russell; Secretary, J. B. Wilson; Treasurer, J. Harper Hunt. The Board of Managers consists of L. A. Lightfoot, J. R. Ward and E. J. Whitehead. A. E. Pearsall was elected chairman of the Entertainment Committee.

The trouble in the Central Bowling League of New Jersey, which grew out of the appointment of committees in the Westfield Club, bids fair to be settled. A meeting of the league has been called for Friday night at the Elizabeth Athletic Club-house to let the Consolidated Westfield Club into the league in place of the old Westfield Athletic Club.

IN MEMORIAM.

Mrs. Thomas S. Alberti.

(From The Sabbath Recorder.)

Asenath, youngest daughter of the late Simeon F. and Isabella Randolph, was born in Plainfield, N. J., Dec. [illegible], 18[illegible], and was called into the heavenly rest Dec. 4, 1893, from her late home in New Brunswick. She united with the Seventh-Day Baptist church of Piscataway early in life, under the pastorate of Wm. B. Maxson, D.D. She was married to Thomas S. Alberti on the 14th of June, 18[illegible]. Brother Alberti remains to wait a little while until the union of more than [illegible] years on earth shall be made everlasting in heaven. She was one of the constituent members of the Plainfield church in 18[illegible], and with a single interruption from change of residence, remained faithful in this relation until God transferred her membership to the church above. Failing health alone withdrew her from active and efficient service in the kingdom of Christ.

For more than seven years past she has been an invalid; but patient and uncomplaining, anxious lest others suffer inconvenience on her account, and gladly awaiting the Master's call to "come up higher". The evening before she went home, answering her daughter's question, she said: "I will hear the (heavenly) music tomorrow"; and she did. Earth-worn and wearied with disease, she found "rest, sweet rest"; "peace, sweet peace"; joy, glad joy, among the redeemed.

THE CASHIER DETECTED THEM.

Further Developments Concerning the Forgeries on "Friday" Vail.

It transpires that the losers by the forgeries of the name of Amos R., or "Friday" Vail were Jacob Blimm, proprietor of the Farmers' Hotel, and U. B. Crane of West Front street, and not the City Bank.

A check for $12 50 was received by each of them from Fred C. Langer, a former employe of Mr. Vail. They deposited them to their account in the First National Bank, whence the checks were sent to the City Bank for collection. Cashier Arnold, being familiar with the signature of Mr. Vail, promptly detected the forgery and refused to pay the amounts. The checks were returned to Messrs. Blimm and Crane, and are now in their possession.

The Two Sons in Texas.

From The San Angelo Standard, Dec. 16.

Alonzo T. Ayres, of the firm of Marsh, Ayres & Co., painters, accompanied by Alonzo C. Towsley, of New street, left yesterday morning on the Royal Blue Line for San Angelo, Texas, to visit a sister of Mr. Towsley. They are scheduled to arrive Friday evening. Mr. Ayres's friends hope the change of climate will be a great benefit to his health, and that for his health's sake he will remain in that land of balmy sunshine all winter.—Plainfield, N.J. Daily Press.

The above-mentioned gentlemen arrived Saturday morning and are the guests of their aunt and sister, Mrs. Charles Weber. The two Lons have been having a good time here already. They returned yesterday from a five-days hunt down on Devil's River, where they killed two bears, seven antelopes, one panther, six coyotes, and two wild cats, besides a large number of duck, quail, squirrels and other small game. They express themselves delighted with our county, climate and people, and unless something serious happens back in Jersey will remain until spring.

Surprise to the Spragues.

A surprise party was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Sprague, [illegible] Muhlenberg place, Thursday evening, in honor of the sixteenth anniversary of Foster Sprague. Refreshments were served at midnight and dancing was enjoyed until a late hour. Among the

WITH A CONFEDERATE BULLET.

Comrade Boe Brings an Interesting Souvenir from Southern Battlefield To His Post.

At a meeting of Major Anderson Post, G. A. R., Friday night, Comrade William Boe presented a gavel to the Post. Commander J. Frank Hubbard received it on behalf of the members, with a few appropriate remarks.

The gavel was obtained by Mr. Boe during his recent trip to Chickamauga battle-field. It was turned from a part of a tree and has a Confederate bullet exposed on the side. A silver plate is being engraved by Jeweler Collier, who will have the gavel on exhibition as soon as the plate is attached.

The presentation was made with the understanding that, if the Post ever discontinued to use the gavel for any reason, it will be returned to Comrade Boe or his

THE TWO GEORGE T'S.

From Plainfield's Own Minstrel, to the Post of Madison Square, the Metropolis Is Just Now Offering a Great Lot of Attractions.

Beginning with a matinee Christmas Day Plainfield's own George Thatcher and his company of comedians began a short run in the Star Theatre, presenting for the first time in New York, Thatcher, Rich and Harris's new musical comedy "Africa". Wherever "Africa" has been presented throughout the country it has met with great favor, being pronounced an original and meritorious production replete with humorous dialogue, bright and catchy music, laughable situations, graceful dances and entertaining specialties, and staged in a sumptuous manner, the scenery and costumes being rich and elaborate in design, lending a considerable amount of picturesque and pretty effects to the different scenes.

The company, headed by Geo. Thatcher, whose inimitable comedy methods have gained him a lasting reputation as an entertainer, includes many well-known and capable comedians, dancers, vocalists, pretty girls and a large chorus.

In the Fifth Avenue Theatre, New York city, Miss Rose Coghlan and her superb company have made a great hit in Oscar Wilde's brilliant comedy, "A Woman of No Importance". The New York press warmly commended the production, which is one of the most expensive ever seen in the metropolis. The dresses worn by the ladies in the company are unusually handsome and were all imported from Paris. Miss Rose Coghlan, for many years a reigning favorite, has made the hit of her career as Mrs. Arbuthnot, the woman of no importance. In the company with this actress are Misses Ada Dyas, Effie Shannon, Louise Boucicault, Kate Denin Wilson, Constance Levien, and Messrs. Maurice Barrymore, Robert Taber and Thos. Whiffen. The scenes of this clever comedy, which fairly sparkles with wit and epigram, are laid in Hunstanton, one of the most delightful of England's country places. The people who appear in the play are fine examples of a certain class of English high life. Through them Mr Wilde administers a stinging rebuke upon what is termed abroad, the upper classes. "A Woman of No Importance" had a whole season's run in London.

The great six-day bicycle race, which began Christmas Eve., Dec. 24, in Madison Square Garden, promises to be the greatest cycling event the world has ever seen. All the champions and record-holders have entered. There will be short races every afternoon and evening, of from 1 to 10 miles, for which $5,000 in purses will be given, and all the crack short distance riders will compete. Every afternoon and evening there will be concerts by the Seventh Regiment Band, under the leadership of Walter B. Rogers, and Mr. Rogers will give a cornet solo at each performance. The price of admission has been placed at the low figure of 50 cents.

In the Eden Musee, the wonderful wax-group, the Maiden and the Gorilla, has been the sensation. Lovers of music find delight within the walls of the unique little resort every day in the week, including Sunday. Everything alluring in song and dance may be found in the graceful entertainment given by the Spanish troupe of Mlle. Tortajada. Lola Yberri has come out in a new castanet dance this week, and will introduce an original flower dance soon. The miraculous illusionist Chevalier Mystant Delprade grows more clever and amusing. His performances with Mlle. Sara and Mariette are as intensely interesting as the chic young woman who are involved in his tricks. Martha George, the German nightingale, appears in the role of the Ratcatcher of Hamlin, and other specialties. The enterprise of the management in providing holiday attractions is shown by the announcement this week of a Santa Claus in wax who will occupy a traditional chimney corner in the winter garden and dispense Maillard's finest confections to children during the entire Christmas week.

The Lenox Lyceum, at Madison avenue and 59th street, has been the home of Kris Kringle for two weeks, and the dear old man who makes the children happy and has such a good time himself will be at home there until December 30, from 2 until 10:30 p. m. each day. The toy exposition and Christmas goods show is a good one, and should be attractive to Plainfielders. There are entertainments on the stage, the magician is a smart worker, the marionettes are a Christmas attraction; and the Lion, the Lady and the Lamb, all in a gilded cage, and living in harmony together from the embodiment of the prophecy. The great display of Christmas goods and toys makes the show valuable to out-of-town people, and the managers give a present to every lady who purchases a ticket for 25 cents, and to every child who buys one for 15 cents. The music is excellent, and an important addition to the attractions offered is the presence of George Francis Train, the well-known children's friend, who is at the Lyceum every afternoon and evening, having a good time himself and acting as sort of a side-partner of Santa Claus.

744 Watchung Avenue, Plainfield.

To the Editor of The Plainfield Courier:—I understand that you conduct your paper as you deem proper, and I never sympathized with the cry of "Stop my paper". But in my opinion the right of an editor to run his paper as he sees fit, carries with it by implication the right of the subscriber to discontinue the same when he deems it proper so to do.

You and I look at the course of the present Administration on the Hawaiian question from different standpoints. In my opinion the message of President Cleveland of Monday last was an able and candid presentation of the facts of the case. We may, however, honestly differ in regard to [illegible] and while fair and manly criticism is always in order, it seems to me that the leading editorial in your issue of yesterday far over-steps the limits of fair discussion and savors greatly of personal abuse. We are told on the best authority to "Honor the King", meaning, of course, the ruler.

The President of our country is by virtue of his office entitled to a certain degree of respect, and I submit that when in yesterday's issue we are told that "his attempt to share the burden of responsibility for his disgusting lack of diplomatic wisdom is not that of a god breathing the rarified atmosphere of Olympus; it is the act of the pettifogging lawyer, practicing in the police courts of this city of Buffalo, and pleading for the release of companions, whose conviviality has led them to dispute the law. Grover is at home on his own level", it is entirely proper for patriotic citizens, irrespective of party, to discountenance this method of partisan warfare by withholding their support from a paper indulging therein.

You will please send me a bill of any sum I owe you, and discontinue my paper after Thursday of this week, and I will hereafter get my local news from The Press. ISAAC L. MILLER.

"NEARER, MY GOD, TO THEE."

Delegations from Many Institutions Pay Tribute to George H. Babcock.

Services were held at the late home of George H. Babcock, 211 West Eighth street, Wednesday, at 5 p. m.

Delegations were present from the Camera Club, the Board of Education, the Library Board, the Faculty of Alfred University at Alfred Centre, and one of twenty-five from the employes of Babcock & Wilcox.

The services began with the hymn "Asleep in Jesus" by Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Titsworth, Miss Nancy Randolph and Elmer E. Runyon. Portions of the Scripture were read by President Arthur E. Main of Alfred University.

The Rev. A. H. Lewis of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, who had been Mr Babcock's pastor since 1872, preached the brief sermon. He eulogized the deceased and gave a rapid sketch of his literary, business, home and Christian life, and spoke feelingly of his own relations with Mr Babcock.

"One Sweetly Solemn Thought" was sung, and the Rev. L. E. Livermore, editor of The Sabbath Recorder, offered a prayer. The services ended with the singing of "Nearer, My God, to Thee", which Mr. Babcock's nieces had, at his request, sung shortly before his death.

The remains lay in a casket covered with tan-drab plush with heavy silver trimmings. The features appeared natural and the expression was that of peaceful rest. The floral pieces were very handsome, including a large wreath of roses from the employes of the Babcock & Wilcox Works, bunches of roses from the Plainfield Camera Club and Mrs. Babcock's Sabbath-school class, and roses from the school children, purchased by penny contributions from the scholars and teachers of all the school in the city.

Slight Fire at the Fair.

The fair in the Unitarian church Thursday was a success. Although the attendance was not very large, those who were there kept up a brisk trade at the various tables. The following presided at the different tables:

FIRST OF THE CHORALS.

The Opening Concert of the Season, a Glorious Success.

Thursday's Plainfield Choral Society concert, the first of the present season's series, has never been surpassed by a like entertainment given in this city. The chorus itself, strengthened in numbers and musical education, appeared to the best possible advantage; the soloists had been selected with excellent judgment, and the orchestra from the New York Philharmonic Club rendered a service to all that enabled them to make a greater harmony of voices than has been heard in Music Hall in many a day.

Messrs. D. E. Davis, D. E. Titsworth and G. T. Rogers comprise the Music Committee of the Society, and they undoubtedly were responsible for the excellent programme selected for last night's entertainment, which credit must also be given to Prof. E. J. Fitzhugh, whose genius for imparting musical instruction to an intelligent and capable chorus made the concert a gratifying success.

Aside from the chorus singing, the honors of the evening were fairly accorded Miss Tirzah Hamlen, contralto. Her clear, sweet voice reminded one of far-away chimes playing tunes that one has heard before. When Miss Hamlen sang "The Lost Chord", a spellbound audience waited until the last note died away, and, after a brief, impressive silence, broke simultaneously into tremendous applause that continued for fully five minutes. The only floral gift of the evening was placed in her hands there. It was a huge cluster of holly-bra[illegible] by a broad ribbon that rivaled [illegible] holly berries in brilliant coloring.

As the soprano soloist, Miss Jennie Hall fulfilled every [illegible] allotted her to the equal [illegible] of all who listened to her [illegible]. The solo "These are They which came out of great tribulation" was given with a power and finish that establishes a reputation in Plainfield for Miss Hall that will always make her welcome hereafter.

Dr. Carl E. Dufft, barytone, sang "The Evening Star", from Tannhauser, as it never was sung here before, his magnificent voice meeting every requirement of the grand masterpiece of Wagner. Dr. Dufft's solos in "The Holy City" were equally enjoyed, and hearty applause greeted his every appearance.

E. C. Towne, tenor, seemed to be unfortunate in making selections of music that did not appear to be particularly popular with his audience. His solo "O Paradise", from L'Africaine, was beautifully sung, but hardly appreciated. It was in his solo parts taken in the rendition of "The Holy City" that Mr. Towne aroused his hearers to a high pitch of enthusiasm, the opening solo, "No Shadows Yonder", being fully as much enjoyed as ever.

Mrs. Asa Collier sang a trio with Miss Hall and Miss Hamlen, in which she sustained her reputation in every degree.

Judging from the audience alone, "The Holy City" was much more attractive than previous selections.

"Phoenix Expirans", by Chadwick, might as well have been omitted, for it interested and entertained but a small portion of the audience. The Christmas Carol, a chorus without orchestral accompaniment, was short, and not particularly sweet to the acute ear.

The work of the orchestra was in the main very satisfactory. There seemed to be a disposition, ever recurring, to bring the accompaniment to the fore to the detriment of the chorus and solo singing. Especially during the solo by Miss Hamlen was "The Lost Chord" instrumental production so loud that the fine vocal effect of many passages was spoiled. There can be no questioning the fact, however, that the Philharmonic orchestra adds materially to the pleasure gained from the Choral Society's series of concerts.

The society itself needs all praise that can be bestowed for the stirring and splendid rendition of "The Holy City". This piece showed the careful training of a master in every line. The music, in itself grand, was sung with a power and expression that leaves no opportunity for unfavorable criticism. Mr. Fitzhugh demonstrated his power and the musical ability of his pupils, last night, to the intense satisfaction of a critical audience.

NOTORIOUS JOHN GABLE AGAIN.

After the Plainfield Police Get Hands Upon Him, His Father-in-Law Gets Him Free.

John B. Gable, whose escapades are known to most Plainfield people, principally on account of his eloping with Mrs. W. B. Avery a few years ago, was arrested at the North Avenue station Friday evening, while waiting for the 6:21 train for New York.

Gable, it is said, is employed in an upholstering establishment in New York. Periodically he comes to Plainfield and causes more or less trouble.

Yesterday he came out, and the police say broke into his former home on Cottage place and confiscated a bronze statue and base, worth probably $10.

Policeman Glass was first apprised of the matter, when a colored boy told him. The officer went to the place, but Gable

The Constitutionalist.

A. L. Force, Publisher & Proprietor.

Walter [illegible] City [illegible]

With this issue The Constitutionalist completes its twenty-sixth year of publication, and on the eve of another new year it extends holiday greetings to its friends and patrons and wishes them happiness and success as abundant as have been showered upon its own appreciative head.

In looking back over its long record, the printing and publishing house of The Constitutionalist may be excused for a sense of pride in its honorable career, and of gratitude for its prosperity. The publisher of The Constitutionalist and employes are one of the happiest newspaper families in the State, as was evidenced by the Christmas presentation of a handsome cane to the publisher, as recorded in another paragraph in this issue. The token of high esteem and affection in which the employer is held, were fully testified to in this pleasant incident, and Mr. Force warmly expressed his appreciation of the feeling that all were working together in harmony for the best interests of the paper.

The Constitutionalist hopes and aims to progress continually, and it only asks the same generous public support which it has hitherto enjoyed, to bring triumph to its endeavors.

A bill has been introduced in the House by Representative English, adding $300,000 to the amount already appropriated for the Newark public building. When does Plainfield get hers?

If the Republican caucus will permit a suggestion, The Press would recommend the election of Councilman Wm. G. E. See to the presidency of the Common Council. He is a skilled parliamentarian, and his keenness, firmness and dignity would grace the chair.

The powers that be have slated James T. MacMurray for City Clerk. Good enough! There's no reason why the clever young man who used to catch flies on the Crescent diamond, and who latterly has caught voters for his party, should not catch some of the emoluments which his work in the harness merits.

The Press hears criticism both favorable and unfavorable concerning the proposed new building ordinance. All builders, contractors, and others interested, are reminded that tonight they have opportunity to meet the committee and discuss the matter fully. The most objection is made to the proposition to assess a small fraction of per cent. on the cost of each building, for the city treasury.

Who next is to receive the abuse of the ring organ? Private citizens and Christian gentlemen have been vilified in its columns. The Councilmanic hand that fed it, has been venomously bitten. And now the President—that functionary whom every schoolboy is taught to revere—is with his family most infamously insulted with the vilest attack imaginable. When A. E. Gordon of the New Brunswick Times said in his paper that it was a good thing Garfield was shot, the infuriated populace drove him to the seclusion of the Pennsylvania mountains, where he tremblingly hid in mortal fear of his life. The utterances of A. E. Gordon in the day of the lamented Garfield were no more traitorous or seditious than are the nasty attacks of the rotten-hearted ring organ today. Isn't that moral pretender, steeped in his own corruption, a pretty spectacle for decent people to reflect upon!

The pious editor of the ring organ, whose fine feelings were so outraged at the alleged "indelicate" advertising pictures about town, and who a few days ago was praying editorially for a religious revival "in our midst", is sinking lower in the depths of degradation. No scandalmonger ever circulated a more disreputable and disgraceful story than the filth which the ring editor has just published so gleefully in a paper posing as a great moral factor among Plainfield households. It was an infamous insult to the President and the President's family, and an insult to every high-minded and patriotic American citizen. The editor of the ring organ is by his daily exhibitions of his private character showing Plainfield just what the color of his morals actually is. The disgust expressed in another column by an honored citizen is a merited rebuke to the lowbred and indecent publication.

The dismantlement of World's Fair structures has in one respect proved a godsend to the poor of Chicago. In Jackson Park there were recently 2 000 wagon loads of excellent firewood which the officials were glad to get rid of. The Chicago Relief and Aid Society obtained permission to cart the wood away, and put up the following sign on the park fence near the Sixty-second street gate: "Free Wood for the Poor". Any person with a horse and wagon is now admitted to the park and allowed to take away all the wood his wagon will hold, the only condition being that he shall present a permit from the society. The pile of debris through which the wood is scattered has a length of 300 yards, a width of 100 yards, and a height of 12 feet. It consists of baskets, boxes and barrels. The man in need of fuel has only to delve in this pile to get as serviceable kindling wood as could be found anywhere. The applicants are foreigners for the most part, and judging from their ragged coats and pinched faces they could not get the means of warmth for their families anywhere else.

A Symphony Concert in the Spring.

P. Ludwig Conde has organized a Symphony Orchestra composed of the following members:

First Violins—Fred. Goddard, C. Davis.
Second Violins—Siegfried Arens, Gilbert Lovell.
Cornets—Raymond McGee, Henry Class.
Cello—Forsaine Farrer.
Pianist—Stuart Smith.

The orchestra meets once a week in Mr. Conde's studio on Front street. They are practising some difficult music, and are already showing a marked improvement under the skillful direction of their leader. At present they are diligently working on the opera "Martha". Although they do not play it with the skill and precision expected of an older and more experienced orchestra, yet their rendering of it reflects much credit to themselves and their efficient teacher. Mr. Conde expects to give a concert in the spring, assisted by New York talent, at which the Symphony Orchestra will appear.

Worshipful Master C. C. Howard.

ILLUMINATED BURGLARY.

Thieves Boldly Ransack, by Lamplight the House of Steward Wertz of the Country Club.

(From The Press of December 27.)

A daring and partially successful robbery was committed in the house of Max Wertz, 221 College place, last evening.

Mr. Wertz is steward of the Union County Country Club, and remains at the club-house until 12 every night. His wife generally leaves the house at 4:30 in the afternoon and goes to the Casino, where she stays with her husband until his work is done. This she did yesterday.

About 8:30 last evening Mrs. Wm. S. Benson, who lives next door at 219, heard the slamming of a door in Mr. Wertz's house and looked that way from a window. The two houses are near together, and Mrs. Benson saw a man with a lamp going through the rooms on the first floor and then ascending the stairs and walking about on the floor above.

Mrs. Benson called her daughter, who said she had heard the doorbell next door ring shortly before. These proceedings appeared strange to them, but they concluded that someone had been sent on an errand from the club by Mr. Wertz, and thought no more of the matter.

Perhaps fifteen minutes later Mrs. Benson saw the man leave by the front door, join another at the gate, and disappear with him in the city park. A number of children were playing on the street at the time.

Mr. Wertz returned at 12 and found that the house had been entered by thieves, and telephoned to the police. The thief had gained an entrance by unscrewing the hinges from the cellar hatchway door in the rear, and bursting in another door at the head of the cellar stairs.

All of the rooms and closets upstairs had been overhauled. A trunk full of dresses had been overturned and apparently hurriedly examined. Mr. and Mrs. Wertz have been married but a short time, and had in the house all of the valuable presents they had received at the wedding. A casket containing diamonds and the more valuable gold jewelry was passed by, while several trinkets, valuable only for their history, were stolen. A valuable gold and enameled watch, the works of which cannot be duplicated in this country, was appropriated, however, and also a pair of Mr. Wertz's studs. Of a pair of earrings one was taken and the other left. The thief seemed to be after money, for a valuable haul could have been easily made had he been so inclined.

The robbery was evidently perpetrated by some one who fully understood the plan of Mr. Wertz's house and his domestic programme.

The method of entering the house was the same as that used by workmen who had occasion to force entrance recently to make repairs.

TAM O'SHANTERS DANCE AGAIN.

Even Westfield Soda-Water Does Not Restrain Their Exuberance of Spirits.

A return dance was given by the young men to the Tam O'Shanter Club at the residence of John Kirkner, West Eighth street, Tuesday night.

Before beginning to trip "the light fantastic toe" the party rode to Westfield in stages, and, visiting one of the drug stores, exhausted its supply of soft drinks. The return to Mr. Kirkner's home was made about 10.

The spacious parlor and dining room afforded an excellent opportunity for dancing which was soon embraced, and time passed rapidly until 12, when supper was served.

After the inner man had been satisfied, a waltz was started, and the dancing was recommenced. Mr. and Mrs. Huntsman acted as chaperons. The committee having this successful affair in charge were Messrs. Kirkner, McLaughlin and Richards. The music was furnished by Mrs. Buckley and a violinist from Newark.

Those present were: Miss Alice Needham, Miss Bertha Needham, Miss Norah Williams, Miss Lulu French, Miss Laura Emmons, Miss H. Boice, Miss Georgie Fountain, Miss Bessie Cornwall, Miss Augustine Lindsmole, Miss Ethel Holmes, Miss E. Gifford, Miss Maude Lowrie, Miss M. Hodge, Miss Margaret Vermeule, Miss Carrie Kellogg, Miss Kirkner, Mrs. Kirkner, Chester Baker, Charles Angleman, Arthur Serrell, Albert Wollmann, Frank Richards, John McLaughlin, William Thiega, Warren Church, Fred Smith, Frank L. C. Martin, John Kirkner, C. Hazeltine, Mr. Randolph, E. Egan and Clarence Smith.

AND THE GIRL DID NOT FAINT.

Three Rampant Robbers Routed by a Pistol Promptly and Fearlessly Produced.

A bold attempt at highway robbery was made near Mt. Horeb, Monday night, and but for the prompt action of the accosted the thieves would probably have carried out their design.

John G. Bicknell, an employe of James P. Homan, was driving from the Christmas entertainment at Washingtonville, in company with a feminine friend, when, near Mt. Horeb, three rough-looking men stepped out of the shadow of some trees. One of them grasped the horse by the bridle, while two others requested the transfer of what money and jewelry the occupants of the buggy might have.

It was bright moonlight, and it could be seen that they meant that the transfer should take place then and there, and without ordinary business courtesy.

John is not the sort of a man to part with his money at the simple request of so fresh an acquaintance, so he drew from his pocket his revolver, and, looking over its bright barrel, pointed it at the man who held the horse. The man didn't need to be told twice to drop the bridle, as the bright glint of the moonbeams on the polished steel was all the argument needed.

John then boldly whipped his horse, and got away, thus prostrating the boldest attempt at robbing that had been made in that section in a long time.

The brave young woman was calm and collected throughout the trying experience.

Merry Christmas in the Mountains.

The Mary E. Wilson Memorial chapel in Washingtonville was filled by the members of the Sunday-school and their friends Monday evening to enjoy the Christmas exercises provided by the committee. Those taking solo parts showed by their zeal the interest they felt in the festivities.

Much credit is due to the committee for their labors in making this festive occasion a success.

After the programme refreshments were served, and candies and oranges were distributed, all declaring they had a Merry Christmas.

The programme was as follows:

A PLAIN UNVARNISHED TALE.

Ben Wright's Night Stick Recalls Some Early Ideas an Interesting [illegible]

A plain, unvarnished white oak stick stands modestly in a corner of The Press office. The wood, polished with long use, still shows the veins which lay next to the [illegible] bark. The heavy iron ferrule at the end is worn away on the side, and for a few inches above the wood is rough and [illegible]. The handle is a ball of twine wound tightly about the cane near the top.

Thirty years ago Night Watchman Ben. Wright cut the stick in a wood where the Crescent Avenue church now stands and stripped the bark from it. The piece of pipe coupling which he put on it for a ferrule was then three inches long; now it scarcely measures three-eighths of an inch. The rest of it was ground off during the twenty-five years that Wright carried the stick during his nightly rounds.

Fifteen times the oak stick was used to wake up families in burning houses. Its vigorous application to the door of the engine house was the alarm then in vogue. Three times fire was discovered by the watchman on the corner now occupied by Druggist Leggett.

Wright came down from Warren county forty-five years ago. A stage brought him to the celebrated railroad terminus—White House—whence he came to Plainfield by train. When he came up Cherry street he did not see much that resembles the Plainfield of today.

There was not a brick building in the place, and most of the frame structures were but a story and a half in height. Where the Babcock building is being erected Laing's Hotel was in its glory. The annex in which the dances were held was formerly a Methodist church, which stood across the street. Opposite was an orchard enclosed by a post and rail fence. Through the lot ran a cow-path afterward laid out as Madison avenue. A half-acre on the corner of Front street and Madison avenue was offered for sale for $125.

Ben Wright is still going his rounds at night, trying the store doors and watching suspicious wanderers. He is proud of the fact that no burglar ever entered a store that he was paid to watch.

THE BROWNIES GO TO CHURCH.

Santa Claus Got Mad at the Congregationalists, and Palmer Cox's Queer Little Fellows Helped Them Out.

The Sunday-school of the Congregational church held their Christmas entertainment Tuesday night.

Quite a number of the friends of the Sunday-school were present, and were much pleased with the performance.

In part first of the programme several selections were excellently rendered by Mrs. Dwight, pianist, P. Ludwig Conde, violinist, and Mrs. B. T. Barnes, organist.

Miss Clara VanFleet gave an entertaining recitation, and six cunning little tots afforded much amusement by their speeches and evolutions.

The principal feature of the entertainment was a performance "How the Brownies Fooled Santa Claus", given by members of the school.

As a prologue, the Christmas Committee, consisting of Miss Jenkins, Miss Chase, and Messrs. Fuller, Robinson and and Belnap, reported to have expended all their money on candy-boxes, leaving no funds for candy. They decided to leave a note to Santa Claus asking him to furnish the candy instead of the usual gifts. When Santa Claus [Horace J. Martin] appeared, he became enraged and refused to give the candy, saying it was a trick to provide the candy for nothing, and left the stage in anger. Five Brownies then appeared, and by magical means they provided the candy, which, together with oranges, was passed around to the scholars and visitors.

The Brownies were all very funny, but the funniest was Harold Noe or the Dude His Brownie companions were J. W. Robinson the Policeman, Warren Weisman the Clown, Willie Whiting the Indian, and Eddie Weisman the Dwarf "Try".

The entertainment was a most novel and successful one, and congratulations were showered not only on the participants but also on the committee in charge, Miss M. E. Dwight, Miss Bainbridge, and Miss Robinson.

The Christmas decorations were very pretty, consisting of trees and other evergreens, massed at the front of the church, and with an evergreen star overhead.

Hackman Hurt by Mysterious Horse.

Hackman Utzinger took Harry Dorsey, John Thompson, William Jackson and James Babbitt out for a carriage ride last Tuesday noon. They stopped in Scotch Plains, and when returning by way of Fanwood the atmosphere had its influence on the horse, which became unmanageable and ran the wagon into an iron railing. Utzinger was thrown forward under the horse's feet and was injured. Babbitt fell directly on top of him, and escaped with slight bruises. The others scrambled out of the wrecked wagon unhurt. Utzinger was taken to the Fanwood station and brought home on a train.

AID FOR UNEMPLOYED

Noble Undertakings at Several Cities.

Massachusetts's Governor Believes the State Should Assist in the Work—One Thousand Men Put to Work at Buffalo—Progress of Relief.

BOSTON, Dec. 27.—A conference was held at the state house yesterday on the subject of relieving the unemployed in the cities and towns of the state between Gov. Russell, Dr. Park of the Medfield asylum trustees, Clerk Wells of the board of charity and lunacy, and Dr. Samuel W. Abbott of the state board of health. The conference was private.

Gov. Russell urged the gentlemen to look about and see what could be done. If there were buildings begun or in process of construction, measures should be taken to push them to completion. The state, he thought, was affected in these times as well as the city. If legislation were necessary he would do what he could and assign the matter at the close of his term to his successor, in whose hands the project of relief would suffer nothing.

Employment for Buffalo's Destitute.

BUFFALO, Dec. 27.—The city authorities yesterday began to furnish work for the unemployed of the city and 1,000 men were put to work breaking stone at 10 cents per hour, the product to be used for park roads and also sold to paving companies. The fund started last week for the aid of the poor has reached $[illegible] and is being added to daily.

Providing for Boston's Needy.

BOSTON, Dec. 27.—The citizens' relief committee have so far progressed in opening avenues for the deserving unemployed that is expected to put 500 men to work on streets and sewers to-day. In a few days more it is probable that other means will be found to give work to the needy.

Banking Houses Resume.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Dec. 27.—Sheldon and Binney, and Wilbur, Jackson and Co., the bankers who were forced to suspend payments on Aug. 12, resumed business this morning. The assignee has arranged with the creditors to accept liquidation notes.

800 Hands Discharged.

DANVILLE, Pa., Dec. 27.—The 800 employes of the Mahoning rolling mills, which went into the hands of a receiver yesterday, have been discharged. The machine shop and foundry will be operated by the receiver.

Work Resumed in All Departments.

LOWELL, Mass., Dec. 27.—The Lowell manufacturing company has resumed work in all its departments with a full complement of help. There were many more applicants for work than could be given situations.

Unemployed Parade the Streets.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 27.—Two thousand men out of employment paraded the streets yesterday under socialist auspices. They were repeatedly dispersed by the police, but quickly gathered again.

Appeal to Merchants.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 27.—Over 2,000 unemployed of this city, in mass meeting yesterday passed resolutions appealing to merchants to meet and adopt measures for their relief.

Destitution at New Britain.

HARTFORD, Conn., Dec. 27.—Many cases of destitution are reported in New Britain, and systematic efforts are being made to afford relief.

Given Work By the City.

FORT WAYNE, Ind., Dec. 27.—Fifty-four unemployed laborers were given work by the city. Many unfortunate families are benefited.

Another Mill Resumes.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Dec. 27.—The Lymansville mill has just started up after a shut down since September.

Closed Till January 8.

CLEVELAND, O., Dec. 27.—The Cleveland rolling mill company has shut down its wire mills until Jan. 8.

Gillett Sues for Divorce.

DES MOINES, Iowa, Dec. 27.—E. H. Gillette has sued for a divorce from his wife, Sophie E. Gillette, on the ground of desertion. He at one time represented this district in congress as a greenbacker. He was for years General Weaver's partner in the publication of the Iowa Tribune.

Tried to Saw a Man's Head Off.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Dec. 27.—August Boetting, of Bellevue, has been arrested for attempting to saw off the head of Henry Doetzenroth. The men had a fight, and, getting Doetzenroth down, Boetting inflicted an ugly cut in his neck with a saw.

BUSINESS ON DEBT

That Is Robbing Labor of the Fruits of Its Toil.

Tariff Nor Lack of Confidence Not Responsible—The Life of Civil Liberty in Danger—The K. of L. Master Workman Outlines His Policy.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 27.—General Master Workman Sovereign, of the Knights of Labor, has issued an official statement in which he outlines the course he will pursue. He says the order must put its principles into the statutes of the country, and make them a part of the practice of society. He continues:

"Everywhere is starvation and death, while corporate greed and avaricious usury—lords apply the arrogant lash with relentless fury, and congress, like a wooden god, looks down in silent contempt on the miseries of the most patriotic and industrious people the world ever knew. With these conditions confronting the people everywhere, if we cannot persuade society with a healthy public opinion on the subject of labor and force the adoption of our principles, we deserve defeat."

The general master workman further says that he feels warranted in asserting that civil liberty in this country will die in the next seven years unless the Knights of Labor or some like organization comes to the rescue. He then shows that, according to the eleventh census, the increase of wealth is about $[illegible] per year, while the interest charges exceed $[illegible] per annum.

"Do not mistake it for tariff delusions," he concludes, "or the lack of public confidence. It is the jingle of shackles that is always heard by a nation that forces the transaction of business on debt and credit and robs labor of the fruits of its toil to pay the interest."

Threats from French Anarchists.

PARIS, Dec. 27.—Written threats to destroy various public buildings in this city and elsewhere continue to be made, ostensibly by anarchists. The latest buildings threatened are the stations of the Eastern railway. Every precaution has been taken to prevent the threats being put into execution. Among the measures adopted is an examination of the luggage of passengers, it being feared that the anarchists will attempt to smuggle a trunk or valise containing an infernal machine into the stations. The officials of the company at Pantin, three and a half miles northeast of Paris, have taken stringent precautions to guard the station there. Pantin is a manufacturing town, and it is supposed that some of the anarchist workmen there are the authors of the threatening letters received.

France and Spain in Africa.

PARIS, Dec. 27.—A pamphlet written by Colonel de Polignac attracts considerable attention. The writer proposes that France should ally herself with the Moors in order to extend her influence in northern Africa. Colonel de Polignac declares that if an alliance should be established France could compel the Moors to live at peace with the Spanish. Then, he says, an alliance could be formed between France and Spain. France would thus become mistress of the western Mediterranean, while Spain would be able to place sufficient artillery along the bay of Algeciras to render Gibraltar untenable by the British.

Will Fight at Night.

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—Contrary to general expectations, Corbett and Mitchell will not fight by daylight. This information was conveyed to the eastern representative of the Duval athletic club, of Jacksonville, in a letter from J. E. T. Bowden, the general manager of the club. Mr. Bowden says the principals and club favored the daylight plan, but letters received from many sporting men suggested that the contest be fought at night, and so the former plan has been abandoned.

Chicago's Finances.

CHICAGO, Dec. 27.—Comptroller Wetherell has made arrangements with the five banks in which city money is deposited to provide $[illegible] for the purpose of meeting the pay-rolls of the city departments for this year and the satisfaction of claims which must be met before the first of the year. Expert Accountant King's report on the fiscal position of the city, which will be presented to Mayor Swift, it is said, will show a deficit of $1,000,000.

Ice Gorge in the Mohawk River.

CANAJOHARIE, N. Y., Dec. 27.—The ice in the Mohawk river broke up and gorged near Fort Plain, causing the water to back up and cover the New York Central railroad tracks several inches. At St. Johnsville it is necessary to use boats to reach the river bridge. The mercury has fallen to 10 above zero, which will no doubt check the flood. The ice men had just commenced their harvest.

No British Colony Wanted.

PARIS, Dec. 27.—It having been reported that a British colony was to be founded at Tamaris, on the gulf of Lyons, the Figaro makes a strong protest against the formation of a British colony there. It bases its objection principally on the fact that the [illegible]

TAX RIOTS IN SICILY

City Buildings Stormed and Burned By the Mob.

The Arrests of a Socialist Who Was Urging Revolt Causes an Attack on the Police—Crispi Urges More Equitable Assessment of the Taxes.

PALERMO, Dec. 27.—During the anti-tax riot at Terrasini, near this city, the octroi offices were set on fire and completely destroyed.

A riot was caused in Valguarnera by a police commissary arresting a socialist preaching revolt. A thousand men and women stormed the gendarmes' barracks in an attempt to rescue the prisoner, but were repulsed. The mob afterwards set fire to the town hall, the postoffice, the magistrates' office, and the residences of the mayor, police commissary and several citizens, all of which were badly damaged or destroyed.

Premier Crispi has sent a circular to the prefects in Sicily requesting them to urge the mayors to confer and devise means for a more equitable assessment of taxes and see that the taxes upon the necessaries of life are levied without undue severity.

Prior to the riot in Lercara di Freddi on Saturday the local workingmen's unions sent a telegram to Premier Crispi begging him to intervene against the octroi duties. The premier, in reply, expressed sympathy with the people's legitimate demands, pointed out the necessity of preventing violence, and urged the people to ignore agitators. The unions telegraphed back to Crispi that they had posted his message throughout the town and that they confided in him.

Considers Doujan a Harmless Idiot.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27.—Vice President Stevenson said to-day, regarding the arrest of the crank Doujan, that he was much surprised at the importance attached to that action. Mr. Stevenson said he had received communications from Doujan very frequently during the summer, some of them threatening, but all of them very weak [illegible] and shifting mind, and he had decided that Doujan was a harmless idiot.

Condemn the Wilson Bill.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Dec. 27.—Representatives chosen by the employes of the three largest [illegible] manufacturing concerns in Rochester, [illegible] the Vogt [illegible] company and the Stecher [illegible] company, have issued an address [illegible] workingmen deprecating unnecessary changes in the present tariff, and particularly condemning the Wilson bill.

Sent Many Infernal Machines.

BERLIN, Dec. 27.—Many sham infernal machines, sent by practical jokers to friends, have passed through the post-offices in the last few days. The police are on the track of the senders and will prosecute the offenders with rigorous severity. They have already arrested one offender, a lady.

Doujan's Record in Newark.

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 27.—Joseph Doujan, the crank, who has been arrested in Washington for threatening the lives of several prominent men, formerly lived in this city. He was arrested here on several occasions for petty crimes, and always succeeded in escaping conviction. He bears an unsavory reputation.

Ancillary Receivers for the Santa Fe.

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—Judge Brown in the United States circuit court has appointed Joseph W. Reinhart, John J. McCook and J. C. Rogers ancillary receivers for the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe railroad company.

Leary's Body Found.

POTTSVILLE, Pa., Dec. 27.—After very hard and incessant labor the body of Jerry Leary, the miner who was entombed in the East Bear Ridge colliery, at Mahanoy Plane, Friday night, has been found. All hopes for his rescue had been abandoned. The body was not mutilated. Leary's death was caused by a broken neck. He was a widower, and leaves several children.

War with Dervishes.

LONDON, Dec. 27.—A despatch to the Central News says that quantities of war material are being shipped from the Italian arsenals to Massowah on the Red sea to be used in the operations against the dervishes. The despatch adds that two regiments of irregular troops will be raised for service in Africa.

Commissioner Sheehan Denies It.

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—Police Commissioner Sheehan denied the story published in the New York Times to the effect that he was a defaulter while comptroller of the city of Buffalo. The commissioner said: "This is an old story that was thoroughly exposed by an investigation in 1882."

Harrison Has a Boom.

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—Daily America says it has just leaked out that the friends of ex-President Harrison have perfected an organization and have formally gone to work to make him the republican standard bearer in 1896.

McKane Gets a Stay.

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—Judge Cullen, of Brooklyn, has handed down a decision in the case of John Y. McKane, of Gravesend, and his confederates, recently convicted of contempt. He grants the stay asked for, pending an appeal to the general term.

Monmouth Park License Revoked.

THE NEW YORK TIMES.

A DEMOCRATIC NEWSPAPER.

What THE TIMES is:

A high-class newspaper for the city reader and for the country home; for the merchant the professional man, the financier, the politician, the teacher, the farmer, and the mechanic—for every American who would be promptly and truthfully told what the people of this world are doing; for women and for young folks, interested in household affairs, in new books and [illegible] in art, science, religion, and education, in the rivalries of amateur sports in society, and in all the lighter goings-on and wholesome gossip of the day. It is a full, clean and complete newspaper, conducted with intelligence for intelligent people.

What THE TIMES believes in:

Federal taxation imposed in the interest of the Government and of the whole people, not for the restriction of trade and the benefit of the few; an honest dollar that the hand of toil may receive without loss and pay over without shame; a liberal expenditure for pensions to veterans who need and deserve them, and to no others; the Democratic party as a better instrumentality of popular government than the Republican; and in keeping that party true to its aims under sound leadership.

The financial page of THE TIMES is a capital manual for investors, for bankers and the officers and trustees of savings banks, trust companies, insurance companies. Railway earnings, stock and bond quotations, interest and dividend notices, the organization of new companies, and all financial news reports, are promptly and accurately printed.

Note the excellence of THE TIMES in these departments:

Banking and Financial, Politics, National and State, Schools and Colleges, Sports, Markets and Commercial Reports, Army and Navy News, Art and Science, The Churches, Book Reviews.

The New York Weekly Times.

The subscription price of THE WEEKLY TIMES is $1 a year. THE WEEKLY TIMES is a capital newspaper. It contains all the current news condensed from the dispatches and reports of the daily edition besides literary matter, discussions upon agricultural topics by practical farmers, full and accurate market reports of prices for farm produce, live stock, etc. and a carefully prepared weekly wool market.

IN CHANCERY OF NEW JERSEY.

To Isaac Wilcox, Sarah Wilcox his wife, John C. Pennington, Sarah Pennington his wife, Harriet O. Wilcox and Wm. Amos Wilcox.

By virtue of an order of the Court of Chancery of New Jersey, made on the day of the date hereof, in a cause wherein Carmen B. Hadfield is complainant, and you and others are defendants, you are required to appear, plead, demur or answer to the bill of said complainant on or before the sixteenth day of February next, or that in default thereof such decree shall be made against you as the Chancellor shall think equitable and just.

The said bill is filed to foreclose a mortgage made by Harriet Osborn to Carmen B. Hadfield on lands in the township of Fanwood in Union county, New Jersey, dated January [illegible] and you Isaac Wilcox, you John C. Pennington and you Harriet O. Wilcox, are made defendants because you with others own said lands or some part thereof. You Sarah Wilcox are made a defendant because you are the wife of said Isaac Wilcox; you Sarah Pennington are made defendant because you are the wife of said John C. Pennington; and you Mrs. Amos Wilcox are made defendant, because you are the wife of said Amos Wilcox, and because you may thereby claim an inchoate right of dower in your husband's portion of said mortgaged lands.

TOWNSEND'S
Marble & Granite Works,

30 SOMERSET STREET.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

If you have not engaged your work, I should be pleased to do it for you.

I buy only first-class Marble and Granite and do not sell unless at prices that will enable me to put up the work with credit to myself and justice to the parties purchasing.

I employ no agents and therefore am enabled to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customer, of the commission generally paid to agents.

I am under a very small expense in running my shop, myself and my son doing the larger portion of the work, and we personally attend to the setting of all work, and look upon business in this light, that Good Work and Good Material, at Fair Prices, is a standing advertisement for my business, which will tend to build up trade, and I feel safe to warrant that no dealer can sell you the same work and same stock any cheaper than I can.

Hoping to be favored with your patronage, I am yours respectfully,

J. E. TOWNSEND,

Manager. 8 11 tf
